New Naval Vessel 105
Papers Discuss Zimbabwe Dispute 105
Money Supply Increases 105

SENEGAMBIA

Briefs 106
Anniversary Marked 106
Coup Tribunal Death Sentences

SOMALIA

Briefs 107
FRG Parliamentary Delegation Received 107
Front Claims Base Captured

SOUTH AFRICA

ANC Commentary Supports Sanctions
(Addis Ababa Radio Freedom, 22 Feb 82) 108

Briefs 110
Discussions With Kwazulu State

TANZANIA

Zanzibar Government To Continue Stressing Food Production
(Abdallah Yakuti; DAILY NEWS, 1 Feb 82) 111

Juwata Endorses Fifty Percent Wage Increase for Tazara Workers
(DAILY NEWS, 3 Feb 82) 112

NEC Dismisses Five Party, Government Leaders
(Boniface Byarugaba; DAILY NEWS, 30 Jan 82) 113

Seminar Participants Urge Government To Define Private Sector Role
(Mkumbwa Ally; DAILY NEWS, 30 Jan 82) 114

Official Says Further Tests of Fuel-Saving Device Needed
(DAILY NEWS, 1 Feb 82) 116

Tanzanian Troops May Be Sent to Mozambique
(AFP, 21 Feb 82) 117

SIDA Experts Commend Dodoma Region Afforestation Projects
(Zephania Ubwani; DAILY NEWS, 2 Feb 82) 118

Paper Mill's Expansion Program to Triple Output
(Halima Shariff; DAILY NEWS, 3 Feb 82) 119

Coal Piles Up at Ilima Colliery in Kyela, Mbeya Region
(DAILY NEWS, 1 Feb 82) 120

Dartex To Be Decentralized, Wholesale Shops Set Up
(Isaac Mruma; DAILY NEWS, 30 Jan 82) 121

Briefs
GDR Cooperation Review 122
Canadian Five-Year Grant 122
Police Training Program 122

TOGO

Briefs
Ghanaians Kill Togolese Citizens 123

ZIMBABWE

Walker Denies Talks With PF Leader
(THE CITIZEN, 20 Feb 82) 124

White Morale Drops Again
(Aida Parker; THE CITIZEN, 19 Feb 82) 126

Briefs
Three S. African Agents Arrested 127

TRIPARTITE YOUTH GROUP MEETS IN KINSHASA

Various Motions Adopted

AB221629 Kinshasa AZAP in French 1300 GMT 22 Feb 82

[Text] Kinshasa, 22 Feb (AZAP)--The participants of the summit conference [of the Youth Movement of the Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola (JMPLA), Youth of the Popular Movement of the Revolution (JMPR), Union of Congolese Socialist Youth (UJSC) Tripartite Organization] adopted the following motions:

Motion of thanks to the founding chairman of the MPR and president of the Republic of Zaire,

Motion of congratulations to the outgoing chairman and first secretary of the UJSC Central Committee,

Motion of support for the new chairman and secretary general of the JMPR,

Motion of support for SWAPO, and a

Motion on the Chadian problem.

At the end of the conference, the three organizations elected the JMPR's secretary general, Citizen Nzanda Buana Kalemba, chairman of the Tripartite Organization for the 1982-84 period.

The three organizations decided that the next ordinary summit conference of the organization will be held in the People's Republic of Angola in 1984.

Issued in Kinshasa on 20 February 1982.

[Signed] For the JMPLA: Domingos Francisco Bartolomeu, first secretary of the National Committee; for the UJSC: Gabriel Oba-Apounou, first secretary of the Central Committee; for the JMPR: Nzanda Buana Kalembam.

Communique Issued

AB221703 Kinshasa AZAP in French 1255 GMT 22 Feb 82

["Final communique" issued in Kinshasa on 20 February following the second summit conference of the JMPLA-JMPR-UJSC Tripartite Organization]

[Text] Kinshasa, 22 Feb (AZAP)--The second summit conference of the Tripartite Organization of the MPLA Youth Movement [JMPLA], the MPR Youth Movement [JMPR] and the Union of Congolese Socialist Youth [UJSC] took place in the capital of the Republic of Zaire from 17 to 20 February 1982 in conformity with the Brazzaville declaration. During the meeting, the three youth organizations were represented respectively by Comrade Domingos Francisco Bartolomeu, member of the Central Committee of the MPLA-Labor Party and first secretary of the National Committee of the JMPLA; Citizen Mzanda Buana Kalemba, member of the Executive Committee of the MPR and secretary general of the JMPR; and Comrade Gabriel Oba-Apounou, member of the Central Committee of the UJSC and minister of youth and sports. Comrades Okombi, assistant secretary general of the Pan-African Youth Movement in charge of cultural affairs, sports and leisure and Tuli Hiveluah, first secretary of the SWAPO Youth Movement attended the conference as observers.

The discussions took place in an atmosphere of cordiality and mutual understanding which demonstrates the excellent and close relations existing between the youths of Angola, Zaire and Congo as well as their support for the ideals proclaimed by their respective heads of state, Comrade Jose Eduardo dos Santos, Citizen Mobutu Sese Seko and Comrade Denis Sassou-Nguesso.

The three youth movements examined the report of activities presented by the first secretary of the Central Committee of the CUJSC and the organization's outgoing chairman. After a detailed examination of this report, the parties expressed satisfaction about the work done by Comrade Gabriel Oba-Apounou and the UJSC who were able to conduct the activities of the tripartite organization in the spirit of the Brazzaville declaration.

They reaffirmed their determination to continue and intensify in both the bilateral and multilateral fields the contacts between the youths of their countries in order to create a deeper mutual knowledge of their peoples and strengthen their brotherly ties. In this connection, the parties adopted a program of activities for 1982 to 1984 which is aimed at achieving closer cooperation. They decided to enlarge the scope of the tripartite organization to include all the youths of Central Africa.

The parties agreed to accord a choice place to the members of the tripartite organization in their national as well as international activities. They reiterated their support for the program of the Pan-African Youth Movement and expressed the hope that this organization, which is the vanguard of the African youth, will continue to progress. They stressed the imperative need to sensitize, through direct contacts, all the other youth movements in Central Africa to ensure their massive participation in the second Pan-African youth festival in conformity with the resolutions of the Cultural and Festivals Committee which met in Bamako in October 1980.

After making a survey of the international situation, the three organizations took a position against the imperialist maneuvers aimed at perpetuating the domination and exploitation of the African continent. They condemned the inhuman attacks and the occupation of part of the Angolan territory as well as the acts of economic destabilization being committed by South Africa against the peaceful Angolan people because of their active and brotherly support for the struggling Namibian people.

Powers as well as the criminal assistance they are giving to the racist and warmongering regime of South Africa in order to defend their capitalist interests in the region and delay the Namibian people's assumption of power under the leadership of their vanguard movement, SWAPO. They expressed their solidarity with the youths of the SWAPO under the leadership of the SWAPO Youth League.

Concerning Chad, the three youth organizations appealed to the patriotism of the Chadian youth and called on them to work for the return of peace and for national reconstruction in accordance with the [word indistinct] principles of the OAU and the Pan-African Youth Movement. The three youth organizations reiterated their frim support for the African peoples struggling for their self-determination and independence.

They expressed their support for the OAU in its efforts to find peaceful solutions to all inter-African conflicts and to foil all subversive maneuvers both in and outside Africa. (?They also expressed their support) for all the youths of the world struggling against imperialism, colonialism and neocolonialism as well as all forms of domination.

During their stay in Zaire, the first secretary of the UJSC Central Committee, the first secretary of the JMPLA National Committee and the secretary general of the Pan-African Youth Movement were received by Citizens Mpinga Kasenda and Nsinga Udjuu Ongwakebi Untube, first deputy chairman of the Bureau of the Central Committee and permanent secretary of the Political Bureau and executive secretary of the MPR and first state commissioner respectively.

They had the opportunity to appreciate the high level of management and mobilization of the youths of Zaire by the JMPR under the guidance of Citizen Mobutu Sese Seko. They thanked the JMPR for the cordial, fraternal and friendly reception accorded them. The three organizations considered the results of the conference an important contribution to the positive development of the activities of the tripartite organization.

CSO: 4719/577

GREAT LAKES THREE DETERMINED TO MEET OBJECTIVES

Paris AFRICA AFP in English 2 Feb 82 p 21

[Text] Gisenyi, Rwanda, January 31 -- The Presidents of Rwanda, Burundi and Zaire today wrapped up a two-day summit meeting on the Economic Community of Great Lakes Countries (CEPGL) with reaffirmation of their determination to realize the objectives of this grouping.

In his closing speech, Mobutu Sese Seko of Zaire, who takes over as Chairman of the group, said that the three countries had also unanimously supported the idea of creating an organization to promote cooperation among the 11 states in the region. He said he would spare no effort to try to achieve this goal during his mandate as CEPGL Chairman.

Study Needed

The final summit communique said that the Presidents had supported the Libreville Declaration concerning the creation of an economic community of Central African states but stressed the need to deeply study the matter before such a community was set up.

The existence of the CEPGL was not incompatible with the creation of a new economic grouping, the communique said.

The three Presidents--including Juvenal Hanyarimana of Rwanda and Jean Baptiste Bagaza of Burundi--also approved a CEPGL budget of about 18 million French francs (3.2 million U.S. dollars), 30 per cent more than the last budget.

The Presidents also signed an agreement aimed at stimulating foreign investment in the three countries and setting down rules for investment within the community.

They also decided to set up a factory for agricultural materials in Rwanda.

Trade Priority

Mr. Mobutu said that he had asked the CEPGL executive secretariat to draw up a plan for regional development, with priority on trade links among the three countries, cooperation on health matters and ways to facilitate the movement of people within the group.

In a speech last night, Mr. Habyarimana said there were numerous problems facing attempts to build a CEPGL economic community, but "more dynamic" action was needed in the priority areas of communications and transportation.

CSO: 4700/757

BRIEFS

SA'S NUCLEAR ABILITY--Dar es Salaam--The executive secretary of the Organisation of African Unity's liberation committee said yesterday South Africa's apparent nuclear capability would not deter Black African states from opposing apartheid there. Colonel Hashim Mbita told the Tazania Press Club: "After the independence of Zimbabwe, the priority of the liberation struggle in Southern Africa is now focussed on Namibia and South Africa. The struggle in these two Southern African countries is the struggle against one and the same enemy, the apartheid, fascist regime in Pretoria." Asked if neighbouring African states would be deterred by the threat of nuclear attack from South Africa, Col Mibita replied: "No. We know the history of nuclear weapons. No one has more than Americans, yet Vietnam is still alive." The Dar es Salaam-based liberation committee channels funds from Black African states to South African and SWA terrorists. [Text] [Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 19 Feb 82 p 7]

CSO: 4700/757

BRIEFS

FRENCH MISSION VISITS COTONOU--Cotonou, 15 Feb (AFP)--A mission to evaluate the socioeconomic orientation of French aid, composed of representatives of the Ministry of Cooperation and Development and the Central Fund, was in Benin from 30 January to 18 February. The aim of this mission was to study the economic, financial, social and cultural situation in Benin in order to direct French aid toward areas that are considered vital. The Beninese minister of planning, statistics and economic analysis stressed the importance he attached to the smooth running of this mission in the context of the development of cooperation between France and the People's Republic of Benin. The mission's visit is a followup to the talks held between Presidents Francois Mitterrand and Mathieu Kerekou and the visit of French Minister of Cooperation and Development Jean-Pierre Cot to Cotonou. [Text] [AB191421 Paris AFP in French 1018 GMT 19 Feb 82]

CSO: 4719/591

PENNE VISIT FOCUSED ON FRENCH AID TO COUNTRY

AB091648 Paris AFP in French 1358 GMT 9 Feb 82

[Text] Bangui, 9 Feb (AFP)--The future of French aid to the CAR, which has been a subject of concern to the authorities of this country for several months, was the sole question discussed in Bangui by Guy Penne, adviser to the French president on African and Malagasy affairs.

Mr Penne, who paid a 2-day visit on Sunday and Monday to the CAR capital, met on several occasions Minister of Foreign Affairs Lt Col Jean Louis Gervil-Yambala and head of state General Andre Kolingba, among others.

Since the military seized power in Bangui in September 1981, the new CAR regime has believed that the French Government is giving the new regime the cold shoulder, a CAR source indicates in Bangui.

Besides a very brief stopover by Minister of Cooperation Jean-Pierre Cot, no French minister has been to the CAR to assess the magnitude of this country's difficulties following the failures of preceding regimes, although dialogue has been initiated with all the neighboring countries, it is observed in Bangui.

Despite the meeting during the Franco-African conference last November between General Kolingba and French President Francois Mitterrand, this feeling of anxiety regarding French desire to help the young regime emerge from a very serious crisis persists because of the presence in Paris of its main opponent, Ange Patasse, leader of the Movement for the Liberation of the Central African people (MLPC).

Mr Patasse, besides his numerous statements to the press, has frequent and friendly contacts with the high officials of certain ministries. Mr Patasse, it will be recalled, had obtained during the presidential elections nearly 38 percent of the votes against David Dacko, who was overthrown 5 months ago by General Kolingba.

During his talks, Mr Penne came out against this feeling and pointed out that French aid had nearly tripled since the fall of Emperor Bokassa. In 1981, the aid from Paris to the CAR was by far the largest ever granted to that country and amounted to 17 billion CFA francs (FR340 million). This sum, diplomatic sources in Bangui stress, represents about 63 percent of the CAR budget.

The quantitative increase of this sum, it is further stated, is mainly due to the financial aid given to finance the 1981 budget deficit.

French aid, Mr Penne told the Central Africans, will continue, including immediate aid to finance the 1982 budget deficit (more than 8 billion CFA francs in 1981) and thus ensure the payment of the salaries of officials, a factor of stability.

France, it is observed in Bangui, is particularly touched by the efforts of CAR authorities to improve the budget and revive the dying economy. The latest measures, relatively unpopular (retirement of hundreds of civil servants and a 10 percent decrease in civil servants' salaries through the levying of a special tax) show courage and the new regime's desire to put its house in order.

French sources indicate, however, that Paris alone cannot bring the country out of the economic crisis and it often works together with the IMF.

Despite this concern about the future of French aid, bilateral relations between the two countries are particularly good and the CAR authorities regularly reiterate their desire to maintain privileged relations with France.

Furthermore, Mr Cot recently recalled the principles on which bilateral ties should be based: Mutual respect for the sovereignty of the two countries, the CAR's right to security (French troops based in CAR, numbering 1,166 men, are kept there at the request of the Bangui government) and France's participation in economic recovery, though not in an exclusive manner.

Regarding the last point, the CAR Government delivered a memorandum to Mr Penne in which it specified the manner and the areas where French aid would be welcome. In addition to the financing of the budget deficit, the memorandum places special emphasis on the need for French participation in the plan for economic recovery, mainly in the field of agriculture and the improvement of education.

During his visit, Mr Penne also delivered a message from President Mitterrand inviting General Kolingba to Paris on an official visit. This visit will help, it is felt in Bangui, to put an end to the psychological ill-feeling that has cropped up over the past few months should it take place during the last quarter of 1982, it is learned in the CAR.

CSO: 4719/564

BRIEFS

MLPC LEADER TO RETURN TO BANGUI--Paris, 23 Feb (AFP)--The president of the Central African People's Liberation Movement (MLPC), Ange Patasse "and his delegation" will return to Bangui on 28 February 1982, a communique of this movement announced in Paris on Tuesday. The communique recalls that Mr Patasse has been living as a private citizen in Europe and stayed especially in France for the past 5 months. [Text] [AB231828 Paris AFP in French 1755 GMT 23 Feb 82]

CIVIL SERVANTS DEPRIVED LUNCH BREAK--[Sumary from poor reception] We have received the following decree introducing the system of work without a lunch break for the CAR public service. The chairman of the Military Committee for National Recovery [CMRN] decrees: The system of work without a lunch break is introduced for all CAR public services. "The 40-hour working week is maintained. In conformity with Article 1 of this decree, work will start at 0630 and end at 1330 from Monday to Friday while it will start at 0700 and end at 1200 on Saturday. Certain services are exempted from this system of work because of the nature of their job. "The list of these public services will be determined by a decree to be issued by the CMRN." [AB231053 Bangui Domestic Service in French 1830 GMT 22 Feb 82]

FRENCH REGIMENT TO ARRIVE--Frejus (South France), 19 Feb (AFP)--A company of the 21st Marine Infantry Regiment [RIMA] stationing in Frejus (Var) left France on Friday for the CAR, the regiment's press service announced. The company, placed under the command of Col Marcel Accary, who will assume the command of the French units stationing at Bouar (in the northwest of the country), will replace another company for a period of 5 months. The press service indicated that a second company from the 21st RIMA will also leave Frejus for Bouar on Monday as well as a squadron of light armored vehicles. [Text] [AB191619 Paris AFP in French 1526 GMT 19 Feb 82]

CSO: 4719/596

'LE MONDE': HABRE CONTROLS TWO-THIRDS OF COUNTRY

PM101257 Paris LE MONDE in French 5 Feb 82 p 5

[Dispatch by J.-C. Pomonti: "Mr Hissein Habre Apparently Controls Two-Thirds of the Territory"]

[Text] Abeche--What a strange "rebellion": In this key provincial city crushed under the noonday heat, which has been promoted to Chad's "temporary capital," people slowly go about their prayers, [word indistinct] and meals and drink numerous cups of red tea or coffee flavored with cloves. But when a decision is taken things move quickly and silently. The FAN Command Council and its chairman, Hissein Habre, clearly intend to wage a "liberation war." They intend to wage it to the end if necessary, in other words should the groups represented in Ndjamena, their protectors and the OAU fail to understand the need to negotiate in time.

On Thursday, 28 January, well after nightfall, there was some activity in the presidency, which used to be the prefect's residence--a pretentious and rather impractical building in which Mr Hissein Habre is camping out. Three land rovers crammed with armed fighters, followed by a truck which had just been loaded with barrels of gasoline and provisions, left by the garden gate and moved northward along the Faya-Largeau track. The residence was empty. Only a few soldiers remained. There were no sandbags, guns or barbed wire to protect the entrance.

During the day it had been rumored that the inhabitants of Salal and Moussoro, respectively situated around 200 km and 350 km north of Ndjamena, had rallied to the FAN, including elements of Mr Goukouni Oueddei's People's Armed Forces [FAP] who were in that sector. That implies that the road leading from Faya-Largeau, captured by the FAN 13 January, to the capital, is more or less open. Mr Hissein Habre had apparently gone north with his aides to examine the best way of "moving quickly" and to determine "how far to go" before the OAU ad hoc committee meets in Nairobi 11 and 12 February to discuss the situation in the country.

With the capture of Mangalme, south of Ati, on 25 January, the FAN had already extended southwards the areas they control, especially since 2 days earlier 400 members of the Ndjamena interior minister's "first army," led by their chief of staff, had rallied to Hissein Habre, who had come to welcome them in person at Adre, on the Sudanese border. The winning over of Salal and Moussoro apparently means, therefore, that at the end of January the FAN controlled nearly two-thirds of Chadian territory and had isolated the inter-African garrison at Ati--comprising Nigerians and Zairians--midway between Ndjamena and Abeche.

The question here is not what the outcome of the conflict will be--unless there is a direct foreign intervention in favor of their adversaries, the FAN are sure of winning--but when and how it will end. According to Mr Jean Abezac, one of Hissein Habre's close aides, the Libyan military withdrawal was the result not of a French diplomatic offensive but of defeats inflicted on Tripoli's soldiers by the FAN in the east of the country from September. "The Libyans," he maintained, "ended their occupation not only because of their losses in battle in September and December but also because of mines, our air defense weapons and the demoralization of their troops." According to the FAN, 13 senior Libyan officers and 70 soldiers were killed in September, 1 Mig-24 and 3 Marchetti SF-260 aircraft were shot down and 2 light armored vehicles were destroyed.

While turning the situation to their advantage the FAN have built up an army of 10,000 men, who seem to be motivated and above all disciplined and with good means of communication, large amounts of equipment--abandoned by the Libyans or captured from their other adversaries--and a stock of provisions. The multi-ethnic nature of the command council, reshuffled during the August 1980 congress, is encouraging the winning over of enemy garrisons, cut off from Ndjamena and weakened by defections. Finally, the unpopularity of the occupation by the Libyans, who plundered the [word indistinct] without supplying any economic aid, is working in favor of those who never agreed to compromise with Tripoli.

The equipment captured by the FAN ranges from machineguns--discovered in places of "spare parts" intended for the Gabonese police force and abandoned by their adversaries at Oum Chalouba, which was captured 6 January--to stocks of French army tents and included anything which the Libyans were unable to remove or destroy: sacks of rice, cans of gasoline, tea. The new fatigues which many soldiers are wearing were taken from stocks donated by Algeria to the integrated national army, which, moreover, now only exists on paper. Finally, French weapons intended for Ndjamena--75 mm guns on tripod mountings, 89 mm rocket launchers--have strengthened Mr Hissein Habre.

Abeche, the second biggest city in Chad, already gives an idea of the normalization under way. Caravans of camel drivers go there to buy cattle to take to Nigeria, from where they bring back soap, sugar and various goods. Similar trade is going on with Sudan, which is nearer and where a large number of Chadian exiles are living. Alongside the mangoes, tomatoes, guavas and limes, the stalls have tins of Moroccan sardines and tinned produce from Cameroon, not to mention a wide choice of cigarettes. The prices in Abeche are high and the drought--as damaging to the millet crop as the Libyans, who set fire to the fields--promises to make it difficult to tide things over from June to November. But life seems to have started up again in less than 3 months.

A semblance of administration has been established. Several members of the FAN Command Council are responsible for it. The secondary school has opened its doors to some 400 pupils up to the third grade. Two out of five private schools have done likewise. The school textbooks were destroyed by the Libyans. Some teachers who remained or who have returned are receiving help from available FAN cadres. As in the hospital--where a Chadian and a Belgian surgeon from Medecins Sans Frontieres operate--the staff are not paid. The FAN are fed but receive no wages.

The power station has been started up again to supply the "presidency," the hospital and the administrative departments. The fuel shortage--a liter of gasoline is three times more expensive here than in France--is the main reasons for the restriction on electricity. In addition the Libyans severed many lines to supply the generating sets they used.

If account is taken of the strength of inter-African trade networks--which ignore borders and, where necessary, adapt to wars--the FAN's Chad is now a vast autonomous zone and, since everything is relative, is as self-sufficient as possible. Mail from Europe, which already takes 2 weeks to be distributed in Khartoum, arrives in Abeche 1 week later. At the hospital, where people seriously wounded in the war were treated when it was reopened in December, the normal diseases are now the main ones to be treated: bilharzia, malaria, dysentery, tuberculosis and venereal disease.

Distrust of Paris

However, the "rear" is still neglected in favor of the "front." For example, the FAN have still not had time to clear the mines from some 20 km of track outside Andre, on the Sudanese border, going toward Abeche. The whole journey by truck can take nearly 24 hours.

But whatever the handicaps to be overcome, the command council is now the de facto government of most of Chad, although not the government of the majority of Chadians living in the south of the country. Radio Free Chad has been broadcasting for 2 hours a day since September from Koulbous in the east of the country and can be heard in Khartoum, Kousseri, Cameroon, and on the western bank of the Chari River. This other Radio Luxembourg regularly broadcasts communiques from Abeche on the FAN progress in the north and toward the south of the country.

Since the Libyans' withdrawal the FAN seem to have restricted themselves to waring-down tactics: urging isolated enemy garrisons to defeat, consolidating acquired positions, organizing a fairly efficient logistics system, reducing pockets in the rear areas, like that of FADA in the extreme northeast, where at the end of January there was still a pocket of Mr Goukouni Oueddei's FAP. There is reason to wonder whether, for political or diplomatic reasons, Mr Hissein Habre will change his tactics to move toward Ndjamena more quickly.

Inspired by distrust of French policy--which they blame in particular for trying to "place Goukouni Oueddei back in the saddle"--and by deep hostility toward Colonel al-Qadhdhafi, whose intervention forced them to withdraw from Ndjamena in extremely difficult conditions on 15 December 1980, the FAN are now determined not to lose round a negotiating table the advantages they have won in the field in very harsh conditions. Mr Habre's supporters, demanding negotiations "among Chadians," accept the presence of an inter-African force--even in their own zones--provided it is "neutral." But regarding themselves as the country's only nationalist movement, they refuse to have any coalition imposed on them--in the name of any pan-Africanism--which does not reflect the position of strength held by the "resistance."

In fact, with the gradual breakup of the Ndjamena factions and the shilly-shallying of the inter-African force--whose contingents want less and less to become caught up in the Chadian trap--things are coming back to the traditional problem of Ndjamena and the south's shillyshallying. In this respect the game does not yet seem to be over. The FAN are complaining about the lack of "valid interlocutors" in the south. They do not attribute that quality to Lieutenant Colonel Kamougue, leader of the Chadian Armed Forces. Unless there is a foreign intervention--which is in fact rather unlikely but which they claim to fear--they know that they will have to find some agreement with the southern elite in a united framework.

Flaunting aesthetic and the wishes of the remaining population, the Libyans painted the tower of one of Abeche's mosques green as well as the mausoleum of Colonel Moll, who conquered the city in 1910. The FAN talk about that with humor and disdain during their interminable discussions sitting or lying on rugs or carpets. Until another coat of paint can be applied--which does not seem imminent--Tripoli's work will bear witness to a short chapter in Chad's history which nobody here seems to want to reopen. For instance, the teaching of French, banned by the Libyans, has started again. Does Paris appreciate the praise of the arms supplies to Mr Goukouni Oueddei's transient troops for which the FAN, who capture them, ironically thank France at every opportunity?

CSO: 4719/564

'LE MONDE' DISCUSSES NEGOTIATION PROSPECTS

PM091339 Paris LE MONDE in French 29 Jan 82 pp 1, 6

[Dispatch by J.-C. Pomonti: "Khartoum Is Urging Negotiations"]

[Text] Khartoum--"The question today is whether Goukouni is too weak to negotiate with Habre." This opinion on Chad expressed by a Western diplomat seems fairly widespread in Khartoum 2 weeks after the national unity transition government president's visit to the Sudanese capital. Indeed all the information gathered here seems to confirm the favorable position held in the field by Mr Hissein Habre's Northern Armed Forces [FAN], whose headquarters are in Abeche in the eastern part of the country, in the face of the incongruous coalition headed by President Goukouni Oueddei. In addition the Africans, including France's partners, seem favorable to the convening of a "round table" discussion among Chadians to try to end the conflict.

After consolidating their positions in Biltine and Ouaddai provinces in eastern Chad, the FAN captured Largeau without much difficulty on 13 January, the very day when the head of state was returning to Ndjamena after visiting Khartoum, where we had a long meeting with President Numayri. Mr Goukouni Oueddei's People's Armed Forces [FAP] had been unable to rally more than 150 supporters to defend that important position. The FAN who had abandoned their vehicles around 30 km away to avoid attracting attention, launched an attack at dawn. By noon the position had been captured.

The FAN have also infiltrated into the Mongo sector in the south of the country, where a small Senegalese detachment of the inter-African peace-keeping force should now be stationed. Finally, in the center of the country, they have established a post 17 km east of Ati--conurbation which has become the garrison of Zairian and Nigerian contingents of the OAU force. In other words, since the Libyan withdrawal to the Aozou Strip in the north, which took place hurriedly in November, the FAN have become by far the main political and military force in Chad. They now have considerable freedom of action provided their adversaries do not have foreign military support.

When Mr Goukouni Oueddai came to Khartoum to "normalize" his relations with Sudan--the latter even assured him of its "full support" owing to the Libyan withdrawal--he was "strongly advised" to negotiate. Indeed most African states hope that such a solution might be found fairly quickly for several reasons: to prevent Chad flaring up again, to avert any new interventionist leanings in Libya and, above all, to prevent the failure of the inter-African peace-keeping force. Indeed the states which have sent contingents to Chad--Nigeria, Senegal and Zaire--want to prevent at any cost any incident which opposes them in the field to the various Chadian armed factions.

Race Against Time

For his part Marshal Numayri suggested a compromise to Mr Goukouni Queddei which would consist of giving the prime minister's job to Mr Abdoulaye Lamana, a former minister under Tombalbaye, who has been scarcely affected by the present rivalries and who symbolizes the "Chadian ethnic synthesis" since he has ties in the north and south of the country. The Chadian president apparently merely listened to him. In private he confirmed to Western diplomats that he was prepared to have discussions with the FAN but not with Hissein Habre. He most probably did not take advantage of his visit to Khartoum to meet with FAN representatives there.

At the present stage we are witnessing a race against time. The scenario drawn up by Paris in August in agreement with several African capitals and with the OAU chairman's office went well at first since it led to the Libyan military withdrawal. In addition at the beginning of December the OAU succeeded in sending the first elements of a "peace corps" to the country, with American and French logistical support of course.

However, since mid-December at least events have not been going the way Paris had hoped still less foreseen. Outside Ndjamena the inter-African force is only present in Ati and possibly in Mongo. Some African states have refused to send contingents. The support enjoyed by Mr Hissein Habre's movement, which was apparently underestimated by Paris, is due both to its military resources and to the fact that the FAN were the only forces to fight the Libyans who occupied the country for 11 months. Finally, the capture of Largeau suggests that it is as much a political calculation--not alienating the OAU--as lack of military resources which is prompting Mr Hissein Habre to keep his troops away from western and southern Chad today.

The urgent need for a compromise seems to be accepted by all the main protagonists in this tragedy. But if Mr Hissein Habre advocates negotiations among Chadians--and accepts the presence of the inter-African force provided it is "neutral"--it is difficult to see what trump cards Mr Goukouni Oueddei would have at a "round table," discussion and that would explain his reservations.

CSO: 4719/564

COT SAYS FRANCE'S AID TOTAL FR59.4 MILLION

AB231355 Paris AFP in French 1310 GMT 23 Feb 82

[Text] Paris, 23 Feb (AFP)--In a written reply published on 22 February by the Official Gazette, Mr Jean Pierre Cot, French minister of cooperation and development, indicated that France's civil aid to Chad "to this day" amounts to FR 59.4 million. The minister explained that this aid "will be maintained and increased in 1982 in accordance with the Chadian Government's requests."

France's "exceptional aid" to Chad, continued the minister, first of all concerned the Chadian capital of Ndjamena where "the action of the French Ministry of Cooperation and Development enabled the establishment of the conditions essential to a return to normal life," (reestablishment of water, electricity and telephone, provision of ferry boats for crossing the river and the setting up of emergency medical services).

The French Government has also maintained "aid in the areas not greatly affected by the war and especially in the south where our technical assistance officials are continuing their action and where our consular presence in Moundou has been constantly maintained."

The seriousness of the damage caused by the civil war is beyond "the possibilities of France alone," stated Mr Cot. He recalled that at the request of the transitional national union government of Chad, the French Government organized last November an international conference which was attended by the main sources of multilateral and bilateral foreign aid. He indicated that during this conference, commitments were made for the subscription of a total amount of FR(?1,270) million.

CSO: 4719/516

BRIEFS

PATRIOTIC MOVEMENT SUPPORTS OAU RESOLUTIONS--Khartoum, 18 Feb (AFP)--The Chadian Patriotic National Movement has expressed its support for the resolutions adopted at the OAU minisummit in Nairobi. In a communique issued in Khartoum on Wednesday, Col Doungous Kimto, the movement's secretary general, expressed the view that the resolutions offer a peaceful solution to the Chadian problem. The Nairobi resolutions call for a cease-fire in Chad and for the opening of negotiations between the rival factions. The Chadian Patriotic National Movement, created last July, urged the warring factions to stop fighting and appealed to the Chadian armed forces not to continue fighting alongside factions which are seeking selfish interests. [Text] [AB181303 Paris AFP in French 1135 GMT 18 Feb 82]

GOUKOUNI TO TOUR EAST--Ndjamena, 19 Feb (AFP)--Goukouni Oueddei, president of the Chadian Transitional National Union Govermment [GUNT], is to undertake a tour of the hinterland on Saturday, in particular the East, where fighting is going on between government troops and Hissein Habre's AFAN, a reliable source reports in Ndjamena on Friday. This visit by the Chadian head of state to the fighting zones takes place when military sources in the Chadian capital announce the recapture of the locality of Am Dam (east) by the GUNT troops. It is recalled that the capture of Am Dam by FAN was announced on 13 February 1982 by Mr Habre's representative to Khartoum. Also, the same source reports, 70 FAN troops have allegedly surrendered to government troops at Am Dam without a fight. These elements are reported to have come from Oum Hadjer, located at about 100 kilometers to the northwest of Am Dam and still occupied by Mr Habre's troops. [Text] [AB191716 Paris AFP in French 1639 GMT 19 Feb 82]

OAU DECISIONS SUPPORTED--Lagos, 17 Feb (AFP)--Batran Adoum Idriss, leader of one [of] the factions of the popular movement for the liberation of Chad, has expressed the view that any decision by the Transitional National Union Government [GUNT] of Chad to go against the resolutions made at the Nairobi summit would be at its own risk. In a communique handed to the press, he noted that peace is within our reach and he categorically rejected the position taken by the GUNT. It is recalled that the GUNT stated on Tuesday through the voice of President Goukouni Oueddei, that it was opposed to the recent resolutions of the OAU Standing Committee on Chad. In conclusion, the communique appeals to all sons of Chad to demonstrate a vigorous stand against dictatorship. [Text] [AB171230 Paris AFP in French 0903 GMT 17 Feb 82]

CHADIANS SHOULD UNITE FOR PEACE--Paris, 23 Feb (AFP)--Dr Abba Siddick, president of the original FROLINAT stated in Paris on Tuesday that Chadians should unite to impose total peace in Chad. In a statement to AFP he said "It is time for Chadians to show that they have had enough and impose peace and negotiations upon the ruling minority who, in order to defend its selfish interest, sacrifice the future and unity of the country." "In this regard, the OAU decision made in Nairobi for a negotiated settlement is a timely one," Abba Siddick continued. "It could serve as a boost to the forces of peace existing in the country and who are capable of imposing it," he stated. Deploring the Chadian authorities' "blind intransigence and their refusal for any negotiated settlement," Dr Abba Siddick described as a "mirage" the hope entertained by some people for a military solution. "As for the communiques issued these days talking about victories and the recapture of areas previously occupied by the enemy," he stressed, "they are only an intoxication to stretch out the present conflict." [Text] [AB231738 Paris AFP in French 1658 GMT 23 Feb 82]

GOVERNMENT TROOPS FLEE OUM HADJER--Khartoum, 24 Feb (AFP)--Chad's rebel Armed Forces of the North (FAN) alleged today that President Goukouni Oueddei and his Defense Minister Adoum Togoi fled with their troops after an attack on the FAN-held town of Oum Hadjer failed last Sunday. Ndjamena has said that Oum Hadjer fell to troops of the Integrated National Army (ANI) who were pursuing the FAN eastward, but since then there has been no word from the government side on the progress of its general offensive launched at the weekend. Two previous government attempts in recent months to roll back the FAN, who now hold large areas of northern and eastern Chad, failed after early reports of success were discounted. A FAN representative in Khartoum said today the attack on Oum Hadjer in central Chad had been repulsed, and in the ensuing battle 417 government troops were killed, hundreds wounded and 414 captured. Following fierce fighting the remaining government troops, led by President Goukouni Oueddei and Adoum Togoi, took to their heels leaving their dead and wounded behind, the FAN spokesman said, quoting ANI prisoners. They were pursued westward to Ati, where the FAN gave up the chase "in respect for the African peace-keeping force stationed in the town," he added. The FAN representative said FAN troops seized 31 light trucks with mounted guns and ammunition, six other vehicles and 360 light weapons. [Text] [AB241022 Paris AFP in English 0952 GMT 24 Feb 82]

CSO: 4700/769

BRIEFS

ISLAMIC LOAN TO COMOROS--The Federal and Islamic Republic of the Comoros has been granted a $7.25 million loan by the Islamic Bank for development, according to an agreement signed between the bank and the Comoros. The loan will be used to finance a project for deepening the port of Mutsamudu to facilitate the arrival of large ships and, consequently, the import and export of goods. [Manama WAKH in Arabic 1200 GMT 18 Feb 82 GF]

CSO: 4704/8

EQUATORIAL GUINEA-SAO TOME JOINT COMMUNIQUE

AB221824 Malabo Domestic Service in Spanish 1900 GMT 19 Feb 82

[Communique issued in Malabo on 17 February at the end of Sao Tome and Principle's President Manuel Pinto da Costa's 3-day official visit to the Republic of Equatorial Guinea]

[Text] At the invitation of His Excellency Col Obiang Nguema Mbazogo, chairman of the Supreme Military Council of the Republic of Equatorial Guinea, His Excellency Dr Manuel Pinto da Costa, president of the Democratic Republic of Sao Tome and Principe, paid an official visit to the Republic of Equatorial Guinea from 15 to 17 February 1982.

The president of the Democratic Republic of Sao Tome and Principe was accompanied by His Excellency Celestino Rocha da Costa, minister of justice; His Excellency (Fausto Cevara Barbera Cruz), minister of commerce; His Excellency Fernando Jose (Tajefe) da Costa, secretary of state at the Ministry of Transport and Telecommunications; His Excellency Alberto Ferreira (Chun), ambassador; Joao Galva Torres, director of finance; Dr Guadalupe de (Ceita), director of [word indistinct] Guillermo Ponce da Costa, Supreme Court judge; Filiberto Alfonso Lima Neto, director of Civil Aviation; Noracio Jorge Mendes Betino, chief of protocol; Arminda do Sacramento Diego, secretary for public relations; Celestino Benedicto Borge, permanent secretary at the Ministry of Justice; Crisotomo Alfonso Gravid, official of the Ministry of Commerce.

Col Obiang Nguema Mbazogo was assisted by the following members of his government: His Excellency Marcos Mba Ondo, state commissioner for foreign affairs; His Excellency Alfredo Tomos King Tomas, state commissioner for justice; His Excellency Luciano Ndjang Mba, state commissioner for public works, housing and transport; His Excellency Felipe Ondo Obiang Lobo, permanent secretary at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs; His Excellency (Epilogio Diangabon), principal secretary at the Ministry of Justice; His Excellency Guilermo Nguema Ela, principal secretary at the Ministry of Public Works, Housing Urban Affairs and Transport; His Excellency Constantino Ucheva Mbe, principal secretary at the Ministry of Education and Cultural Affairs; His Excellency Florencio Esoma Obiang, permanent secretary at the Ministry of Commerce; His Excellency Mariano Mve Nguema, principal secretary at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs; His Excellency Martin Nka Esono, permanent secretary of the Civil Officer of the Chairman of the Supreme Military Council; His Excellency Ambassador Agustin Nze Nkomo, adviser to the presidency and protocol officer at the Ministry of External Affairs; Manuel Nze Mzogo, director of state protocol; His Excellency Apolinar Lonche Ochek, director for Africa, Asia, Middle and Far East at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and diplomatic adviser to the presidency; Enrique Nda Mbaka, director for administrative and consular affairs at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs; His Excellency Mbato Obamu Njimanuge, Equatorial Guinea's ambassador to Sao Tome and Principe; Carlos Nze Nsoga, director for transport at the Ministry of Public Works Housing, Urban Affairs and Transport; Juan Ecua Ecua Antangono, director for International Economic Affairs at the State Secretariat for Economic Development, Planning and Cooperation and Felipe Inestrosa Ikaka, director for trade at the State Secretariat for Commerce.

On arrival at the international airport of Malabo, His Excellency Manuel Pinto da Costa and his delegation were welcomed by his colleague and Brother Col Obiang Nguema Mbazogo. At the international airport, as well as in the city of Malabo, President Pinto da Costa was cheered by enthusiastic crowds and traditional folk dancers and singers.

During their talks, the two heads of state expressed their firm desire to promote and to strengthen the ties of friendship, cooperation and good neighborliness between the Republic of Equatorial Guinea and the Democratic Republic of Sao Tome and Principe, in the spirit of mutual respect and on the basis of noninterference in each other's internal affairs. In this respect, the two heads of state personally headed their delegations during the working sessions since the guidelines that served as a basis for the discussions had already been defined [words indistinct] cooperation relations between the peoples and governments of the Republic of Equatorial Guinea and the Republic of Sao Tome and Principe.

These talks which were held in a frank atmosphere of mutual understanding ended in the signing of a treaty of friendship and goodneighborliness; a general agreement on economic, scientific and technical cooperation as well as cooperation agreements in the fields of trade, air and maritime transport.

On behalf of his country, President Pinto da Costa thanked the people of Equatorial Guinea for the support given to the Liberation Movement of Sao Tome and Principe (MLSTP) during the liberation struggle and for the friendly and fraternal welcome accorded the leaders of the MLSTP. He congratulated Col Obiang Nguema Mbazogo on the peace and stability prevailing in the Republic of Equatorial Guinea since 3 August 1979 and in the great efforts that the government of the Supreme Military Council is making to carry out the tasks of national reconstruction with the aim of achieving the socioeconomic well-being of the country. [Words indistinct] in view of the forthcoming conference of donors for the economic reorganization of Equatorial Guinea scheduled to be held shortly in Geneva in April.

For his part, Col Obiang Nguema Mbazogo commended Dr Pinto da Costa for his statesmanship and the efforts made by the MLSTP and the government to build a new and free society and to satisfy the material and spiritual needs of the people of Sao Tome and Principe.

At the international level, the two leaders reaffirmed their total commitment to the principles of the UN Charter and the nonaligned movement. In this vein, Pinto da Costa and Obiang Nguema Mbazogo expressed the conviction that the efforts being made to reduce the arms race will be crowned with success. The heads of state expressed the hope that the North-South dialogue will help to establish a new international economic order.

In the African context, the two heads of state expressed satisfaction with the results obtained by the OAU summit recently in Nairobi and expressed the desire that the OAU would contribute effectively to the peaceful solution of the Chadian problem in conformity with the sacred interests of people of that country.

The two heads of state reiterated their support for and solidarity with the people of Southern Africa in their struggle against the racist Pretoria regime and reaffirmed their unconditional support for SWAPO, the sole legitimate spokesman of the people of Namibia, and condemned the systematic aggression of South Africa against the frontline countries, particularly, the People's Republic of Angola. They expressed support for the struggle of all African people for their accession to and consolidation of independence.

During his stay in Equatorial Guinea, President Pinto da Costa received the golden keys to the city of Malabo and visited the telecommunications office.

In the capital of the Mainland Province, the president of the Democratic Republic of Sao Tome and Principe was given a rousing welcome. He placed a wreath at the monument of the fallen at Liberty Plaza where he and his Equatorial Guinean counterpart witnessed a popular show.

The president of the Democratic Republic of Sao Tome and Principe received members of the Sao Tome and Principe community residing in the Republic of Equatorial Guinea with whom he exchanged views while exhorting them to take an active part in the reconstruction of Equatorial Guinea.

Col Obiang Nguema Mbazogo and President Pinto da Costa expressed satisfaction with the fact that the views were identical on all the subjects discussed and they decided to establish frequent contacts between their governments in order to maintain cooperation in the fields discussed and to extend it to areas of interest common to both sides.

At the end of his visit, the president of the Democratic Republic of Sao Tome and Principe expressed his profound gratitude to President Obiang Nguema Mbazogo, the government and people of Equatorial Guinea for the warm and fraternal welcome extended to him upon his arrival in our country and for the hospitality shown to him throughout his stay. President Pinto da Costa invited Col Obiang Nguema Mbazogo to pay an official visit to the Democratic Republic of Sao Tome and Principe. The invitation was cordially accepted and the details will be worked out through diplomatic channels.

Issued in Malabo on 17 February 1982.

For the Democratic Republic of Sao Tome and Principe, Dr Manual Pinto da Costa, president of the Democratic Republic of Sao Tome and Principe.

For the Republic of Equatorial Guinea, Col Obiang Nguema Mbazogo, chairman of the Supreme Military Council

CSO: 4748/17

REGIME CONCENTRATING ON ECONOMIC RECONSTRUCTION

AB092147 Paris AFP in English 1811 GMT 9 Feb 82

[Report by Bernard Degioanni]

[Text] Malabo, Feb 9 (AFP)—The drafting of a new constitution for Equatorial Guinea and its approval in a referendum next August no longer seem to be the main preoccupation of the authorities here.

The ruling three-year-old Supreme Military Council (SMC) now believes that priority must be given to reviving the economy, which was destroyed between 1968 and 1979, during the dictatorship of the late Macias Nguema.

Equatorial Guinea, a former Spanish colony in West Africa, consists of the islands of Bioko and Annabon, in the Gulf of Guinea, and of Rio Muni on the African mainland, between Cameroon and Gabon.

It relies on foreign aid to keep the economy afloat, and local farmers cannot produce sufficient food for the population of 300,000.

The agriculture marketing infrastructure has collapsed, and production of the main export cash crop--cocoa--has slumped from 38,000 tons in the 1966 agricultural year to 4,000 tons last year.

President Teodoro Obiang Nguema and the SMC, with help from the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), has drawn up a two-year economic recovery programme to be launched this year. The plan will be submitted to a meeting of donor countries and organizations at a conference in Geneva in April.

Colonel Obiang, who led the August 1979 coup against his uncle Macias Nguema, plans to turn to the West. He has already distanced himself from the Soviet Union, the close ally of the former regime, and has renewed his ties with France and Spain, at the same time developing close links with West Germany and Morocco.

While the authorities are concentrating on the economy they have not neglected other aspects of national reconstruction, making allowances for what they call the political and sociocultural aspects. But for the time being there is no mention of a return to the multi-party system which existed before independence.

In two cabinet shuffles since he seized power Colonel Obiang has brought civilians back into government, trying to produce an ethnic balance which will guarantee the country some stability.

CSO: 4700/746

BRIEFS

SAO TOME PRESIDENT VISITS--At 1100 yesterday morning, His Excellency Manuel Pinto da Costa, president of the Democratic Republic of Sao Tome and Principe, arrived in our country. He was welcomed at the airport by His Excellency Col Obiang Nguema Mbazogo, chairman of the Supreme Military Council and head of state of Equatorial Guinea. After disembarking from the presidential plane, President Da Costa was greeted by his Equatorial Guinean counterpart and by the second vice chairman of the Supreme Military Council and commissioner of state for foreign affairs. The two heads of state then mounted the platform and listened to the two national anthems. President Da Costa was invited to review the honor guard, which presented arms to him. After this ceremony, President Obiang Nguema Mbazogo introduced to his illustrious guest the members of the government, namely, the commissioners of state, permanent secretaries and other senior officials of the Equatorial Guinean state as well as members of the diplomatic corps and international organizations. [Excerpt] [AB161733 Malabo Domestic Service in Spanish 0600 GMT 16 Feb 82] The president of the Democratic Republic of Sao Tome and Principe, Dr Manuel Pinto da Costa, who was in our country, today ended his state visit to Equatorial Guinea. During his stay here he discussed bilateral and international questions with the chairman of the Supreme Military Council, Col Obiang Nguema Mbazogo, and other officials of the government of Equatorial Guinea. During his tour of the country, President Pinto da Costa visited several national monuments, such as the international museum in the mainland province of Bata and the central studios of Radio Ecuatorial in Bata, and he placed flowers at the monument of the fallen. The president of Sao Tome and Principe was seen off at the Malabo airport by his Equatorial Guinea counterpart, Col Obiang Nguema, members of the government, the diplomatic corps, international organizations and members of the public who had come to see off our illustrious guest who spent 3 days with us. On his arrival at the airport, listened to the national anthem, reviewed a guard of honor, shook hands with the officials present and boarded the presidential plane for his country at 1730 today. [Text] [AB181223 Malabo Domestic Service in Spanish 2100 GMT 17 Feb 82]

CSO: 4748/16

MENGISTU ANNOUNCES CAMPAIGN TO CRUSH ERITREAN REBELS

Paris LE MONDE in French 27 Jan 82 p 5

[Article by Jean-Pierre Langellier]

[Text] Nairobi—On Monday, 25 January, Lt Col Mengistu Haile Mariam, Ethiopian chief of state, set off what, in his mind, should constitute the political and military reconquest of Eritrea. In a 3-hour speech delivered in Asmara, capital of the rebel province, he promised to "crush" Eritrean guerrillas and announced a far-reaching plan of reconstruction.

Wielding the carrot and the stick, Colonel Mengistu said that the crushing of the rebels and the economic rehabilitation would be carried out simultaneously. "The military offensive should be accompanied by an effort to organize and recruit the Eritrean people so as to 'isolate the subversive, secessionist elements.' Farmers will be regrouped and will receive military training and weapons for their self-defense."

The Ethiopian president announced an economic plan in three phrases that will cost the nation several billion dollars. This "Red Star revolutionary development campaign" will grant priority to the "reconstruction" of infrastructures. He also plans to stabilize prices, put an end to shortages, reduce unemployment and relocate refugees.

The chief of state intends, if not to convince, then at least to consolidate the new control over the province and get it back on its feet. This is an immense task, as Mengistu recognized, so great is the damage suffered by Eritrea. A report on television a few days ago showed the city of Decamere, 40 kilometers south of Asmara, turned into ruins. Walls riddled with bullet holes attest to the violence of the fighting that took place there 3 years ago.

Several signs demonstrate the importance which the government in Addis-Ababa attaches to the campaign being planned. Mengistu has been traveling for over a month and is now in Asmara almost constantly, accompanied by part of his ministers, including the minister of defense. This is where he received Claude Chyesson at the end of December.

The 25 January speech, announced with solemnity several days in advance, was delivered before the entire government, the 14 provincial governors, heads of mass organizations and a number of Ethiopian ambassadors called back for the event.

The head of the junta asked Eritreans Monday to "forget the past," even "if they had once served the interests of the rebels, consciously or not," and to choose between "rallying to the revolution and support for the separatist forces with all its consequences." He warned those who interpreted his "appeal for peace as a sign of weakness." He then depicted the "secessionists" as "rebels without a cause, serving neither religion, nor Eritrea nor the revolution, but only the interests of imperialism."

Militarily, it has been confirmed that Mengistu has mobilized a large part of his shock divisions in Eritrea. Diplomatic sources say that tens of thousands of men have returned to the province in recent weeks. Nearly half of the members of the army are now reportedly in Eritrea in Tigre Province.

This military effort was denounced in Khartoum on Monday by Ramada Mohamed Nur, secretary general of the main nationalist movement, the Eritrean People's Liberation Front (EPLF). According to Nur, the Ethiopian offensive will be launched within the week and four Soviet generals are participating in its planning. The Eritrean leader predicted a pincer attack on three fronts, with the city of Nakfa, the last locale still in the hands of the EPLF, as its objective.

In order to thwart these plans, the members of the EPLF bombed the airport of Keren on 19 January and the Admara airport 3 days later, Nur said. He reported that several Ethiopian planes were damaged. The EPLF leader condemned Libyan and South Yemen aid to the Ethiopian Army. According to him, South Yemen is furnishing pilots for the Mig-23's, while Libyan ships have sent four loads of weapons and munitions. Nur added that 75 Ethiopian, Cuban and Libyan officers died last week in an air accident near Addis Ababa.

11,464
CSO: 4719/539

MORE DETAILS ON USE OF NERVE GAS

PM191527 London THE DAILY TELEGRAPH in English 19 Feb 82 p 5

[Report by David Adamson: "'Nerve Gas in Use' Against Eritreans"]

[Text] Eritrean guerrillas facing a massive Ethiopian offensive are claiming with more than usual detail, that they are being subjected to gas warfare.

They say that two types of Soviet-made nerve gas, tabun and soman, are being dropped on their forces from M-4 armoured helicopters.

The attacks are said to have started on 15 February at Tirukruk, close to the Sudanese border. Refugees claim that a number of people have died.

Sources in London close to the Eritrean People's Liberation Front, a Marxist organization, said yesterday that Ethiopian diplomats in Geneva had admitted to using a "mace-like" gas. Mace is an incapacitating gas that does not kill.

A telegram sent on Wednesday to Mr Perez de Cuellar, United Nations secretary-general, by Salim Azzam, secretary-general of the Islamic Council of Europe, said that supplies of "lethal nerve gas" were being held by the Ethiopians at Afabet, in Asmara, and "in the south."

The number of casualties was not known, but survivors were suffering from "acute poisoning."

The Ethiopians are believed to be using 90,000 troops in the offensive. The liberation front claimed in Khartoum yesterday that Ethiopian troops had landed from the Red Sea at Aiet, 6 miles inside Sudan.

CSO: 4700/786

BRIEFS

ERITREANS, GOVERNMENT FORCES CLASH--In two clashes between Eritrean Muslim Mujahidin and Ethiopian Government forces, Eritrean Muslim Mujahidin killed 500, wounded 1,000 and captured 40 Ethiopian soldiers in the (?Af Abed) and (?Bahar) areas. In the (?Af Abed) area, the Eritrean Mujahidin captured 157 light weapons of all types, 15 rocket launchers and 500 small cannon [word indistinct]. In the (?Bahar) area, they captured 7 Kalashnikov rifles, (?82) small cannon and 6 [word indistinct]. The ferocious weeklong battle Eritrean revolutionaries have been waging against Ethiopian forces is still underway. [Excerpt] [GF240900 Tehran International Service in Arabic 0700 GMT 24 Feb 82]

GAS, NAPALM USE CLAIMED--Kuwait, 18 Feb (INA)--The Popular Front for the Liberation of Eritrea has accused the Ethiopian regime of using poisonous gas against the Popular Army for the Liberation of Eritrea. In a statement distributed here today, the front urged the international community to condemn the crimes being committed by the Ethiopian regime against the Eritrean people. The statement said that the Ethiopian regime launched a wide-scale military campaign on 16 February using cluster and napalm bombs and firing poisonous gas from artillery. [Text] [JN181145 Baghdad INA in Arabic 1100 GMT 18 Feb 82]

CSO: 4704/11

BRIEFS

GASOLINE PRICE INCREASE--The price of fuel was increased yesterday over all the national territory. According to Decree No 0003-[words indistinct] of 22 January 1982 and with effect from 10 February 1982, the retail prices of premium and regular gasoline and of diesel fuel have been modified. The changes represent an increase of about 5 percent. However, the price of kerosene remains unchanged. These changes are in conformity with the need to adapt the prices of these products to the concrete realities of their raw material, crude oil, whose price has considerably increased owing to the increase in the value of the U.S. dollar, the currency in which the product is invoiced. Despite the increases necessitated by this new measure, however, the government remains sensitive to the problems of the consumers. Moreover, the government has decided to maintain the price of kerosene because of its concern for the condition of the underprivileged. [Text] [AB100942 Libreville Domestic Service in French 0600 GMT 10 Feb 82]

CSO: 4719/564

'GRAPHIC' WANTS TRACES OF NEOCOLONIALISM ELIMINATED

AB240752 Accra Domestic Service in English 0700 GMT 24 Feb 82

[Press review]

[Excerpt] Writing under the heading "Saying Goodbye to Neocolonialism," the DAILY GRAPHIC wonders why the proscribed People's National Party government which claimed to be an offspring of Dr Mkrumah's Convention People's Party found it very difficult to condemn two very important enemies of the Third World countries. These are neocolonialism and imperialism.

It notes that while some politicians and hangers-on thought these words were merely slogans, others, mainly the ignorant ones, considered them as belonging only to the vocabulary of a particular ideology. The paper observes that it is these two phenoemna that have caused so much damage to our pride as Ghanaians and disrupted any meaningful attempt to restructure our society.

The GRAPHIC says the country before 31 December could be described as neocolonialist because it was being economically exploited by interests which were foreign to the majority of the people and they only served the purpose of the capitalist world. It goes on to say that before the revolution, all the industries in the country were mere apendages of some capitalist network elsewhere. It was not only multinational companies that milked the country dry but they relied so heavily on import licenses that if for some reason letters of credit could not be issued by the Bank of Ghana, the country's economic progress had to be halted.

The paper emphasizes that if the revolution had not come, only heaven knows what would have been the dimensions of the nation's problems today. The GRAPHIC concludes by saying that neocolonialism and its twin fellow, imperialism seek to perpetuate the dominance of Third World countries through political, cultural, educational and informational expression. It therefore advises all the spokesmen of the current revolution to first identify neocolonialist and imperialist traces in our national lives because it is the surest way to satisfy oneself that the correct step has been taken.

CSO: 4700/775

ACCRA TRADERS BANNED FROM SELLING ALCOHOL, OTHER ITEMS

Market Women, Kiosks Affected

AB220924 Accra Domestic Service in English 0600 GMT 22 Feb 82

[Excerpts] With effect from tomorrow all market women and kiosk operators are banned from the sale of certain specified items. According to the Ministry of Trade, only the accredited commercial houses will be allowed to sell the commodities. Rural sales will also be made by accredited commercial houses and authorized agents. Those who contravene this directive will be dealt with severely.

In a new development, kiosk operators in the greater Accra region are also banned from the sale of alcoholic beverages with effect from the 28th of this month. These are whisky, schnapps, brandy, gin and beer. The operators are, however, allowed to sell mineral beverages and snacks. A statement from the regional administration warned that anyone who goes against this order will face revolutionary action.

Sales Only to GNTC

AB222218 Accra Domestic Service in English 2000 GMT 22 Feb 82

[Excerpt] All traders who are banned from the sale of certain specified items as from tomorrow are reminded to sell to the GNTC [Ghana National Trade Corporation] any of these specific commodities they may still have in their possession.

As a further demonstration of goodwill (?traders) are given a brief period of 1 week within which to sell the specified commodities to the GNTC. Traders are assured that they would not be molested. Those in doubt will report at the nearest office of the National Council on Women and Development for assistance.

The minister of trade warns that it is a serious affair to do away or destroy any of the specified goods. Appropriate searches will be made as from 1 March. Those who have a few pieces of clothes as are traditionally kept by women have no cause to worry. Anyone who connives to defeat the purpose of this exercise will be severely dealt with.

CSO: 4700/775

BRIEFS

COCOA EXPORTATION IMPROVED--For the first time in several years, Ghana is now in a position to fulfill all its cocoa export commitments. According to an official of the produce buying division of the Cocoa Marketing Board [CMB], Mr Kwame Gyamfi, this has been made possible by the current cocoa evacuation exercise by students. Mr Gyamfi was speaking to a Ghana Broadcasting Corporation correspondent at the Takoradi harbor yesterday where he witnessed the evacuation exercise. A total of 189,989 bags of cocoa has been off-loaded at the harbor since the beginning of the exercise. He said several tons of cocoa have already been shipped. Seven ships are also expected to dock soon at the harbor to be loaded with cocoa. [Text] [AB200741 Accra Domestic Service in English 0600 GMT 20 Feb 82]

PRICE REDUCTION CALL GOES UNHEEDED--The persistent appeal by the Provisional National Defense Council [PNDC] for a voluntary reduction of prices of food items and other commodities seems to have received little response. A survey conducted at the various markets in Accra by a Ghana Broadcasting Corporation reporter revealed that apart from kenkey, prices of many items have not changed. On the contrary, some have rather gone up. An American tin of beans, for instance, which used to sell at 55 cedis, is now being sold at between 70 and 80 cedis; three small pieces of tomatoes are selling at 4 cedis, while six small pieces of okro sell at 2 cedis instead of 1 cedi. Meat and fish are very hard to come by; while groundnut, rice and cooking oil have completely vanished from the markets. Prices of garri [cassava flour] and maize have, however, gone down considerably, although they are sold under cover at some of the markets. According to some people interviewed, most sellers go to the market as early as 0530 to sell their goods at their own prices to outwit members of defense committees or security agencies. [Text] [AB200744 Accra Domestic Service in English 0600 GMT 20 Feb 82] Despite the Provisional National Defense Council's persistent appeal to landlords to reduce rents, most landlords in Accra have refused to do so. A survey conducted by a Ghana Broadcasting Corporation reporter in some parts of the city reveals that some landlords have kept to the old rent and others have even recently increased theirs. [Excerpt] [AB222233 Accra Domestic Service in English 2000 GMT 22 Feb 82]

CSO: 4700/775

USSR TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE IN BAUXITE EVALUATION

Bissau NO PINTCHA in Portuguese 12 Dec 81 p 3

[Excerpt] The signing of a contract in the field of bauxite development was one result of the visit by Brig Gen Nino Vieira to the Soviet Union from 27 November to 5 December 1981. The contract calls for a technical-economic study of the feasibility of developing the bauxite deposits in Boe. Soviet technicians will be sent for that purpose as early as the beginning of 1982. The contract was signed by Samba Lamine Mane, minister of natural resources, and by the managers of TSVETMETPROMEKSPORT the Soviet import and export organization.

According to the contract, that Soviet state supply enterprise will prepare the technical-economic feasibility study at no cost. The study will consist of determining the advisability of continuing the prospecting work begun some years ago and the possibilities for working the deposits. It will indicate the various possibilities and the profitability of the investments to be made in working the deposits.

During the time that its technicians are in our country, the supply firm will provide Guinea-Bissau with technical assistance in preparing the initial indispensable data for working the bauxite deposits.

The team of Soviet technicians that will soon arrive in our country will be made up of geologists, economists, and planning, civil, and port engineers.

It will be up Guinea-Bissau's Ministry of Natural Resources to select zones and areas for the infrastructure, and it will also supply the necessary materials for preparing the technical-economic feasibility study and determining construction areas. The study is to be submitted to Guinea-Bissau within 12 months of the date on which it is started.

11798
CSO: 4742/196

PRICES OF AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS RAISED

Bissau NO PINTCHA in Portuguese 12 Dec 81 p 5

[Excerpts] There will be new prices for agricultural products beginning now, according to a decision by the Council of Ministers at its meeting on Wednesday. Under the chairmanship of comrade Victor Saude Maria, vice president of the Council of the Revolution and member of the PAIGC Politburo, the Council of Ministers established 15 December as the date on which the marketing campaign for agricultural products will officially begin throughout the country.

It should be emphasized that the decision by the Council of Ministers to set new prices for the marketing of agricultural products--unchanged since 1979--is in response to a concern by the party and government to increase production so as to cope with the food crisis being experienced by the country and produce exportable surpluses to attract foreign exchange and achieve equilibrium in the balance of payments. That concern, incidentally, is abundantly expressed in the report by the CNG [National Committee of Guerrillas] to the special congress. The report warns that it is necessary to pay greater attention to the rural sector as the basis of our economy and to assign to it the priority it really deserves, adding that this would also help to improve the living conditions of the peasant masses.

Minimum Import Program

A minimum import program has been approved by the government. It is aimed at regulating imports during the fourth quarter of 1981. With an initial fund of $14 million granted by the National Bank of Guinea-Bissau [BNG], the program establishes priorities for consumer goods, spare parts, and other items regarded as indispensable for the campaign that is now beginning. The measure is justified by officials in the Ministry of Commerce on the grounds that in recent years, there has been a considerable flow of products to the neighboring countries, which have built stores at the frontiers and stocked them with merchandise for which there is great demand on the part of the peasants. This has resulted in the drain of products to the frontiers, where they are exchanged for goods that are in short supply on the domestic market.

That fact induced the Ministry of Fisheries, Commerce, and Artisans to draw up the minimum import program in cooperation with the Ministry of Economic Coordination and Planning, the Ministry of Finance and the BNG. Its basis was the forecasts of imports for previous years and statistical data on foreign trade as prepared by the Ministry of Economic Coordination and Planning.

In that connection, and to insure the greatest possible success with the campaign, which reaches its peak in February and March, priority has been assigned to foodstuffs and a range of products such as tobacco, soap, cigarettes, matches, lanterns, iron bars, aniline, caustic soda, hoes, "tarcados," and various textile products such as ribbon, thread, cloth, blankets, and fabrics.

11798
CSO: 4742/196

BRIEFS

KOMSOMOL DELEGATION--A delegation from Komsomol (Leninist Communist Youth League) has been in our country since last Saturday at the invitation of the Amilcar Cabral African Youth [JAAC]. The visit comes within the framework of the good relations of friendship existing between the two youth organizations. The Soviet delegation, headed by Farid Mohamed Chin, deputy secretary general of the USSR Youth Committee, held a meeting with its counterpart in Guinea-Bissau, headed by comrade Teobaldo Barbosa, member of the PAIGC Central Committee and deputy national secretary of the JAAC. The visitors went to the historic village of Mores, where they had the opportunity to talk with the heroic inhabitants who were once protagonists in harrowing scenes of war between the liberation army and the Portuguese fascist colonial troops. [Text] [Bissau NO PINTCHA in Portuguese 13 Jan 82 p 2] 11798

UNDP AGRICULTURAL ASSISTANCE--The UNDP (UN Development Program) is going to finance two agricultural projects in Guinea-Bissau totaling $3.06 million. The agreement covering the two projects was signed yesterday morning by comrade Avito Jose da Silva, minister of rural development, and the UNDP representative in our country, Anatoli Chitov. The first project (UNDP-FAO) concerns the Seed Experimentation and Multiplication Center in Contuboel and Caboxanque and totals $2 million. The investments will begin in January 1982 and continue for 5 years. The second project (UNDP-UN Equipment Fund), which totals $1.065 million, is aimed at the multiplication and distribution of improved rice seed in Contuboel. It will last for 2 years. These investments are the result of a 6-year UNDP project in the field of agriculture which is scheduled to end at the end of 1981. These new projects will increase our government's capacity to produce selected rice seed and begin the multiplication of corn and sorghum seed, actions which constitute an improvement in the national agronomic research programs. [Text] [Bissau NO PINTCHA in Portuguese 12 Dec 81 p 8] 11798

CSO: 4742/196

HOUPHOUET-BOIGNY ASKED TO REOPEN ABIDJAN UNNIVERSITY

AB191152 Paris AFP in French 1028 GMT 19 Feb 82

[Text] Abidjan, 19 Feb (AFP)--A group of 25 lecturers, in a motion presented to President Houphouet-Boigny on Thursday, have asked for the reopening of the University of Abidjan, it has been learned in the Ivorian capital.

These lecturers of the higher institutions, made up essentially of deans of faculties and directors of institutes and higher schools, "regret the recent events that took place at the university, reaffirm their total support to the head of state and ask for the reopening of the university and normal resumption of classes."

These lecturers also stated in their motion that this step comes from "all those who have realized that this crisis does not honor the teaching staff."

Scientists and technicians working at institutes of research also addressed a similar motion to the head of state. The two motions say that the strike action called for by the National Union for Research and Higher Education [SYNARES] was "illegal."

Shortly after the presentation of these two motions to President Houphouet-Boigny, tracts signed by the SYNARES were distributed in the capital, claiming that the 25 lecturers who signed did not represent all Ivorian lecturers and research officers. The SYNARES feels that the motion was aimed at "dividing the lecturers and research officers to realize personal ambitions."

In these tracts the SYNARES, which was dissolved on 10 February for calling for an unlimited strike, affirmed that it is ready to look for the fairest solutions to the present situation together with the authorities.

Last Saturday, the Political Bureau and the Steering Committee of the Democratic Party of the Ivory Coast decided to suspend the salaries of all teachers of higher institutions following this strike. This decision completed the measures taken on 10 February, including the closure of the university, the evacuation of all student dormitories and the suspension of all scholarships for higher institutions. The two bodies of the party also decided to set up a board of inquiry to determine responsibility for the student unrest which began on 9 February.

CSO: 4719/594

BRIEFS

POWER CUT--The Lesotho Liberation Army said it had cut the electricity supply and telephone connections in the Butha Buthe area yesterday morning. A spokesman for the army, which is the military wing of the exiled Basutoland Congress Party, said that three electricity poles and three telephone poles were affected by the attack. [Text] [Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 20 Feb 82 p 4]

CSO: 4700/756

DOE WARNS CUSTOMS SECTION ON TAX COLLECTION

AB082056 Monrovia Radio Elwa in English 1900 GMT 8 Feb 82

[Text] Head of state, CIC [commander in chief] Samuel K. Doe has given a 2-month ultimatum to the staff of customs office at the free port of Monrovia to improve the collection of duties and other taxes of face dismissal. CIC Doe issued the ultimatum today during a surprise visit to the free port of Monrovia customs section.

He observed that although the business community was doing its best to improve its relations with government, some employees of the customs office connived with businessmen to defraud the government of huge sums of money. He warned that if the tax collection did not improve within the next 2 months, the entire staff of the free port customs office will be dismissed, adding that the Liberians were looking at the free port for a generation of adequate revenue since the iron ore and rubber which were government's major sources of income were no longer generating anything. Head of State Doe also decried that recent moves to prove that some business proprietors had issued uncertified checks, totalling about $250,000, for government taxes [sentence as heard]. CIC Doe then cautioned the chief of the customs office, Mr (Quaison Koneka), to ensure that such unwholesome practices were eradicated.

In his remarks, Mr (Koneka Quaison) stated that his office was doing everything possible to improve the collection of taxes at the port but explained that the lack of transportation and other logistics such as typewriters [word indistinct] the operation of his office. He said he was aware that some business proprietors were issuing void checks to government in payment of taxes. He assured the head of state that if the necessary logistics were given him on time, the collection of duties and other taxes at the free port would improve immediately.

Earlier, Finance Minister J. Irving Jones, who accompanied the head of state to the port, directed Mr (Koneka) to do a daily routine inspection of all five houses under his direct supervision at the free port in an effort to prevent fraudulent acts.

CSO: 4700/746

BRIEFS

GASOLINE RATIONING--The management of the Liberian Petroleum Refining Company [LPRC] today introduced gasoline rationing in the country due to mechanical problems at the refinery in (Gartsville), outside Monrovia. A press release from LPRC disclosed that the production of gasoline will be reduced temporarily from 70,000 gallons per day to approximately 40,000 gallons. The release further said an importation of 40,000 tons of gasoline will arrive in the capital on Thursday evening of this week at which time distribution will return to normal. The management of LPRC has meanwhile appealed to the public to reduce their gasoline [word indistinct] in the meantime and advised them not to hoard gasoline. [Text] [AB222024 Monrovia Radio ELWA in English 1900 GMT 22 Feb 82]

CSO: 4700/769

BRIEFS

HUNGARIAN PARTY DELEGATION--A Hungarian Socialist Workers Party [MSZMP] delegation led by Laszlo Ballai is currently on a friendly working visit to our country. Yesterday the guests met Prime Minister Desire Rakotoarijaona and several members of the AREMA [vanguard of the Malagasy revolution] Political Bureau of [name indistinct] Palace. Ballai expressed the MSZMP's support for President Ratsiraka's call for the Indian Ocean to be a zone of peace. The Hungarian ambassador to Madagascar has announced that to mark the delegation's visit, the Hungarian Government has decided to send medicines valued at 1.2 million forints to Madagascar as aid to the victims of the recent floods. The medicines will be delivered at the beginning of March. [EA250228 Antananarivo Domestic Service in French 1845 GMT 23 Feb 82]

CSO: 4719/595

BRIEFS

SHELL TO SEEK OIL--Blantyre, 17 Feb (AFP)--Malawi has signed an agreement with a major Dutch oil company, Shell Exploration BV, to carry out prospecting for oil and gas on the bed of Lake Malawi, a spokesman of the Ministry of Natural Resources and Forestry said Tuesday. The spokesman did not disclose the cost of the exploration venture. Work on the project, which will be in four phases, starts next month. Lake Malawi's suspected oil-bearing rocks were stumbled on by accident when a scientific team from the University of North Carolina in the United States, in collaboration with Malawi scientists, last June conducted experiments on climatic changes in the country over the last million years. The scientists drilled holes on the bottom of the lake for samples of rock, sand and fossils for various experiments, the natural resources ministry spokesman explained. "In the course of this investigation it was discovered, accidentally, that under wide areas of the bed of the lake there are surprisingly large thicknesses of rock of the type which in other parts of the world may contain oil or gas," the spokesman said. The ministry's statement on oil and gas exploration come in the wake of foreign press reports of the great potential of finding oil and (?gas) in the east Africa Rift Valley lakes of Tanganyika and Malawi, following preliminary investigation mainly in Mozambique and Tanzania. [Text] [PA170228 Paris AFP in English 0128 GMT 17 Feb 82]

CSO: 4700/745

FEAR OF MMM DICTATORSHIP VOICED

Port Louis THE NATION in English 27 Jan 82 p 1

[Article by Deenesh Hanuman: "The Good, the Bad and the Ugly"]

[Text]

No, we are not referring to a film. We are referring to a real life situation. The Labour Party represents the Good and all the good our beloved country has derived from its socialist principles and governement. The MMM represents the Bad and the Ugly. The Bad because this Marxist-Leninist dictatorship-oriented party is the quintessence of destruction. The Ugly because of the damages it has caused to the economy of our country and by extension to the innocent work force it has manipulated for sheer political gain.

All the cosmetics and paraphernalia it has been using and will continue to use will not turn a wolf into a lamb. And the attempts it has made to assure and reassure the population will not wash away its real intentions of wreaking formidable vengeance on innocent people in all walks of life. All the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten the hands of the Bad and Ugly MMM.

With the approach of elections, a vital choice offers itself to the Mauritian nation. A choice that will decide on the one hand between suffocation and putting the clock backwards forever if the population, unawares, votes the Bad and Ugly MMM into dictatorial power, and on the other hand that will guarantee the continuation of progress in liberty, with order and discipline with all human rights, if the population in all awareness, rates the Good Labour Party into democratic power.

Now that the fate of our country will be decided in a few months, more and more people from all over the country and from all walks of life are realising that the MMM — the Bad and Ugly MMM — can only spell doom for all of us. Doom for ourselves. Doom for our children and our children's children. Doom for Mauritius. The bayonet will replace the ballot box. Our prisons will be filled with innocent people whose only crime will be to beg to differ. Our Police Force, as is classic in many other countries where a marxist — leninist dictatorship has either slipped into power against the better judgement of the population or acquired power by force or other unconstitutional means — yes, our Police Force will be manned and diverted by foreign communist henchmen who will not hesitate a second to dispose of us as of animals. But cheering — that is the word. All these ugly acts will take place and will be perpetrated under an MMM regime. Indeed, with the Bad and Ugly MMM in power, farewell to Freedom. Farewell to peace. Farewell to order. Farewell to freedom of conscience. Farewell to initiative. Farewell to freedom of speech and writing. Farewell to life and living. Farewell to Beauty.

A thing of Beauty is a joy for ever, said the poet.

The Labour Party is Beauty. Beauty is Truth, said the same poet, and Truth is Beauty. The Labour Party is Truth. The Labour Party is good Goodness. Our champion. Our protector. Our future.

When the time to choose comes, let us all, like one man, one voice, one heart, vote the Labour Party into power and keep the Bad and Ugly MMM Wolf away at arms length.

Forward therefore with Labour Party, our country's and our own hope!

CSO: 4700/758

HINDUS URGED TO UNITE FOR POLITICAL POWER

Port Louis THE NATION in English 31 Jan 82 p 1

[Article by Deenesh Hanuman: "Hindus, You Are Killing Yourselves"]

[Text] Let us frankly call a spade a spade. Without hyprocrisy. Without false pretence. Without fear. At heart and in privacy no one likes the Hindus in this country. Worst still, Hindus do not like Hindus. They are their own worst enemy. Especially in the political field. They are dividing and they are encouraged, by non Hindus, to divide themselves horizontally and vertically at the approach of the elections. So that they weaken themselves into various minority groups and lose their impact as the majority community.

The eye-opening examples of Fiji, Surinam, Guyana couple with examples like the cruel expulsion of Asians from Idi Amin's Uganda, seem to leave them unconcerned, impassive and insensitive. We have heard of the country where the Hindus formed a common front for elections, won these, obtained power but lost it quickly because they could not agree who should be the Prime Minister. In that country today Hindus cannot own land. They have to rent it. Instead of retaining their influence as majority community, they are merely various minority linguistic and/or caste groups, suffering tremendous hardships and all kinds of humiliation. They have bartered away their fate, their future, and that of their children. Will the Hindus of Mauritius ever learn? Will they allow power to slip between their fingers for good? And live to regret it till the day they die and even beyond death and the confines of this world?

Who has given the Hindus dignity, pride, and power in this country? The answer must be the sons of coolies, their forefathers who, with sweat and tears, had never abandoned their struggle to give them a better future. Have the Hindus forgotten the whips and scorn of those hard times? The answer indeed must be the sons of coolies who, with the assistance of non-Hindus, who where genuine humanitarians, launched the Labour Party, to champion their cause, because they suffered most, as well as the cause of the down-trodden.

Hindus, your concrete houses, your cars, your firm, your business, your self-confidence, your poise, your happiness, your success, you owe all this basically to your coolie forefathers. Had they been still alive they would have been ashame of your internecine bickerings. They would have died for sadness that all their efforts, all their sacrifices have only resulted in creating superficial Hindus, Hindus by name but not in spirit, not in love, not at heart. Not brothers-brothers. But enemies. Competitors. Adversaries.

I said no one likes the Hindus in this country. That is perfectly understandable. But what is objectionable is that in a race, Hindus are not members of the same team but want to trip the Hindu in front so as to reach the finishing line first, not realising that they will kill and finish themselves out of the race, and give victory on a silver plate to the others. And this is going to be the last race for them. The very last race. They will only, in future, be passive on-lookers. And their children, and their children's children will curse them for ever.

Dirty linen must be washed within and not exposed to the happy gaze and satisfaction of non-Hindus. Differences--which are merely petty--and that Hindu-killing green-eyed monster jealously, nay, envy should be cast aside. The Hindus must unite their efforts behind the Labour Party to obtain a thrashing victory against opponents and enemies who will use innocent and non-well-briefed Hindus to achieve power and then drop them like a sack of potatoes with a rope round their necks.

Why have Ramphul, Moorba, Coonjan, Venkatasamy, Jundoosingh and so many other Hindus left the MMM? Why, indeed? Because they have realised in time and particularly the threat to the Hindus in this country.

The Hindus are basically a community of love, tolerance, with strong belief in peaceful co-existence and active collaboration. But tolerance should first be exercised within the community itself. Tolerance of little and insignificant differences which really, one man-made and artificial. Charity should begin at home.

Character — assassination of Hindus by Hindus must cease forthwith. Mud-slinging done away with. There are forums where Hindus can fight out their petty differences. But not the political forum. Fighting Hindus by Hindus in politics is equated with self inflicted wounds, and political suicide for the community.

Will the Hindus shake themselves up and be one voice or have they decided that they prefer bondage and servitude to seeing Hindus like themselves retaining political power together with other Mauritian brothers and sisters with the Labour Party?

From coolie to political power and from political power to bondage??? That is what Hindus want? Perhaps this is what they deserve if they persist in dividing, weakening and killing themselves.

CSO: 4700/758

MACHEL MESSAGE OF CONDOLENCE ON SUSLOV DEATH

Maputo NOTICIAS in Portuguese 28 Jan 82 p 1

[Text] Marshal Samora Machel, chairman of the FRELIMO Party and president of the People's Republic of Mozambique, has sent a message of condolence to Leonid Brezhnev, secretary general of the CPSU and chairman of the Supreme Soviet of the USSR, for the unexpected death of Mikhail Suslov, distinguished leading figure of the people of the Soviet Union and of the international communist movement.

With the same motive, the Central Committee of the FRELIMO Party and the Permanent Commission of the People's Assembly also sent to the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union and to the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the USSR a message of sympathy.

We herewith reproduce the text of the message of condolence sent by President Samora Machel to Chairman Leonid Brezhnev:

"It was with profound sadness that we learned of the death of Comrade Mikhail Suslov, member of the Politburo of the Central Committee of the CPSU, secretary of the Central Committee of the CPSU, member of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet and distinguished figure of the international communist movement.

"His theoretical and practical precepts for the enrichment of the principles of Marxism-Leninism and for the development of the international communist movement will endure as the patrimony of all progressive humankind.

"By his example of revolutionary dedication to the cause of the progress and happiness of the Soviet people and of the peoples of the entire world, Comrade Mikhail Suslov will serve as a source of inspiration for our people, for the Mozambican communists.

"It is with profound respect for the exemplary communist personality of Comrade Mikhail Suslov that we present to you, dear comrade, and--through your person--to the Central Committee of the CPSU our profound condolences.

"We ask that you convey to the members of his family our deepest sympathy.

"Communist greetings.

"Our highest esteem."

The Other Message

The message of the Central Committee of the FRELIMO Party and of the Permanent Commission of the People's Assembly to the Central Committee of the CPSU and to the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the USSR is as follows:

"It was with the deepest sorrow that we learned of the death of Comrade Mikhail Suslov, member of the BP [Politburo] of the CC [Central Committee] of the CPSU, secretary of the CC of the CPSU and member of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the USSR.

"Comrade Mikhail Suslov was a great and an important communist and internationalist militant, an indefatigable combatant of the world revolution, a distinguished Soviet leader, a vanguard personality of the international revolutionary movement, and an eminent theoretician who by his life and work enriched the science of Marxism-Leninism. His death was a loss for the entire communist movement, for all revolutionary and progressive forces. In particular, we shall remember him as a faithful friend of the Mozambican people, of the FRELIMO Party and of our socialist revolution.

"The Central Committee of the FRELIMO Party and the Permanent Commission of the People's Assembly send--in the name of the people, the workers and the communists of Mozambique--the sincerest condolences to the Central Committee of the CPSU; to the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the USSR; and to the Soviet people, workers and communists. In particular, we share the sorrow of the family of our dear departed comrade.

"The life and work of the veteran party member and distinguished leader Mikhail Suslov will continue to inspire and mold the new revolutionary generations!

"The struggle continues!

"Socialism shall triumph!

"The revolution shall be victorious!"

10992
CSO: 4742/201

OFFICIAL EXPLAINS ROLE OF UNIFORM WAGE UNDER SOCIALISM

Maputo NOTICIAS in Portuguese 25 Jan 82 p 3

[Text] "In the society we are building--a society in which socialist ownership predominates--wages and salaries have a direct relationship to production. For this reason, the determination of a uniform wage policy throughout the nation is basic to the construction of the socialist society." This statement was made several days ago to our reporter by Jose Nascimento, National Director of the Labor and Wage Organization.

Jose Nascimento began by declaring that this matter has not been duly publicized and clarified. "For this reason," he said, "we find in some cases an inadequate understanding of the role of wages in our society. They are called by the same name as in a capitalist society but do not mean the same thing."

Of all the wealth produced by the nation each year, a part is withdrawn for replacement of raw materials, fuel, pesticides, fertilizers and everything else that is used up annually.

The remainder is distributed both for consumption and for accumulation, for it is not enough merely to replace that which is consumed. It is necessary that our economy develop; it is necessary to make investments, to build more factories, to cultivate more plots of land, build more schools and hospitals, and so forth.

A part of this capital is also destined for use in coping with possible natural calamities such as droughts, floods and fires and also enemy sabotage.

"The part that is destined for consumption," he added, "has its own method of distribution, basically in the form of wages but not entirely so. All expenditures relating to education, health, social security for the workers, national defense and the national government itself require that funds be available."

Accordingly, wages operate precisely as a method of distribution of the wealth we produce yearly; they have a direct relationship to the production we accomplish and to the productivity of each worker and of Mozambican workers as a whole.

"This wage-production relationship therefore finds its direct and immediate explanation in what we have available every day in the market to purchase--the food products, clothing and other goods and services offered to the public."

For this reason, in order to solve all the socioeconomic problems of our nation it is absolutely necessary to increase production and productivity. This increase should not be limited to one or two production units but should extend to the entire country, from the factory, farm plot and mine to the government bureau or service: in short, to all those sites where there are one or more Mozambican workers. "An enterprise is a cell of our economy," Jose Nascimento said.

In his address during the opening session of the Seminar on Publication of the Provisions and Methodologies of the Labor and Wage Organization, Antonio Neves, secretary of state for labor, declared in this connection:

"The solution to our problems with respect to wages is to be found in our economic and social units. In other words, the solution is to be found in increased production and productivity and in an overall decrease in the costs of production and services. It is here that we will find the guarantee of a progressive improvement in the standard of living together with an increasing satisfaction of the needs of our entire population."

10992
CSO: 4742/201

PARTY'S MAIN TASK IS TO STRENGTHEN CELLS

Maputo NOTICIAS in Portuguese 27 Jan 82 p 1

[Report on interview with Maj Gen Jorge Rebelo by Voz da FRELIMO; date and place not given]

[Excerpts] "The principal task of the party, as far as its internal organization is concerned, is to guarantee the correct functioning of the cells." This was the statement made by Maj Gen Jorge Rebelo in an interview granted to the organs of information of the FRELIMO Party. Major General Rebelo is a member of the Permanent Political Committee and secretary for ideological work of the Central Committee. He also said that within the scope of state leadership and leadership of the democratic mass organizations the central task of the party is to mobilize the workers for the successful completion of the 1982 Central State Plan.

"The cells are an indicator of the party's vitality. They are the thermometer that indicates to us the degree of dynamism and the degree of the party's penetration into the spirit of the masses," Jorge Rebelo said in the same interview. He added that it is becoming necessary this year to correct the errors observed in the functioning of the cells, since "the essential part of the party's tasks is done at the grassroots level."

The party leader also referred to the priority to be given this year to applying principles of planning and control in party work, saying: "It is necessary to create a habit of defining tasks concretely, indicating responsibility for each task, defining the time frame and establishing a control system to ensure that what has been planned will really be carried out. And in case it is not carried out, that the responsible party be penalized."

Pointing out other priorities that were defined by the governing organizations of the party for this year, Jorge Rebelo said that the offensive to correct erroneous work styles and methods will be continued inside the party. "In 1982, we shall continue to fight against bureaucratization, arrogance, domination and authoritarianism wherever and whenever they show themselves within the party," he declared, adding that those deviations keep the party from knowing the feelings of the masses and for that reason interfere with its correctly exercising its role as leader.

In the area of directing the state, education was indicated as a priority area and, in particular, activities related to implementing the national education system. As for the democratic mass organizations, the party will devote most of its attention to the Mozambique Youth Organization since, as Jorge Rebelo observed, in spite of some gains "it is far from being the organization of all our young people."

In the same interview, the secretary for ideological work of the Central Committee further pointed out some of the specific tasks which will be developed in the area of ideological work, in the direction of making concrete the great objectives defined by the party for this year.

12,116
CSO: 4742/197

USE OF MOROCCAN BASES BY U.S. DECRIED

Maputo NOTICIAS in Portuguese 13 Jan 82 p 5

[Article by E. Hipolito: "New Threats to Peace"]

[Text] The spurious alliance between exploiters has taken on new proportions with permission given to the military leaders in Washington to use Moroccan airports. Whenever Washington decides that its interests are threatened, it will have sufficient reason to use these airlifts of more than 100,000 men constituting the Rapid Deployment Force. In a decision aimed at postponing inevitable defeat--there is no doubt as to the victory of the POLISARIO [Popular Front for the Liberation of Saguia el Hamra and Rio de Oro]--Rabat subjected itself to the role of aircraft carrier in Africa.

The offensive by the Reagan administration is very much in line with the capitalist ideology which has its most advanced form in imperialism. As a political expression, it cannot refrain from the use of force in order to impose itself. An example of the warlike spirit that has taken over in Washington may be found in some decisions adopted recently.

Production of chemical weapons has resumed after an interval of 13 years. In a letter addressed to the Congress, the President of the United States communicated that the resumption of the manufacture of chemical weapons which attack the nervous system "is essential for national interests." This year alone, the budget calls for an investment of $705 million for these plans.

On the other hand, attempts at invasion against other countries are continuing. At the end of January, 12,000 men participated in maneuvers under the heading of liberation of American diplomats serving anywhere in the world. In addition to a large number of military personnel, these exercises involved no less than 16 warships.

A reactionary regime does not establish a relationship of injustice only toward people under its rule. It seeks to extend it to other areas. It is therefore a threat to a very much larger area than the area in which it is located. This danger comes from a completely mistaken view of the world which has been turned into government policy. In its inglorious struggle to annex the Sahara, the Moroccan colonialists employ all means, even those which certainly will threaten the peace of the world.

5058
CSO: 4742/213

GDR GIFT ARRIVES IN MOZAMBIQUE

Maputo TEMPO in Portuguese 17 Jan 82 pp 7-8

[Text] Materials and manufactured goods, such as footwear, different kinds of clothing, infant food, puddings, etc., valued at more than 500 million meticals, comprise a gift of solidarity from the people of the German Democratic Republic which was delivered last Monday in Maputo.

A large part of this gift was brought from the GDR to Mozambique on the ship "Arendsee," which docked in the port of Maputo last Sunday. Another part of the same donation had arrived in Maputo in November on a special flight of a GDR airplane.

"Facing the demands resulting from the imperialists' confrontation policy and from world market conditions, the economic situation is rather complicated and very tense in our country too," said the GDR ambassador to Mozambique in a speech during the ceremony of delivering the donation. He added:

"However, I can declare here that our country and our people, in spite of that and particularly during these weeks, are exerting all their efforts to giving solidarity aid to the Mozambican people. (...)"

Jacinto Veloso, a member of the Permanent Political Committee of the Central Committee of the FRELIMO Party and security minister, who represented the Mozambican party and government at the delivery ceremony, said that "the gift we have just received is a manifestation of solidarity on the part of the GDR workers and their leaders. We appreciate this gesture, especially at this moment when our enemies are commiting aggression against us from South Africa."

Jacinto Veloso further spoke of the long friendship existing between the Mozambican and German peoples, which was born and cemented during the period of the national armed liberation struggle in Mozambique.

Health Ministry Also Benefits

Additionally, the German Democratic Republic Solidarity Committee offered teaching material to the training centers of the Health Ministry and to the Medical School.

This material essentially consists of several sets of maps and anatomical models which will be distributed among the training centers of that institution.

The material was delivered by a representative of the GDR Embassy in Maputo. Dr Inusse Noormahomed, deputy national director of personnel training, was present. Dr Joaquim Cardoso, director of the Medical School, was also present.

12,116
CSO: 4742/197

SHORTCOMINGS STILL NOTED IN FOREIGN TRADE

Maputo NOTICIAS in Portuguese 25 Jan 82 p 1

/Commentary by Mario Ferro/

[Text] During the last 3 months we have witnessed a gradual improvement in the activity of the foreign trade sector, as a result of the effort made not only by the cadres of this sector but by other cadres involved in trade operations with foreign countries.

In the opinion of competent cadres in the economic and social sectors, and in particular those production sectors that are dependent on foreign supply sources for raw materials used in the production process, many obstacles that had rendered the system outmoded and anachronistic have been removed.

The reorganization of the Ministry of Foreign Trade and the enterprises and agencies of that sector, the creation of new enterprises, the entry into effect of the New System of Importation, the draft of the New System of Exportation, new methods of operation, and a different type of relations among all the concerned parties are aspects that have been cited as major improvements already recorded.

This does not in any way mean that everything is going smoothly, however. High officials of the Ministry of Foreign Trade and of other entities and organizations are aware of the fact that much remains to be accomplished. The level of political and professional consciousness, the technical training of the cadres, the program for strengthening the quality of organization, a more dynamic and aggressive attitude on the part of government employees, a more detailed search for foreign markets, and a search for customers from whom we can obtain higher prices for our products are aspects of particular importance.

Last year the People's Republic of Mozambique fell approximately 40 percent short of the total goal set by the PEC [Central State Plan] for exports--an amount which we may explain is enough to buy about 5,000 large buses. As Minister of Foreign Trade Salomao Munguambe said, although some progress was made we are still witnessing some dismal situations, such as: high quality lumber for export rotting on railway platforms and on wharves; coal, extracted from the mines, stored at Moatize for lack of freight cars to transport it; large "stocks" of cashew nuts ready for export; tea piled up in the factories, declining in quality for lack of packaging materials; sugar which has not been shipped for lack of freight cars; and cotton which has not been delivered and shipped within the stipulated time limits.

It is a great responsibility. The export targets planned for 1982 must be fulfilled. This is a requirement that must be met by the foreign trade sector and by the entire governmental apparatus, bearing in mind always the important role played in the national economy by the sale of our products to foreign countries for more favorable prices with the assurance of improved quality in our export products.

10992
CSO: 4742/201

COOPERATION PROGRAM IN MINING PLANNED WITH PORTUGAL

Maputo NOTICIAS in Portuguese 28 Jan 82 p 8

[Text] An extensive cooperation program in the geological and mining sector has been agreed on between our country and Portugal. Among the activities called for in the program, which will be put into operation during the first half of 1982, are support by Portugal for the training of Mozambican cadres and the exploitation of ornamental stone in the RPM [People's Republic of Mozambique].

Agreement on the program was the culmination of talks held last week between a delegation from Portugal's Geology and Mines Department and the RPM's organizations in that field. This information was provided to our reporters by Rui Santos Garcia, our country's national director of geology.

It was possible during the talks to request the technical documentation that is known to exist in Portugal concerning the work done in Mozambique in this area.

The agenda for the talks included matters relative to cartography, mineral exploration, topical geological research, mining operations, and vocational training.

Other Aspects

It was decided that Portugal would send specialized delegations to our country to work on various projects. The Portuguese delegation also promised to send technicians and to try to stimulate interest among private specialized companies in developing practical activities in this field in our country.

In the field of geological mapmaking, it was agreed that a technician specializing in marine geology would come here in preparation for the first attempt to map the geology of the continental shelf.

A Portuguese mission will also come here to discuss with Mozambican authorities a geochronological survey for dating rocks. Mozambique also requested support in exploring for copper.

Cooperation

Also according to statements by Rui Santos Garcia, Portugal will provide advisory support in many areas of geology.

One area scheduled to receive special attention is that of ornamental stone, for which there is considerable use domestically in the country's civil construction industry. Development of the exploitation of that stone--which includes marble, for example--will make its exportation possible.

In this field, the Portuguese Government will do everything possible to send specialized businessmen to discuss its exploitation.

The national director of geology and mines added: "Here in our country, we have many varieties of fine granite, and we think we can begin exploiting it soon."

It is anticipated that the Portuguese Speleology Company will provide support in investigating our caves and guano caves.

Vocational Training

In the field of vocational training, the Portuguese Government has made 19 scholarships available for cadres from the RPM's National Directorate of Geology and Mines. According to Rui Santos Garcia, the first trainees are to leave at the end of February or the beginning of March for training in Portugal.

The courses to be made available to the Mozambican cadres will last from 3 months to 1 year.

It is also expected that Mozambican technicians will go to Portugal to exchange experiences.

The head of the Portuguese delegation, Alcides Pereira, director general of geology and mines in Portugal, has already returned to Lisbon. Part of the delegation is still in Maputo and is currently discussing details concerning the implementation of this program with a Mozambican delegation.

11798
CSO: 4742/203

PROFITEERING MUST NOT BE SEEN AS 'NECESSARY EVIL'

Maputo TEMPO in Portuguese No 590, 31 Jan 82 pp 14-15

[Excerpt] Profiteering--a social plague detested by the overwhelming majority of those whose only income is their wages--"is a necessary evil" in the view of the so-called "big family," or in other words the emergent Mozambican petty bourgeoisie. What the dishonest merchants, hoarders and speculators want is quick and easy profits.

When--in mid-morning on Saturday 5 December of last year--300 police personnel, some in uniform and others in plain clothes, moved in and arrested more than 200 individuals who in the Maputo flatlands had been selling illegally, on a speculative basis, various kinds of articles and products that are not available on the legal market, the first impression to be gained was that it was merely a police operation which attracted attention only because of its spectacular nature.

However, the reports of more arrests that were published in the days that followed, together with the massive and voluntary support by the population for the prosecution of the profiteers, dispelled that idea and imparted to the movement which this action had generated a genuine popular cast, and this people's campaign spread from Maputo to other parts of the country.

When those who saw their interests threatened had appraised the seriousness of the situation, the reaction was not long in coming. The profiteers and speculators are changing their methods with a view to continuing their criminal behavior without falling into the police net, while they simultaneously attempt to pervert public opinion so that it will disparage the effects which the antiprofiteer campaign is trying to achieve.

Nothing Will Come of It?

"Nothing will come of it. So long as there is a food shortage, profiteering will continue," say some, while others--seemingly more rational--add their comment:

"It's a mistake. You shouldn't combat profiteering--which is a social and economic evil--with police measures. The profiteers will survive, continually perfecting their methods."

To this, others add--commenting on the campaign now being carried out--that "profiteering is a necessary evil." This is the view of the so-called "big family": that is to say, of the emergent Mozambican petty bourgeoisie that is beginning to gain access to the ranks of small business.

Zacarias Eugenio Manjate, of Maputo, wrote us in this regard that "profiteering is steadily growing because we are making it strong and profitable: not," he explained, "because we want to but because they--the profiteers--are selling what isn't available and what we need.

"With the New Supply System," he continued, "a good organization was achieved. Anyone can now buy certain products that they could never find before. The problem is that they only sell a small quantity of these products, and if someone runs out of food before the end of the month he has no alternative other than to resort to the profiteers."

It is obvious that this reader is confused. He does not realize that the products offered for sale on the black market are mostly stolen goods which--if it were not for these thefts--would increase the quantities apportioned.

Profiteering and Counterrevolution

"Profiteering is a necessary evil," say those who have other ways (which are often questionable) of strengthening their family budget and can therefore buy on the black market.

The overwhelming majority of those whose only income is their wages are unable to buy a loaf of bread at 10 or 15 MT [meticals], a kilogram of fish at 300 or 700 MT's, or toothpaste at 800 or 1,000 MT's. It is their view (contrary to the view of the "big family" that profiteering is a necessary evil) that this practice is criminal, and they welcome the campaign now under way.

The attempt to make the consumer believe that profiteering is an alternative to the shortage of food and other articles is designed to divert his attention away from the real problem so that he will not think of the imminent political dangers which this illegal market represents for both the short and the long term. For profiteering is definitely an enemy action, whether practiced consciously or unconsciously.

"This is why," the minister of home trade said recently, "the 'fight against profiteering' is an aspect of the class struggle taking place in our country. It (profiteering) is not dissociated from the counterrevolution."

10992
CSO: 4742/201

ANTI-PROFITEER CAMPAIGN IMPROVES FISH SUPPLIES

Maputo NOTICIAS in Portuguese 3 Feb 82 p 2

> [Excerpt] Since the end of December 1981, when the operation against the black marketing of fish was launched, the Central Market has been supplied with an average of 10 tons of fish and crab daily. And Cesar Sitoi, one of the inspectors at that bazaar, told our reporters that fresh shrimp also appear once or twice a week.

While the fish caught in the sea used to be sold only through black market channels at highly exorbitant prices, they have now been coming into the Central Market every day since the launching of Operation "Neptune." That bazaar has been receiving fish and crab regularly and shrimp sporadically. Their routing is insured by the port organizations, which have an agreement with the fishermen operating out of the port zone.

Every morning at the Central Market, there is a flurry of activity that has now been going on since December of last year: people collect there and form organized lines.

Beginning at 0600 hours, the fresh fish are sold to customers, who never fail to appear, at fair prices. Cesar Sitoi, a young inspector who has held his job only since 28 December 1981, told us: "Everything is taking place normally, except on those rare occasions when first-quality fish appear, because then everyone wants some, regardless of cost. At those times there is a little jostling and disorganization, but we eventually get it under control."

According to Sitoi, the fish are all sold by 0800 or 0900 hours, and so are the crabs, which are also supplied to the market by fishermen who cooperate with the port authorities.

Cesar Sitoi told us later that shrimp have been coming in in very limited quantities (from 20 to 60 kilograms at a time) and very irregularly. He added: "And even then, the shrimp we receive are only average in size and often very small."

11798
CSO: 4742/203

REPAIRS NEEDED FOR BEIRA ELECTRICITY NETWORK

Beira DIARIO DE MOCAMBIQUE in Portuguese 7 Jan 82 p 6

[Text] The only solution for the serious problems that are becoming increasingly acute in the low voltage network in the city of Beira would be to change the 243.6 km of wires now above ground to underground wiring. This was told to DIARIO DE MOCAMBIQUE by Engineer Carlos Schwalbach, operations manager of the Mozambican Electric Enterprise, in the capital of Sofala.

Our interviewee especially stressed the fact that this solution would represent considerable expense, from the economic point of view, and very large financial, technological and human resources which the country does not have at this time.

The increasingly acute problems in the low voltage network are closely connected to the present city plan for planting trees along the boulevards; this has had various consequences, among them occasional short circuits.

Public lighting is further affected by tree branches, especially when they hit the lines during strong winds and cause the wires to cross.

The need to cut certain tree branches which often touch the wires has been reported to the city executive council, which has not replied in any practical way to requests in this connection.

The alternative solutions adopted by the Mozambican Electric Enterprise, consisting in its intervention in cases of emergency, go against the regulations of the executive council.

High Cost of Repairs

According to Engineer Carlos Schwalbach, special attention has been given to the low voltage network because it is precisely this network that guarantees public lighting and the energy supply to consumers.

Investments made for that network, its maintenance and conservation, as well as its repairs, result in high costs.

This is because the network is constantly subjected to the effects of maritime corrosion and inherent climatic conditions which, in the end, seriously affect the network.

On the other hand, according to Schwalbach, at this time there is no specialized equipment to do the maintenance work quickly and efficiently, nor are there vehicles equipped with hydraulic platforms to reach tree branches.

11635
CSO: 4742/189

MULTICOUNTRY TRAINING IN AGRICULTURAL MACHINERY

Beira DIARIO DE MOCAMBIQUE in Portuguese 8 Jan 82 pp 8-9

[Article by Artur Ricardo]

[Excerpts] Larger investments, valued at 38,552 contos--7,000 of them in foreign currency--are now being made by the state firm MECANAGRO to create conditions for technical-professional training of its workers. At present, the attention of this firm, which is responsible for servicing by technicians of diverse agricultural equipment in the country, is centered on conducting two courses: training employees handling parts (third-level clerks) and personnel and quality supervisors to organize and control the quantity and quality of the work in agricultural areas.

According to information obtained by our reporter from Antonio Fernando Horta, chief of the Human Resources Department of MECANAGRO, these courses are considered priority in the firm because the first one is aimed at overcoming the enormous difficulties now faced by this institution, because of the lack of specialized personnel able to efficiently perform the work connected with spare parts.

Speaking of this course of training counter clerks, Antonio Horta said that a complete program is now being prepared. Later it will be submitted for the consideration of the Ministry of Agriculture, which has jurisdiction over the MECANAGRO. In addition to approving the proposal, this ministry will contract other firms supervised by it, to send people to take this course.

Counselors and Students

Continuing on the subject, Horta said that the participation of people from all departments of this firm is already assured. Each provincial representation will send two workers.

Parts experts (one from Finland, two Portuguese and two Mozambicans) are at this time the counselors guaranteed for this job. A detail still being debated is the place where the course will be held, because it is planned that it would permit the counselors to lecture and at the same time continue their duties in their respective service posts.

The course will last at least 1 year. In the first 6 months the students will take theoretical classes in which they will work with a parts catalogue, register the sales prices on the respective cards, classify the accessories on the shelves, learn the mechanism of receiving the merchandise, and so on. This will be followed by the practical portion in which they will work in the parts and spare parts warehouse itself.

Help From the GDR and Italy

Antonio Horta also told us that a professional training school is now being set up in Maputo. This center will work in the installation of the old heavy machinery park of MECANAGRO in Matota. The work of adapting the building will cost 10,000 contos, of which 7,000 will be financed by the firm FORSTCHRITT (of the GDR) and Italy, in line with the agreement of the protocol of cooperation with Mozambique signed in May 1981.

This school has a capacity for 90 boarding students. It will give courses in operation of power saws, auto-electricity and agricultural implements mechanics at the basic, elementary and specialized levels. The students will be selected in MECANAGRO departments and among other users of agricultural machinery.

"Once the FORSTCHRITT experts complete the installation of their teaching, pedagogical, office and other equipment, it is hoped that some time in January we shall begin to give the course of auto mechanics in which 20 persons will participate," said Antonio Horta.

In addition, Italian equipment and experts and instructors are expected to arrive. It is known that for 1982 the training of 382 workers in various courses is envisaged. Some 2,906 will be specialized and retrained, including tractor mechanics who need new knowledge because of new makes of tractors that have appeared.

Apprenticeship Abroad

Regarding this subject Antonio Horta said that "at this time we have workers who are being trained abroad. Fifteen are in Cuba taking a course in agricultural mechanization. They will be the first experts of the firm, on the basic level. They will leave on 21 December and are the persons who have completed the sixth grade, but who have some experience of work in the countryside."

Another group of six persons has been in the GDR for 1 year, attending a middle-level course of equipment reconditioning. They are to remain in that socialist country 2 more years and have completed nine grades of technical education.

It is hoped that 30 workers, in groups of 10, will go to Italy in January, March and May to acquire knowledge about handling of machinery, technical assistance and maintenance and repair of equipment. All personnel is sent by the MECANAGRO through the cooperation program between the Ministry of Agriculture and the countries mentioned above (Cuba, the GDR and Italy).

Specialists for Soviet Equipment

According to Horta, MECANAGRO has signed an agreement with TRAKTOROEKSPORT of the Soviet Union envisaging the installation of training centers for Mozambican workers. This will permit better technical assistance to all agricultural machinery coming from the USSR.

These centers will go into operation in mid-1982. They will be set up in Xai-Xai and Nampula, areas considered to have the largest concentration of Soviet equipment. Nothing has yet been done. MECANAGRO sent the order to TRAKTOROEKSPORT and the latter agreed. Therefore, what is lacking is implementing the protocol. It is also known that the Soviet enterprise will furnish all the necessary material for the installation and operation of these centers.

In turn, the Mozambican firm will be responsible for constructing the buildings and installing the various furnishings. The center in Xai-Xai will train persons in the southern and central areas of the country, while the Nampula center will serve the entire northern part of Mozambique.

11635
CSO: 4742/189

POPULATION SEEN RECEPTIVE TO COMMUNAL VILLAGES IDEA

Maputo NOTICIAS in Portuguese 13 Jan 82 p 3

[Article by A. Naroromele: "People Receptive to Communal Villages"]

> [Text] The people in the various districts of the Province of Maputo proved to be very receptive to the construction of communal villages throughout 1981, a year during which more than 16 rural communities sprang up, NOTICIAS was told by Antonio Tuzine, chairman of the Provincial Commission for Communal Villages. According to him, the peasants in most cases took the initiative in building the villages without waiting for the action program under the province's territorial plan.

In an interview given yesterday to our reporter, the chairman of the Provincial Commission on Communal Villages revealed that the territorial plan included a program for the establishment of 17 new communities, distributed over seven districts in the province.

He noted that, to do this job, his sector had to struggle with serious shortages in terms of manpower and material. Throughout 1981, he added, the Provincial Commission on Communal Villages worked with only one topographer. Since he was the only one, he confined his activities to the district of Matutuine where the demarcation of fields for the population who had left the special hunting preserve of Maputo was an urgent priority matter.

The past and current problems connected with the process of evacuating the peasants from this last-mentioned zone also took up most of the attention and effort of agencies connected with this sector.

The interviewee revealed that this was not an obstacle to the population in other districts. According to him, there were cases when in one district alone the farmers started construction of a number of communal villages larger than planned in the program for that zone.

"On the other hand, in other districts, either no work was done or the number of communities built did not reach the target," he said.

Antonio Tuzine described the population throughout the province as "highly receptive to the movement of building the communal villages." But he noted the probability that technical errors might be detected in the future especially in Marracuene, Moamba, Magude, Boane, and Namaacha, where the peasants built without the helf of the topographer last year.

Poor Response Capacity

According to our interviewee, the slow process of building the communal villages in the Province of Maputo is not due to the influence of the ideas of some individuals according to whom "this movement still has a long way to go."

"Nor could one simply blame this slow progress on the migratory characteristics of the peasants in the province," he added.

Antonio Tuzine said that the basic problem has to do with the poor capacity of responding to the enthusiasm of the people on the part of not only the Provincial Commission on Communal Villages but also an entire group of agencies on various levels which are involved in this process.

According to him, there is a conflict between the fact that the Province of Maputo benefits from many state farms and various other rural development projects, on the one hand, and the slow development of the construction of communal villages in the area.

The chairman of the Provincial Commission on Communal Villages ties this situation in with the great agricultural cooperative movement throughout the district of Maputo. "Both of these factors become very helpful in organizing the peasants in communal villages. What we do not have is a response in manpower and material terms," he concluded.

Program for 1982

In addition to the need for continuing the work of building the rural communities, begun last year, the action program for 1982 recommends the completion of the removal of the population from the special hunting preserve of Maputo.

Antonio Tuzine said that 18 new communal villages will have to be built throughout the province. The accomplishment of these tasks will enable the Province of Maputo to have 55 rural communities by the end of this year, considering the existence of 21 earlier ones which, in 1981, were added to the 16 started in various districts.

5058
CSO: 4742/213

DETAILS ON FLOATING DOCK INSTALLATION PROVIDED

Maputo NOTICIAS in Portuguese 13 Jan 82 p 8

> [Text] The work of preparing the site for the installation, in the port of Maputo, of the floating dock purchased by Mozambique from the Soviet Union will be done by the dredge "Rovuma", it was disclosed yesterday by EMODRAGA EE general manager Conde de Libanha Fernandez.

According to Conde de Libanha Fernandez, more than 217,300 cubic meters of dirt have already been moved as of last Wednesday; he added that sand is also being delivered to the caissons which will be used as supports to secure the floating dock.

The dredging of the bed for the floating dock, the oil pier, in Matola, and the coal pier of the port of Maputo, as well as maintenance on the Polana Canal, which provides access from buoy 17 to buoy 14 in the port of Maputo were some of the tasks completed ahead of deadlines by the dredge "Rovuma," the EMODRAGA EE general manager added.

The general manager of the Mozambican Dredging Enterprise explained also that the dredge "Rovuma" supplied sand for the caissons to be used in securing the floating dock and for the maintenance of the Polana Canal.

Fernandez also said that the large volume of work done by the crew of the vessel made it possible to accomplish these tasks without the initially anticipated trouble.

Floating Dock

The floating dock can repair fishing vessels and coastal vessels and was purchased by the People's Republic of Mozambique from the Soviet Union for 450 million meticals. It will be installed in the zone of Matola.

The floating dock is 116 meters long and 30 meters wide, with a total weight of 2,500 tons. It is equipped with a workshop vessel, 67.5 meters long and 13.4 meters beam, weighing 1,360 tons. The boat can do repair work on the open sea, especially in electronics, locksmithing, carpentry, and boilers for any kind of ship that may be damaged.

The unit left the Soviet port of Klaipeda, in the Baltic, heading for the North Sea and the Atlantic Ocean, the Mediterranean, and the Suez Canal.

From the Suez Canal it sailed through the Red Sea, heading toward the Indian Ocean, and then sailing on to the port of Maputo.

The Dredge "Rovuma"

The dredge "Rovuma" was built in September 1964 by the construction company called "Industrieele Handels Combinatie Holiande" with a total weight of 1,745.83 tons, a length of 77.750 meters, a width of 13.400 meters, and a crew of 27.

According to the explanation given by the general manager of EMODRAGA, the vessel has a capacity of 15 tons of water, 4 tons of lubricating oil, and 116 tons of fuel; it has a total cargo capacity of 2,800 tons. The dredge can sail at a cruising speed of 12 knots.

The dredge "Rovuma" is equipped with a dredging pump motor of 960 horsepower, plus a workshop, a tool section, a lubricating pump, and two 200-kilowatt generators.

During the visit to the engineroom, we were also told that this unit is equipped with a hydraulic system, air conditioning, cooling pump, ventilation controls for the engineroom, permitting good combustion in the engines.

The dredge "Rovuma" also has a public address [intercom] system, recreation rooms, and other facilities permitting better crew accommodations.

Our reporter briefly talked to some of the crew members of the vessel, such as Antonio Filipe, the master of the dredge "Rovuma," who said: "I have had experience on the ocean since I came of age. I took a course given by the directorate of ports and we learned how to maneuver ships and how to operate the dredge; I have now been assigned as master and I am responsible for supervising the entire crew."

5058
CSO: 4742/213

BRIEFS

BELGIAN RAILROAD ASSESSMENT DELEGATION--With the goal of analyzing the projected double tracking of the Beira-Dondo section and the installation of signals on the Limpopo line, a delegation of the SNCB [Belgian National Railways] has recently been in Maputo and Beira. During its stay in our country the SNCB delegation held conversations with the Ministry of Ports and Land Transport and with the directorates of the central and southern railroads. Double tracking the Beira-Dondo section falls within the scope of the SATCC [Transport Commission for Southern Africa] inasmuch as it will improve all access routes to the important railway-port complexes. Belgium is one of the countries which have always been ready to finance SADCC [Southern African Development Coordination Conference] projects. In this way, the visit of railway officials to our country was aimed at studying the conditions under which the project should be carried out, after which a report will be prepared for presentation to the Belgian Government on ways to finance it. Financing in itself is guaranteed. All that is lacking is a technical description of the project and how the investment will be controlled. [Text] [Maputo TEMPO in Portuguese 24 Jan 82 p 8] 12,116

FRENCH, ITALIAN FORESTRY TRAINING--The first forest engineers trained at the Eduardo Mondlane University left Maputo today for France and Italy, where they will receive intensive training to enable them to perform the duties awaiting them in Mozambique better. Before their departure they spoke to our reporters. Adolfo Dinis Bila, Milagre Nuvunga, Lidia Artur, Teresa Alves, Abdul Adamo and Sergio Chitara, whose ages range between 20 and 24 years, are young people with a common background. They all attended the introductory course and, after 2 years of agronomy, they all chose forest engineering and have now finished that course. They were enthusiastic at the possibility of traveling to Paris and Florence as in that way they will have the possibility of improving the practical and theoretical knowledge they gained during their training. In France they will visit some companies that work in Mozambique and forest research institutions, especially those in forest technology. At the University of Florence, to which they have received scholarships, they will spend a month taking an intensive course in that specialty. In a conversation the six foresters asked us to convey their thanks to the following companies: Mozambique Electricity, Interquimica, Boror Comercial, Manica Mozambique, Socimo, Mogas, Mademo, Emofauna, Correios de Mozambique, Emose, National Seed Company and the university's peanut project for the financial support they have given to make their trip possible. They sent special thanks to LAM [Mozambique Air Lines], which donated their tickets. [Text] [Maputo DOMINGO in Portuguese 24 Jan 82 p 2] 12,116

NEW RIVER TRAFFIC PROBLEMS--Beira, 16 Jan--The barge which connected the two banks of the Pungoe River, 65 kilometers from Beira, in the area where enemy action destroyed the existing highway bridge 3 months ago, is out of commission. The floating bridge which alleviated pedestrian congestion on both sides has come apart. Big traffic problems are being felt again, according to what our reporters have been able to observe there. Public Works Ministry units, particularly the state enterprise Construtora Integral de Sofala, are now making new ramps on both banks to permit putting the jointed floating bridge back into operation. The separate parts of that floating bridge are now tied to the banks. The difficult situation now being experienced on the Pungoe was caused by the torrential rains that fell in this region and in areas near the course of the river. The force of the waters is extraordinarily great and huge islands of trees, grass, waterlilies and other plants come down the river to interfere with the work of reestablishing a free flow of traffic in the area of the bridge. The light pedestrian traffic now existing between the two banks is being handled by small motorboats and rowboats, crewed by members of the forces of Defense and Security [ministries] and local residents. According to what we observed when vehicular traffic was proceeding normally via the barge, accidents have occurred there. Several vehicles have fallen into the river. Furthermore, the way the traffic was organized gave the users just cause for complaint. The present moment, we suggest, should be used to study new ways of handling the traffic to achieve more speed and efficiency in the crossing. [By Fernando Veloso] [Text] [Maputo DOMINGO in Portuguese 17 Jan 82 p 2] 12,116

FOREIGN ASSISTANCE IN MACHINERY--Skilled technicians from friendly countries were recently incorporated into the work force of the enterprise STEIA in Nampula, it was disclosed by Victor Miguel, representative of that enterprise. The purpose of bringing technicians to STEIA is basically to increase production and assist in the progressive training of the personnel of the enterprise. STEIA, located in Nampula, provides technical assistance for heavy machinery. It failed last year to fulfill its target, which was to repair a total of 40 machines. According to Miguel, the failure to fulfill the plan was due to a shortage of spare parts and qualified personnel. In addition to these factors, Miguel cited disciplinary problems on the part of some workers as one of the causes that resulted in nonimplementation of the plan. Five of the undisciplined workers were terminated last year. In addition to the advent of new technicians, the conditions have already been created that will enable the plan that has been established to be completely fulfilled this year, the STEIA spokesman declared with assurance. [Text] [Maputo NOTICIAS in Portuguese 25 Jan 82 p 3] 10992

DPRK OFFICIAL ON PRIVATE VISIT--Vice President of the DPRK Pak Song-chol arrived in Maputo early this evening with a special message for President Samora Machel from the president of the DPRK, Kim Il-song. He was welcomed at Mavalane Airport by the minister of defense, Alberto Chipande, representing the Mozambican Government. Also present were members of the Korean Embassy in Mozambique. In a statement to the news media, Pak Song-chol said that he was convinced that his visit to Mozambique would contribute to the further strengthening of relations of friendship and cooperation between the peoples of Mozambique and the DPRK. The visit by the Korean vice president is of a private nature and is expected to continue up to 24 February. [Text] [EA220042 Maputo Domestic Service in Portuguese 1900 GMT 21 Feb 82]

TRAINING ABROAD--A group of IFLOMA (Manica Forest Industries) workers will go to Zimbabwe in March to attend theoretical and practical professional training courses. Also in this field, another group of workers will go to train in Norway where they will acquire more experience in factories such as the future Msica complex. At the same time 18 workers will go to train in Portugal. Another group of eight is already in the Socialist Republic of Cuba for a period of 1 year, while two other IFLOMA workers are training in Beira, being trained in the use of power saws, and it is expected that another course will be given in Chimoio and at the sawmill of Penhalonga, in Manica. The students who will go to Portugal are recipients of a scholarship granted to seven persons on the basis of contacts a few months ago between Mozambique and that European country. The training program either abroad or at home covers in a general way the areas of manufacturing operations (making panels), power saw operations (forest) and machinery. Independently of this, specialists in training have been contracted for 4 months, but in the future the contracts will be extended to at least 1 year. [Text] [Beira DIARIO DE MOCAMBIQUE in Portuguese 9 Jan 82 p 3] 11635

MEETING ON HUNGER--The hunger caused by the prolonged drought that is devastating vast regions of the country was the subject of a meeting in Nampula on Thursday afternoon. During the meeting, Minister Aranda da Silva heard reports by district administrators from that province and Cabo Delgado Province. The drought, which has been doing serious damage throughout East Africa, has devastated this country's northern coast in particular, but is making itself felt in seven provinces. Acting in his capacity as deputy chairman of the Coordinating Council for Preventing and Combating Natural Calamities, Aranda da Silva heard reports by the district and provincial authorities of Cabo Delgado and Nampula Provinces permitting him to evaluate the seriousness of the situation. At the close of the meeting, a number of guidelines were laid down with a view to minimizing the seriousness of the drought's effects. Also present, in addition to district administrators from Nampula and Cabo Delgado Provinces, were provincial directors and the national head of the Ministry of Planning's Department for Preventing and Combating Natural Calamities, Antonio Sumbane. On Thursday and Friday, the minister of home trade visited districts affected by the drought to inspect the extent of the disaster. [Text] [Maputo NOTICIAS in Portuguese 30 Jan 82 p 1] 11798

IRAQI DONATION TO OJM--President Saddam Hussein of Iraq has made a donation of $10,000 (about 360 contos) to the OJM (Mozambique Youth Organization). The donation was delivered by the Iraqi ambassador in Maputo to Zacarias Kupela, secretary general of the OJM. According to a note to our office from the OJM National Secretariat, the ceremony for delivering the donation was held on the 21st of this month. The donation will help to rebuild the Youth Club in Maputo. The Iraqi ambassador in Maputo said that this support demonstrates the increasingly close friendship and solidarity between the peoples of Mozambique and Iraq. During the ceremony for delivering the donation, the diplomat also said: "The Iraqi people realize the great importance of young people to the development of society." [Text] [Maputo NOTICIAS in Portuguese 25 Jan 82 p 1] 11798

SOVIET DIPLOMAT DEPARTS--Arkady Glukhov, minister counselor of the Soviet Union, who for several years has held diplomatic posts in Tanzania and the People's Republic of Mozambique, left Maputo yesterday to return to his country. Glukhov was part of the first group of diplomats from the USSR to arrive here to set up the Soviet Embassy in the People's Republic of Mozambique after the proclamation of independence. The Soviet minister counselor arrived in Maputo from Dar es Salaam at the end of May 1975. At a reception held at the Soviet Embassy in Maputo last Wednesday and attended by Joaquim Chissano, Mozambique's minister of foreign affairs, and Jose Luis Cabaco, its minister of information, Soviet Ambassador Valentin Vdovin presented Minister Counselor Glukhov with an honorable mention, calling him "a living monument to Mozambican-Soviet friendship." In statements to our reporters, the Soviet minister counselor praised the harmony of Mozambican-Soviet relations, emphasizing that the cooperation and friendship agreements signed between the two countries are a continuation of those that were signed during the armed struggle for national liberation. [Text] [Maputo NOTICIAS in Portuguese 30 Jan 82 p 8] 11798

SLOW RURAL SOCIALIZATION--Radio Mozambique in Beira announced yesterday that the process of rural socialization in Dondo District, Sofala, is rather slow because of the poor integration of the local population into communal villages. In this connection, Radio Mozambique added that only 422 families out of 63,000 inhabitants are now in rural communities, which means that nearly 30,000 inhabitants still live outside them. [Excerpt] [Beira DIARIO DE MOCAMBIQUE in Portuguese 11 Jan 82 p 2] 11635

SHRIMP EXPORTS--The 1981 Pescom Internacional plan for the export of shrimp was fulfilled 105 percent. By November, 2,115.3 tons had been exported; the plan called for 2,000 tons. In value shrimp exports brought 472,700 contos in foreign exchange to the country. According to a Radio Mozambique report in Beira, an increase in the volume of activities of the firm is expected, and exportation of 2,600 tons of shrimp is envisaged. It was reported that the main purchasers of shrimp from Pescom Internacional in 1981 were France, Spain, South Africa, Japan and Portugal, which absorbed 94 percent of the exports. Small amounts of shrimp were also exported to the United States, Zimbabwe and Swaziland. [Text] [Beira DIARIO DE MOCAMBIQUE in Portuguese 6 Jan 82 p 1] 11635

CSO: 4742/189

SOUTH AFRICAN ACCEPTANCE OF NAMIBIAN PLAN PUTS ONUS ON SWAPO

Paris LE MONDE in French 30 Jan 82 p 5

[Article by Philippe Pons]

[Text] Sent to the countries belonging to the "contact group" on Namibia on 26 January, Pretoria's official response to the constitutional proposals advanced within the framework of the first phase of the settlement of the Namibian affair is positive. The South African Government was to announce it publicly at the Cape on Friday, 29 January, on the occasion of the opening of the parliamentary session. On the other hand, the negative reaction of the Namibian nationalist movement, which particularly rejects the election system chosen by negotiators, now causes a new delay in the process and makes it highly unlikely that the territory's independence will be proclaimed by the end of this year.

Cape--By accepting without restriction all the proposals issued by the contact group on behalf of the United Nations, South Africa has brought off one more important diplomatic victory. Henceforth, it will be able to say that it is not blocking the process by means of which the territory will gain independence, contrary to what SWAPO states. The South-West African People's Organization told countries belonging to the group (France, United States, Great Britain, Canada, FRG) on Monday that it rejects the double electoral system.

Quite rightly, it would appear, the movement headed by Sam Nujoma believes that the system, which provides that half of the future constituent assembly will be elected by proportional voting, while the other half will represent the districts, is unfavorable to it. "We have always demanded the application of the rule 'one man, one vote,'" the nationalists say. For SWAPO, the measure is not only difficult to explain to the Namibian black masses, illiterate for the most part, but it distinctly increases the chances of Windhoek's internal parties supported by Pretoria. The date chosen by the contact group for ending the first phase of the settlement (31 January) therefore has to be postponed again.

Everything will in fact depend on how election districts are drawn. SWAPO itself proposed some 100 districts in 1977. Given the demographic distribution of the territory and the ethnic factors on which some will not fail to take their stand, the reasoning of the foreign ministries seems to be sound. Was the nationalist movement "deliberately badly advised by the Soviets, who have no interest in furthering the establishment of peace in the region," as some in Cape claim, or does it still have a card up its sleeve that no one had thought of?

Subjected to pressure from the other four members of the contact group, the Americans have another problem on their hands. No one would dare to predict that Namibia will have its independence by the end of this year. Francois Mitterrand, who clearly referred to this deadline date -- whose postponement would cause France to think of withdrawing from the group of negotiators -- has reportedly accepted a now inevitable delay.

Naturally, the agreement of all parties to the first phase of the settlement does not constitute a precondition for commencement of the debate on the second phase. Moreover, in its official response, Pretoria states that it is willing to begin, since some of the preliminary work was done last month in London at the time of the "secret" American-South African meeting. More than the composition and powers that will go to the 750 "blue helmets" that will watch the territory during the interim period, the question of the "impartiality" of the United Nations, seriously questioned in Pretoria and Windhoek, remains at the center of the debate.

South Africa is demanding proof and guarantees that the contact group is trying to obtain. Realistic, certain South African diplomats privately admit that it is obviously impossible for the UN General Assembly to go back on the famous resolution that proclaimed SWAPO "the only authentic representative of the Namibian people." On the contrary, they add, the General Assembly could, during negotiations, abstain from taking up the matter and above all, from passing resolutions condemning Pretoria for its role in Namibia.

11,464
CSO: 4719/540

FOREIGN MINISTER ON TIES, URANIUM SALES

PM221111 Riyadh AL-JAZIRAH in Arabic 16 Feb 82 p 11

[Interview granted by Niger Foreign Affairs and Cooperation Minister Daouda Diallo to Muhammad al-Qahtani in Riyadh--date not given]

[Excerpts] Replying to my question on the connection between his visit to Saudi Arabia and the conference of Islamic foreign ministers which Niger is to host, His Excellency Mr Diallo said: Of course Niger is a member of the Islamic conference, and we are pleased that our country will be participating in the Islamic foreign ministers' conference in a few days' time. Islamic solidarity must certainly be confirmed. There are similarities between the Islamic countries, first from the aspect of religion and second from the aspect of culture and civilization.

Replying to a question about the development of relations between Saudi Arabia and Niger and about whether the benefits of such relations are confined to the two countries or include the Arab countires, the African countries and the Third World in general, the Niger foreign minister said: First, my talks have confirmed his majesty the king's interest in the drought that hit Niger in the seventies. The aid which Saudi Arabia gave to Niger was continuous, large, effective and also ideal. The two sister countries have common economic interests. Niger has potential agricultural resources and manpower will to work and produce. Just as the kingdom produces oil, Niger produces uranium--both desirable sources of energy in world markets. With regard to uranium, it is controlled by the producing countries' organization. But cooperation can be arranged not only between Niger and the producing countries but also with countries producing raw materials in that uranium has not yet been extracted. [Setnence as published] Similarly Niger has gold and phosphates as well as oil, all still to be extracted and indeed still to be evaluated to see if they exist in commercial quantities. But they certainly exist. As long as resources are available in the Saudi Arabian Kingdom and Niger, there will be an exchange of many things. There is much similarity between the two countries, for Niger too has large expanses of desert. There are also similarities in economic research and the development of resourches.

When I asked him about Niger's attitude to the question of cooperation with the Arab countries and Israel's flirtation with the African continent and about how Niger can resist Zionist campaigns in this regard, he sat up straight and replied firmly.

[Diallo] Niger is a 100-percent Islamic country and therefore supports the Arab stand on the Middle East problem. This is due not only to solidarity between the Arab and African peoples but also to our belief that the Arab cause is a just cause. We believe that it is just that the Palestinian people should have a homeland and Israel has no right to occupation.

Arab-African solidarity must therefore be strengthened in order to achieve justice. It is natural that we should work with all our strength to develop and strengthen Arab-African solidarity through the Arab-African summit conference, which is to be preceded by a ministerial council a month or two from now in Dakar, Senegal. We believe that this would be a good opportunity for the Arab and African foreign ministers to reaffirm Arab-African-Islamic solidarity.

Between Planting Wheat and Uranium

We own the uranium and we sell it to Iraq, Libya, Pakistan and Kuwait in return for other essential materials such as crude oil and rice. This was what Niger Foreign Minister Daouda Diallo said when I asked him who owns the uranium in Niger and whether any of it was sold to Arab and Islamic countries. His excellency went on to discuss this subject by saying: Niger owns its minerals but does not have the technology or the necessary capital to extract the uranium. We therefore seek the help of foreign technology and capital. Several foreign establishments participate in this work. You find French, Japanese, Italians and Germans here. Shortly there will be capital from Kuwait and maybe other countries, such as the [Saudi] Kingdom participating in the extraction of uranium. In any case Niger is open to any country that can participate on the basis of mutual benefit while, of course, asserting Niger's sovereignty over its minerals and resources. This is our response to ill intentions with regard to the extraction of this material for the manufacture of bombs. Niger would have preferred, instead of uranium, to produce more wheat and cotton. In fact, capital has been invested in developing agriculture and doubling production. Therefore we are now faced with two choices: either we abandon the uranium and do not sell it and, consequently, we are unable to find the necessary capital for agriculture and so let the people die of starvation; or we sell the uranium, even if it is to Western countries, in order to find the capital for the country's development. We have opted for the second choice, namely to develop our country. But we have done so adhering to international law and custom. Niger has not sold uranium just to any country. This is in compliance with the controls imposed by the international organization. So we sell uranium to whoever is a buyer of uranium. We do not want it for the manufacture of bombs but for the development of our country.

Uranium for our Countries

I asked the Niger foreign minister about the meaning of his statement that uranium is sold to Arab countries. He said: Yes, it is true. What was published in the press about our selling to Arab countries such as Iraq, Libya and Pakistan is ture; Libya gives us oil and Pakistan rice.

Speaking about investments in Niger, he said: We have other economic resources. Niger does not belong to the socialist or the capitalist camp. As I said, we have our own heritage, traditions and will. However, if there is benefit to be gained from national or foreign capital, there should be no problem in cooperating with it, as long as this does not violate our laws and regulations. We also have an investment framework which guarantees the rights of national and foreign investors through laws and regulations.

CSO: 4704/10

COMMUNIQUE ON SEKOU TOURE VISIT

AB171032 Niamey Domestic Service in French 1900 GMT 16 Feb 82

[Communique issued in Niamey on 16 February at the end of an official visit by Guinean President Ahmed Sekou Toure from 13 to 16 February--read by the Guinean Foreign Affairs Minister, Dr Abdoulaye Toure]

[Excerpts] At the invitation of His Excellency Col Seyni Kountche, chairman of the Supreme Military Council and head of state of Niger, His Excellency Ahmed Sekou Toure, secretary general of the party state of Guinea, president of the People's Revolutionary Republic of Guinea and supreme leader of the revolution, paid an official visit to Niger from 13 to 16 February in the company of Mrs Andree Toure and a large delegation. The Guinean head of state and the delegation accompanying him received a warm and brotherly welcome from His Excellency Col Seyni Kountche, chairman of the Supreme Military Council and head of state of Niger, and Mrs Mintou Kountche as well as the Niger Government and people.

During his stay, the Guinean head of state went to Maradi. He visited the National Agronomical Research Center of Farna-Maradi, the Regional Training Center for Agrometeorology and Operational Hydrology at (Grimet) and the headquarters of the Niger River Basin Authority and met the local development society at the Oumar Ganda Cultural Center. These visits and meetings enabled the Guinean head of state to appreciate the scope of the mobilization of the Niger people, especially the youth, in the process of installation of the development society.

The Guinean head of state held talks with the chairman of the Supreme Military Council and head of state. During these talks, which took place in an atmosphere of great cordiality and total frankness, the two heads of state examined bilateral issues as well as the situation in Africa and the world. They noted a convergence of views on all the problems discussed.

With regard to bilateral relations, the two heads of state expressed satisfaction with the excellent relations of friendship and cooperation between their two countries and their desire to widen and strengthen them in all fields, especially in the political, economic, social, scientific and cultural spheres. In this connection, a treaty of friendship and cooperation and a cultural, scientific and technical cooperation agreement were signed between the two countries after the talks. With the view to promoting this cooperation, the two heads of state agreed to institute between their two countries a joint high commission of cooperation in several spheres. They also agreed to hold regular meetings on matters of common interest.

Concerning African issues, the two heads of state reiterated their attachment to the fundamental principles of the OAU charter, particularly those relating to the elimination of colonialism, the noninterference in the internal affairs of other states and the peaceful settlement of conflicts. They agreed that the crisis situation prevailing in South Africa is likely to dangerously jeopardize the stability of the continent and cause prejudice to the consolidation of the independence of the African states, their economic and social development and the achievement of African unity.

Therefore they recalled the imperative need to preserve Africa from the power struggles and the expansionist and hegemonic designs which interfere with the sovereignty and the fundamental interests of the African states and peoples.

With regard to the situation in Western Sahara, the two heads of state expressed the hope of seeing a rapid evolution of the situation towards a just and fair solution in accordance with the resolutions and recommendations of the OAU. In this regard, they reaffirmed their support for the decisions made at the 18th heads of state summit conference and those of the third Nairobi conference recommending the organization of a referendum in Western Sahara.

Concerning Chad, the two heads of state expressed their serious preoccupation with the development of the situation in that country. They are convinced that reconciliation between the various Chadian factions and the cessation of foreign interference in the Chadian conflict constitute the indispensable conditions for a final and lasting peace. They therefore reaffirmed their support for the OAU's efforts aimed at restoring peace to that country and the dispatch of a neutral inter-African peacekeeping force to Chad and expressed happiness about the results of the recent meeting of the Permanent OAU Committee on Chad in Nairobi.

After examining the situation in Southern Africa, the two heads of state denounced the delaying tactics hindering the solution of the Namibian problem and reaffirmed their determination to do their best--within the framework of the international organizations to which their countries belong--to ensure Namibia's accession to independence in accordance with Resolution 435 of the UN Security Council. They also strongly condemned the odious and criminal policy of apartheid being cynically practiced by the racist and illegal regime in South Africa and expressed their total and unconditional support for the nationalists in Southern Africa in their national liberation struggle.

Concerning inter-African economic cooperation, the two heads of state stressed the need for African economic groupings and noted with satisfaction the beneficial effects of their cooperation within the ECOWAS and the Niger River Basin Authority to which their countries belong.

Concerning the situation in the Middle East, the two heads of state expressed their conviction that a just, global and lasting peace depends on Israel's withdrawal from the occupied Arab territories and the holy city of Jerusalem as well as the recognition of the national rights of the Palestinian people of whom the PLO is the sole and legitimate representative. They reaffirmed their active solidarity with the Arab people in general and the Palestinian people in particular in their struggle to liberate the occupied territories and for the equitable and global settlement of the Palestinian problem through the recognition of the sacred and inalienable right of the Palestinians to a homeland. They expressed deep concern about the prospects of peace and security in the Middle East because of Israel's decision to annex the Golan Heights and unreservedly condemned this decision which is, in all respects, contrary to international law and norms.

Concerning the Iranian-Iraqi conflict, the two heads of state issued an urgent appeal to the belligerents to renounce the use of force and seek a peaceful solution to their differences.

Concerning the international economic situation, the two heads of state expressed great concern about the international economic crisis whose nefarious effects are being sharply felt by their countries' economies. They emphasized the cynical character of the present international economic system and reaffirmed their countries' common determination to work for the resumption of global negotiations aimed at achieving a more equitable international economic order in conformity with the aspirations of the developing countries.

President Ahmed Sekou Toure invited President Seyni Kountche to pay a state and friendly visit to Guinea. President Seyni Kountche accepted this invitation with pleasure and the date of the visit will be fixed later by common agreement.

Issued in Niamey on 16 February 1982.

[Signed] Col Seyni Kountche, chairman of the Supreme Military Council and head of state of the Republic of Niger; Ahmed Sekou Toure, president of the People's Revolutionary Republic of Guinea. [Applause]

CSO: 4719/596

DEVELOPMENT COMPANY ENTERS SECOND PHASE

Niamey SAHEL HEBDO in French No 303, 1 Feb 82 pp 6-7

[Article by Kailou Youssouf: "Establishment of Development Institutions"]

[Excerpt] With the recent visit to our country's departmental capitals, the chairman of the Development Company, Maj Moumouni Djermakoye Adamou, set the tone for the actual establishment of the participating structures: the Samariya, the cooperatives and the development institutions -- that is, the development councils.

According to the general secretary of the national committee for the establishment of the Development Company, the setting up of these structures and institutions at the village or tribal level will begin on 10 February throughout our country's territory. The action will be marked by a broad campaign to inform the people and make them aware of the Development Company, its objectives, purposes and operating system.

The purpose of the Development Company was defined by the chief of state, who said in his message to the nation on 3 August 1981 that "the establishment of a Development Company means that we must set up a company that is morally sound and balanced, basically united and solidary, aiming toward a single ideal and moved by a single desire for progress. Such a company is one that successfully fights disease, hunger and ignorance. It is a company in which man works and makes accomplishments, in which women participate, without forgetting her role as a wife and mother, as the one who brings up the children and makes a home. It is a company that must ensure the fulfillment of the young people whose full and complete participation in national life it guarantees. In sum, it is a company that safeguards the cohesiveness of the family unit and that works for its harmonious and rapid fulfillment."

In order to promote the advent of such a company, its basis must be the profound aspirations of our people, which means that the socioeconomic conditions that exist in our country must be taken into account. It is that concern that was spelled out for us by Salaou Barmou, general secretary of the establishment of the Development Company, "which has quite naturally led us to rely on the two essential sectors that currently underly our country's socioeconomic life -- that is, the Samariya (traditional youth organizations in our country) and the cooperative movement (structure that handles the organization of the rural world)."

These two fundamental reasons explain the choice of these two sectors, which are the essential pillars of the Development Company.

The first reason is that in Niger, our population (over 5 million inhabitants) is mainly made up of young people. Those under the age of 30 constitute 60 percent of the population. However, with respect to school attendance, one notes that we are behind, in addition to which the system of education is ill-adapted, causing an impressive dropout rate every year.

The second reason is that in Niger, over 85 percent of the people live in rural areas, subject to an arid climate that inflicts a cruel ecological imbalance upon us. Since the great drought, these people have tended to make an exodus from the country to the city, where they now fatten the ranks of the unemployed.

Given these two reasons, one must seek a well-adapted path of development that takes the two sectors into account. For that reason, the Development Company is essentially based on the Samariya and cooperatives. "After setting up these two structures, we had to find an organ that would result in coordination between the Samariya and the cooperatives and the other socioprofessional organizations and associations in order to achieve concertation, united participation in development actions."

That is why the Samariya, cooperatives and development institutions were set up while respecting our country's administrative organization -- that is, of the village or tribe on the national level and including the canton, arrondissement, commune and department.

Coordination between the Samariya and cooperatives will be achieved through the development councils at all levels. At the village level, the village or tribal development council will be the synthesis of the Samariya, the cooperation and the other socioprofessional organizations. "In other words,the council is made up of elements of the Samariya, the cooperative and the other organizations and associations, headed by the village chief." Fifty percent of the council seats are occupied by members of the Samariya and cooperatives, while the other 50 percent are taken by the associations and organizations. Government employees at the village level will attend council meetings in an advisory capacity. They will therefore be the technical advisers at the village level. But the government employees can also be members of the council if they are members of an association, an organization or the village cooperative.

At the Cantonal Level

At the cantonal level, the decision-making organ is the local development council (CLD). With respect to the Samariya, we shall have the local council of the Samariya and for the cooperatives, the local cooperative union (ULC).

For each canton, the members of the local development council will be elected by a consensus of the representatives of the village development councils. For a canton of 100 villages, for example, each village will send two delegates from its council to the level of the canton capital, or a total of 200 persons who will constitute the general canton assembly. This general assembly designated 30 of its members to serve on the local development council. It should be noted here that no member may represent at one and the same time two or more socioprofessional associations or organizations.

At the cantonal level, the name of the local development council will vary depending on the size of the canton. For example, a canton with 300 villages will be su bdivided into sectors and at the level of each sector, a local development councill will be set up. This local development council by sector will be placed under the chairmanship of an official to be chosen by the head of the canton. The subdivision by sector is left up to the head of the canton.

Concerning representation, these local development councils by sector will be on an equal footing with the local development council of the cantonal capital. "But this does not mean that the head of the CLD by sector is equal to the head of the canton. He remains an assistant responsible only to the head of the canton."

Arrondissements

Turning to a specific case, that of the arrondissement of Mirriah, made up of 18 cantons and groups, we see that each canton, canton sector and group sends three delegates from the local development council at the arrondissement level. The subprefect puts them in a room with the brigade commander of the gendarmerie, the traditional chiefs and the 14 members of the national committee for the establishment of the Development Company. Whether it be a question of the election of the CLD at the level of the canton, the subregional development council (CSRD) at the arrondissement level or the regional development council (CRD) at the departmental level, the general assembly is always reminded what their advisory mandate consists of and the limitations to be observed in designating advisers are reviewed. These limitations include the fact that no candidate is authorized to propose his own candidacy, that any person residing in the canton (or the sector, if such be the case) or who is a member of the group can be chosen, on the condition that he is of sound morals, and that 50 percent of the seats are reserved for the Samariya-cooperatives combined, and that the posts of adviser are not remunerated.

The officials and the 14 members of the CNSD then withdraw to leave the delegates deliberate among themselves. They return to note the choice of the delegates, whose number varies between 12 and 30.

In the communes and larger settlements, it is the councils of the districts or of the villages attached to the commune that will designate from among their members those delegates representing them in the assembly that will choose the subregional development councils.

Departmental Level

Every arrondissement sends the members of its subregional development council at the departmental level to elect the members of the regional development council under the chairmanship of the deputy chairman of the CNSD in charge of the department, aided by the prefect, the 14 members of the CNSD, the group commander of the gendarmerie and the traditional authority residing in the departmental capital. In the general assembly then, the delegates will elect from 16 to 30 persons from among themselves to constitute the regional development council (CRD).

The regional development council will designate the five members to sit on the Development Company National Council (CNSD), chaired by the deputy chairman of the national committee for the establishment of the Development Company over the department, in the presence of the prefect, the 14 members of the CNSD, the group commander of the gendarmerie and traditional authorities. The task of the deputy chairman of the CNSD comes to an end as soon as all institutions are in place, from the village to the department. On the national level, the establishment of the Development Company National Council is placed under the chairmanship of the chairman of the national committee for the establishment of the Development Company.

The Development Company National Council is made up, in addition to the five members from each regional development council, of representatives of the national offices of the socioprofessional associations and organizations and of government employees named by the government.

The Development Company National Council is the government's corresponding party for all development matters. It examines dossiers sent by lower organs and makes proposals to the government.

In order to give these institutions legal channels, the national level will define the legal framework. Legislation will define a certain number of general principles for the operation of these institutions.

But when will the establishment of these institutions be completed? For Salaou Barmou, the establishment of these institutions "is not a race. The essential thing is to set up all institutions at the village level and ensure their grass-roots solidity. The rest is easy."

11,464
CSO: 4719/538

BRIEFS

KOUNTCHE MEETS FRENCH ENVOY--President Seyni Kountche this morning granted an audience to His Excellency Alain Marie Pierret, French ambassador to Niger. During the audience at the State House, both men discussed French President Mitterrand's upcoming visit to Niger and Franco-Niger bilateral relations. After the audience, Mr Pierret made the following statement: [Begin recording] I have come to see the head of state to discuss bilateral relations between France and Niger only a few weeks before President Mitterrand will visit Niger in 3 months. This was the topic of our discussions. Of course, it is now premature to say what results will emerge from the visit. It is, however, gratifying that the visit will take place and I am very happy that Francois Mitterrand has chosen to include Niger in his first visit to Sub-Saharan Africa. I will even go as far as to state that Niger will be the first leg of that trip, which he will undertake by the end of May. As French ambassador to Niger, this is very satisfying. I am of course happy that the visit will significantly contribute to the strengthening of long-standing privileged relations existing between France and Niger. Within the framework of that visit, Jean-Pierre Cot, minister of cooperation and development, is expected here in mid-April and this will be another opportunity to discuss our relations, which are getting stronger and stronger. [End recording] [Text] [AB191551 Niamey Domestic Service in French 1200 GMT 19 Feb 82]

NEW AIRCRAFT FOR AIR NIGER--Two Hawker Siddeley 748-2B planes purchased by our air transport company, Air Niger, were presented to Minister of Commerce Hamid Algabit Monday, at a ceremony attended by Amadou Fity Maiga, secretary of state for the interior. The presentation was made by Issoufou Oubandawaki, director of Air Niger. The two aircraft were bought by Air Niger with the backing and guarantee of the government for the trifling sum of 6.4 billion [francs]. British-made, one is a 52-seat passenger plane (with combination possibilities) and the other is an all-passenger (48 seats) or all-cargo aircraft. Their cruising speed is 410 kilometers per hour. [Text] [Niamey SAHEL HEBDO in French No 303, 1 Feb 82 p 5] 11,464

GUINEAN PRESIDENT VISITS--Guinean President Ahmed Sekou Toure's visit to Niger has ended. A treaty of friendship and of technical scientific cooperation has been concluded between Guinea and Niger. President Sekou Toure was seen off this afternoon by the head of state, Col Seyni Kountche, the members of the Supreme Military Command, the government and the corporate bodies. He expresses satisfaction with his visit to our country. [Text] [AB170945 Niamey Domestic Service in French 1900 GMT 16 Feb 82]

SENEGALESE FOREIGN MINISTER--The head of state, President Seyni Kountche, today received in audience Senegalese Minister of State for Foreign Affairs Moustapha Niasse, who made the following statement to newsmen. [Begin recording] The bilateral cooperation between Niger and Senegal is an exemplary one in many respects. It is based on brotherhood, friendship and mutual respect. Both countries are facing the same economic difficulties common to all Third World countries. It is gratifying that both countries are engaged in the same superhuman struggle to overcome their difficulties. They are really achieving successes. It suffices to discover the progress achieved here in Niger under the wise and lucid leadership of his excellency, Seyni Kountche, to be confident about the future of Africa. [Text] [AB121301 Niamey Domestic Service in French 1200 GMT 12 Feb 82]

CSO: 4719/564

COUNTRY URGED TO HAVE LESS TECHNOLOGY, NOT MORE

Kaduna SUNDAY NEW NIGERIAN in English 24 Jan 82 p 3

[Editorial: "Transfer of Technology"]

[Text]

THE quest for 'Transfer of Technology' has become something of an obsession with the ruling elites of developing nations. Officials that are charged with the task of raising the living standards of their peoples think that they can best perform the task by spending huge sums importing sophisticated machinery into their countries. We agree with the Vice-Chancellor of Ahmadu Bello University, Zaria, Professor Ango Abdullahi, that the so-called transfer of technology is a "mirage which denies the opportunity and the challenge of utilising local resources."

We believe that our whole concept of development needs to be reviewed because it is a concept dreamt up in the committee rooms of international agencies which are far away from the objects of their apparent concern. Brilliantly executed buildings, fly-overs and well-designed city squares only give a deceptive patina of what development really is. Most spendings for development hardly trickle into the villages in which resides a vast majority of the population that need to be liberated from poverty and backwardness.

Achieving a meaningful and sustained industrial progress needs a national commitment and a clear strategy. It also needs a large measure of self-reliance and utilization of local resources.

We should not be deceived with the flattery that our nation is the greatest in Africa when we have to import food, ammunition, textiles and building materials. We are more than capable of feeding and clothing ourselves and building our own armaments.

Thus, instead of spending millions to import turn-key, closed technologies whose design we know very little about and whose repair will necessitate the flying in of experts from abroad, it is best if we invest at home to organize the farmers, establish more technical and craft schools and fund scientific and technical researches in our universities and polytechnics. This approach may prove to be a harder and more problematic one but it is the one that will ensure the attainment of a true, self-reliant development.

CSO: 4700/759

ZIMBABWE SCORED; PRO, CON VIEWS EXPRESSED ON OAU PLANS

AB181211 Lagos International Service in English 0830 GMT 18 Feb 82

[Excerpt] The Nigerian statesman is disturbed by the recent spate of accusations of subversion and preparation for war leveled against Joshua Nkomo by Prime Minister Robert Mugabe. The paper contends that the present situation will not augur well for the political stability of young Zimbabwe. Besides, it will afford the detractors of Africa an opportunity to justify their claim that Africans are incapable of governing themselves. The statesman therefore calls on the two factions concerned to make peace in the interest of the unity and stability of their young country.

The NEW NIGERIAN and the NIGERIAN STANDARD comment on the rejection of the OAU peace plan for Chad by President Goukouni Oueddei. The two papers express different views on the issue. On its part, the NEW NIGERIAN agrees with President Goukouni for rejecting the plan because, according to the paper, the OAU peacekeeping force in that country is not making much progress. It also points out that the issue of negotiation does not arise since Habre has been wrecking virtually all the previous agreements reached for a cease-fire and settlement of the crisis. What the OAU should do, says the NEW NIGERIAN, is to ensure that Habre's supply routes and sanctuaries in Sudan are sealed up. The paper is of the opinion that in the event of a continued failure, President Goukouni will have no alternative but to seek Libyan assistance and then it would not be fair to blame him.

Contrary to the views of the NEW NIGERIAN, the NIGERIAN STANDARD condemns President Goukouni Oueddei's recent rejection of the OAU peace plan for Chad and says it is an unfortunate development. It also says his rebuff of the move by the organization was least expected.

CSO: 4700/745

COMMENTARIES CRITICIZE U.S. ROLE IN EL SALVADOR

Accused of Double Standard

AB120955 Lagos International Service in English 0830 GMT 12 Feb 82

[Excerpt] The NATIONAL CONCORD is not happy that the United States of America is playing double standard in El Salvador. While citing America's humiliating experience in the Vietnam war, the paper hopes that it will not in this generation get itself involved in situations that have the makings of another Vietnam. Instead of arming the Salvadorans to kill themselves, the CONCORD advises the Americans to think of economic reconstruction which would go a long way to solve the country's economic problems.

'Another Vietnamese Situation'

AB151203 Lagos International Service in English 0830 GMT 15 Feb 82

[Station commentary]

[Text] Last week, the speaker of the American House of Representatives, Mr Tip O'Neill, declared his intention to send a three-man delegation to El Salvador to assess the situation in that country. Speaking in a television interview in Washington Mr O'Neill expressed strong reservations about the policy of the Reagan administration on the civil strife in El Salvador. He noted that by continuing with its present approach to the crisis in El Salvador, the administration was creating another Vietnamese situation for the American public.

We appreciate and share the concern of Mr O'Neill over the Reagan administration approach to the situation in El Salvador. Reactions of Washington toward events in that strife-torn country indicate that America is yet to learn the lesson of her misadventure and humiliation in Vietnam. With the passage of each new day, the Americans seem closer to directly intervening in the Salvadorian civil war. American involvement has so far progressed from the supply of arms and instructors to that of advisers for the right-wing dictatorial regime of Jose Napoleon Duarte. Several spokesmen of the Reagan administration have claimed that the U.S. support for the Duarte regime is aimed at ensuring the survival of democracy in El Salvador and the rest of Latin America.

The truth is that the Americans are giving moral, material and financial aid to a regime that is opposed to social progress and peaceful change in El Salvador. The reason for this support can also be easily discerned. The Americans regard El Salvador, a country of 4.9 million people with the lowest per capita income in the whole of Latin America, as a linchpin in the present East-West ideological struggle in Latin America. The main line of reasoning was used to justify American support under former President Jimmy Carter for the Samoza regime in Nicaragua. Washington's support for the decaying right wing dictatorships in Latin America is based on the (?desire) to curb the influence of Cuba in the region. But the hypocrisy and double standard in the policies of successive American administrations is quite obvious. They tend to adopt a bellicose posture on the question of human rights only when it is considered to be in their own interests.

For instance, since the declaration of martial law in Poland, Washington has taken a clear and tough stand on the point of human right violations in Poland. But the same Americans claim that the Duarte regime is committed to respect for human rights in El Salvador. However, in spite of all claims, the fact is that military escalation in Latin America could result in a general conflict which may extend far beyond the borders of El Salvador. In the end, it is American pride that will be bruised as it twice happened in Vietnam and Nicaragua. In the case of El Salvador, there is a more worthwhile option which the Americans could encourage: They should use their power and influence to bring the two warring factions to the conference table and help them to resolve their present differences. It should be noted that the rebel forces are prepared for a negotiated settlement to the crisis and their leaders have articulated this desire on several occasions.

As a measure of good will, Washington should start by persuading their surrogates in El Salvador to indefinitely postpone the constituent assembly elections which they have scheduled for next month. Mr Reagan should note that an overriding majority of American families and particularly the youth are not going to hail him for sending thousands to their untimely death in El Salvador through adopting the wrong policy options. That prospect is what he would be avoiding by seeking peaceful solutions to the civil strife now affecting El Salvador.

CSO: 4700/558

COMMENTARY DEPLORES U.S. POLICY IN NAMIBIA

AB221224 Lagos International Service in English 0830 GMT 22 Feb 82

[Commentary by Ikenu Izegu]

[Text] Sometime last year a document on a secret Namibia plan purported to have emanated from the desk of Mr Chester Crocker, the U.S. assistant secretary of state for African affairs, was leaked to the press. The details of the plan stated quite clearly the options open to the United Nations over the issue of Namibia's independence as endorsed by UN Resolution 435.

From the secret memorandum it is obvious that the State Department under Mr Alexander Haig and the White House under President Ronald Reagan regard the UN resolution as most unfavorable and untenable. The document must have met with their approval for the contents of the plan are now being implemented. At the time of disclosure the State Department, and Mr Chester Crocker in particular, strongly denied this document as a mere figment of the imagination and promptly dissociated themselves from it. Optimists were prepared to give them the benefit of the doubt but close observers of the U.S. African policy are sceptical. Today the sceptics have been proved right.

The question of leakage is the cornerstone of the Reagan administration's international relations as other nations build their foreign policies on a central theme such as a defense, U.S. policy revolves round their phobia of communism.

SWAPO is regarded as an entirely Marxist organization with strong communist ties. It is therefore looked upon as disreputable by the Americans. Based on this untenable premise alone, the United States is prepared to sell out the Namibian people into a convention of perpetual slavery in order to maintain what she perceives as a communist-free Southern Africa.

The obvious injustice in this policy is that it did not arise from a misinterpretation or misunderstanding of the needs of the Namibian people but from a callous insensitivity to the legitimate desires of the peoples.

The main objective of the secret memorandum was to formulate a coherent U.S policy towards the vexatious issue of Cubans in Angola, which they presume, could be solved by linking the issue of Cuba's withdrawal from Angola with that of Namibia's independence. According to the memorandum, African leaders have no basis for resisting the Namibian-Angolan linkage, once they are made to realize they could get a Namibia settlement through America.

As of now the U.S. administration has already informed the Angolan Government that American recognition will depend on the expulsion of the Cubans and an agreement reached with U.S. puppet, Savimbi. However, alternative options will be employed if Angola proves intransigent and the South African invasion of that country is just one of them.

It is reprehensible that Mr Chester Crocker, the leader of the Western contact group should deliberately play a double role plotting secretly to sell out the Namibians and SWAPO contrary to the UN resolution. It is a violation of the confidence reposed on him by African states who had regarded him and his group as mediators in the inflexible issue.

The independence of Namibia is not negotiable. Anything short of genuine independence would be a denial of their legitimate aspirations. SWAPO has been recognized as the legitimate representative of the Namibian people by the United Nations after due assessment of thecomplexities of that country's political situation. A proposal of minority rights has been advocated by the Western contact group, a change in the election procedures and a change in the composition of the UN peacekeeping force intended for Namibia are all subtle ways of (?attrition) being designed by the Americans to water down or wear out the aspirations of the people.

As they proceed on their grand conspiracy, it is pertinent to call America's attention to the fact that history teaches us of the subtility of (?taxing) the legitimate desire of her people. Vietnam is a case in point; so is the more recent example of Nicaragua.

The Reagan administration ought to learn to apply the lessons it has been (?stringently) preaching to the Soviets over the Polish issue.

CSO: 4700/770

COMMENTARY EXAMINES POLISH SITUATION

AB221214 Lagos International Service in English 0830 GMT 20 Feb 82

[Commentary by Robert Bikefe]

[Text] There are two aspects of the response of the Western alliance to the present crisis in Poland. The first relates to the economic problems highlighted by the crisis, while the other is largely ideological. It was obvious from the start that Western concern regarding the Polish crisis was largely determined by economic and military considerations. But recently, there has been a growing campaign that the West should declare Poland in default of its debts because Poland apparently lacks the ability to meet the loan payments that are due this year. Poland is believed to be in debt to Western sources to the tune of over 20 billion naira. The action to declare Poland in default of its debt goes on. [Passage indistinct]

It is obvious to the Western sources who are pressing on with this line of reasoning that it is an extremely serious issue to declare any nation in default of its debts. That invariably means that the said nation is being declared bankrupt. As a consequence, such a country will immediately be denied credits from banking sources for any purpose until it gets over its state of complete insolvency. But it is definitely apparent that any nation in Poland's present unenviable economic situation will not be able to tidy up its (?debt) without credit and economic help from external sources.

From all indications, the current crisis in Poland is an economic affair. In this regard, it is obvious that the alliance has been of little help to Poland in the bid to tackle its problems. Instead, the Reagan administration imposed economic sanctions on both Poland and the Soviet Union and has been urging its allies to act accordingly. In imposing sanctions on Poland, the Americans refuse to give due consideration to the fact that the West helped to push Poland to the present situation through unrestricted lending. The previous Polish Government under Edward Gierick was encouraged to seek and receive liberal loans from Western states in the bid to further industrialize Poland but after the loans, ready market for the goods produced in the process was remarkably lacking. In effect, Poland became burdened with heavy debt which could not be recycled with the desired ease. Secondly the leaders of the Solidarity trade unions were urged on into making continued demands without reflecting truly on the political consequences of their actions. The Western political analysts who claim to be [words indistinct] were aware of the fact that the political climate in Poland dictated moderation on the part of Solidarity. Reforms in the system had to be gradually approached and each gain consolidated before the next demand is made. The leaders of Solidarity failed to exercise restraint in their push for a more liberal and free society in Poland. They had widespread sympathy but they were making too many demands at a short stretch.

Thirdly, the situation in Poland at the time martial law was declared allowed for only three uncomfortable options: The first was the possibility of a civil war to which Poland was gradually drifting into; secondly, there was a threat of Soviet intervention if the situation deteriorated beyond what could ordinarily be accommodated in Moscow; and the third option was what has been adopted by way of martial law. By declaring martial law, General Jaruzelski and his associates tried to prevent direct Soviet intervention and the quite clear civil strife and anarchy. The West has a duty to help Poland out of its present embarrassing situation. To declare Poland in default of its debt is not one of the options that should be considered.

CSO: 4700/770

GOLAN LAW IMPACT ON ISRAELI-NIGERIAN RELATIONS

TA111249 Tel Aviv MA'ARIV in Hebrew 11 Feb 82 pp 1, 15

[Report by envoy to Nigeria Tamar Golan]

[Text] The political circles in Nigeria that favored gradual normalization with Israel were dealt a harsh blow when the Golan Heights Law was passed in the Knesset. According to them, the chances for a positive change in the relations between the two countries have declined and an extraordinary event would have to occur "to get out of the freeze."

Another target of their criticism was the remarks made by Defense Minister Ari'el Sharon about expanding U.S.-Israeli strategic cooperation to include the African countries. "Nigeria regards these statements as a gross interference in Africa's affairs and it believes that before suggesting strategic cooperation to the leaders of black Africa, Israel and the United States must first put an end to their current cooperation with the racist regime in South Africa," the Nigerian political circles said.

To the question of why Nigeria does not level such harsh criticism at the African countries that have relations with South Africa, these circles replied that this was "a regrettable fact indeed" but they refused to admit to the imbalance between the sharp condemnation of Israel and the tolerance shown toward other countries. They mainly criticized the "alleged nuclear cooperation between Israel and South Africa." As for the large role played by France in extending nuclear assistance to South Africa, they noted that "the difference is that France is a superpower which must be taken into consideration...."

A senior political figure who requested that his identity and post should not be identified told MA'ARIV: "The situation in Nigeria is especially difficult since there is a wide gap between those favoring a thaw in relations with Israel and those firmly opposed to any relations with Israel. The main problem is that the split between pro-Israelis and anti-Israelis nearly parallels the split in the internal arena between the Muslim leadership of the northern provinces of the federation and the Christians in the eastern and western parts of Nigeria."

The senior Nigerian personality claimed that Israel has real friends in Nigeria, some of whom have even risked their political careers for its sake: "Therefore, the Golan Heights Law has also been a blow to us." Replying to the question of whether one may foresee any change after the completion of the Israeli withdrawal from the Sinai on 26 April, the Nigerian leader said: "I am not sure. One should remember that a summit meeting of the OAU is scheduled to be held 1 month later in Tripoli, the capital of Libya."

According to the Nigerian leader, most African presidents [word dropped in original] from this summit meeting because they do not want to be the guests of Col Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi. Nevertheless, the Nigerian source noted that there was no connection between the diplomatic freeze and economic or cultural activities. He noted that Nigerian citizens attend international seminars and professional courses in Israel just as Israeli companies or Israeli citizens employed by foreign companies work in Nigeria.

CSO: 4423/98

COMMERCE SLOWED; CUSTOMS SCORED FOR 'HARASSING' CITIZENS

Traders Incur Losses

AB131235 Lagos NAN in English 1055 GMT 13 Feb 82

[Text] Lagos, 13 Feb (NAN)--Commercial activities in parts of the Lagos island remained grounded for the second day running yesterday as a result of the raids carried out by customs officials on Thursday.

The raid, which was the second in one week, was carried out at places where imported goods were regularly displayed.

Some of the affected traders told the News Agency of Nigeria (NAN) that they incurred heavy losses as most of their wares were seized by customs officials, while thieves exploited the confusion created by the operation to loot more goods.

Goods seized included assorted spirits and drinks, varieties of canned foods, cigarettes, imported ready-made dresses and shoes.

A source close to the department of customs and excise told NAN that goods worth millions of naira had been impounded in the past two weeks through surprise raids carried out by officials of the department in many parts of the country.

The director of the department, Alhaji Abubakar Musa, had pledged earlier this year that effective measures would be taken by officials of the department to rid shops and markets to contraband.

Innocent Said Suffering

AB171148 Lagos International Service in English 0830 GMT 17 Feb 82

[Excerpt] The NIGERIAN TRIBUNE comments on raids carried out by men of the department of customs and excise in markets and is sad that it is innocent traders who are suffering. The paper notes that the two root causes of smuggling are corruption and shortage of essential goods in the markets. It believes that if the markets are flooded with essential goods, the prosperity to smuggling will be reduced and the practice of palm-greasing will be on a lesser degree.

THE TRIBUNE advises the customs department to stop harassing innocent citizens and concentrate its operations on the borders. It also calls on the department to clear itself of the corrupt elements that are within it.

CSO: 4700/558

SUGAR COMPANY PRODUCTION PREDICTED

Kaduna SUNDAY NEW NIGERIAN in English 31 Jan 82 p 16

[Article by A. B. Tapidi]

[Text]

ABOUT 19,000 tonnes of refined sugar is expected to be produced within the next three months at the multi-million Naira Savannah Sugar Company on the outskirts of Numan, Gongola State.

The second session of production of the Sugar Company, which began on January 20, would last up to April 20, this year.

During the production session, about 200,000 tonnes of sugar cane expected to be harvested on 2,600 hectares of land, would be processed.

The Chairman of the company, Mr. Elias Nathan, explained that, by 1984 full 1.4 million tonnes of sugar cane or 100,000 tonnes of refined sugar would be produced annually.

He stated that about 11 tonnes of refined sugar produced during the maiden production session of the company last year had been disposed of to the various customers in the country.

The chairman declared that it is projected that by 1983, some 12,200 hectares of land would have been cultivated for irrigated sugar cane, when the multi-million Naira Kiri Dam would have become fully operational.

According to the implementation programme of the company, it is hoped that the project would be the largest sugar company in West Africa and the second largest in Africa, when full commercial production is attained in 1984.

The largest sugar company in the continent is in the Sudan with a production capacity of about 170,000 tonnes of refined sugar per annum.

The Federal Government is expected to invest about half a billion Naira on the Savannah Sugar Company, to ensure its success.

The project is a joint commercial venture between the Federal government, the governments of Bauchi, Borno and Gongola states, the Nigerian Industrial Development Bank (NIDB), and the Nigerian Agricultural and Co-operatives Bank (NACB).

Other shareholders include the Commonwealth Development Corporation (CDC) based in London. The CDC is also the technical partners, management agents and the major contractors.

CSO: 4700/759

NEW MINIMUM WAGE SAID REDUCING PRODUCTIVITY

Kaduna NEW NIGERIAN in English 29 Jan 82 p 2

[Article by Loveday Iheanacho]

[Text]

THE newly-introduced 125 Naira national minimum wage, instead of helping to increase the output of civil servants, has considerably reduced productivity in the civil service.

Making this observation at an exclusive interview in Owerri on Wednesday the National Vice-President of the Nigerian Civil Service Technical Union, Mr. Benedict Nwaneri, gave the reason for this situation as the lumping together of labourers and holders of the West African School Certificate to earn the same 125 Naira monthly.

This arrangement, he noted, had rendered the whole exercise meaningless.

According to him, apart from frustrating those who entered the civil service after their formal education, the arrangement had also engendered widespread indiscipline and disaffection in the service.

The arrangement, he further pointed out, was very unfair to civil servants who joined the service several years ago but were unfortunate to remain on Step one of grade level 04 until the new policy took effect.

This, he said, because such civil servants had since then been earning the same salary with new entrants, including labourers.

Mr. Nwaneri told the New Nigerian that his union was looking closely and seriously at the effects of the minimum wage Act on its members.

'We have waited for so long for something to be done about this anomaly, therefore nobody should blame us for whatever decision we reached at the Jos meeting', he asserted.

CSO: 4700/759

OIL, GAS TRADE UNION REPORTEDLY SPLITS INTO FACTIONS

Kaduna NEW NIGERIAN in English 29 Jan 82 p 2

[Article by Suleiman Dangana and Clement Eluaka]

[Text]

THE National Union of Petroleum and Natural Gas Workers (NUPENG) has split into factions.

This was made known in Lagos recently at a press conference to herald a body which calls itself the Redemption Committee heading a faction of NUPENG.

At a press conference in Lagos recently, the Chairman of the Redemption Committee, Mr. A. I. Epah, said that his committee has nullified the recent expulsion of a member and the retirement of two officials.

He contended that the expelled and retired members of the union were not given the opportunity to defend themselves.

Those purported to have been retired were Mr. A. E. Otu, national general secretary of the union, Mr. P. S. T. Agbaniko, senior organising secretary while Mr. G. G. Okotonji was expelled from the union.

He said that the redemption committee was made up of NUPENG members at NNPC, National Oil and Chemical Marketing Company, African Petroleum, ELF, Saplem, Texaco Overseas Limited and others.

The redemption committee chairman also said that a vote of no confidence has been passed on both the national administrative council and national executive council of the union as the two organs have converted into a secret cult.

Members of the committee said that the recognised secretariat of the union at Surulere remains unchanged while the union remains in tact without any faction.

CSO: 4700/759

BRIEFS

'FREE-FOR-ALL' FIGHT--Lagos, 22 Feb (NAN)--Thirty persons were today arrested by the police in connection with a "free-for-all" fight between members of the newly launched NPN [National Party of Nigeria] Drivers Association and those of the National Union of Road Transport Workers at Oshodi near Lagos. During the fight, matchets, clubs and knives were freely used, while some of the drivers and thugs assaulted market women and passengers. The fight, which started about 8 am, took four lorry-load of policemen including members of the anti-riot unit, several hours to put under control. A correspondent of the News Agency of Nigeria (NAN) who visited the scene saw blood-stains on many abandoned vehicles, while shoes and rags littered the area. At the Oshodi police station, a police officer told NAN that five persons who received deep matchet cuts had been taken to the hospital. The fight was allegedly caused by the issuance of tickets to drivers of minibuses by representatives of the two unions. Meanwhile, policemen are keeping the area under surveillance. [Text] [AB221607 Lagos NAN in English 1544 GMT 22 Feb 82]

STATE CREATION TASK FORCE--Lagos, 23 Feb (NAN)--The meeting of political parties called today by President Shehu Shagari on the creation of new states has set up a task force to study the issue. A source close to the meeting told the News Agency of Nigeria (NAN) that the task force would have two representatives each from all the political parties, the National Assembly and the president's office. The task force is expected to submit its report by the end of next month while another meeting of party leaders will then be held in early April to deliberate on the report. Speaking to newsmen at the State House, the three party leaders who attended today's meeting described the deliberations as very successful. The party leaders are, Chief A.M.A. Akinloye, national chairman of the NPN, Malam Aminu Kano, leader of the PRP and Alhaji Waziri Ibrahim, leader of the GNPP. Chief Akinloye, who said that his party recommended the creation of 24 more states, noted that although the constitution was very rigid, it was still possible to create new states by 1983 if there was cooperation among the parties. Malam Aminu Kano noted that the meeting was to ease the work of the National Assembly, while Alhaji Waziri pointed out that it was healthy for all the parties to meet occasionally to iron out some issues. [Text] [AB231637 Lagos NAN in English 1620 GMT 23 Feb 82]

OIL PRODUCTION FIGURES--A total of 55,570,688 barrels of crude oil was produced in Nigeria last December. Over 49.134 million barrels of the crude was exported. According to a report by the Nigerian National Petroleum Corporation, NNPC, the figures represented an average daily production rate of 1.79 million barrels and export rate of 1.59 million barrels per day. They also indicate a production increase of over 13 percent and about 24 percent export rise over November 1981. The NNPC said the increases were a testimony to the rising demand for Nigerian oil in the world market. [Text] [AB231532 Lagos Domestic Service in English 1500 GMT 23 Feb 82]

BORNO STATE POLITICAL CLASH--A report says one person has been killed in another political clash in Borno State. The latest incident took place near Damasak last Sunday. A Radio Nigeria correspondent in Maiduguri reports that many people were injured during the clashes and were taken to Gaidam General Hospital. The clash followed an order for the closure of a house said to belong to a political party supporter by the local government. Supporters of the party resisted the order and in an attempt by officials to carry out the order, a free-for-all fight between supporters of two rival political parties ensued. Meanwhile, mobile policemen have been dispatched to the area to restore peace. [Text] [AB231553 Lagos Domestic Service in English 1500 GMT 23 Feb 82]

URANIUM IN GONGOLA, BORNO--Large deposits of uranium have been found in Gongola and Borno states. The mineral has also been discovered in the Gombe area of Bauchi State. The minister of mines and power, Alhaji Muhammad Ibrahim Hassan, disclosed this when he said that coal deposits had been located in (?Duman). Alhaji Hassan was speaking during an inspection tour of Nigerian Electric Power Authority installations in Gongola State. [Text] [AB232139 Lagos Domestic Service in English 2100 GMT 23 Feb 82]

ALLEGED COUP PLOT--Reports of plots to topple President Shehu Shagari is examined by the NIGERIAN HERALD. The paper describes the abortive plot, which was linked to a wealthy Maiduguiri-based businessman, as [word indistinct] and a sad development in the checkered political history of the country. The HERALD is opposed to any method of changing the (?institutionally) elected government of this country outside every constitutional (?threat) the democratic government into being recommended. [As heard] For this reason, the HERALD wholeheartedly condemned the abortive coup plans, adding that the ambitious arrested coup planners should be dealt with severely. [Excerpt] [AB201002 Lagos International Service in English 0830 GMT 20 Feb 82]

NEW NAVAL VESSEL--Nigeria's latest naval vessel, NNS Aradu, was commissioned today by President Shehu Shagari. The vessel is a multipurpose frigate and the most modern and sophisticated ship to join the fleet of the Nigerian Navy. President Shehu Shagari said that the commissioning of the ship has given birth to the formation of a [word indistinct] navy. He said this was another positive step by the federal government toward the development of its naval strength into an effective maritime force capable not only of preventing but of repealing hostile activities in the country's territorial waters. President Shehu Shagari stated that the administration intended that the Nigerian Navy moved with the changing times. To this end, a program of manpower development aimed at producing true professionals and modern naval men was being vigorously pursued. The NNS Aradu, which is being commanded by Capt O.P. Fingesi, has capacity for striking air, submarine and shore targets. Her name, Aradu, means thunder. [Text] [AB221253 Lagos International Service in English 1230 GMT 22 Feb 82]

PAPERS DISCUSS ZIMBABWE DISPUTE--Recent developments in Zimbabwe, which led to the removal of Joshua Nkomo and two other ministers of his party from Mr Mugabe's government, are the issues discussed by the NIGERIAN STANDARD and the NATIONAL CONCORD. The STANDARD points out that Mugabe and Nkomo only tolerated each other in order to win the independence war against the racist regime of Ian Smith. The paper is of the view that Mugabe's present moves are aimed at realizing his idea of one-party system and therefore warns him not push his plan too far unless he is convinced that the majority of Zimbabweans will support him. And in its commends, the CONCORD regrets that after having won independence from rebel Ian Smith, Mr Mugabe and Mr Nkomo should seek to change government by force of arms or to impose the rule of one party which it says has led to tyranny in Africa. The paper reminds them that it was their united action under the umbrella of the Patriotic Front Party that enabled them to win freedom for their country. To allow the crisis to go on, says the CONCORD, is to open Zimbabwe to possible apartheid, South Africa's intervention. It therefore urges them to sink their differences and work for the progress and welfare of their nation. [Excerpt] [AB231347 Lagos International Service in English 1130 GMT 23 Feb 82]

MONEY SUPPLY INCREASES--Money supply in the country at the end of September 1981 stood at 8,998.1 million naira. This shows an increase of 24.5 million naira over the figure for the previous period. According to the latest report of the Central Bank the increase was recorded largely in the demands of private companies. Commercial banks' capital credits to the private sector at the end of same period under review amounted to 8,278.8 million naira. This also indicates an increase of 188.6 million naira above the level in the preceding month. [Text] [AB081403 Lagos Domestic Service in English 1200 GMT 8 Feb 82]

CSO: 4700/750

BRIEFS

ANNIVERSARY MARKED--Banjul, 18 Feb (AFP)--The parade marking the celebration of the 17th anniversary of the independence of the Gambia took place under the symbol of the Senegambian Confederation which came into force on 1 February. Gambian and Senegalese troops took part in the military parade while Senegalese students joined in the civilian parade in Banjul in the presence of Gambian President Sir Dawda Jawara and Mrs Diouf, wife of the Senegalese head of state, who was represented by Moustapha Niasse, Senegalese minister of state for foreign affairs. After a highly colorful parade, the Gambian head of state stressed in a message that the establishment of the Senegambian Confederation constituted a positive and concrete contribution to African unity and was hailed as such by the African countries. He deplored the considerable loss of human life (more than 500) and the material damage caused by the coup d'etat of 30 July (foiled by the intervention of Senegalese troops). This plot, he added, tarnished the image of the Gambia and undermined its development efforts. President Jawara finally called on the Gambian youth to love their neighbor and their country. [Text] [AB181907 Paris AFP in French 1833 GMT 18 Feb 82]

COUP TRIBUNAL DEATH SENTENCES--Banjul, 21 Feb (AFP)--A special tribunal on Saturday condemned two more people to death for treason for their involvement in the 30 July abortive coup in Banjul. These new death sentences, pronounced against Keba Jabang, a former police officer and Momodou Manjang, a driver, bring the number of people condemned to death by the tribunal to 12 since it began trying people involved in the abortive coup last December. On 21 December, seven death sentences were pronounced followed by six others on 2 February. The two people condemned have 30 days to lodge an appeal. Keba Jabang and Momodou Manjang were found guilty of "treason," "disloyalty," possesson of arms, and having "sewed seeds of terror and violence." In fact, they arrested and detained Famarah Wassa Toure, national chairman of the Progressive People's Party (Gambia's ruling party) and member of parliament for the region of South Combo. Mr Toure, who before he was detained by the putchists occupied the post of deputy minister for information and tourism. He resigned from the post afterward for having, under threat of arms, used the Gambian Radio to ask the population to join the putchists. [Text] [AB211020 Paris AFP in French 0905 GMT 21 Feb 82]

CSO: 4719/516

BRIEFS

FRG PARLIAMENTARY DELEGATION RECEIVED--The chairman of the People's National Assembly, Challe Mohamed Ibrahim Ahmad, today received in his office the delegation led by the chairman of the FRG Parliamentary Defense and Security Committee, His Excellency (Weiner Martz). The chairman and the FRG delegation discussed matters related to the cooperation between the two parliaments and ways of (?strengthening) the ties further. The delegation today also met the SDR foreign minister, Challe Abdurahman Jama Barre, and the first deputy defense minister, Challe Maj Gen [first name indistinct] Haji Mohamed. (?They) discussed Somali-FRG relations and bilateral cooperation. The officials also discussed the problems prevailing in the Horn of Africa and other major problems affecting the world. Also present on the occasion were the chairman of the Defense and Security Committee of the National Assembly, Challe Abukar Hasan [name indistinct] and other officials. [Text] [EA190018 Mogadishu Domestic Service in Somali 1700 GMT 18 Feb 82]

FRONT CLAIMS BASE CAPTURED--Units from the ninth General Aynanshe Division of the gallant forces of the Democratic Front for the Salvation of Somalia [DFSS] launched a fierce and heavy attack on a large military base belonging to the forces that are still loyal to the terror regime in Mogadishu. The base at (Gowlalo) near the town of Galcaio, the regional capital of Mudugh region, was completely overrun by the intrepid forces of the DFSS. The "Radio Kulmis" reporter accompanying the units from the General Aynanshe Division of the DFSS forces reports that 130 soldiers were killed, 35 were wounded and 12 were captured. Our reporter adds that the DFSS forces also captured two jeeps mounted with 106mm field guns, an Italian-made vehicle, assorted light weapons, rations and other military hardware. The reporter adds that the remaining soldiers of the terror regime still ruling our country ran to the bush to save their lives. The DFSS forces suffered one martyr who was slightly wounded. [Sentence as heard] [Text] [EA182132 (Clandestine) Radio Kulmis in Somali to Somalia 1800 GMT 18 Feb 82]

CSO: 4797/5

ANC COMMENTARY SUPPORTS SANCTIONS

EA231554 Addis Ababa Radio Freedom in English to South Africa 1930 GMT 22 Feb 82

[ANC program; station commentary]

[Excerpts] The implementation of mandatory sanctions against the criminal regime of Pretoria is a matter for now. Its necessity and urgency cannot be questioned, for to question this would be closing eyes to the genocidal war the regime has declared against its victims. This is exactly why the UN General Assembly has determined this year, 1982, as the year for sanctions against the Pretoria regime.

The cry for mandatory sanctions against South Africa is even strengthened by the words of the UN secretary general, Dr de Cuellar when he said: "Even apart from cases of imprisonment, torture, deportation, and dislocation of members of the non-white population under its system, the very concept of apartheid implies a denial of almost every article of the universal declaration of human rights."

This is indeed true for in the last 20 years alone the Pretoria regime has caused the deaths and murders of over 50,000 people. Over 509,829 apartheid resisters have been imprisoned between July 1977 and June 1981. This year alone, the Botha-Malan terrorist regime has put behind bars more than 300 of its victims, all without trial. A few weeks ago, a leading trade unionist, a young man of 28, Dr Aggett, was murdered in prison. This has brought the number of apartheid victims in prison to 47. Most of these as members of the ANC and fighters of its military wing, Umkhonto We Sizwe, before dying have had broken ribs, cracked skulls, gouged eyes, smashed testicles and heaven knows what.

This then is the type of a fascist regime Pretoria is, (?wholesale Western) [word indistinct] about Pretoria as a threat to humanity, is that the regime has not been a signatory to the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty. As a nuclear possessing and nuclear (?equipped) state, the fascist regime no doubt poses a threat to humanity. Fascist South Africa is a state whose vocabulary does not include such words as mercy and modesty.

In the People's Republic of Angola, its fascist forces made 22 strafings from the air, it carried out 50 bomb raids, it made 111 helicopter troops landings and many incidents of artillery attacks. In Namibia, it is concentrating 40,000 armed men, including mercenaries. In South Africa it continues to cause the death of hundreds of thousands of men in the mines, in disease-stricken and neglected areas. In our country once more it continues to encourage child slave labor.

As leader of the ANC (Joe Mudita) said on the 70th anniversary of the ANC, failure to isolate the regime will condemn the South African and even Southern African peoples and the rest of mankind to a terrible blood-letting that will forever remain a blot on the conscience of humanity.

CSO: 4700/788

BRIEFS

DISCUSSIONS WITH KWAZULU STATE--High-level discussions are to be held between the governments of South Africa and the Kwazulu National State in South Africa to promote cooperation and improve relations. A decision to this effect was taken after talks between the South African Minister of Cooperation and Development Dr Piet Koornhof and the Chief Minister of Kwazulu Chief Gatsha Buthelezi. Dr Koornhof said they also discussed constitutional matters. In this respect there were big differences but Dr Koornhof said he gave Chief Minister Buthelezi the assurance that South Africa was undergoing a period of change and that matters he had raised were being attended to by the South African Government. [Text] [LD120322 Johannesburg International Service in English 2100 GMT 11 Feb 82]

CSO: 4700/766

ZANZIBAR GOVERNMENT TO CONTINUE STRESSING FOOD PRODUCTION

Dar es Salaam DAILY NEWS in English 1 Feb 82 p 1

[Article by Abdallah Yakuti]

[Text]

THE Zanzibar Government will continue to place greater emphasis on the production of foods, including beef and milk, with ultimate aim of phasing out food importation, the Zanzibar Minister of State (Planning), Ndugu Mohamed Faki, said in Zanzibar yesterday.

The Minister was closing a five-day seminar on livestock development on the Isles at the Ushirika Hotel, Sateni. He said that the importance attached to food production and agriculture in general was clearly stated in the current annual development plan where about half of the financial resources earmarked for production oriented activities had been planned for the expansion of the agricultural sector.

Ndugu Faki said that by gradually pushing for self-reliance in food, Zanzibar would save a substantial amount of foreign exchange now used for importation of food.

In addition, Ndugu Faki noted, higher roductivity in beef, milk and eggs would guarantee the provision of nutritious foods to the people, thus ensuring the full utilisation of human resources for development.

The Minister however said the achievement of the objectives would depend on the adoption of an efficient production plan for the agricultural sector in general, hard work and diligence of agricultural and veterinary officers as well as peasants.

CSO: 4700/754

JUWATA ENDORSES FIFTY PERCENT WAGE INCREASE FOR TAZARA WORKERS

Dar es Salaam DAILY NEWS in English 3 Feb 82 p 3

[Text]

THE Union of Tanzania Workers (JUWATA) has endorsed a 50 per cent salary increase for workers of the Tanzania-Zambia Railways Authority (TAZARA) announced recently.

A senior official at JUWATA headquarters said in Dar es Salaam yesterday that the organisation was satisfied with an explanation over the increases given by the TAZARA management. "Our counterparts, the Railways Workers Union of Zambia (RWUZ) were satisfied too," he said.

He said proposals presented by the RWUZ to TAZARA authorities had been endorsed by JUWATA. "We take them to be ours," he emphasized.

Last weekend RWUZ representative, Ndugu M. R. Mwendapole, said a two-year agreement on conditions of service for TAZARA workers had been signed between the union and TAZARA management.

The signing of the agreement, confirmed workers' consent to the 50 per cent salary increases.

The agreement covers salaries, leave entitlement, accumulations and improvement on efficiency. All are subject to review after two years.

CSO: 4700/754

NEC DISMISSES FIVE PARTY, GOVERNMENT LEADERS

Dar es Salaam DAILY NEWS in English 30 Jan 82 p 3

[Article by Boniface Byarugaba]

[Text] A total of five Party and public leaders have been sacked from leadership by the National Executive Committee (NEC) for misconduct and running secret businesses contrary to the Leadership Code.

A statement issued by the Chief Party Executive Secretary, Ndugu Daudi Mwakawago, in Dar es Salaam yesterday said the five appeared before the Committee for Enforcement of the leadership code to answer the allegations levelled against them, before their names were sent to NEC during its two-day meeting in January this year.

The statement said after deep consideration of every case the Committee "was satisfied that they went against the Party constitution and violated the leadership code to which they were legally bound".

All of them cannot apply for any leadership post inside five years from now, except if permitted by NEC.

Saidi R. Hatibu, who was Miono Party Branch Chairman in Bagamoyo district was convicted and fined 500/- for possession of bhang. NEC stripped him of leadership for misconduct.

A Dar es Salaam-based Senior Personnel and Administrative Officer in the Tanzania Cotton Authority, Iddi Mwangwaya Chussu, was running a stationery shop in his house under a business name of Modern Stationery and General Business Enterprises. He was guilty of violating the Leadership Code under the Arusha Declaration.

Dar es Salaam City Council Trade Officer, John K. Mhangwa, was found to be the owner Malongo and Company Limited (MALCO) at Lugusha Street, Magomeni area in Kinondoni district under a pseudonym and signature. He is a CCM member who violated the Leadership Code under the terms of the Arusha Declaration.

Retail Manager of the Building and Hardware Supplies Company (BHESCO) Anase John Masuwe secretly runs Midnight Bar and Guest House at Mabibo in the city. The businesses were registered in the name of his child, who turned out to be too young to run them. He violated the Leadership Code while a CCM member.

A Telephonist with the Tanzania Posts and Telecommunications Corporation, Philip Manyanga, was found to be owning a shop, business vehicles, Marangu Guest House and Marangu Annex in Kilimanjaro region.

His business associates are his wife and father. The guest house was built through a loan from the Tanzania Housing Bank. It was proved that he "lied" to the Bank, that he was building a residential house.

CSO: 4700/754

SEMINAR PARTICIPANTS URGE GOVERNMENT TO DEFINE PRIVATE SECTOR ROLE

Dar es Salaam DAILY NEWS in English 30 Jan 82 p 1

[Article by Mkumbwa Ally]

[Text] THE Government has been urged to clearly define the role of the private sector in national development and draw up an elaborate organisational structure to promote this sector's contribution.

Participants at the Annual meeting of parastatals, private companies and the Ministry of Planning and Economic Affairs said in Dar es Salaam yesterday that the private sector could effectively augment public efforts in the agricultural, commercial and industrial sectors.

Discussing a paper on "The role of the Private Sector in Economic Planning", the participants observed, however, that although the Arusha Declaration provided for private participation in economic activities, little effort had been made to integrate the private sector with public efforts.

They pointed out that this sector was not involved in planning and that it was not assisted in mobilising both local and foreign funds for their operations.

The seminar said arrangements should be made to establish joint-ventures between the public and private sectors, especially in fields outside the public domain.

They said lack of clarity on the role and prospects of the private sector made it difficult to secure operational capital from local and outside financial institutions.

"We seriously need a rethink on this matter. These are innocent enterpreneurs the private sector who are not inimical to the broader perspectives of our national goals", a participant pointed out.

Presenting the paper, the Chairman of the Association of Tanzania Employers (ATE), Ndugu Victor Kimesera told the meeting that the private sector was willing to invest in agriculture.

"There is a lot of idle money in the country, it is very much our choice whether it remains idle or it enters into agricultural ventures," he said.

Emphasising that privileges in private participation should be given to honest enterprises, Ndugu Kimesera said more opportunities should be made available to private entrepreneurs in the business and industrial sectors.

He said small enterprises should not be undertaken by public institutions, adding that commerce, especially called for fast speed of change, quick decisions and multiple changes "which by nature do not lend themselves well to government protocol and procedure."

The participant said large private manufacturers of essential commodities should be allowed to distribute their goods, arguing that this would not only improve distribution but also take over transportation and storage costs incurred by the public agencies.

He said the private sector should be encouraged to establish complimentary industries producing locally components used by big industries.

Discussing another paper on "the Problems of Plan Implementation", the seminar urged closer co-ordination between the Ministry of Planning and implementing agencies including regions and parastatal organisations.

Participants underscored the importance of a reliable data collecting system and strict adherence to projected plans. Major departures from centrally projected plans snould be done with the approval of appropriate government sittings, they insisted.

Presenting the paper, the Director of Planning in the Ministry, Ndugu L. J. Mshana, said that lack of co-ordination was one of the major bottlenecks in project implementation.

He said last year's National Economic Survival programme was, for example, not well co-ordinated among the implementing institutions.

Ndugu Mshana pointed to lack of co-ordination between the public and private sectors, adding that as a result the contribution of the latter in the last three five-year plans could not be accurately reviewed.

He said although districts, regions and parastatals organisations were required to submit quarterly reports on their performance, the procedure was not followed.

Participants further said manpower underutilization was contributory to poor implementation of plans and urged efforts to train more skilled personnel and create attractive working conditions.

The seminar stressed the importance of the agricultural sector and called for a clearly defined development policy outlining the size, technology requirements and amount of investment needed.

The meeting was closed by the Minister for Planning and Economic Affairs, Professor Kighoma Malima.

CSO: 4700/754

OFFICIAL SAYS FURTHER TESTS OF FUEL-SAVING DEVICE NEEDED

Dar es Salaam DAILY NEWS in English 1 Feb 82 p 3

[Text] THE government is yet undecided on the usefulness of the fuel-saving device being promoted by a Kenyan firm, Systems Video Limited, it was learnt in Dar es Salaam at the weekend.

The Principal Secretary in the Ministry of Works, Ndugu Richard Juma, told the Daily News that they needed further proofs on the device, conducted on different vehicles and tested in varying conditions.

Local agents of international car manufacturers should also be involved to testify adaptability of the device to the engine without side effects, Ndugu Juma said adding that apart from the technical proofs, the government was interested in the economics of the gadget.

He explained that they had submitted their observations on the device to the Ministry of Water and Energy which, he added, "are the co-ordinators of all this".

"This is a marketing issue. The government as a potential major customer wants to know the econo..ics and feasilibity of the gadget under different conditions. If we are satisfied with these we shall go and buy it like anybody else," he said.

Confirming receipt of the report by the Ministry of Works, an official in the Ministry of Water and Energy said they had made no conclusion on the device, adding that it was "nothing to rush for".

He explained that the tests recorded so far were conducted under "specified" conditions, pointing out that the purported saving might be less in urban driving "where you stop now and then".

Giving personal views on the gadget, the official said such innovations should be tested and cleared in the developed countries instead of passing the risks on poor countries.

The Hydro-Air injector device manufactured by a Californian firm, Anderson and Harren Development Company is said to be on use in the USA, Britain and various African countries including Nigeria, Kenya, Malawi and Burundi.

It was tested on six different vehicles in the country including a government Landrover and an army truck early December between Dar es Salaam and Chalinze, about 80 kilometres away.

The initial tests showed up to 34 per cent fuel saving. The army truck which consumed 92.2 litres on the stretch without the device reduced consumption to 72.5 litres after fitting the device, according to official results.

The Dar es Salaam University's Institute for Production Innovation (IPI) says it has conducted on the road and bench tests on a Peugeot Saloon, Land Rover and a Volkswagen engine which proved 10 per cent fuel saving on the Land-Rover, power increase on the VW engine and less pinking on the Peugeot.

The IPI said in a statement that their tests also proved that no harm can be anticipated to an engine when introducing small quantities of water during operation.

Systems Video promoter Tom Karua has said they would appoint local agents in major towns to market an initial 2,000 devices after securing an import licence.

CSO: 4700/754

TANZANIAN TROOPS MAY BE SENT TO MOZAMBIQUE

AB211120 Paris AFP in English 1014 GMT 21 Feb 82

[Text] Salisbury, 21 Feb (AFP)--Tanzania troops may be sent to help the Mozambican Government in its fight against South African-backed rebels, a Zimbabwean newspaper reported today.

The national weekly SUNDAY MAIL, in a dispatch from its Maputo correspondent, said this was the likely consequence of the February 13 meeting between Presidents Samora Machel of Mozambique and Julius Nyerere of Tanzania in the northern Mozambique town of Nampula.

The official Mozambican News Agency reported at the time that the presidents had agreed to increase military and economic cooperation between their neighboring states on Africa's east coast.

The SUNDAY MAIL recalled that Tanzanian troops had been stationed in Mozambique during the guerrilla war in then-Rhodesia to guard key installations against Rhodesian attacks.

Tanzania has emerged as something of a regional military power. In 1979, it sent 20,000 troops and police into Uganda to oust Idi Amin, and more recently Mr Nyerere dispatched several hundred military advisers to train the defense force in the Seychelles. The SUNDAY MAIL said some of Mr Machels' units were with the Tanzanians in Uganda.

President Machel's government is currently fighting the Mozambique Resistance Movement (MNR), which is waging a guerrilla war with South African support in the central provinces of Manica and Sofala.

CSO: 4700/769

SIDA EXPERTS COMMEND DODOMA REGION AFFORESTATION PROJECTS

Dar es Salaam DAILY NEWS in English 2 Feb 82 p 3

[Article by Zephania Ubwani]

[Text]

SWEDISH experts have commended afforestation projects in Dodoma region and have proposed that villages should be involved more actively in tree planting.

Four SIDA forestry experts are on a tour of reafforestation activities carried out by the Capital Development Authority (CDA) in Dodoma and the village afforestation programme in select areas.

The team leader, Ndugu Lars Sandahl, spoke highly of reaforrestion efforts but said they should be undertaken by the villagers themselves in their areas instead of the Forestry Department.

The Forestry Department should confine their assistance to the distribution of seedlings and technical advise and leave the rest to the villagers.

The Swedish team was particularly impressed by the CDA nurseries and woodlots. The Authority's Director of Horticulture and Forestry, Ndugu T. Mtey told them that 2,820 hectares of land had been planted with trees in the last six years.

He said CDA's objective was to plant a total of 20,000 hectares with trees at the rate of 1,500 hectares annually.

The programme is however, handicapped by lack of funds to purchase equipment to till the land, drill boreholes for watering the seedlings and to cover operational costs of the bowsers for watering the plants.

The Swedish team left Dodoma for Morogoro after holding talks with the Dodoma Regional Development Director, Ndugu Godfriend Kileo. The RDD called for more Swedish assistance in afforestation to meet the fuelwood demand and to check land degradation.

Yesterday the team was expected to visit the Faculty of Agriculture, Forestry and Veterinary Science where SIDA is assisting in forestry activities.

According to a forestry official, the SIDA team is expected to hold consultative talks with high ranking officials of the Ministry of Natural resources and Tourism in Dar es Salaam on Wednesday. The talks would centre on Swedish aid to forestry development.

CSO: 4700/754

PAPER MILL'S EXPANSION PROGRAM TO TRIPLE OUTPUT

Dar es Salaam DAILY NEWS in English 3 Feb 82 p 1

[Article by Halima Shariff]

[Excerpt]

KIBO Paper Mill of Dar es Salaam will treble its daily production from the present 10 tonnes after the mill's expansion programme is completed by the end of this year, it was announced in the city yesterday.

The General Manager of the Tanzania Karatasi Associated Industries, Ndugu Daudi K. Mollel, said the expansion programme included the reinforcing of the flutting machinery and test liner.

He said this on the occasion of the 10th anniversary of Kibo Paper Industries Limited (KPIL) at the mill's plant along Pugu Road where Industries Minister Basil Mramba officially inaugurated Kibo Paper Mill.

The four-year old mill is part of KPIL.

Ndugu Mollel said the 25m/- expansion programme would also enable the mill to make white duplex board and white lined chipboard papers — both of which are new types of bright paper.

The mill, established at a cost of 32 million/- produces flutting and test liner papers used in making packaging materials for various items.

Ndugu Mollel said KPIL planned to produce 9,000 tonnes of four types of paper a year soon after expansion programme was completed, adding that the mill would then be capable of processing 30 tonnes of any type of paper a day.

He added: "Such production will save the country's some 30m/- in foreign exchange annually spent on paper imports."

The types of paper that KPIL expects to produce by then are flutting (2,400 tonnes), test liner (4,600/- tonnes), white duplex board (400 tonnes) and white lined chipboard (1,600 tonnes)

On raw materials, he said, the mill used 75 per cent of used paper from printing and packaging industries within the country and imported another 25 per cent pulp for making test liner papers.

He added that the mill would in future get the pulp from the Mufindi Paper Mill when the latter went into production. It is not yet known when the Mufindi mill would start operating.

Ndugu Mollel also said there were plans to transfer the corrugator from Chang'ombe to the Kibo paper Mill premises.

Such a transfer, he said, would enable the mill to save money now spent on fuel for boilers in both places and also facilitate the expansion of the packaging and multiwall production lines.

However, he said the two corrugator plants capable of producing 10,000 tonnes of corrugated boxes a year operates at 40 per cent for lack of enough raw materials.

Ndugu Mollel, who is also the Chairman of the KPIL Board of Directors, said there were also plans to instal two offset printing machines to serve a host of local companies.

CSO: 4700/754

COAL PILES UP AT ILIMA COLLIERY IN KYELA, MBEYA REGION

Dar es Salaam DAILY NEWS in English 1 Feb 82 p 1

[Text]

MORE than 7,000 tonnes of coal, worth some two million/- are piled-up in open air at the Ilima Colliery in Kyela, Mbeya region, because the State Mining Corporation (STAMICO) has allegedly failed to get customers.

Senior officials of the STAMICO-owned Ilima coal mine were quoted by Shihata as saying the coal was to have been bought by the Mbeya Cement Factory and the Mufindi Paper Factory but none of them had so far done so.

The Mbeya Cement Factory, built at Songwe, 20 kilometres west of Mbeya town and the Mufindi Paper Industry, in Iringa Region, were expected to use both coal and electricity when they start production.

The official said coal whose mining started in 1976, had accumulated over the years and was in danger of "getting burnt due to lack of proper storage facilities at the colliery."

They claimed that minor damages had accurred but could not reveal how much loss had been incurred.

The officials who reportedly dismissed "as not true" possibilities that the quality of the coal could be reduced by rains or the sun said however the coal could easily burn itself if it was poorly piled-up for a long period.

They admitted that STAMICO had not built proper storage facilities for coal at the colliery under assumptions that it would be sold out fast.

According to the officials, coal mining at Ilima has expanded to meet demands of the Mufindi Paper Factory now under construction and the Mbeya Cement Factory which has been completed but has been bogged down by electricity shortage.

Shihata, reported that authorities at the Mbeya Cement plant denied that they had placed orders for coal from Ilima.

Project Manager Q. D. Diyami was quoted as saying his firm had not entered into any contract with the Ilima coal mine for coal and could not be blamed or held responsible for the pile-up.

"We just recently wrote Ilima Colliery asking for quotations, their supply power and other conditions but even before they replied to us, we are already being blamed. How are we to shoulder the blame for Ilima's past productions and drawbacks?" he asked.

CSO: 4700/754

DARTEX TO BE DECENTRALIZED, WHOLESALE SHOPS SET UP

Dar es Salaam DAILY NEWS in English 30 Jan 82 p 1

[Article by Isaac Mruma]

[Text]

THE Dar es Salaam Textiles Trading Company (DARTEX) is to be decentralised and wholesale shops set up at Temeke and Kinondoni Districts under the programme, the Minister for Trade, Ndugu Ali Mchumo, said in Dar es Salaam yesterday.

Addressing DARTEX workers in the city, Ndugu Mchumo asked the company's authorities to liaise with leaders in the two districts and secure buildings to house the shops.

The decentralisation would smoothen textile distribution in the city and also ensure that DARTEX was not blamed everytime the normal distribution channels were disrupted, he explained.

All DARTEX wholesale shops are currently concentrated in Ilala District, and although each shop is designated to a particular district, it is often difficult to ascertain whether the textiles sold to individual retailers from one of the districts was really sent there, he said.

Ndugu Mchumo told the workers that all textile retailers dealing with DARTEX should be listed down and the lists submitted to allocation committees in the three districts in order to curb racketeering.

The decentralisation move would enable authorities to follow-up textiles sold to a particular retailer to see whether they had been sold in the right channels, he said.

Ndugu Mchumo, said he was on a routine tour of Board of Internal Trade (BIT) group companies, asked employees of National Trading companies and Regional Trading Companies (RTCs) to refrain from shoddy dealings with racketeers.

The workers should not be the source of complaints over malpractices in the distribution of textiles, the Minister cautioned.

He said complaints over the shortage of goods in the country were real and the government was striving to end the shortages.

This included stepping up production in industries, he said, adding that the government wanted to ensure that whatever little was produced was distributed along the established channels.

"I am not saying that the National Trading Companies and the RTCs are the sources of racketeering but I believe the goods that disappear while in our hands are in very small quantities", the Minister said.

"What I am saying is that despite this we must not be complacent. There could be one or two among us who could tarnish our name", Ndugu Mchumo said.

CSO: 4700/754

BRIEFS

GDR COOPERATION REVIEW--Tanzanian and German Democratic Republic (GDR) trade officials begin a one week round of talks in Dar es Salaam today to review economic and technical cooperation projects. The focus of the talks--based on the joint cooperation protocol--is expected to be the implementation of the 1981/82 working programme as well as exploration of new areas of trade exchange. [Text] [Dar es Salaam DAILY NEWS in English 2 Feb 82 p 1]

CANADIAN FIVE-YEAR GRANT--The Canadian Government will give Tanzania a 1.2 billion/- grant over a five-year period from the 1982-83 financial year. An agreement to this end was signed in Dar es Salaam yesterday between the Principal Secretary in the Ministry of Finance, Ndugu Fulgence Kazaura and the Canadian High Commissioner to Tanzania, Mr. Karl Johansen. The agreement climaxes six days of talks between government officials of the two countries. A statement issued after the talks said Canada's grant of 1,225m/- would be spent on projects under the Ministries of Communications and Transport; Water and Energy and Agriculture. These include rehabilitation of the central railway line, wheat farming, distribution of electric power and a spare parts and industrial tools project. Under the central line project, Canada will provide, among other things, experts, locomotives, wagons as well as repair and communications equipment. In the agricultural sector, the focus is on expansion of wheat farms under the National Agriculture and Food Corporation (NAFCO). [Text] [Dar es Salaam DAILY NEWS in English 1 Feb 82 p 1]

POLICE TRAINING PROGRAM--The Minister for Home Affairs, Brigadier Muhiddin Kimario, said over the weekend that Tanzania was embarking on an extensive specialised training programme for its police force to promote efficiency. Ndugu Kimario told reporters that such a programme would also include the establishment of ways of promoting effective co-operation between the police force and members of the public. The minister said the training would be held both in the country and overseas. Those going abroad would be trained in Canada, Britain, the German Democratic Republic (GDR), Yugoslavia and India. He indicated that the setting up of road-blocks had to some extent been exaggerated due to mis-direction. [Text] [Dar es Salaam DAILY NEWS in English 1 Feb 82 p 1]

CSO: 4700/754

BRIEFS

GHANAIANS KILL TOGOLESE CITIZENS--Two Togolese have just been killed by bullets fired by Ghanaians. One was a Togolese national resident in Ghana, Avorga Gondoh. He died from bullet wounds last Sunday, 7 February, in Kumasi, the capital of the Ashanti region in Ghana during incidents which resulted in several deaths. The second was a young Togolese resident of Lome who just died from bullet wounds he received at the border at Aflao. Mr Gondoh, 49-years old and the father of seven children, was killed when returning home in Kumasi after going to watch a soccer match. That day, incidents which resulted in several deaths broke out between the people and the Ghanaian Army. The Provisional National Defense Council, presided over by Flight Lt Jerry Rawlings, moreover decided to extend the curfew hours to 1800 in the Kumasi region after these clashes. Last 4 February, a 12-year-old pupil, Dossou Komlan, who was traveling close to the Ghana border in Lome after leaving school, was wounded by gunshots from Ghanaian border guards and died from these wounds. [Text] [AB192046 Lome Domestic Service in French 1900 GMT 19 Feb 82]

CSO: 4719/579

WALKER DENIES TALKS WITH PF LEADER

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 20 Feb 82 p 3

[Text] London--Zimbabwean MP Mr Dennis Walker said yesterday neither he nor his detained parliamentary colleague, Mr Wally Stuttaford, had ever spoken to Patriotic Front leader Mr Joshua Nkomo or any member of his party.

"Neither of us had any contact with the Patriotic Front people--not ever," he said when asked whether he thought the sacking of Mr Nkomo and other PF ministers from the coalition cabinet would make Mr Stuttafords' position more difficult.

Mr Stuttaford was detained on December 10 on suspicion of plotting against the government. Zimbabwe security authorities were reported to be seeking Mr Walker before he left the country two weeks ago.

Now in London he is trying to persuade the British Government to urge the Zimbabwe authorities either to release Mr Stuttaford or bring him to trial. The Foreign Office has said it will not intervene becuase Mr Stuttaford is not a British citizen.

When he arrived in London to deliver an appeal to Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, Mr Walker said all that he and Mr Stuttaford had done was to meet some members of Black political parties who had asked for advice about how the creation of a one-party state could be opposed.

"We did not initiate those contacts and there was no approach from the Patriotic Front" he said.

His next move would be to write to the Foreign Office within the next few days. "I will be giving details of how the Lancaster House Agreement has been overturned."

Mr Walker is arguing that the Zimbabwe Goverment has breached the Lancaster House Agreement by detaining Mr Stuttaford and that the British Government should therefore help obtain his release.

"It's rather strange that Mr Nkomo and others who are reported to have stored arms are still free and Wally Stuttaford, who never had any arms and never did anything illegal, is still in detention," he said.

Since he delivered his letter to Mrs Thatcher and met Foreign Office officials, he had not made any real progress in his campaign. "I'm trying to assess the next move," he said.

Mr Walker intends staying in England for the next two weeks, but he has not yet decided whether he will return to Zimbabwe.

CSO: 4700/756

WHITE MORALE DROPS AGAIN

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 19 Feb 82 p 4

[Article by Aida Parker]

[Text] White morale in Zimbabwe, already at zero point, has taken yet another plunge with the return to the Cabinet of the immensely controversial Dr Herbert Ushewokunze.

Formerly the Minister of Health, Dr Ushewokunze was summarily dismissed from Mr Mugabe's Cabinet last October. It was a move greeted with a heartfelt sigh of relief by the Whites.

A Natal University graduate and former head of the Zania terrorist medical corps, Dr Ushewokunze was, after the dismissal of Mr Edgar Tekere, easily the most radical member of the Zimbabwe Cabinet

He first hit the headlines when he initiated moves to have Zimbabwe's 8 000-odd spirit mediums and ngangas officially incorporated into the national health service, with consulting rooms attached to hospitals and clinics so that they could attend to their patients on the spot.

Dr Ushewokunze also caused deep concern among Christians in August last year when he advised students to beware of "Christian love", but rather to concentrate on "revolutionary love".

At the time of his dismissal, members of Mr Ian Smith's Republican Front accused Dr Ushewokunze of having driven more Whites away from the country than any other of his Zanu colleagues.

His return to the Cabinet is viewed as a certain indicator of a new and radical swing away from the former policy of "reconciliation".

It had for sometime been accepted that there would be another big exodus of Whites at the end of April, when a large number of short-term contracts run out.

Many of those who might have considered renewing these contracts will now, with the return of Dr Ushewokunze, decide to leave.

Another factor likely to speed up White departures is a forecast that, in an effort to curb spiralling inflation, Mr Mugabe will shortly apply blanket price controls on essential foodstuffs. Should this be done, it will hit White businessmen particularly hard.

CSO: 4700/756

BRIEFS

THREE S. AFRICAN AGENTS ARRESTED--The minister of state in the prime minister's office, Comrade Munangagwa, has disclosed that three agents sent into Zimbabwe from apartheid-ruled South Africa have been arrested. Comrade Munangagwa told the ZBC [Zimbabwe Broadcasting Corporation] in an interview that small groups of people trained in South Africa might be infiltrated into the country for acts of sabotage, but the security of Zimbabwe is such that it will deal with any subversive plans. The minister also outlined that minority political groups tried at some stage to regroup themselves to put up opposition to the government but very little was achieved. Comrade Munangagwa assured the nation that the National Army of Zimbabwe and the police are behind the government in its efforts to preserve law and order. [Text] [CA220630 Salisbury Domestic Service in English 0500 GMT 22 Feb 82]

CSO: 4700/766

END

JPRS 80260

8 March 1982

Sub-Saharan Africa Report

No. 2582

FBIS FOREIGN BROADCAST INFORMATION SERVICE

NOTE

JPRS publications contain information primarily from foreign newspapers, periodicals and books, but also from news agency transmissions and broadcasts. Materials from foreign-language sources are translated; those from English-language sources are transcribed or reprinted, with the original phrasing and other characteristics retained.

Headlines, editorial reports, and material enclosed in brackets [] are supplied by JPRS. Processing indicators such as [Text] or [Excerpt] in the first line of each item, or following the last line of a brief, indicate how the original information was processed. Where no processing indicator is given, the information was summarized or extracted.

Unfamiliar names rendered phonetically or transliterated are enclosed in parentheses. Words or names preceded by a question mark and enclosed in parentheses were not clear in the original but have been supplied as appropriate in context. Other unattributed parenthetical notes within the body of an item originate with the source. Times within items are as given by source.

The contents of this publication in no way represent the policies, views or attitudes of the U.S. Government.

PROCUREMENT OF PUBLICATIONS

JPRS publications may be ordered from the National Technical Information Service, Springfield, Virginia 22161. In ordering, it is recommended that the JPRS number, title, date and author, if applicable, of publication be cited.

Current JPRS publications are announced in Government Reports Announcements issued semi-monthly by the National Technical Information Service, and are listed in the Monthly Catalog of U.S. Government Publications issued by the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402.

Correspondence pertaining to matters other than procurement may be addressed to Joint Publications Research Service, 1000 North Glebe Road, Arlington, Virginia 22201.

JPRS 80260

8 March 1982

SUB-SAHARAN AFRICA REPORT

No. 2582

CONTENTS

INTER-AFRICAN AFFAIRS

Bank System of Assessing Risk Reviewed
(P.T.G. Gutmann; WEST AFRICA, 15 Feb 82) 1

Practical Needs of OAU Examined
(WEST AFRICA, 15 Feb 82) 5

Briefs
JMPR Elected To Chair Group 7

GABON

Bongo, BRGM Officials Discuss BRGM Activities
(Obame Emane; L'UNION, 22 Jan 82) 8

GHANA

Nigerian Newsmen Beaten by Ghanaian Soldiers
(AFRICA AFP, 2 Feb 82) 10

Briefs
GIHOC Workers To Be Reinstated 11
Ultimatum on Cocoa Evacuation 11
Assistant Health Secretaries Appointed 12
U.S. Embassy Accra Staff Reduction 12

MADAGASCAR

AKFM-KDRSM Support for Ratsiraka Voiced
(MADAGASCAR-MATIN, 19 Jan 82) 13

Briefs
Italy Cancels Debt 16

MOZAMBIQUE

Alleged Former PIDE Agent Implicated in MNR Activities
(Iain Christie; DOMINGO, 10 Jan 82) 17

Newsman Investigates MNR Background, History
(Migueis Lopes Junior; NOTICIAS, 27, 28, 29 Jan 82)..... 19

Nepotism Seen Continuing Following Independence
(Marcelo Panguana; DOMINGO, 10 Jan 82)..... 27

Cooperation With USSR During 1980 Reviewed
(DOMINGO, 10 Jan 82)..... 29

Rehabilitated Persons Said Entitled to Respect
(Editorial; DOMINGO, 3 Jan 82)..... 31

Briefs
GDR Medical Training Assistance 32
Security Ministry Sackings 32

NIGERIA

Commentary Asks Peace, Unity in Zimbabwe
(Lagos International Service, 19 Feb 82)..... 33

Commentary on Third World Conference in India
(Lagos International Service, 25 Feb 82)..... 35

Envoy to Switzerland Testifies on Corruption
(NAN, 25 Feb 82)..... 37

Briefs
Nigerians in Ghana 38
Ajackuta Steel Project 38
Creation of More States 38
Mugabe Said Becoming Dictator 39

SEYCHELLES

Briefs
Shuttle Ship to Mauritius 40

SIERRA LEONE

Bank Governor Examines State of Economy
(WEST AFRICA, 15 Feb 82)..... 41

TANZANIA

Importance of Small Industries in Economic Development Noted
(Editorial; UHURU, 17 Feb 82)..... 43

Need To Sell Part of Herds to National Agencies Stressed
(Editorial; UHURU, 18 Feb 82)..... 44

TOGO

Briefs
Soviet Cultural-Scientific Agreement 45

UGANDA

Briefs
PRC Rice Experts 46
Outgoing PRC Ambassador 46

ZAMBIA

Kaunda Says Leadership Crisis Will Not Occur
(TIMES OF ZAMBIA, 5 Feb 82) 47

MP Charges Leaders 'Groping in Dark for Solutions'
(TIMES OF ZAMBIA, 5 Feb 82) 48

MUZ Wins Salary Increase for Members, New Pension Plan
(TIMES OF ZAMBIA, 5 Feb 82) 49

Economic Report for 1981 Says Housing Targets of TNDP Will Not Be Met
(SUNDAY TIMES, 7 Feb 82) 50

MP Says Progress of Economic Reforms Must Be Reviewed
(TIMES OF ZAMBIA, 6 Feb 82) 51

Tazara Speeding Up Purchase of Locomotive Engines From FRG
(SUNDAY TIMES OF ZAMBIA, 7 Feb 82) 52

Rudnap Suez UBZ in International Arbitration Court
(DAILY MAIL, 8 Feb 82) 53

Finnish-Zambian Agreement Signed
(TIMES OF ZAMBIA, 6 Feb 82) 54

Senior Officials Cause Nitrogen Project Loss
(TIMES OF ZAMBIA, 6 Feb 82) 55

Fertilizer Shortage Causes Agricultural Crisis
(DAILY MAIL, 5 Feb 82) 56

Loan Saves Nation's Only Banana Plantation From Collapse
(TIMES OF ZAMBIA, 8 Feb 82) 57

ZNS Commandant Notes Problems Hampering ZNS Farms
(SUNDAY TIMES, 7 Feb 82) 58

Briefs
EEC Supplying Spare Parts 60
Zimbabwean Emigration 60
ZNEC Showed Loss in 1981 60

BANK SYSTEM OF ASSESSING RISK REVIEWED

London WEST AFRICA in English 15 Feb 82 p 440-43

[Article by P.T.G. Gutmann]

[Text] SINCE the oil price shock of 1973/74, the global current account has moved into sharp disequilibrium. Adding surpluses and deficits (without regard to sign) these imbalances have doubled from 1 per cent — 1½ per cent to 2 per cent — 3 per cent of the GNP of market economies, with a consequent rise in intermediation from official sources and the commercial financial markets. West African economies have been net receivers of financial flows, with virtually every economy in the region experiencing a series of current account deficits since 1973. Even Nigeria, a major oil exporter, has registered a cumulative deficit as a result of its high capacity to absorb imports.

West African countries having recourse to the syndicated bank eurocredit market include all those shown in the table. Ghana, whose eurocurrency borrowing is very small is also included, but the table omits other countries in the region whose euromarket borrowing is restricted to small amounts of short-term credits. In total their borrowing amounted to less than $370m. at the end of 1980. These small low-income economies have yet to tap the medium-term syndicated bank credit market for large-scale financial requirements and continue to rely on official (mainly concessional) lending to finance their current account deficits. Nevertheless, as indicated, such countries have some euromarket activity and they contribute to the large number of countries with which the private commercial banking community have dealings.

Unlike companies, countries cannot become bankrupt or go out of business, but on the other hand there is no international law to enforce repayment of debt. It is clearly important for banks to differentiate between individual countries in terms of creditworthiness, and to assess the risk in international as well as in domestic lending. The risk in country lending is that a sovereign borrower will become unwilling, or unable, to repay its international obligations when they fall due. An outright default would constitute the most extreme case of loss, but a moratorium on payments, or even a rescheduling of debt is costly, hence lenders seek to avoid such situations.

Risk Assessment Systems

The procedures used to evaluate country risk can be divided into four categories:

A "fully qualitative" approach is highly subjective and takes the form of an evaluation report whose content varies from country to country. The rationale for such an approach is that with a vast subject matter, inadequate and often unreliable data the most successful approach will be the one which allows most tolerance for dealing with the material.

A "structured qualitative" system imposes a standard format and introduces some kind of statistical analysis, but the impressionistic country report remains an essential component.

The "checklist" system goes further in attempting to provide an objective, reliable statistical method. It uses a scoring technique that assigns a rating to each country with respect to a number of prespecified variables. The ratings for the various indicators are then aggregated into a summary score for each country, using a common set of weights. Subjectivity features prominently in the evaluation of political and social factors, and in allocating weights to the variables selected.

The "fully mathematical" approach rejects such concepts as political risks, as being unquantifiable, and concentrates on a range of economic indicators.

Indicators of Credit Worthiness

Since it is impossible to assess all the possible sources of risk, the standard approach in all but the "fully qualitative" system is to focus on a few factors which experience has shown to be particularly relevant. Banks employ their own preferred technique to produce a structured analysis of country risk for use of those operating in the international sphere. Most systems include, in combination with other perhaps less frequently selected indicators, evaluations of some or all of the following:

1. The political/social situation
2. The external debt position
3. International reserves in relation to imports
4. Energy vulnerability
5. Structure of exports
6. The current account situation

The indicator of political stability attempts to assess the extent to which political problems may affect a country's ability to remain economically viable, particularly in terms of continuing to service its external debt. Problems in this area may arise due to a change in regime, with the new government refusing to honour obligations incurred previously; or because the political situation gives rise to such serious disruption that the economy suffers with consequent difficulties in meeting commitments. The type of government (democratic or totalitarian, left or right wing, military or civilian) is less important in this context than the country's record or prospects for stability.

A consideration of a country's external debt position provides a significant guide to its creditworthiness. Attention focuses on two key issues — trends in the debt service ratio and the burden on the economy of the outstanding debt in relation to GNP or total foreign earnings. The debt service ratio is defined as annual amortization plus interest payments on the external debt expressed as a percentage of receipts from goods and services exported in the same year. Although inter-country comparisons are not reliable (because different countries can support different service ratios) and problems exist with the data, this indicator undoubtedly provides a very useful measure of country risk. An indication of the extent to which existing debt may affect a country's ability to meet additional obligations can be gauged from the size of that debt in relation to foreign exchange earnings or GNP.

Another measure of a country's ability to continue to meet external commitments is the ratio of international reserves of gold and currency to imports. Such reserves are built up to act as a buffer in case of unexpected temporary difficulties or to meet future international obligations in general. A useful measure of the adequacy of reserves is the number of months' imports which can be paid for from existing holdings.

Events of recent years have highlighted the adverse consequences for countries which are highly dependent on external sources of energy, notably oil. Even if uninterrupted supplies can be secured by long-term contracts, the effects of sharp oil price rises can seriously impede economic progress. Clearly energy vulnerability – the degree of dependence on imported supplies — is a factor which must be taken into account in assessing a country's medium and long-term prospects. The possibility of developing alternative energy supplies particularly through the exploitation of indigenous resources will, of course, be given careful consideration in this context.

A country's export structure is another important indicator used in this type of analysis. Many countries depend upon one or two basic commodities, or on tourism, for a large proportion of their export earnings. In such cases, sharp fluctuations in export prices can expose economies to short-term external payments problems. Over a longer term, the growth of the export sector is an important element in determining the capacity of an economy to generate sufficient earnings to maintain debt-servicing.

The final indicator amongst this group of commonly used criteria focuses on the current account of the balance of payments. If this is in persistent high deficit in relation to an economy's resources (say in excess of 5 per cent of GNP) then the external financial situation of that country is clearly under pressure and gives cause for concern.

EUROMARKET AND CURRENT ACCOUNT POSITIONS OF SELECTED WEST AFRICAN COUNTRIES ($ million)

	end-1980 Deposits with banks	Borrowing from banks	Net Position*	Cumulative Current Account surplus/deficit (1974-80)
Angola	220	165	+ 55	n.a.
Cameroon	272	1,021	− 749	− 890
Congo	111	414	− 303	−1,036
Gabon	180	768	− 588	+ 795
Ghana	374	116	+ 258	− 304
Ivory Coast	686	2,688	−2,002	−4,301
Liberia	2,351	7,273	−4,922	n.a.
Niger	32	357	− 325	− 50 (1974-76)
Nigeria	5,571	3,358	+2,213	−2,964 (1974-81)
Senegal	143	333	− 190	− 310 (1974-77)
Togo	102	305	− 202	− 363
Zaire	796	1,079	− 283	n.a.
Other	453	368	+ 85	n.a.
Total West Africa	11,291	18,245	−6,954	n.a.

* + = country is a net creditor to banks;
− = country is a net debtor

Source: Bank for International Settlements for euromarket data; International Monetary Fund and own estimates for balance of payments data.

	Debt Service Ratio	Debt/ GNP ratio	Import Coverage	Current Account Deficit as % of GNP
Ivory Coast	25%	40%	Less than 2 weeks	15%
Malaysia	3.7%	17.6%	5.3 months	2.2%

These figures are estimates for 1980.

Ratings in West Africa

In recent issues two leading publications dealing with the international financial markets have produced their regular country risk league tables. The rankings which are not identical are shown in the table.

	Institutional Investor Ranking (1)	Euromoney Ranking (2)
Nigeria	43	32
Ivory Coast	63	41
Gabon	71	n.a
Senegal	78	50
Angola	87	48
Liberia	88	n.a.
Congo	92	42
Niger	n.a.	58
Zaire	102	n.a.

(1) September 1981 issue. 103 countries are included in the survey which is based on reponses from over 100 banks to a questionnaire.

(2) October 1981 issue. 58 countries are included in the survey. Ranking is based on spreads obtained on euromarket loans, taking volume and maturity into account.

In the light of table, it is reasonable to ask why the region's countries exhibit such a low global ranking. With few exceptions, they appear in the bottom quartile of the two sets of ratings. An examination of the criteria of creditworthiness, in relation to these countries provides the answer. Oil is one important factor. The presence of oil in exportable quantities, or the firm potential of significant oil output, keeps Angola, Nigeria, the Ivory Coast and Gabon in four of the top five places in the region. Because of their oil resources two of these four countries (Angola and Nigeria) do not perform badly on the financial criteria discussed earlier, but socio/political problems are also important and weigh against them. As far as the financial criteria themselves are concerned, the data relating to the Ivory Coast are used below as an example of how these indicators are employed. They are shown in comparison with those for Malaysia, a country which appears in the top 20 of the "Institutional Investor" survey and in the top 10 in "Euromoney's".

This table shows emphatically why on the key financial indicators the Ivory Coast ranks well below Malaysia in the assessment of bankers. As indicated earlier, the Ivory Coast has a fairly favourable political and energy profile. When these two factors are adverse, and the financial indicators are no better than those of the Ivory coast, then the ranking of a country will clearly be even lower. This is the case with many other countries in West Africa.

For banks these risk evaluations are of great importance in identifying prospective borrowers who are likely to encounter problems in meeting debt obligations: for borrowing countries their importance lies in the role they play in determining the availability and terms of finance.

CSO: 4700/802

PRACTICAL NEEDS OF OAU EXAMINED

London WEST AFRICA in English 15 Feb 82 p 419

[Text]

THE OUTCOME of last week's Organisation of African Unity committee meetings in Nairobi can hardly be described as a resounding success since the problems to which they addressed themselves seem almost as unresolved as before. But it is to the credit of the Organisation's members involved that a certain clarity has been introduced into some aspects of the two situations under discussion.

The first subject to be tackled was the plan to restore peace and stability to the Western Sahara, which was broadly agreed at last year's OAU summit meeting in Nairobi. This was, in simple terms, a ceasefire to be agreed between the Moroccans and Polisario, followed by a referendum in which the inhabitants of Western Sahara should be allowed to express their own wishes about their future, either as part of Morocco or as an independent state. But from there a simplicity has been notably lacking and the hit-and-run warfare has continued. Morocco said it would not withdraw its troops from the region during the poll, as the plan had stipulated, and has refused direct negotiations with the Polisario, which wants the referendum to include refugees who, they claim, fled from the fighting area to Algeria. The OAU plan would give votes based on a 1974 Spanish census which the Polisario says seriously underestimates the real population.

The purpose of the Committee meeting was to effect a practical compromise. It proposed the appointment of a commissioner to head an interim administration "at least one month before the ceasefire takes effect", and the presence in the Western Sahara of a joint United Nations and OAU team to make arrangements for the referendum. But the committee failed to break the deadlock over the first step: getting Morocco and Polisario to talk. Morocco flatly refuses to recognise the Polisario movement and insists that it could only talk with those whom it regards as the real powers involved — Algeria and Libya — who, Morocco claims, are merely using the Polisario guerrillas. Accepting the present stalemate, the committee has deputed President Daniel arap Moi of Kenya, the current OAU chairman, to embark upon what one OAU source called "shuttle diplomacy at the highest level". His task will be to seek to bring about the conditions for a ceasefire. This will be a considerable task, but if it can be achieved it will be a great boost to the status of the OAU, and also to that of President Moi.

The outlook is hardly rosy but an optimist can see some faint grounds for hope in a general, if not specific, sense. The meetings were held, and were well-attended — too often in the past, OAU meetings, other than summits, have seemed rather perfunctory affairs, for the record rather than achievement — and they observed their scheduled timetables. In both cases they have set forth the present status quo and this will make it very much easier for all the members of the OAU and for countries outside Africa which care about the problems to decide upon their own positions.

The second committee meeting was to discuss the progress of the OAU peace-keeping force in Chad — it might be more precise to say the plight of that force. As a start the force is much under its intended strength, since only Nigeria, Senegal and Zaire have actually committed troops to what was intended to be a six-nation force. Again, as a result of the damage which years of internecine war have done to the national infrastructure, the force is much more immobile than had been expected, which inevitably reduces its efficiency in policing the country. This also makes its operations much more expensive. The Secretary-General of the OAU told the committee that its expenses would require at least $160m. a year, a sum which he said that a continent as poor as Africa would have the greatest difficulty in raising. It has to be conceded that non-African sources have been more generous with verbal than practical support for the peace-keeping force but it could be that this attitude has been merely a reflection of the apparent attitude of most of the OAU's members.

It is recognised that there are certain awkward elements in the equation. For example, President Goukhouni Weddeye has been as intransigent in some ways as King Hassan of Morocco, and the involvement of Libya has not made all members feel easy. It has also blocked a possible source of finance. It is nevertheless unfair to leave everything to Nigeria, Senegal and Zaire as at present they appear to be doing.

The financial difficulties involved in maintaining the Chadian peacekeeping force had a direct relevance to proposals for the Western Sahara. They, too, include an OAU presence, admittedly in conjunction with a UN presence. If the OAU is to maintain any credibility its members will have to give it more practical, and that means financial, support; it has become a regular ritual at summit meetings to recite how far in arrears members' routine subscriptions have fallen.

If the countries of Africa will not give their own creation the necessary sinews to operate then they should bravely and openly reduce their aspirations for it. There is no doubt that the OAU has much to offer Africa and the world. But its credibility, efficacy, and claim to respect is undermined if it is constantly being required to aim too high. A few lower-level successes would help the OAU to attain the status that is applicable to such a body. But the rhetoric of politicians is a feeble ladder to climb. What is needed is practical support for attainable objectives.

CSO: 4700/802

BRIEFS

JMPR ELECTED TO CHAIR GROUP--The JMPR [Youth of the MPR], JMPLA [Youth Movement of the MPLA] and UJSC [Union of Congolese Socialist Youth] Tripartite deliberations which have been going on since yesterday in Kinshasa continue in a smooth manner. On the program today, the JMPR organized a big rally of solidarity with the youth of the Southern Africa Liberation Movement at its headquarters. All the Tripartite delegations participated in this rally during which citizen Zanda Buala Kalenba, the JMPR secretary general, reaffirmed the determination of the Zairian youths to give their total and unconditional support to our people who are still languishing under the yoke of colonialism, in accordance with the desire of the founding chairman of the MPR and president of the republic who does not spare any efforts for the total liberation of Africa, in his new capacity as the current president of JMPLA, UJSC and JMPR Tripartite movement. The JMPR secretary general stressed in addition that in view of the revolutionary drive within the Central African youth in this liberation struggle, the Zairian youths will do all in their power in order not to disappoint their counterparts during their term of office. One after another, the heads of delegation in turn expressed their gratitude respectively to President Denis Sassou-Nguesso, President Edouardo Dos Santos and President Mobutu Sese Seko for their desire to rally together for the consolidation of the secular bonds between the Congo, Angola and Zaire and for their contribution to efforts aimed at ensuring the total independence of Africa. [Text] [AB182024 Kinshasa Domestic Service in French 1800 GMT 18 Feb 82]

CSO: 4719/597

BONGO, BRGM OFFICIALS DISCUSS BRGM ACTIVITIES

Libreville L'UNION in French 22 Jan 82 pp 1,4

[Article by Obame Emane]

[Excerpts] Arriving in Libreville on Tuesday 19 January, Mr Jean Georges Audibert, president and general manager of the Bureau of Geological and Mineral Research (BRGM) met yesterday morning with Gabon President El Hadj Omar Bongo.

Matters related to mineral prospecting consequently made up the substance of the interview. Mr Audibert showed President Bongo the BRGM's working program for 1982, and the latest report on barite prospecting in the Nyanga region. The matter of training Gabonese prospectors and geologists, mainly in intensive practical courses for students at the National School of Advanced Engineering (ENSIL) in Libreville, was also touched on during the conversations.

Here, as in several other countries, mainly in Sub-Saharan African countries, the BRGM plays a vital role in exploring Gabon's geology and mineral wealth.

The BRGM makes special efforts to interest other French and foreign partners, as well as Gabonese companies like the Ogooué Mining Company (Comilog), in this research and exploration work. BRGM put up 20 percent of the capital for Comilog's mining subsidiary, Coframines.

BRGM also is a capital investor, along with Comilog, the government of Gabon, and other steel companies, in Somifer, which holds sizeable iron deposits in the Mekambi-Belinga region, but whose exploitation will get under way only when the railroad reaches that part of the country.

Putting its knowledge of Gabon and its scientific capabilities to use, BRGM in 1976 undertook a campaign of identification of other potential mineral sites in the South (Mayombe and Nyanga) and in the North (Monts de Cristal).

At present, BRMG is seeking to get state participation in as many instances as possible in these research syndicates.

As a result, the government, Comilog, BRGM and ELF-Gabon will work jointly in the exploitation of the barite deposit at Dourekiki, in Nyanga province, which was discovered back in the Sixties. The feasibility study for that deposit was conducted by the Koussou syndicate, formed by the Gabon government, Comilog, and BRGM. A number of promising indications of mineral deposits have been reported here, and Mr Jean Bertucat reports that they already amount to 1.2 billion tons.

The working plan for 1982, which is actually a continuation of last year's, calls for continuation of the prospecting plan out to 100 kilometers on either side of the railroad, and further research in connection with a possible spur of the Belinga iron range. Exploitation of the ore finds made during this exploratory campaign, headed by the BRGM and the National Geological Office, will of course be greatly facilitated when the Transgabonais Railroad comes through.

The hunt for gold in the primitive rock formations in the Eteke (Ngounie) region by the Or Eteke syndicate (Gabon 45 percent, COMUF 34 percent, and BRGM, 20 percent) is also on BRGM's list of activities for 1982. The goal is to find the mother lode of Eteke's gold (15 tons were mined from 1937 to 1954), and then exploit it as a shaft or open-pit mine.

6182

CSO: 4719/529

NIGERIAN NEWSMEN BEATEN BY GHANAIAN SOLDIERS

Paris AFRICA AFP in English 2 Feb 82 p 14

[Text] Lagos, February 1--The Nigerian Parliament today called on President Shehu Shagari to bring home Nigerians working in Ghana, following accusations from Accra that Nigeria was involved in a plot against the new Ghanaian military regime.

The motion demanding the recall--proposed by a member of President Shagari's National Party of Nigeria--also called on the Government to take urgent steps to avoid "any further molestation" of Nigerians in Ghana.

Last week Ghanaian media accused Britain, the United States, Togo, Niger and Cameroun of plotting to restore toppled Ghanaian President Hilla Limann. All denied the charges.

One opposition party member also urged President Shagari to expel the some half-a-million Ghanaians living in Nigeria, while a Unity Party supporter demanded a presidential statement on the situation.

Relations between Lagos and Accra have cooled noticeably since the New Year coup in Ghana. Nigeria's Embassy in Accra is now closed, and the Nigerian Government gave a distinctly frosty reception to a Ghanaian goodwill delegation last month.

According to the Nigerian TRIBUNE newspaper, five Nigerian journalists were wounded when they were severely beaten and threatened with death by Ghanaian soldiers in Accra on Wednesday.

The five special correspondents--two from the TRIBUNE and three from Nigerian television--were accused by the soldiers of being the first mercenaries sent by Nigeria to overthrow the new military regime, the newspaper said.

They were forced to spend three hours with their hands in the air and then were taken from their hotel to barracks in the Burma military camp on Accra's outskirts, the paper said, adding that they were later released by a superior officer who apologized.

A director of Nigerian television confirmed this information for Agence France-Presse.(A.F.P.)

CSO: 4700/749

BRIEFS

GIHOC WORKERS TO BE REINSTATED--Ghana Industrial Holding Corporation [GIHOC] workers who were dismissed by the deposed Limann administration are to be given letters of reinstatement in accordance with a Provisional National Defense Council [PNDC] directive. The management of the corporation has therefore been asked to withdraw immediately all letters of reengagement to the affected workers. This was announced by a member of the PNDC, Mr Amartey Kwei, when he inaugurated the People's Defense Committees [PDC] of nine divisions of the GIHOC based in Accra. He pointed out that by giving the affected workers letters of reengagement instead of reinstatement, the management is making the workers lose certain entitlements for the period they stayed at home and this must not be allowed to happen. On the question of back pay for such workers, Mr Kwei observed that apart from the GIHOC workers. A lot more people in other establishments as well as the people's armed forces and the police service suffered a similar fate under the previous government. It is therefore the intention of the PNDC to come out with a comprehensive policy that will take care of the back pay issue of all such workers once and for all. Mr Kwei advised officers of the PDCS to work within the guidelines and not to take the law into their own hands. He said it is only when both workers and management with mutual respect for each other's prerogatives that the interest of the nation could be best served. [Text] [AB181604 Accra Domestic Service in English 1400 GMT 18 Feb 82]

ULTIMATUM ON COCOA EVACUATION--The Cocoa Marketing Board [CMB] has been given up to 30 April to evacuate the 400,000 bags of cocoa locked up in the Brong-Ahafo region. Failure to comply with this directive will result in unpleasant consequences for the board. In addition, no worker of the board in the region will be allowed to resign before the ultimatum expires. The ultimatum was given by the regional secretary, Mr Sara-Mensah, at the joint inauguration of people's defense committees of the regional branches of the GBC [Ghana Broadcasting Corporation] PWD [Public Works Department] and the electricity and state construction corporations at Sunyani. He disclosed that as a result of the negligence of the CMB, Ghana was made to pay over $31 million for failing to fulfill her obligations to her overseas buyers. Mr Sara-Mensah wondered why the CMB complains of lack of trucks to evacuate cocoa but found it necessary to import luxury cars. He does not also understand why the board would complain of lack of labor while it employs 200 typists in the region for no work. [Text] [AB251232 Accra Domestic Service in English 1200 GMT 25 Feb 82]

ASSISTANT HEALTH SECRETARIES APPOINTED--Two provisional national defense council deputy secretaries for health have been appointed. They are Dr (Shikanatey) and Mr A.K.Y. (Koku Koku), assistant superintendent of police. According to an official statement, the appointments take immediate effect. [Text] [AB242231 Accra Domestic Service in English 2200 GMT 24 Feb 82]

U.S. EMBASSY ACCRA STAFF REDUCTION--The Association of Ghanaians in North America and the Ghana Community Association in Washington have suggested to the Provisional National Defense Council [PNDC] the formation of people's revolutionary committees to be attached to Ghana's diplomatic missions abroad. These committees would compile a list of all Ghanaians resident in those countries, their professions, those on government scholarships and those who desire to return home. A representative of the two associations, Mr Koffi Baffour Adae, made the suggestion at a news conference at the Burma camp today. He said large numbers of true Ghanaians are underemployed and exploited in foreign countries. Every effort should therefore be made now to bring them (?back home) to help sustain the revolution. Mr Baffour Adae revealed that several of such people in the United States are prepared to return to Ghana to be assigned to areas of their skills. He assured that the revolution is [words indistinct] the association suggested mobilization and political education of the people by a national commission for democracy and other vanguards of the revolution. Mr Baffour Adae stressed the need for a political ideology based on Ghana's cultural values to guide the revolution. He also suggested that a new cadre of diplomats be trained and sent out so that Ghana's domestic policy will be reflected in its foreign policy. In the meantime, the task assigned its missions abroad should be reveiwed. The PNDC should also demand that the staff of the U.S. Embassy in Ghana be reduced. [Text] [AB241920 Accra Domestic Service in English 1800 GMT 24 Feb 82]

CSO: 4700/790

AKFM-KDRSM SUPPORT FOR RATSIRAKA VOICED

Tananarive MADAGASCAR-MATIN in French 19 Jan 82 pp 1,2

[Text] The Congress Party for Malagasy Independence (AKFM) and the Democratic Committee to Support the Malagasy Revolution (KDRSM) will support and vote for Didier Ratsiraka.

A lot of decisions were made this weekend by the leaders of Pastor Richard Andriamanjato's united AKFM-KDRSM, as they met at Party headquarters on Avenue Lenin in Andravoahangy. In all, more than 120 people attended the meeting. In addition to the top men in the Central Committee, those from the Political Bureau and the Party's elected representatives in the People's National Assembly took part in the deliberations that lasted from 15 to 17 January.

The most important decision made unanimously during this session turned on a stirring appeal from the united AKFM-KDRSM to its members, as well as to the Malagasy people, to "hail whole-heartedly President Didier Ratsiraka's decision to stand as a candidate in the forthcoming presidential elections." Pastor Andriamanjato's party's admiration for the chief of state's performance during his first term -- due to expire this year -- is the basis for this expression of confidence in the president. The president's speech last Sunday, 10 January, was certainly a significant factor in this all-out endorsement.

The Economy

Other "important matters" were on the agenda at this session. Honor to whom honor is due, as the saying goes, since the economic situation is at the root of all our current sources of malaise (and of hope!) among the people, the CC-AKFM-KDRSM, after emphasizing the deep meaning rightly given to the concept of socialism (making all sectors of production available to the community; the importance of the proletariat's role in politics...) spoke of the goals to be won -- surely not overnight, but after a more or less lengthy period -- toward which, according to the AKFM-KDRSM, the achievements of the Malagasy Socialist Revolution even now are far from negligible.

The ongoing crisis in capitalism, "the source of many troubles in the Third World," was once more vehemently denounced by the AKFM-KDRSM as a "crisis which has led to the current rise in the cost of living in Madagascar, since the price of a barrel of crude oil has risen from $12.40 to $36.70 in 1981." Other figures cited by the AKFM-KDRSM to explain the current depression: while in 1979 the average annual increase in international trade was on the order of 6 percent, it has declined to a mere 1.5 percent last year.

The AKFM-KDRSM's Central Committee made a number of proposals, including the following: resume the dialogue aimed at designing a new world economic order; establish a South-to-South cooperation system; renewed discussion at the international level of the ideas first aired at the Havana conference of the non-aligned nations by Didier Ratsiraka, calling for the establishment of three funds.

The Plan

According to AKFM-KDRSM, implementation of a National Development Plan is vital to any nation determined to free itself from "capitalism." Pastor Andriamanjato actually suggests that a country like Madagascar should turn to planning experts from the great socialist countries, like the USSR and the GDR. His party hailed the president's decision to attach the planning ministry to the Office of the Presidency; the Cooperative movement must be expanded; a tighter and surer state grasp on business and industry is desirable.

Turning to finances, the CC feels that with Madagascar's withdrawal from the Franc Zone, other "parallel" measures should be taken. Development of economic ties with the socialist countries (Council for Mutual Economic Assistance) should be among the prime concerns of the leadership, the party feels. And the ties we have made with the IMF and the World Bank... must be pursued, but bearing always in mind our national sovereignty.

Mr Andriamanjato and his comrades on the CC are asking the Malagasy people to participate actively in the operation announced by the president in connection with "the national loan," one of the ways Didier Ratsiraka has devised "to pull Madagascar out of the present crisis."

Foreign Policy

The party's anti-Americanism, anti-imperialism, and anti-racism were reiterated during this CC session when its leaders moved on to deal with the major international issues of the day. U.S. policy in Asia, in Latin America, and in Africa was roundly denounced. In South Africa, for example, the AKFM-KDRSM scored American-South African connivance in South Africa's intent to attack its neighbors in Angola, Zambia, Mozambique, Zimbabwe, and Namibia. The latest events in the Seychelles, in the AKFM-KDRSM view, illustrate these "imperialist machinations ... not to mention their support to Israel and to a number of Arab nations." Events in Poland and Afghanistan are equally, according to Pastor Andriamanjato, "the work of the United States."

Getting back to the domestic situation -- much on everyone's mind with the presidential elections mere months away -- the leaders of the AKFM-KDRSM feel that the record of these 6 years of the socialist revolution in Madagascar are important indeed, and that their party was "one of the very first to urge the people to vote 'Yes' for President Didier Ratsiraka on 21 December 1975." The same thing happened after President Ratsiraka's announcement on 10 January that he would run in the next presidential elections. In a communique issued yesterday, the AKFM-KDRSM cites some of the president's "great achievements." It would be superfluous to recount them here. They are already common knowledge. They range from the establishment of the decentralized collectivities to the string of nationalization procedings since 1976 at the hands of the revolutionary government, via the evacuation of foreign bases, the withdrawal from the Franc Zone, our omni-directional" foreign policy, and particularly our opening to ... the East, etc.

6182

CSO: 4719/527

BRIEFS

ITALY CANCELS DEBT -- Mr Rakotovao Razakaboana, Minister for Finance and Planning (attached to the Presidency) received Italian Ambassador Armando Diaz late yesterday morning (Friday 8 January). The Italian diplomat had come primarily to convey his government's decision to cancel all payments of capital and interest for the years 1979, 1980, and 1981 due on the loan granted Madagascar in 1979. The total of unmet payments now stands at around 300 million Malagasy francs. As part of the same action, the sums in question will be made available in toto to the Malagasy government. [They are to be used] to finance purchase of products of Italian origin, to be selected according to Malagasy priorities and needs, and to satisfy several Italian suppliers guaranteed by the Italian Export Guaranty and Credit Corporation (SACE). Ambassador Diaz also informed the president that a gift of 2,000 tons of flour from the Italian government has just been laden aboard ship at the port of Ravenna, and is now en route to Madagascar. [Excerpt] [Tananarive MADAGASCAR-MATIN in French 9 Jan 82 pp 1, 2] 6182

ALLEGED FORMER PIDE AGENT IMPLICATED IN MNR ACTIVITIES

Maputo DOMINGO in Portuguese 10 Jan 82 p 7

[Article by Iain Christie]

[Text] A highly placed PIDE [Police for the Control of Foreigners and Defense of the State] official suspected of involvement in the assassination of Eduardo Mondlane is living in South Africa, where he is linked with the self-styled Mozambique National Resistance (MNR).

He is Casimiro Emerico Rosa Teles Jordao Monteiro, a professional killer who was born in Goa in 1920.

Monteiro was sentenced to 28 years in prison by a Portuguese court last July after his involvement in the assassination of Portuguese antifascist leader Humberto Delgado in February 1965 was proven. His whereabouts were unknown at the time, with the result that he was tried in absentia.

Last Sunday, however, a South African newspaper, the SUNDAY TIMES, revealed that Monteiro has been living in Johannesburg under an assumed name since 1975.

One of the newspaper's reporters was mentioned by several members of the MNR and by prominent PIDE officials as having tried to obtain an interview with the killer. But according to the newspaper, Monteiro refused to grant a face-to-face interview, saying that to do so might jeopardize the identity he had assumed since taking up residence in South Africa.

The secrecy surrounding Monteiro makes it difficult to determine his position in the MNR's hierarchy. But the South African Government, which controls the MNR, thinks highly of professionalism, and Monteiro is an extremely professional killer.

Monteiro began his career as a mercenary alongside Franco's fascists in the Spanish Civil War, and he seems to have worked as a professional killer in Goa after that. In 1964, he was taken to Lisbon to carry out an assassination, but was intercepted by PIDE, which gave him a job in December of that same year.

There are accusations that he worked for British intelligence in India during World War II. But the only existing proof of the connection between Monteiro and Great Britain is that Monteiro is wanted by the London police under the name of Emer Ullah on a murder charge.

Monteiro, a man with a black mustache, found a niche in history by firing three shots at the head of Portuguese antifascist leader Humberto Delgado in Spain in 1965. A few minutes later, he assassinated Delgado's Brazilian secretary, Arajarer Campos.

PIDE then sent him to Mozambique, where he became well known as the leader of the "Arrows," a special commando group.

In February 1969, Eduardo Chivambo Mondlane, FRELIMO's first chairman, was killed in Dar es Salaam by a bomb concealed in a book. The batteries for the Japanese-made bomb came from the Pfaf firm in Maputo, then known as Lourenco Marques.

Enemy agents who had infiltrated FRELIMO in Tanzania were probably involved in the assassination, but the operation was set up by PIDE.

There are indications that Casimiro Monteiro was the PIDE official in charge of the operation. The link was established by Antonio de Figueiredo, Humberto Delgado's representative in London after Delgado was forced into exile in 1959. Figueiredo worked as an antifascist journalist in Great Britain until the fall of fascism in Portugal in April 1974. He then returned to Portugal and was given access to the PIDE files uncovered by the Armed Forces Movement.

In January 1975, Figueiredo wrote in the London SUNDAY TIMES: "There is indirect evidence that he (Monteiro) sent the bomb that killed Eduardo Mondlane in Dar es Salaam in 1969."

Figueiredo ended his article by pointing out that the Armed Forces Movement had sent officers to Lourenco Marques to arrest Monteiro. "But he was alerted, and before the officers arrived, he had fled, leaving only rumors behind him. The most recent of those rumors suggests that he may be in America. Presumably, he intends to continue his career."

Casimiro Monteiro, subinspector in PIDE and a native of Pangim, Goa, has now resumed his career--living in South Africa and directing members of the self-styled Mozambique National Resistance.

11798
CSO: 4742/209

NEWSMAN INVESTIGATES MNR BACKGROUND, HISTORY

Maputo NOTICIAS in Portuguese 27, 28, 29 Jan 82

/Article by Migueis Lopes Junior describing South African Gordon Winter's book "Inside BOSS," published in London, 1981/

[27 Jan 82 p 1]

[Text] The Mozambique National Resistance (MNR) was established by the South African Army's chief of staff, Gen Magnus Malan, and his military espionage apparatus in cooperation with the Rhodesian secret service. That is one of the disclosures made by former South African secret agent Gordon Winter in his book entitled "Inside BOSS" [Bureau of State Security]. Published in London at the end of 1981 by Penguin Books, the book deals very thoroughly with the twists and turns of the Pretoria regime's civilian and military espionage. In the section concerned with the acts of sabotage and destabilization committed against Mozambique by the regime of apartheid, Winter supplies information making it possible to trace the manner in which the MNR's two "heads"--South Africa and Rhodesia--gradually became one following Zimbabwe's independence and the assumption of power by the current South African regime, which now has complete responsibility for the puppet MNR.

In chapter 40 of "Inside BOSS," which concerns "Secrets of Military Espionage," Winter claims to know "everything about that movement, because I was its number one propagandist."

The former South African secret agent also writes that "when I began to extol its (the MNR's) exploits in July 1977, it existed in name only."

Information now available pushes the date of its first activities even farther back and further emphasizes the role played by the Smith regime in the "birth" of that group for subversion and sabotage.

A high official in the Rhodesian "Special Branch"--the Salisbury regime's secret police until its overthrow--even asserted 2 years ago that at first, the MNR was the "entire responsibility" of that Rhodesian espionage department.

At the start of 1976, according to the same source, the fresh outbreak in Zimbabwe of armed struggle headed by ZANU--the reopening of the northeastern front (from Tete) and the opening of the Manica and Gaza fronts--was what triggered the orchestration of "resistance" by the Smith regime.

Certain South African Circles

The first MNR group had supposedly already been organized by 3 March of that year. It included blacks recruited from the army of the Rhodesian colonists and mercenaries.

According to other revelations by Smith's former secret agents, however, the MNR was supported by "certain South African government circles" at its very start.

Reading Gordon Winter's book enables one to establish more specifically that those "circles" were headed at the time (in 1976) by the current prime minister of South Africa, Pieter Botha (then minister of defense), and by Magnus Malan, then army chief of staff and now minister of defense.

As the leaders of the National Party's hardliners, they directly opposed Vorster's policy of detente and dialogue. They called for pure and uncompromising Boer "nationalism" and "criticized Vorster's and BOSS's blind submission to the dictates of the United States."

By skillful maneuvering, Botha was able to bring Vorster into disgrace and to assume power in 1978. To do so, he used South Africa's MI (Military Intelligence), a veritable secret police organization parallel to BOSS and one which Malan, Botha's partner, was building up in the meantime.

Everything indicates, therefore, that after 1975, the "certain South African circles" involved in the establishment of the MNR were none other than those supporting the Botha-Malan line.

The Rhodesian "brain" of the puppet MNR is said to have been supplanted and replaced by the South African "brain" as Botha and the MI gradually strengthened their power and eventually assumed leadership of apartheid's government in 1978. Simultaneously, Zimbabwe achieved its independence, and that event forced Pretoria to take full command of operations by the MNR's armed bands.

Picture Is Completed

Statements made by a number of bandits recruited for the South African organization and later captured in operations by the Mozambique Armed Forces confirm that story.

One of those bandits, Pietro Perino, stated that logistic support for the bandits who had infiltrated Mozambique came by helicopter from Rhodesia before that colony became independent. He said: "After that, it came from South Africa in Dakota aircraft and was dropped by parachute."

Another MNR agent captured in 1978--Jose Martins Gilberto, who had been a radio operator for the band at the Sitatonga Base in Gorongosa--said that his radio contacts were made "with Rhodesia at first, but toward the end they began to be made through South Africa."

At the Garagua Base--captured on 7 November of last year during Operation "Punishment," which was carried out by the FPLM [Popular Forces for the Liberation of Mozambique]--the army found abundant documentation that links the MNR and South Africa directly and beyond a shadow of a doubt.

For example, one report found at the base reported on talks held between the MNR and Colonel Van Nikert of the South African MI in Zoabostad on 25 October 1980. At that meeting, the sabotage plans established by Pretoria for the MNR to carry out in Mozambique's interior during 1981 were announced.

Lastly, there are also the 11 violations of Mozambique's airspace by South African aircraft between 1 December and 8 January of this year. As was revealed by Mozambican military sources at the time, most of the flights in question were intended to supply groups of MNR agents and mercenaries in Mozambique's interior.

In his book, Gordon Winter says that many acts of sabotage in Mozambique's interior were in fact carried out by the South African Army's "Reconnaissance Command ."

That shock unit is made up of commandos with special training. It was reportedly organized in August 1975.

The former South African secret agent also says in another passage that after the independence of Zimbabwe, the MNR "extended its sabotage and destabilization activities to that country as well."

After describing various moments in his career as "propagandist for the MNR," during which he wrote articles published in newspapers and magazines to lend credibility to the puppets, Winter goes on to examine closely the entire network of the MNR's internal agents. We will discuss that aspect in the next article in this series.

[28 Jan 82 p 1]

[Text] A prominent feature in the book "Inside BOSS," written by former South African secret agent Gordon Winter, is the Pretoria regime's attempts to erect a "smokescreen" to hide its direct responsibility in the establishment and maintenance of the MNR. One element of that cover, which was intended to give "credibility" to the sabotage and destabilization group, was the notorious Jorge Jardim, who became regrettably famous in Mozambique through his colonialist and neocolonialist activities as well as by the numerous war crimes for which he was responsible. Other elements in the smokescreen were various laudatory articles written by Winter and other journalists linked to apartheid's espionage services, as well as faked photographs and the use of various other renegades and traitors.

In his first direct reference to Jardim, Winter writes that he helped with an operation secretly carried out by Pretoria in collaboration with Smith's secret service. This was the installation, in Umtali, Rhodesia, of a powerful radio station calling itself the "Voice of Free Africa." It came to be known in Mozambique as "The Voice of Quizumba."

He says that both South African Military Intelligence (MI) and the Rhodesian secret service wanted to conceal as far as possible their "parenthood" in relation to the armed bands that they were organizing and financing to destabilize the People's Republic of Mozambique.

Jardim as "Cover Man"

For example, the MI reportedly began to "provide information" to South Africa's liberal press to the effect that Jardim was the secret organizer and financing agent of the MNR. But this happened before he was even contacted directly.

It was only later that Jardim began his regular visits to South Africa, arriving from Blantyre in Malawi to receive instructions from the MI.

Winter also says that at the time, he was the only one to succeed in interviewing Jorge Jardim, who used the false name of J. Pereira when he stayed at South African hotels.

Another man linked to Jardim is said to be a certain Leonel Carlos Ferreira, a Portuguese who has lived in Johannesburg since 1976. Ferreira received propaganda material from the MI with which to support the myth of the MNR's genuineness. The material was delivered to him by Ben du Perez, alias Ben Strauss, an MI operative who worked out of the Pynton Building in Pretoria.

Winter writes: "When I met Ferreira for the first time in 1977, he had an office for contacts on the 47th floor of the prestigious Carlton Center in Johannesburg. The sign on the door said 'Dale Carnegie South Africa, Ltd.' Inside, there was a big room full of school desks and a blackboard."

Schools for Mercenaries

At night, the desks were used for something very different than "teaching how to win friends and influence people," as the Dale Carnegie course proposed to do. It was in fact a "training" room for mercenaries who would be used by Pretoria in its various acts of aggression and provocation in the countries of southern Africa.

The former secret agent writes that similar classes were held at the Verneil Institute in downtown Johannesburg, a private secondary school run by a friend of Ferreira's named Antonio Ferronha. Dozens of Ferronha's "students" ended up, according to Winter, "as mercenaries in Angola."

In another passage of "Inside BOSS--South Africa's Secret Police," the author writes that the liaison agent between Pretoria's MI and himself for the distribution of supposed communiques from the MNR was an individual known as "Mr Leite."

Gordon Winter says: "By chance, I learned that he was actually Alvaro Recio, a Portuguese who had once lived in Mozambique."

The fact is that Alvaro Recio lived in what was then Lourenco Marques until just before the transitional government took over. In the period immediately before that, he had intensified his activities as one of Jardim's "political officers." First he took an active part in founding the Mozambique branch of the "Federalists," a neocolonial movement--linked to Spinola--which advocated the establishment of a "federation of states" between Portugal and its colonies. Later, he was behind the establishment of "Democratic Convergence," a scrap heap of miscellaneous puppet groups that Jardim desperately tried to present as an "alternative."

Recio "was a friend of Col Tony Diogo, a former member of the Portuguese PIDE [Police for the Control of Foreigners and Defense of the State] who had fled to South Africa and started working for the Mozambican Section at BOSS headquarters in Pretoria."

Alvaro Recio still lives in South Africa today, according to Winter: "and he probably is still active as Johannesburg's propaganda officer for the MNR."

Photographic "Proof"

The smokescreen that the South African Government was trying to put up around the MNR's origins to protect itself from discredit led to maneuvers in other areas. Gordon Winter himself, for example, wrote several "made-to-order" articles for that purpose.

In one of those maneuvers described by Winter, the MI "recruited between 10 and 20 blacks who had fled Mozambique for various reasons--political or criminal. Those men were brought together, given camouflage uniforms and weapons, and photographed 'training at secret bases in Mozambique's interior.' It was a lie. Those photographs," emphasizes Winter, "were taken a few miles outside Pretoria, where the terrain is similar to that in Mozambique."

Two of those photographs were then published by Winter in the South African English-language government newspaper, THE CITIZEN, on 18 August 1977. Another three falsified photographs were published the following day in the magazine TO THE POINT by a journalist named Jose Ramalho. Except for Winter, Ramalho was the only journalist to receive propaganda regularly concerning the MNR. Classified as being linked to BOSS, Jose Ramalho had lived in Mozambique in colonial times, where he worked for the newspaper NOTICIAS as an agent of Jorge Jardim and General Kaulza de Arriaga.

From what we were able to learn, the photographs were indeed published on the dates indicated in the newspapers and magazines mentioned. The two pictures accompanying this article [not included] were taken during the above-mentioned "picture-taking session" held in the vicinity of Pretoria, and they appeared in TO THE POINT in August 1977 along with an article by the above-mentioned Jose Ramalho.

More Names, More Plans

Another plan related by Winter concerned the contacts established by Pretoria with Domingos Arouca in Lisbon for the purpose of also using that renegade fugitive from Mozambique as a "smokescreen" for the MNR.

Other individuals mentioned by Winter as being linked to South Africa's operation for setting up the MNR are:

1. Manuel Xavier, of Greek or Italian origin and a friend of the mercenary John Banks, who fled Mozambique in 1974. He operated in BOSS's Mozambique Section in Pretoria.

2. "Big Bill" Jordan, an American who headed a company called IMCO. He was chief of the CIA's special operations against Mozambique in cooperation with BOSS.

3. Harry Edward Black of Sussex, Great Britain, a secret agent for South Africa's MI. A former RAF pilot, he reportedly started working for the MI in 1974.

4. Sidney Gordon Morrisey, an Irishman and an MI agent who headed an espionage front organization called the Friends of Mozambican Citizens Organization (FOMACO).

[29 Jan 82 p 1]

[Text] In the Pretoria government and within the National Party controlling that government, a secret war was being waged between Vorster and Botha. The aggression disguised by Vorster with his demagogic "dialogue" and "detente" has been pushed aside by Botha and the generals, who have prevailed with their hard line calling for direct intervention beyond South Africa's borders by the South African Army, whether concealed behind front organizations or not. Since we know that Botha has been linked from the start with the preparation and orchestration of sabotage groups for operations in southern Africa--and very particularly the MNR's group--it is of interest to continue tracing, on the basis of former secret agent Gordon Winter's book "Inside BOSS," a few little known details concerning the course of the "no-holds-barred" game played by South Africa's current prime minister and the way in which it brought him to power.

The convulsions that have occurred within the National Party, especially since 1975, are abundantly documented in the book.

John Vorster, head of the apartheid government at that time, was under considerable pressure from his party's rightwing members known as the "verkramptes," who wanted absolute priority--without beating around the bush and with no regard for the means employed--to go to the preservation of racist domination in South Africa. In agreement with the United States, Vorster had been pursuing a policy aimed at the same objectives, actually, but by different means. He had tried to build up an image as a "man of dialogue" and detente with Africa and always to obscure the traces of direct military intervention in neighboring territories.

U.S. "Betrayal"

He was challenged on the right by the hardliners headed by then Minister of Defense P.W. Botha and the latter's right-hand man, Gen Magnus Malan, then Armed Forces chief of staff in South Africa.

In mid-1975, the disagreement's visible "fuse" was lighted. Following persistent pressure by Kissinger and the CIA on Vorster and the latter's ally on questions of detente, Gen Hendrik Van Den Bergh, South Africa decided to invade Angola. In July 1975, thousands of South African soldiers and mercenaries, supported by armor, aircraft, and artillery, penetrated Angolan territory in an attempt to overthrow the MPLA and place UNITA-FNLA puppets in power. That military intervention was supported from the start by P.W. Botha, for whom that was the best kind of solution for resolving the crises of apartheid.

In the United States, however, Congress was still suffering a hangover from the Vietnam War, and it wound up vetoing Kissinger's attempts to increase its support for South Africa and--through South Africa--for UNITA and the FNLA.

On the other hand, the South Africans in the field were to encounter FAPLA [People's Armed Forces for the Liberation of Angola] troops backed up by experienced Cuban fighters whose help had been urgently requested by the MPLA. The South African Army suffered a resounding defeat and returned home in humiliation.

In South Africa, the military--among whom Botha had begun to establish strong ties--tried to lay the blame for the defeat on the "ineptitude of civilian politicians" and on "U.S. betrayal."

Botha and the MNR

John Vorster had been minister of police and prisons before becoming prime minister, and in the latter office, in alliance with Van Den Bergh, he commanded and beefed up the police forces, including BOSS. As minister of defense, Botha had strengthened the armed forces and his contacts with the leading generals, including Magnus Malan and the latter's Military Intelligence (MI) apparatus. The result was that during the first few years of its existence, the MNR plan, which from the start had been made the MI's responsibility through Malan, exceeded the limits placed on it by Vorster. After Botha came to power, puppet movements of the MNR type were to be openly transformed into actual detachments of the South African Army, using the same barracks and obeying a single hierarchy of South African officers.

In his secret war to take power, Botha made skillful use of the twists and turns of corruption prevailing in the government. One of his targets was the Department of Information, where Connie Mulder, head of the National Party's powerful Transvaal Section and one of Botha's serious rivals for the post of prime minister, pontificated.

The Department of Information was a cover for BOSS, and through it the South African Government engaged in propaganda and acquired weapons in various countries, thus bypassing the UN embargo. For its purposes, bribes had to be paid to the various middlemen. It was Mulder who supervised expenditures from the fund made available by the government for that purpose. Part of it was used to acquire the newspaper THE CITIZEN, and an attempt was also made to buy a newspaper in Washington.

In fiscal 1978-1979, the Department of Information reportedly spent 200 million rand (about 8 million contos) in purchases and related bribes. An investigating committee appointed under pressure from the National Party's rightwing was to discover, however, that about 40 million rand (about 1.6 million contos) were unaccounted for. That affair, known as the Muldergate scandal, led to Mulder's resignation, preceded by that of Vorster himself on 20 September 1978, when the "waves" from the case got dangerously close to him.

MI Against BOSS

On page 577 of his book, Gordon Winter discusses the entire "plan" organized by P.W. Botha "and his experts in Military Intelligence."

He says that a great deal of secret material was supplied by Botha to the "contact" reporter, Aida Parker of THE CITIZEN. She reportedly asked Winter to help her go through all the documents so she could write a series of articles.

After they had worked for over a month, the series appeared in the newspaper under the title "The U.S. Secret War Against South Africa."

Winter writes: "At the time, I knew that Aida had gotten most of her information from P.W. Botha and his men in Military Intelligence, but I still did not know Botha's secret motive--to overthrow Prime Minister Vorster and H.J. Van Den Bergh."

Under Van Den Bergh's leadership, BOSS had always maintained the best of relations with the CIA--to the point that South Africa's secret police organization had begun to do everything its U.S. counterpart told it to do. As a result, points out Winter, the government's rightwing extremists started a rebellion, clamoring that Vorster and Van Den Bergh were merely "kittens dominated by the CIA and nursing at the breast of that political hyena, Henry Kissinger."

One of Vorster's most ferocious opponents was P.W. Botha, who, according to Winter, "was left with mud all over his face when South Africa's intervention in Angola turned into a fiasco and the CIA withdrew, leaving South Africa to take all the blame."

Another reason for the antagonism between Botha and Vorster was said to be the fact that Military Intelligence had been pushed into the background when Van Den Bergh organized BOSS.

So as soon as Botha found out about the secret plans prepared by BOSS in collusion with the Department of Information, he called in some of his men from the MI, who made a careful investigation. When the time came--according to the author of "Inside BOSS"--he then supplied all that information to Aida Parker.

Botha Gambles and Wins

He then prepared for his next move, which consisted of gradually and regularly "releasing" information to the RAND DAILY MAIL and THE STAR--two South African "liberal" opposition newspapers--concerning the ins and outs of the Department of Information's plans. That is reportedly what gave rise to the famous Muldergate scandal, which led to John Vorster's downfall. H.J. Van Den Bergh resigned immediately after that, since without Vorster's protection, and being seriously implicated in the scandal, he would have been incriminated publicly.

As soon as P.W. Botha came to power, several of BOSS's responsibilities were taken over by the Department of Military Intelligence. Under Malan's baton, BOSS changed its name because of the onus of that name and is now called the DONS [Department of National Security].

For their part, the military are assuming much more direct control over policy under the protection of the Botha-Malan duo. Proof of that is seen in the growing role that Malan--now South Africa's minister of defense--has been playing in the matter of Namibia and in the organization, financing, and training of the MNR and other groups commanded by South Africa for the purpose of spreading destabilization in the independent countries of southern Africa.

11798
CSO: 4742/209

NEPOTISM SEEN CONTINUING FOLLOWING INDEPENDENCE

Maputo DOMINGO in Portuguese 10 Jan 82 p 13

[Commentary by Marcelo Panguana]

[Text] "He who has a mother has everything; he who has no cousins has nothing" (anonymous).

There was a time not long ago when it was better to have a "sponsor" than a degree in one's pocket. I have known many people who, with a sponsor and nothing else, made a career for themselves without troubling themselves with books.

Sponsors, whose reign is now being absorbed by the reign of others, were a good investment for those who never hesitated to exchange an upright reputation for opportunism.

They--the sponsors--swarmed in every latitude.

Catching one was a matter of having a "good sense of smell," and the rest was easy. All one had to do was put servility and shamelessness ahead of everything else. There was the sponsor acquired through marriage--preferably a manager, a managing partner, or even an administrator in one of those firms that bribed their way in swarms. All one had to do then was get married, and all the loot came later--the sewing machine, the porcelain dishes, a Philips operating on one of those rectangular Berec batteries, an Electrolux freezer, and, of course, the envelope concealed in a paternalistic handshake and containing, as the saying went at the time, "a good few thousand milreis."

There were also the baptismal sponsors for our brothers or youngest sons, and they would appear in their impressive Mercedes or Chevrolets to brighten the squalor of our Saturdays.

They arrived laden with gifts for the godson. They made up conversation, gesticulated, contrived smiles, and sat down at our tables without any formalities.

At night, after they had left, they went off to fraternize at impeccable cocktail parties somewhere in Sommerchield, while we chewed up the last package of chocolate "made in somewhere." "It's good; it came from abroad," is what they always told us after giving it to us.

And then we also relied on the others (sponsors too, of course): the head nurse, the assistant chief of police, the canteen owner, the butcher, or the company accountant. They were the necessary support for the outbreak of yellow fever, the strong back to protect us from the dirty tricks played by PIDE [Police for the Control of Foreigners and Defense of the State], the assurance of getting our grub without being cheated out of a single gram and the best cuts of meat for Easter, Christmas, New Year's Day, and other such things.

And that was how we lived. Guarded against the inclemencies of social life.

Nowadays, sponsors are growing scarce. They have faded away just like that. Either because the rotten cocktails were becoming increasingly indigestible or because the tropical climate is changing profoundly. They have gone away with their nostalgia for their social position, their Dodges, and their "orias."

The cousins!

That is the law of succession: the king is dead; long live the king!

Cousins are obviously no good as sponsors through marriage, and they are not suitable as baptismal sponsors. They are not suitable, but they "arrange" (never was a verb so highly prized) things--the cousin at the butcher shop arranges for us to have a few good kilograms of beefsteak for Wednesdays and Fridays. The cousin at the supermarket shakes loose a little rice, potatoes, and a few cans of milk which fortunately have not yet gone bad. In the neighborhood cooperative, a cousin of a cousin finds wheat and a few dozen eggs for us, and there we are with our problem of cakes for the weekend spree all solved. There is also the cousin that we could never get along with--but it is easy to make up--who has worked at the APIE [Administration of State Lands and Property] for 4 or 5 years. He is competent and honest, especially when it comes to arranging for us to have a Fiat with air-conditioning and everything. And so on.

This business with cousins is a fact, mainly for us who don't get beyond aunts and brothers when it comes to having kinfolks. And it gets worse when one realizes that arranging to have a cousin these days costs us a whale of a lot of money.

If it were only a matter of bribes that we had to cough up to "keep them interested."

The worst is the forced servility, the fake smile, and the ideological collusion. There are cousins who are hard to deal with--they are guys who have made it (as the saying goes): they are sophistical talkers and spiritual drink for the most unsuspecting. And many times a little inclined to dip into some illegal activity. Meanwhile, the deal for the new equipment is "delayed for new calculations."

And we live this way. Partly by seeing more clearly the subtleties of flattery. And partly with cousins who abuse the supposed family relationship to extort our scarce meticals from us.

11798
CSO: 4742/198

COOPERATION WITH USSR DURING 1980 REVIEWED

Maputo DOMINGO in Portuguese 10 Jan 82 p 2

[Text] According to an article by Soviet journalist O. Roz, the volume of trade between the People's Republic of Mozambique and the Soviet Union totaled about 1 billion meticals in 1980. His article reviews the results achieved over 4 years, the period that has passed since the Friendship and Cooperation Treaty was signed in Maputo in March 1977 by the two socialist countries.

It says in his article that the Soviet Union has supplied industrial equipment, light trucks and automobiles, harvesters, threshing machines, and rice harvesters, and that it imports traditional products such as tea and cashew nuts.

More than 500 Soviet experts are currently cooperating in the startup and development of 17 economic sectors in Mozambique. The volume of work done in 1980 was 3.5 times greater than that recorded the year before.

The most important sector for cooperation concerns the development of water and soil resources in the Limpopo Valley. It had been decided at the Third FRELIMO Congress to transform that area into the nation's granary with steady harvests.

The project involves the establishment of an irrigation zone covering 200,000 hectares, the setting up of agricultural and stockraising complexes, and the construction of dams to control floods and supply water to the inhabitants of Gaza Province.

According to O. Roz, Soviet geologists are exploring for nonferrous and rare metals, bauxite, gas, and coal. The Soviet Union will soon cooperate in the construction of a farm equipment plant, a shipbuilding complex, and shops for producing tractors and other farm equipment.

Pilots, hydrographers, and port specialists are still at work in the port of Maputo. Cooperation is also underway in the field of medical care, with 70 Soviet doctors working in Mozambique.

While industrial enterprises are being built, skilled cadres are also being trained to insure their normal operation. Currently operating in the People's Republic of Mozambique are five vocational training schools and one industrial-pedagogical school, all using teaching materials supplied by the Soviet Union.

A pioneering work in that field is the Matola Industrial School, which trains metalworkers, lathe operators, and other technicians. There are other technical schools, among them the one in Chove for farm equipment mechanics, those in Chimoio and Bilibiza, which train cadres for the Limpopo Valley, and the one in Tete, which trains future experts in energetics and workers for the extractive industry.

11798
CSO: 4742/198

REHABILITATED PERSONS SAID ENTITLED TO RESPECT

Maputo DOMINGO in Portuguese 3 Jan 82 p 3

[Editorial]

[Text] At the entrance to many workplaces about 2 years ago, there was a series of photographs calling the attention of the workers to the conduct of some of their colleagues.

The photographs were of people who had been directly involved with fascist repression during the colonial period.

The measure was adopted by the party because it was a daily experience to see such people vying for management jobs and to observe the corrupt and reationary use they frequently made of those positions.

These have been 2 years of observation--2 years in which, knowing that they were being closely watched, those Mozambicans had to make a clear choice: either for the revolution or against it.

Now that the time for stocktaking is here, it seems to us that the measure has had positive effects and that in the case of those individuals who have proven that they are now aware citizens of a fatherland that is building socialism, it is right to restore them to the positions to which their professional qualifications entitle them.

With their heads held high, they can again face their colleagues, relatives, and friends, since the past has now been buried and will not stand in the way again.

The others--those who chose the enemy--will also have to face the people. In the final analysis, it will be on the battlefields on which they are ending up as a result of total treason.

With them, it is necessary to be implacable: to remove them from our midst and prevent them by every means from reaching positions where their activity might endanger the victories won by our revolution.

11798
CSO: 4742/198

BRIEFS

GDR MEDICAL TRAINING ASSISTANCE--A group of 15 finalists and three instructors from the School of Medicine at the Eduardo Mondlane University will leave next Thursday for the GDR, where they will spend 22 days exchanging experiences with colleagues in that European socialist country. According to Emilio Duro and Alcino Ndeve, two finalists in the group, another purpose of the trip, in addition to the exchange of experiences, is to allow the medical graduates and the instructors from that school to gain direct acquaintance with health services in the country visited. The trip was organized by the OJM [Mozambique Youth Organization] Secretariat at the Eduardo Mondlane University and has been in preparation since the beginning of last year. Support for the group's trip came from a number of firms in Maputo, among them the LAM [Mozambique Airlines], MABOR, and Hoescht. A photoengraving firm produced a specially ordered vignette to mark the occasion. Other firms have also promised support, although concrete support has not been forthcoming to date. This trip follows the pattern of trip made to Zimbabwe last year by finalists from the same school. That first trip "was worth it," according to the persons with whom we spoke, who cited information provided by the individuals who participated in it. In preparation for this upcoming trip, the School of Medicine sponsored several events last year, including dances and other social events, street collections, and raffles. [Text] [Maputo DOMINGO in Portuguese 3 Jan 82 p 16] 11798

SECURITY MINISTRY SACKINGS--The Mozambique security ministry has announced the sacking of 309 employees of that state organ since the setting up of the department for control and discipline in 1980. According to the Mozambique news agency, quoting a note from the security ministry, these elements were sacked for many offenses, including abuse of power, corruption and disrespect for the citizens and laws of the People's Republic of Mozambique. The same source also points out that the sacking of these undesirable elements was partly due to the support of the people who have always cooperated with the department. [Text] [EA242302 Luanda Domestic Service in Portuguese 0500 GMT 24 Feb 82]

CSO: 4742/218

COMMENTARY ASKS PEACE, UNITY IN ZIMBABWE

AB191451 Lagos International Service in English 1130 GMT 19 Feb 82

[Station commentary]

[Text] Zimbabwe is a country of hope. It is the one country where Africans were rightly expected to demonstrate to the rest of the world their ability to live in peace and harmony in a multiracial society. This is in spite of the fact that the country is affected by multiple problems, greatly worsened by a lengthy civil strife that preceded the attainment of independence.

Since becoming a full nation, Zimbabwe, under the primership of Robert Mugabe, has made considerable progress in the effort to reconstruct the country's war-torn economy. But such efforts are being compromised by feuding between some of the country's leading political figures.

It will be recalled that the independence struggle, in its latter stages, was waged under the banner of the patriotic front which was under the joint leadership of Messrs Robert Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo. The two leaders were initially operating separate liberation struggles but later decided to pursue their common objective under a joint banner. It is therefore disheartening to note that the two leaders who suffered should contest the independent elections on separate tickets. The cause is obvious, each one of them wanted to be the prime minister of an independent Zimbabwe. However, after the elections, Mr Mugabe extended the olive branch to his former colleague by inviting Mr Nkomo's Zapu-pf party to join in the formation of a coalition government.

Mr Mugabe's action was a means of establishing good relations but, unfortunately, it did not help to mend the fences between the two arms of the patriotic front. The rift seems to have come to a head with accusations of arms dealing against Nkomo's Zapu. The arms in question are believed to included 1,000 rifles and pistols, mortars, explosives and machine-guns. Others are surface-to-air missiles, antitank rockets as well as ambulances and medical supplies. Besides these allegations, Mr Mugabe had some very harsh words for his former colleague. He promised to deal with the Zapu leader for alleged treachery, a promise on which he has already taken some action by taking over the farms where the arms were supposed to be hidden.

On his part, Mr Nkomo has denied the allegations of the prime minister. We are disturbed by the feud and war of words between the two patriotic front leaders. As the leaders of the coalition government, they should ordinarily be on good terms. Continued feuding will ruin the government with a daily spectacle which is not in the overall interest of the governed in any nation. Zimbabwe is presently a nation with many internal enemies. These are the leaders of the former white minority regime of Ian Smith who are quite determined to subvert the efforts of the present government. The obvious task before the Mugabe administration in Salisbury is to reconstruct the economy and build a democratic political base for the future growth and development of the country.

From all these indications, it seems that the two arms of the patriotic front are now incompatible. It would serve a more useful purpose if they now decided to go their separate ways. It is not proper for them to continue trading allegations while remaining part of the same government. This is an unhealthy political stiuation which could lead to worst happenings.

What Zimbabwe needs now is a peaceful and stable atmosphere that will encourage development. Feuding among the leadership is likely to unnecessarily divert attention and energy from this overriding need. Zimbabwe is a nation with great potential and its chances must not be wasted.

CSO: 4700/792

COMMENTARY ON THIRD WORLD CONFERENCE IN INDIA

AB251138 Lagos International Service in English 0830 GMT 25 Feb 82

[Wani Mberi commentary]

[Text] New Delhi, the Indian capital, this week hosted an economic conference of 44 third world countries. The conference which was convened at the instance of the Indian Government was intended as a follow-up to last October's summit meeting between representative leaders of developing and industrial nations in Cancum, Mexico. The 3-day confernece was attended by 17 countries from Asia, 14 from Africa and the rest from Latin America, with China participating as a special guest. The conference was expected to discuss vital issues of immediate concern to the developing world, such as energy, food and finance. Others were the strengthening of multilateral cooperation and design mechanisms for financing the development of energy resources in third world countries.

In a message to the conference, the UN secretary general, Javier Perez de Cuellar, noted that the economic and social development of third world countries must no longer remain the by-products of economic activities in the developing world. He added that that steadily worsening environment merely reinforces the compelling necessity for global negotiations to promote a more predictable and stable economic plan for development.

The Indian prime minister, Indira Gandhi, expressed similar sentiments in her opening address to the conference. In addition, she launched an attack on the rich nations, accusing them of raising walls of expectationism and called for immediate global negotiations to reverse the trend. Mrs Gandhi, speaking further, also noted that cooperation among developing countries was essential for and instrumental to the building of a new international economic order based on justice and equality.

She went on to outline a nine-point charter for a viable system of global economic cooperation. The charter proposed by Mrs Gandhi included accelerated food production in developing countries. Altering the present decline in the flow of assistance from developed to developing countries, and reversing protectionism in trade. The United States came under specific reference in the Indian premier's attack on rich nations.

The New Delhi conference was quite timely and necessary as developing countries needed an appropriate forum to review the outcome of the Cancum summit of last October. A review of Cancum will readily show that the meeting was inconclusive and the leaders failed to pay sufficient attention to the issues which necessitated their sojourn in Mexico. It was largely dominated by Mr Reagan, who wasted much of the time trying to lecture the other leaders about his viewpoint on international economic cooperation. The Cancum meeting was therefore a wasted effort, due to the important and dominant role the United States is expected to play in any meaningful effort toward redressing the disparitis of the present international economic order.

The prevailing inequalities in the world economy are consequent upon a trend which has taken several centuries to arrive at. It results from the exploitations of the colonial era and the sustained imperialist policies of the industrial countries. To revert this trend therefore would mean a significant measure of good will and commitment on the part of the leaders of the industrialized world. The protectionist policies which Mrs Gandhi spoke of are aimed at ensuring that the world economy continues to maintain global disparities. The most important aspect of the charter which Mrs Gandhi launched in New Delhi will lead to accelerated food production in the third world and the question of commodity prices. The desired changes can only be affected in such matters if there is cooperation and inter-dependence among developing countries.

CSO: 4700/792

ENVOY TO SWITZERLAND TESTIFIES ON CORRUPTION

AB250852 Lagos NAN in English 0805 GMT 25 Feb 82

[Text] Lagos, 24 Feb (NAN)--The Nigerian ambassador in Bern, Switzerland, Alhaji Yahaya Kande, said today in Lagos that he did not attend any secret meeting between officials of Societe Generale de Surveillance (SGS) and the chairman of the House Committee on Finance, Ralph Obioha.

Alhaji Yahaya, who was testifying before the panel set up by the house to probe allegations of corruption against members of the Finance Committee, said that the allegation made by his deputy, Ernest Allison, was false.

Mr Allison on Monday told the panel that Alhaji Yahaya attended the secret meeting but later walked out because he refused to take part in the deal.

The ambassador, however, told the panel that he learned about the alleged 400,000 naira pocket money given to the members of the committee at the Geneva airport through newspaper reports. The ambassador admitted that Mr Allison wrote a report on the four members of the Finance Committee and that he refused to sign because Mr Allison could not substantiate the wild allegations contained in it.

He told the panel that a program prepared by the embassy on SGS operations for the visiting Finance Committee members had caused a row between Mr Allison and Mr Obioha.

Alhaji Yahaya said that Mr Allison was erratic and lazy and had always quarreled with former Nigerian ambassadors to Switzerland. He said that relations between him and Mr Allison became strained when he refused to approve a quotation for lavish furniture for his new appointment. Part of the furniture, the ambassador said, included a gold bed, gold trimmed contains and silver-coated chairs, adding that the available resources at the embassy could not meet the cost of the items.

He said that as a result of the quarrel he wrote to the Ministry of External Affairs in Lagos and asked for Mr Allison's redeployment. Mr Allison had since been recalled to Nigeria.

On the allegation that the ambassador received a Mercedes Benz gift from the SGS, Alhaji Yahaya said that his new Mercedes 380 SEL was bought from allowances according to him and paid into his account by the federal government.

CSO: 4700/792

BRIEFS

NIGERIANS IN GHANA--The Nigerian leader, President Shehu Shagari, has given the assurance that the plight of Nigerians in Ghana will be kept under constant review. This was contained in a letter he sent to the house of representatives read today by the speaker, Mr Edwin Ume-ezeoke. In the letter, the president disclosed that the reported threats to the lives of Nigerians in Ghana did not warrant their mass deportation from that country. President Shehu Shagari expressed the hope that the Ghanaian authorities appreciated the implication of allowing a situation whereby the traditional relationship between Nigeria and Ghana will be allowed to deteriorate. He pointed out that a Nigerian aircraft promptly despatched to ensure the withdrawal of Nigerians wishing to return home flew back almost empty. The president also disclosed that Nigerian high commission in Ghana, which was temporary closed as a precautionary measure, has since resumed normal operations. The house of representatives had earlier this month written a letter to the president in which it expressed concern about the plight of Nigerians in Ghana and the need for measures to be taken to stop their further molestation and repatriation of those stranded. [Text] [AB181748 Lagos International Service in English 1630 GMT 18 Feb 82]

AJACKUTA STEEL PROJECT--The Soviet Union has assured the country that the ongoing Ajaokuta steel project will be completed on schedule by June next year. The assurance was given by the Russian minister charged with executing the project of the Ajaokuta steel plant in a message to his Nigerian counterpart, Malam Mama Ali Makele. The message was delivered to the minister by a Soviet delegation led by Yuriy N. (Kalakinokhov) in Lagos today. The Soviet minister also stated that they were pleased with the progress of work at the complex. Replying, Malam Mama Ali Makele expressed satisfaction over the existing cordial relations between Nigeria and the Soviet Union, adding that notable contributions have been made by officials of both countries to see to the successful completion of the project. The minister told the delegation that the nation was still anxious for the completion of the Ajaokuta project since the Alaja project had been commissioned. He assured the delegation that the government was doing all it could to solve the problems of accommodation and other feasibility studies for the speedy completion of the project. [Text] [AB190800 Lagos Domestic Service in English 2100 GMT 18 Feb 82]

CREATION OF MORE STATES--Lagos, 19 Feb (NAN)--The senate president, Dr Joseph Wayas, said yesterday in Lagos that the demand for the creation of more states could not disunite the country. He made the statement while receiving requests for the creation of four different states out of the present Kano state. The proposed states are new Kano, Tiga, Ghari and Lantai. Dr Wayas recalled that [words indistinct] of the country in the past was resolved by the creation of more states by the defunct military administration. He added that the difficulties posed by the constitutional provisions on the creation of states could be overcome. Representatives of the four proposed states also presented their demands to the speaker of the house of representatives, Chief Edwin Ume-ezeoke. This brought to six the number of requests for more states received at the National Assembly this week. Demands for the creation of Gugba and Katagun states were presented to both houses on Tuesday and Wednesday respectively. [Text] [AB191135 Lagos NAN in English 1110 GMT 19 Feb 82]

MUGABE SAID BECOMING DICTATOR--The DAILY STAR takes a look at events in Zimbabwe and says that Prime Minister Robert Mugabe is paving the way for a one-party system of government. According to the paper, the prime minister seems to have virtually relegated all the provisions of the independence constitution. For instance, it says, Mugabe has thrown Nkomo out of office along with three ministers of his party. The STAR is of the opinion that the Zimbabwean leader is assuming the posture of a dictator and therefore advises him to return to the political path of reason and sanity. In addition, the paper warned him not to return his country to another political eclipse and fratricidal war. [Press review] [Excerpt] [AB251130 Lagos International Service in English 0830 GMT 25 Feb 82]

CSO: 4700/793

BRIEFS

SHUTTLE SHIP TO MAURITIUS--This week shuttle service between Mauritius and Seychelles begins with the voyage of the "5 Juin" transporting 50 tons of copra, 50,000 coconuts and, eventually, a dozen tons of salted fish. On its return leg, the ship will bring 50 tons of potatoes, 15 tons onions, 20 tons of oil for Seycom [expansion unknown] and probably two containers of chickens and margarine. The "5 Juin" will make the roundtrip every 6-8 weeks. [Excerpts] [Victoria NATION in English 3 Feb 82 pp 1, 2]

CSO: 4719/609

BANK GOVERNOR EXAMINES STATE OF ECONOMY

London WEST AFRICA in English 15 Feb 82 p 420

[Text]

IN HIS ADDRESS at the annual Governor's Banquet in Freetown (substantial extracts from which appear on Page 444), Dr. J. S. Funna, Governor of the Bank of Sierra Leone, set forth, in the tradition of this occasion, the state of Sierra Leone's economy. It is not a happy picture, and Dr. Funna did not try to pretend that it is, but he did find encouragement in the fact that the government does now seem to have grasped the seriousness of the situation and accepted its responsibility to act positively to restrain the waste of national resources which has been permitted for far too long by a rather lax attitude to the proper form as laid down by statute law and administrative regulation. (An item in Dateline Africa, page 484, about oil prospecting off Sierra Leone is also cheering, though it should most certainly not be used as a foundation for dreams of national riches: the oil industry is an expensive form of gambling.)

The most significant part of Dr. Funna's speech, however, was probably that about agriculture. After pointing out that the Government's policy on rice prices — based almost entirely on a political response to the reactions of the urban population — has brought about a situation where Sierra Leone is seemingly unable to be self-sufficient in its own preferred staple food crop, Dr. Funna said:

"I have deliberately singled out the farmer, because I am firmly convinced that it is his assessment of the current and future prospects in agriculture, that constitutes the greatest incentive to increased output in the sector.

"It must be clear to the farmer and the potential investor in agriculture beyond reasonable doubt, and on the basis of proven experience and visible demonstration, that the cultivation of any crop in particular, and a concentration of his resources in the agricultural sector in general, is a paying and profitable concern."

This message is not new — similar sentiments have appeared in West Africa before now — but, until its consequences are accepted and positively applied by the Governments of West Africa (and nobody denies that this calls for an element of political courage, a willingness to look beyond re-election to remunerative office), it must be regularly stated.

Dr. Funna also had some valuable observations to offer about Integrated Rural Development Projects, to which the Government of Sierra Leone has devoted considerable care and for which it has sought much overseas aid.

"The first such project established in the eastern area in 1972. Since then a number of other integrated agricultural development projects have been established with the aim of covering the entire country through this approach. The quantum of resources invested in this sector is eloquent testimony to the existence of a strong enough political will to substantiate the rhetoric by corresponding action. By attempting under the umbrella of one project to cope not only with crop production but also the requirements of rural development generally, the integrated project has considerable conceptual and political appeal.

"It is pertinent to point out, however, that the main thrust of the integrated project approach during the 1970s was on the building of appropriate infrastructure in the form of feeder-roads, wells, market centres, health facilities, etc. The implication is that the proportion of total investment in integrated projects which has gone into financing crop production has been rather limited. In other words, by concentrating essentially on effecting qualitative improvements in subsistence production combined with somewhat low production targets, the impact of the integrated projects in food production remains quite limited."

Dr. Funna clearly implies that perhaps priorities have been misplaced, even in a project where rural development is an integral part of the title. Perhaps more encouragement to farmers to produce would have led to rather more self-help in developing necessary infrastructures, or would have persuaded commercial interests to offer some of the services needed. Keeping all the development within the frame-work of an official programme does not run the risk of leaving the civil servants too much the "masters" and the farmers and their families alienated from, rather than personally committed to, the process of development.

Dr. Funna was talking about projects in Sierra Leone — and it has to be conceded by even the severest critics that they have brought some progress to the areas where they have been established, though it may be less than was initially anticipated and which might have been achieved by different details of approach — but his basic message, a call for a more careful scrutiny of the application of this attractive concept, should be heeded elsewhere. Nigeria is a case in point. Several vast schemes, involving massive investment costs, are under way there but it is far from certain whether the yield on the cost is adequate.

For example, the building of the Tiga dam and irrigation canals for the Kano River irrigation project at Kaduna, the pilot project and the first 5,000 hectares of the scheme has already cost some ₦70m. Is the return on this money as good as it should be? As it could have been had it been spent on farming in some other way? What is going to be the return for more than ₦10,000 of investment per hectare of the Bakalori scheme? In agriculture it is often the case that small is more rewarding, as well as more beautiful, than big. Dr. Funna's suggestions deserve careful consideration in many places.

CSO: 4700/802

IMPORTANCE OF SMALL INDUSTRIES IN ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT NOTED

Dar es Salaam UHURU in Swahili 17 Feb 82 p 6

[Editorial: "Our Views"]

[Summary] The major work of developing small industries in the country was done during the last Five-Year Plan which began in fiscal year 1975-1976 and continued until 1980-1981. During this period the National Assembly authorized a total of 425.8 million Shillings for the development of small industries.

Among the work which has been done by the Small Industries Development Company [SIDO] is planning the establishment of small industries and providing advice about them, supplying economic and technical explanations, providing required training, helping in obtaining capital and credits, establishing small industrial districts and seeking markets. So far plans for 14 small industrial districts have been drawn up and the industrial districts of Dar es Salaam, Arusha and Songea have begun producing goods.

In the past it was difficult to obtain bank loans but SIDO has helped greatly in obtaining such loans. Also the government has now relaxed the conditions for loans for small industries and has made the National Bank of Commerce serve small industries. In rusha the day before yesterday the minister for industries, Basil Mramba, announced that the government has established a plan to export goods which are produced by small industries under the plan for economic survival. His explanation confirmed the importance of small industries in the national economy and community development. Thus it is necessary to try to expand this sector.

One aspect which must be stressed in the development of small industries is the need to establish them in villages. Although it is difficult to establish small industries in rural areas because of conditions there, including the lack of important services like electric power and water supply, the fact that many citizens live there means that the development of small industries must be directed toward them.

The quality of the goods which are produced by our small industries must also be given its importance. The success of small industries established in various parts of our country will be greater if their goods are of excellent quality and thus are purchased by the citizens and by purchasers in foreign markets.

Also it is necessary to have good plans for selling the goods produced by small industries in the country to avoid the possibility of a pileup of goods in one place when citizens in other areas are seeking such goods.

CSO: 4749/25

NEED TO SELL PART OF HERDS TO NATIONAL AGENCIES STRESSED

Dar es Salaam UHURU in Swahili 18 Feb 82 p 6

[Editorial: "Our Views"]

[Summary] On the third page of yesterday's issue of our newspaper there was a sad report noting 2,994 livestock deaths, including 2,908 cattle, 77 goats and nine sheep in Ikungi Subdistrict, Singida District last year. The cause of these deaths was the shortage of fodder brought about by drought.

We feel sympathy for the citizens who suffered losses as a result of this calamity which confronted Ikungi Subdistrict. We know that citizens are unable to prevent drought and that there is no individual to be blamed when drought confronts any part of our country.

But this calamity must be borne in mind by citizens with numerous herds since a shortage of fodder can cause them severe losses. Also often even without drought, an area can be confronted by a shortage of fodder if the herds are excessive. For this reason, herdsmen must bear in mind and act on the call to reduce their herds by selling 10 percent of them. It is clear that it is more profitable for herdsmen to reduce many of their herds by selling them to the national agencies concerned rather than to retain many herds. One benefit is that these citizens obtain money for various projects like constructing good housing and purchasing good clothing.

Also the herdsmen cannot know what year will have drought and what year will not. Therefore, reducing their herds will make it possible for the herdsmen to avoid many livestock deaths when drought causes a shortage of fodder.

Another matter to be borne in mind is that it is not only the herdsmen who benefit when they sell their herds but the whole nation. The contribution which is required from the livestock sector will be obtainable only if the herdsmen sell part of their herds to the agencies concerned so that the latter can sell these herds on foreign markets. In the national plan for economic survival, stockraising should make a considerable contribution to achieving the objective of obtaining foreign exchange.

CSO: 4749/24

BRIEFS

SOVIET CULTURAL-SCIENTIFIC AGREEMENT--On 11 February, a USSR-Togolese cultural and scientific agreement for 1981-82 was signed. According to the terms of the agreement the two nations will increase cooperation in the areas of training cadres, teaching, science, the arts and culture, sports and youth affairs, public health, information and intercity exchanges. [Excerpts] [Lome LA NOUVELLE MARCHE in French 12 Feb 82 pp 1, 4]

CSO: 4719/613

BRIEFS

PRC RICE EXPERTS--The 12-man Chinese rice-growing team of experts has paid a courtesy call on the district commissioner, Kabarole, Mr (Kabumburi), at his office in Fort Portal. They were going through Kabarole and proceeding to Asese on their last leg of surveying areas suitable for growing irrigated rice. [Excerpt] [EA090204 Kampala Domestic Service in English 1000 GMT 8 Feb 82]

OUTGOING PRC AMBASSADOR--The Chinese ambassador to Uganda, Mr Zhang Bochuan, who is shortly leaving the country on transfer, has called on the president, Dr Apollo Milton Obote, in his office in Kampala. During the meeting the president thanked the ambassador for all he did during his mission to sustain and promote the good relations existing between Uganda and China. He expressed the Uganda Government's appreciation to the Chinese Government for all the schemes they are carrying out in the country. The president looked forward to a continued friendly relationship and cooperation between the two countries. He assured Mr Bochuan that when his successor comes, the government would exchange similar cooperation to him as had been rendered to him. [Sentence as heard] the ambassador praised the good relationship between Uganda and China and he stressed that his successor would work toward the consolidation of that relationship. The meeting was attended by the minister of state for defense, Mr Peter Otai, and senior government officials. [Text] [EA250236 Kampala Domestic Service in English 1400 GMT 24 Feb 82]

CSO: 4700/793

KAUNDA SAYS LEADERSHIP CRISIS WILL NOT OCCUR

Lusaka TIMES OF ZAMBIA in English 5 Feb 82 p 1

[Excerpt]

THE leadership crisis in Zambia after Dr Kaunda is gone will not arise because the President is developing a group of people who will be able to take over.

Dr Kaunda said he was happy a leadership crisis in Zambia would not be a problem when the time comes. "It is not a kingdom, I cannot appoint somebody to take over from me."

He said this at a State House interview when he answered questions from New York-based James Namakajo of the Third World media services.

His task as President of the Party and leader of the nation was to appoint those who would do tasks for people and when they failed the necessary steps would be taken.

The President expressed confidence that by the end of this century Zambia would have moved great strides whether he was there or not.

"I will be a sad man if I will have to say Zambia did not move well because I was not there.

"I have developed ten or 20 people who will be able to take over from me. When I change leadership, I am giving people of Zambia chance to see how these people will perform."

Dr Kaunda said he was conscious of the inadequacies of the Party and its Government machinery.

CSO: 4700/751

MP CHARGES LEADERS 'GROPING IN DARK FOR SOLUTIONS'

Lusaka TIMES OF ZAMBIA in English 5 Feb 82 p 5

[Text] A MEMBER of Parliament charged yesterday that Party and Government leaders lacked rational planning and were now "gropping in the dark for solutions" after landing the country into calamity.

The charges were made in Parliament by Matero MP Mr Francis Nkhoma who rapped the Party and its Government's alleged contradictory policies.

The MP regretted that the problem in Third World countries was that presidents never heard of their mistakes as everyone said "your excellency things are well because of your dynamic leadership."

Mr Nkhoma cautioned people to be careful when they speak to their leaders and avoid situations where leaders were shielded from constructive criticism.

On contradictory policies, he said, while he was for incentives to encourage people for higher productivity, he felt some of the measures introduced in the recently-announced Budget were self-defeating.

He wondered why the Government in the Budget had introduced a measure of allowing exporting companies to retain 50 per cent of the foreign exchange they earned.

The MP asked the criteria used in coming up with this measure, as companies like Maamba Collieries which were non-exporting, saved the country a lot of foreign exchange by producing coal which otherwise would be imported from Zimbabwe.

He gave the example of the Zambia Sugar Company which could not export sugar because of directives from the Party and its Government asking it to fulfill local demands.

Foreign exchange should be given when need arose to a company.

He warned the Government against capital intensive labour through machinisation, saying this could not help it to generate the much-needed employment opportunities.

On export insurance aimed at encouraging companies to export, Mr Nkhoma said this was not necessary because the measure was dealing with effects and not causes. "People don't export because they have no goods as there is no foreign exchange for them to bring in the required raw materials."

He described as "myopic" the Government's intention to be asking companies for two-year taxation in one year.

Many companies were now facing a financial crisis and making them pay two-year tax within a year would lead to a situation where they remained with no more money to invest.

CSO: 4700/751

MUZ WINS SALARY INCREASE FOR MEMBERS, NEW PENSION PLAN

Lusaka TIMES OF ZAMBIA in English 5 Feb 82 p 5

[Excerpt] THE Mineworkers Union of Zambia has finally clinched a salary bonanza for its members after months of negotiations with the mining companies, it was learnt in Kitwe yesterday.

MUZ has also reached an agreement on the introduction of a new pension scheme for all its members to be implemented from April 1.

The Association of Copper Mining Employers (ACME) and MUZ yesterday announced in Kitwe that the joint review of the mining industry job evaluation system conducted by the two parties under the guidance of consultants had been completed.

The new pension scheme proposals were sent to MUZ consultants and legal experts overseas for scrutiny last year.

A joint statement signed by ACME secretary Mr David Sims and MUZ general secretary Mr John Sichone on Wednesday says the two teams are expected to meet next Thursday to complete "necessary formalities."

Mr Sichone refused to give details of the new salary structure or the new pension scheme, but said pay rises would be backdated to November 1, 1981.

He explained that because of "cumbersome" administrative procedures, it was not easy for all work to be completed in time for miners to be paid soon.

He appealed for patience among the workers as they would "definitely" get their new salaries.

On January 26 three branches of MUZ said they had rejected the new salary proposals by the mining companies through the Copper Mining Services Bureau last December.

Rokana and Chingola divisions of Nchanga Consolidated Copper Mines (NCCM) and Mufulira division of Roan Copper Mines said they were not happy with figures contained in the agreement.

MUZ instructed its branch officials last December to gauge up support for the new salaries by addressing its members and explain to them some details before accepting the pact.

The mining companies had given the union conditions on which the new wages would be based for implementation.

One of the major conditions the companies sounded to the union was that they should be prepared for some of their members to be laid off to justify huge salary increments for certain categories of MUZ represented workers such as foremen and shiftbosses underground.

The companies justified their demands in the face of growing copper production difficulties and maintained that they would not be in a position to award salary increases to workers without affecting the production of copper.

Some of the figures leaked to this newspaper during a MUZ sponsored meeting in Chingola last December showed that supervisors in the administrative Grade of A9, shiftbosses in P11 and technical foremen in T6 would be awarded salaries of up to K576 a month from the present maximum of K506 a month.

But if the union had agreed to sacrifice some of its members for a much higher pay for those grades the affected workers would have won K710 a month which the majority of expatriates used to receive before the mining companies gave them a rise in the middle of last year to K1,300 a month.

CSO: 4700/751

ECONOMIC REPORT FOR 1981 SAYS HOUSING TARGETS OF TNDP WILL NOT BE MET

Lusaka SUNDAY TIMES in English 7 Feb 82 p 7

[Text] THE economic report for 1981 has painted a bad picture for Zambia's housing needs and says the targets set out in the Third National Development Plan would not be met by the Party and its Government because of shoddy relevant policies.

The result of this would be the continued sprouting of squatter townships as people attempt to beat the housing shortage. "This situation does not lead to a realisation of our targets on housing," the report says.

It blamed the situation on local housing investment policies which were biased towards the construction of high and medium cost houses and calls for a change in attitude.

The TNDP envisaged the development of 391,000 new dwelling units representing a net investment of nearly K300 million for all types of housing and related infrastructures.

Of this amount, the Government had intended to finance K100 million for general housing purposes in the form of direct investment, loans and grants to district councils.

A total of K27 million was to be invested in institutional housing (for civil servants and other public workers) while financial institutions such as the Zambia National Building society were expected to provide a further K47 million for new houses and site and service schemes.

But because of inflation it had been realised that the Government would fail to meet its targets.

"When inflation is taken into consideration it becomes obvious that in terms of actual physical targets the number of housing units which has been realised falls short of the TNDP targets," the report says.

It attributes the situation to a critical shortage of funds which had dogged the central government over the past years when it had not been possible to devote substantial amounts to the district councils for construction of low cost housing.

In turn the councils had not been able to provide enough funds for the site and service schemes.

Last year only K10 million was provided to the councils in loans and grants for housing and infrastructural development against a TNDP target of K20 million.

The Government was unable to provide local authorities with annual subsidies on low cost rental housing.

This had resulted in local authorities running into financial problems because of deficits on rental housing accounts.

The report says that a total of K47 million was envisaged as direct investment by financial and parastatal institutions in the housing and real estate sector in 1981.

A sizeable portion of that investment would be in the construction of office accommodation and residential housing of all types.

"A notable feature of this investment in housing was its bias towards the construction of high and medium cost housing. Only a small portion of this investment found its way into low cost housing mainly by the National Housing Authority.

"It need not be emphasised that such a bias does not help the nation to realise its targets. A change in the attitude of these institutions (the Zambia National Building Society and public sector) with a view to the solution of the housing problem is necessary."

CSO: 4700/751

MP SAYS PROGRESS OF ECONOMIC REFORMS MUST BE REVIEWED

Lusaka TIMES OF ZAMBIA in English 6 Feb 82 p 1

[Excerpt] CHISAMBA Member of Parliament Mr Saul Chipwaya has called for a review of economic reforms to see if they have succeeded.

He told the House that most Shops in Lusaka, Ndola, Kitwe, Chipata and other places were in the hands of foreigners.

The aliens were taking away the country's money. He warned that "instead of economic reforms there will be economic revolt."

He urged Zambia to learn from other countries on the dangers of denying people the chance to take over the means of production.

It was not only shops which were in the hands of foreigners, but farms and law firms as well.

"We don't have ngwee coins in circulation now, perhaps the Minister of Finance can tell us how the coins have disappeared from the country."

CSO: 4700/751

TAZARA SPEEDING UP PURCHASE OF LOCOMOTIVE ENGINES FROM FRG

Lusaka SUNDAY TIMES OF ZAMBIA in English 7 Feb 82 p 7

[Text] TANZANIA-ZAMBIA Railway Authority (Tazara) operations are unsatisfactory because of lack of locomotives, Power, Transport and Communications Minister Mr Rajah Kunda confirmed in Lusaka.

But the company has embarked on a programme to increase locomotives to improve the operations of the jointly owned railway line.

Tazara has contracted two West German firms — Krupp of Essen and Friedrichshafen to supply locomotive engines while the Chinese government has given the organisation spare parts.

"We are speeding up the purchase of locomotive engines from funds by West Germany to improve the operations," Mr Kunda said.

He explained that most of the engines which Tazara started with were not operating to the company's satisfaction.

Last month Presidents Kaunda and Julius Nyerere of Tanzania met in Mbala to discuss among other things Tazara operations.

The two leaders acknowledged that some joint ventures were dogged by administrative problems.

They pledged to revive bilateral economic links and effectively tackle joint ventures like Tazara.

Mr Kunda declined to comment on the Zambia-Tanzania Road Services (Zamtan), reported to be making losses after the reopening of the southern routes.

Both Tazara and Zamtan were Zambia's life lines to the sea after the country closed the border with former Rhodesia. But in recent years the two companies have been operating far below capacity.

Accordig to the 1981 economic report, cargo on the Dar es Salaam route has dropped by 16 per cent.

The Zimbabwe route is now playing a significant role in the haulage of international traffic for imports and exports.

CSO: 4700/751

RUDNAP SUES UBZ IN INTERNATIONAL ARBITRATION COURT

Lusaka DAILY MAIL in English 8 Feb 82 p 1

[Excerpt] Rudnap agents for the Yugoslav-made Dubrava buses have sued the United Bus Company of Zambia (UBZ) to the international arbitration court for non-payment of about K5 million owed to it, informed sources confirmed in Lusaka yesterday.

UBZ has been importing Dubrava buses from Yugoslavia since 1973 and sources said some of the buses have not been paid for due to foreign exchange constraints.

Three other international companies, Neoplan of West Germany, Fiat of Italy and Tata of India, have also threatened legal action if UBZ does not pay for the buses they have acquired.

UBZ, however, is fighting hard for the case not to go into court because the implications are "too ghastly to contemplate," said a company source.

"We are trying to settle the problem with Rudnap out of court," he said.

UBZ managing director, Mr Robert Chomba said it was not the fault of UBZ that the money has not been paid. He said the matter concerned ZIMCO and the Ministry of Finance, adding, "UBZ does not acquire buses of their own."

He admitted the company owed money to many international firms and not Rudnap alone.

Finance Minister, Mr Kebby Musokotwane said he would only give the figures and facts after going through the files.

Dubrava urgently needs the money for their expansion programme in order to produce more buses for local and export markets. The money owed to the company has been outstanding for several years.

According to sources at Tata, the company ordered three buses worth about K140,000 at the request of UBZ but when the buses arrived, UBZ said they had requested for luxury coach buses and not ordinary city buses.

"But the official UBZ order did not state that we should provide luxury coach buses. Since they have indicated they are not willing to pay, we have said we would take the matter further to get what belongs to us," he said.

CSO: 4700/751

FINNISH-ZAMBIAN AGREEMENT SIGNED

Lusaka TIMES OF ZAMBIA in English 6 Feb 82 p 5

[Text] ZAMBIA and Finland have signed an agreement under which Helsinki will provide K2 million for the Western Province Cooperative Union (WPCU).

The accord was signed for Zambia yesterday by director-general of the National Commission for Development Planning Dr Leonard Chivuno, and Finnish ambassador to Zambia Mr Eric Hellkvist who signed for his country.

Mr Hellkvist said the scope of the Finnish-Zambia development cooperation had expanded gradually and the total frame for the planning period 1982-84 amounted to K32 million.

The K2 million would be drawn from the K32 million for allocation towards the strengthening of the WPCU.

Under the agreement the Finnish government is expected to help in the strengthening of the union in form of technical personnel, training and consultative services, equipment and materials.

Mr Hellkvist said: "We are convinced this contribution will be used in the best possible way."

Apart from the cooperation between the two nations, the two governments had successfully worked together in agriculture, forestry training and education.

The results had been encouraging and evidenced in the cordial relations that already exist between the two countries.

In reply, Dr Chivuno thanked the Finnish government for the K2 million grant to help the WPCU in fields it could not afford to develop by itself.

CSO: 4700/751

SENIOR OFFICIALS CAUSE NITROGEN PROJECT LOSS

Lusaka TIMES OF ZAMBIA in English 6 Feb 82 p 5

[Excerpt] ZAMBIA has lost millions of Kwacha over the K300 million Nitrogen Chemicals project because some senior Government officials flouted tender procedures, according to reliable sources.

The sources disclosed that recommendations from the Indeco board for awarding the tend. to the lowest bidder had allegedly been ignored by the Cabinet after manoeuvres from senior officials in the Government.

In 1974 Indeco called for tenders for the expansion plant at Nitrogen Chemicals and the job was subsequently given to a West German firm for K76 million the following year.

But the sources said according to tender documents three international companies had been short-listed by the Indeco board with a recommendation that the job should be given to Mont Edson of Italy which had offered the best terms.

Humphreys and Glasgow of Britain were second best while Kniockner of West Germany who finally won the bid had been placed third. The job was to have been completed within three years but was only finished late last year at an escalated price.

An Indeco spokesman tacitly admitted that Indeco board recommendations had been ignored and the tender procedures were waived.

During Times of Zambia investigations it was learnt that the tender still remained public documents and would be inspected at Indeco headquarters. But requests to Indeco for inspecting them would not be granted.

When pressed for a comment on how much each firm had quoted for, the Indeco spokesman said:

"A number of international companies tendered—three companies which are internationally well known were short listed." He did not give the names of the firms but did not dispute the list with the Times of Zambia.

"The project was significant to the nation and was going to have a great impact on the agrarian revolution. The Indeco board thought it prudent to seek the approval of Cabinet office to award the contract."

The sources said after the Indeco board had prepared proposals an official at the Bank of Zambia manoeuvred with a senior Government official to have tender procedures waived so that the lowest bidder did not get the job.

Dissatisfaction had been expressed within Cabinet over the issue and an attempt was made to raise a complaint over slow progress to West German officials in June 1978 during the visit to Zambia of Chancellor Helmut Schmidt.

The Germans are said to have refused to discuss the affairs of a private firm.

At the Central Supply and Tender Board acting secretary Mr J.W. Tailashi would not say how much each firm had quoted for, and referred all inquiries to Indeco who retained the documents.

CSO: 4700/471

FERTILIZER SHORTAGE CAUSES AGRICULTURAL CRISIS

Lusaka DAILY MAIL in English 5 Feb 82 p 5

[Text] The country's agricultural industry is in a crisis in view of the acute shortage of top dressing fertilizer which has mainly affected the Southern, Copperbelt, Northern and Eastern Provinces.

National Agricultural and Marketing Board general manager, Mr George Chabwera said at a Press conference yesterday that the acute shortage has been due to increased demand for the commodity, lack of foreign exchange to import urea and the inability by Kafue Nitrogen Chemicals to produce more ammonium nitrate.

He said the overall agricultural pictures was "gloomy" and the yield for this year would be greatly affected.

"This pains me very greatly especially that farmers have responded to the Party and Government's call to grow more food. We are however, inquiring from neighbouring countries if they have top dressing fertilizer which we can use," he said.

He said wheat and vegetable farmers whose planting season is March would be greatly affected since 84,000 tonnes of urea for basal dressing has not come into the country.

A Saudi Arabian firm, which was awarded the tender to bring in the fertilizer by the Central Supply and Tender Board had done nothing about it. No letters of credit have been opened.

Namboard had budgeted for 60,000 tonnes of fertilizer this year but the demand and NCZ's inability to supply the board with the annual 25,000 tonnes of ammonium nitrate are some of the reasons which have brought about this crisis. Namboard only received 9,000 tonnes of ammonium nitrate from NCZ.

Mr Chabwera, however, said to avert a more serious crisis, Namboard has started giving farmers sulphate of ammonia for top dressing although it is not recommended because it tends to add more acid to soils.

"In view of the shortage, Mount Makulu has approved that farmers should use whatever is available. Some farmers have also been using basal dressing fertilizer which has a higher nitrogen to top dress their crops," he said.

The general manager said what was upsetting was that after farmers had responded to the government's call to grow more food, the country has been caught in a paradoxical situation whereby it is unable to import fertilizer due to the shortage of foreign exchange.

However, about 4,000 tonnes of urea is currently marooned in Mozambique and it is hoped that some of it will soon be brought into the country by Contract Haulage.

Mr Chabwera appealed to Zambia Railways to help avert the crisis by providing wagons to transport urea when it arrives in the country to the affected provinces.

CSO: 4700/751

LOAN SAVES NATION'S ONLY BANANA PLANTATION FROM COLLAPSE

Lusaka TIMES OF ZAMBIA in English 8 Feb 82 p 1

[Excerpt] The Agricultural Finance Company has released K70,000 to resuscitate the Mununshi banana scheme in Luapula Province, the area's Member of the Central Committee Mrs Mary Fulano confirmed yesterday.

Out of the amount, K50,000 will be used to buy fertiliser and K20,000 for irrigation pipes.

The money has saved Zambia's only banana plantation from collapse.

Mrs Fulano said AFC released the money on January 29. She has received a letter from AFC head office in Lusaka confirming the availability of the funds.

The K50,000 was already in the province and the K20,000 had been given to the African Farming Equipment (AFE) to supply irrigation pipes.

She was grateful to AFC for coming to the aid of the scheme and promised work on the plantation which had been at a stand still would resume soon.

"We are hopeful that planting will start before the end of rainy season and work at the scheme should go into full swing."

Mununshi banana scheme is supposed to produce high quality bananas for local consumption as well as for export through out the year.

Last month Mrs Fulano was concerned over the failure by AFC to release the funds for revamping the plantation.

Established in 1967 on an area of 160 hectares, the plantation's production halted two years ago because of financial problems.

Production then had dropped from 20 tonnes a hectare in 1973 to three tonnes a hectare in 1979 at an "uncontrolled" average rate of 3.4 tonnes a hectare annually through old age and disease.

CSO: 4700/751

ZNS COMMANDANT NOTES PROBLEMS HAMPERING ZNS FARMS

Lusaka SUNDAY TIMES in English 7 Feb 82 p 1

[Excerpt] Operations of the Zambia National Service farms--the lynchpin of the ambitious K400 million operation food programme--have been hampered by lack of finance, qualified personnel and compounded by sophisticated equipment which local manpower are unable to handle.

ZNS commandant Brigadier-General Tom Fara said this yesterday when Prime Minister Mundia toured the service's airport farm in Lusaka yesterday.

General Fara said most of the farms under the national service had been affected by lack of equipment and the situation had been aggravated by delays by the Government in releasing funds.

"For a long time there has not been enough equipment and the farms have run into difficulties."

Some of the equipment, which had been brought into the country was too sophisticated for the ZNS recruits to operate and courses would be held shortly to teach them how to use the machines and their repair.

Almost all the machinery like tractors are from socialist bloc countries.

Referring to the operation food production plan, General Fara said: "It is our intention that given the necessary tools and support, we shall try to do our best."

The Government should work out measures to make it easier for the Zambia National Service to buy farm equipment and implements.

"In farming, money is necessary and it should be there when it is needed. Delays can make a lot of difference," General Fara said.

Mr Mundia--who was accompanied by Member of the Central Committee for Lusaka Province, Mr Fines Bulawayo and other Party and Government leaders--said the Party was aware of the problems which the ZNS and similar institutions were facing.

There were plans to establish a revolving fund from which they would draw money, he said.

He said Zambian agricultural institutions should exhaust local consultancy agencies to avoid duplication of costly research efforts.

Mr Mundia said this when he was shown an unsuccessful experiment on soya beans crop production.

If the service had consulted the Mpongwe research unit on soya beans production, then useful time and effort might not have been wasted in the venture, he said.

Such experiments were often a waste of scarce money. Researchers at Mpongwe had experimented on 14 varieties of soya beans to test their suitability to Zambian conditions.

The Government was exploring measures which would enable the national service camps to retain money from their sales and at the same time contribute revenue to the State.

He said while the service might be facing problems of funds, should agriculture prove successful it was a "money-spinner" in itself.

Urged

The ZNS had an important role to play in the programme of feeding the nation. The Prime Minister urged the service to aim at high yields in its farms to reduce its overhead costs.

The Party and its Government was determined to boost food production.

He appealed to ZNS to grow crops such as wheat other than concentrate on maize only. The country was importing wheat at a cost of K40 million a year.

He cautioned the service to grow crops which proved suitable in areas where farms had been established. For instance they would grow rice in the Western Province and pineapples in Mwinilunga.

Referring to Gen Fara's complaint about lack of qualified personnel to operate some of the machinery, the Prime Minister said he was happy to note that courses would be held soon.

Announcing the K400 million food operation programme, President Kaunda said the Party intended to establish two State farms of 20,000 hectares each in every province.

He said the national service would play a pivotal role in the plan.

The President said each of these farms would be highly equipped technically in terms of organisation, planning, farming methods and machinery.

CSO: 4700/751

BRIEFS

EEC SUPPLYING SPARE PARTS--Spare parts for rail equipment supplied by the European Economic Community (EEC) under a K6.7 million loan given to Zambia and Zaire last year is to arrive in the country soon. EEC engineering advisor in Lusaka, Mr Bruce Thomson said yesterday that the spare parts formed 20 per cent of the equipment of the loan. He said the equipment, which consisted of wagons purchased from Zimbabwe, arrived in the country last August. The K6.7 million formed part of EEC's available funds for the regional programme under Lome II convention from 1980 to 1985. Mr Thomson also said that tenders would be sent out this week for the supply of equipment for expansion and renovation work at Mpulungu harbour on Lake Tanganyika. He said the contracts would be awarded in two months time. The renovations and expansions on the Zambian side of the lake would cost K2 million. [Text] [Lusaka TIMES OF ZAMBIA in English 5 Feb 82 p 7]

ZIMBABWEAN EMIGRATION--Home Affairs Minister of State Chieftainess Nkomeshya told Parliament yesterday that 10,866 Zimbabweans resident in Zambia had emigrated to Zimbabwe since January, 1981. She said this in reply to a question from Kalabo MP Mr Liko Mbaimbai who asked the number of Zimbabweans who had emigrated since that time. [Text] [Lusaka TIMES OF ZAMBIA in English 5 Feb 82 p 5]

ZNEC SHOWED LOSS IN 1981--The Zambia National Energy Company made a staggering loss of K18 million last year because of OPEC price increases of crude oil. At the same time consumption of fuel oil and miscellaneous oil products which had moderately increased in 1980/81 registered a drop towards the end of 1981. According to an economic report for 1981 released in Lusaka by the National Commission for Development Planning the loss by Zambia National Energy was because it absorbed increases in OPEC prices. "As a result, against a turnover of K103 million, the company incurred a loss of K17.9 million" says the report. But with increases of prices last February it was expected to help cut these losses. The report explains that for example the domestic selling price of products such as paraffin, diesel and fuel oil was kept low and subsidised by motor gasoline and aviation fuel. This resulted in an imbalance in consumption and if allowed to continue would lead to an inequality in the refinery product-mix. The year 1980/81 saw an increase in volumes of motor gasoline consumption by about ten per cent while that by large industries such as the mines rose by 14 per cent. But this trend changed in 1981 as the consumption pattern was the opposite the fall in consumption is said to be the result of increased use of coal by the mining sector. During the 1980/81 period 752,000 metric tonnes of crude oil was bought through an international petroleum marketing company. [Excerpt] [Lusaka TIMES OF ZAMBIA in English 8 Feb 82 p 2]

CSO: 4700/751

END

JPRS 80263

8 March 1982

Sub-Saharan Africa Report

No. 2583

FBIS FOREIGN BROADCAST INFORMATION SERVICE

NOTE

JPRS publications contain information primarily from foreign newspapers, periodicals and books, but also from news agency transmissions and broadcasts. Materials from foreign-language sources are translated; those from English-language sources are transcribed or reprinted, with the original phrasing and other characteristics retained.

Headlines, editorial reports, and material enclosed in brackets [] are supplied by JPRS. Processing indicators such as [Text] or [Excerpt] in the first line of each item, or following the last line of a brief, indicate how the original information was processed. Where no processing indicator is given, the information was summarized or extracted.

Unfamiliar names rendered phonetically or transliterated are enclosed in parentheses. Words or names preceded by a question mark and enclosed in parentheses were not clear in the original but have been supplied as appropriate in context. Other unattributed parenthetical notes within the body of an item originate with the source. Times within items are as given by source.

The contents of this publication in no way represent the policies, views or attitudes of the U.S. Government.

PROCUREMENT OF PUBLICATIONS

JPRS publications may be ordered from the National Technical Information Service, Springfield, Virginia 22161. In ordering, it is recommended that the JPRS number, title, date and author, if applicable, of publication be cited.

Current JPRS publications are announced in Government Reports Announcements issued semi-monthly by the National Technical Information Service, and are listed in the Monthly Catalog of U.S. Government Publications issued by the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402.

Correspondence pertaining to matters other than procurement may be addressed to Joint Publications Research Service, 1000 North Glebe Road, Arlington, Virginia 22201.

JPRS 80263

8 March 1982

SUB-SAHARAN AFRICA REPORT

No. 2583

CONTENTS

ETHIOPIA

Revolutionary Army's Role Praised by Bejas
(THE ETHIOPIAN HERALD, 29 Jan 32) 1

High-Level Meet on Red Star Campaign Continues
(THE ETHIOPIAN HERALD, 30 Jan 82) 2

Berhanu Holds Talks With Cuban Official
(THE ETHIOPIAN HERALD, 31 Jan 82) 5

Chairman Receives Cuban CP Politbureau Member
(THE ETHIOPIAN HERALD, 29 Jan 82) 6

Supply of Basic Goods in Eritrea To Be Stepped Up
(THE ETHIOPIAN HERALD, 26 Jan 82) 8

Chairman Calls for Concerted Reconstruction in Eritrea
(THE ETHIOPIAN HERALD, 26 Jan 82) 9

Briefs
Water Supply Projects Underway 14

KENYA

Reagan Urged To Pressure Pretoria
(Editorial; DAILY NATION, 22 Jan 82) 15

Cotu Governing Council Alters Constitution
(DAILY NATION, 25 Jan 82) 16

Information Policy Is Dubbed Vital
(Jafred S. Musisi; DAILY NATION, 2 Feb 82) 17

Safeguards Asked in Arming Wananchi
(Editorial; DAILY NATION, 20 Jan 82) 20

Kariuki Says Mutai Free To Return to Kenya
(DAILY NATION, 1 Feb 82)..... 21

MP Umuro Ambushed, Killed by Bandits
(David Nderitu, Philip Wangalwa; DAILY NATION, 26 Jan 82)..... 22

Moi Calls for End to Corruption
(DAILY NATION, 23 Jan 82)..... 23

Kamere Warns Businesses Against Bribes
(DAILY NATION, 30 Jan 82)..... 24

Franco-Kenyan Talks Open
(DAILY NATION, 2 Feb 82)..... 25

Moi Talks With Dutch Delegation
(DAILY NATION, 23 Jan 82)..... 26

Moi Lauds Kenyan Troops in Chad
(DAILY NATION, 16 Jan 82)..... 27

Kenya Gives $500,000 to SWAPO
(DAILY NATION, 16 Jan 82)..... 28

Oloitipitip Discusses Luo Politics
(Oloitipitip Interview; DAILY NATION, 30 Jan 82)..... 29

Oloitipitip Lashes Out at Luos
(DAILY NATION, 21 Jan 82)..... 31

Luo MPs Comment on Oloitipitip
(DAILY NATION, 22 Jan 82)..... 32

Oloitipitip Disavows Charges That He Is Ambitious
(DAILY NATION, 25 Jan 82)..... 33

Oloitipitip Holds to Statement on Luos
(DAILY NATION, 29 Jan 82)..... 34

Oloitipitip Raps Odinga's 'Jesus Role'
(Gideon Mulaki; DAILY NATION, 30 Jan 82)..... 35

Tanzania, Kenya Ponder Border Opening
(DAILY NATION, 20 Jan 82)..... 36

President Names Acting Chief Justice
(DAILY NATION, 28 Jan 82)..... 38

Chief Justice Swears in New Advocates
(DAILY NATION, 19 Jan 82)..... 39

Kenya To Host Eucharist Congress
(DAILY NATION, 19 Jan 82)..... 40

Ex-Press Chief Sues Ng'weno
(Irungu Ndirangu; DAILY NATION, 15 Jan 82)..... 41

Moi Raps Banks' Interest Rates
(DAILY NATION, 15 Jan 82)..... 42

Improved Bank Service Asked
(Mbatau wa Ngai; DAILY NATION, 22 Jan 82)..... 43

Life in Border Town Described
(Rashid Mughal; DAILY NATION, 15 Jan 82)..... 44

Police Alleged To Harass Innocent People
(Kimani Gecau; DAILY NATION, 29 Jan 82)..... 47

Somalis Allege Harassment by Security Forces
(DAILY NATION, 30 Jan 82)..... 49

Maasai Eviction Fears Are Dispelled
(DAILY NATION, 21 Jan 82)..... 50

Kipsigis Are Told To Go Home
(DAILY NATION, 27 Jan 82)..... 51

Probe on Status of Squatters Is Opened
(Philip Wangalwa; DAILY NATION, 27 Jan 82)..... 52

Moi Suspends All Harambee Meetings
(DAILY NATION, 13 Jan 82)..... 53

Gatu Alarmed by Moral Slump
(DAILY NATION, 25 Jan 82)..... 54

Greater Border Security Cooperation Is Urged
(Editorial; DAILY NATION, 30 Jan 82)..... 55

Citizens To Be Armed Against Shiftas
(DAILY NATION, 19 Jan 82)..... 57

Primary School Teacher Census Is Launched
(DAILY NATION, 19 Jan 82)..... 58

Ministry Halts University Play
(Wahome Mutahi; DAILY NATION, 30 Jan 82)..... 59

Science Students Force Revocation of Exams
(DAILY NATION, 20 Jan 82)..... 60

Many School Leavers Turning to Self-Employment
(Henry Omondi; DAILY NATION, 27 Jan 82)..... 61

Employers Group Backs Expatriate Check
(Pius Nyamora; DAILY NATION, 18 Jan 82)..... 63

Cotu Seeks Huge Pay Increase
(Ochieng Konyango; DAILY NATION, 20 Jan 82)..... 64

National Archives Building Not To Be Museum
(Wahome Mutahi; DAILY NATION, 20 Jan 82)..... 65

Kibaki Calls on Parastatals To Show Profit
(DAILY NATION, 22 Jan 82)..... 67

Greater Government Control of Industries Called For
(Christopher Mulei; DAILY NATION, 22 Jan 82)..... 68

Ndegwa Calls for Greater Capital Investment
(DAILY NATION, 25 Jan 82)..... 69

Kenya-India Ties Said To Be Strong
(DAILY NATION, 26 Jan 82)..... 70

Israeli UNEP Construction Deal Tagged 'Speculation'
(DAILY NATION, 26 Jan 82)..... 72

Mbathi Praises Indian Products
(DAILY NATION, 29 Jan 82)..... 73

Wheat Flour in Short Supply in Nairobi
(DAILY NATION, 14 Jan 82)..... 74

Birgen Calls for Coffee Board, Co-op Merger
(DAILY NATION, 14 Jan 82)..... 75

Kenya Refutes Swedish Coffee Report
(Chander Mehra, Irungu Ndirangu; DAILY NATION, 13 Jan 82).... 76

Coffee, Cotton Top Co-op's List
(DAILY NATION, 2 Feb 82)..... 77

Britain Helps Finance Grain Store
(DAILY NATION, 16 Jan 82)..... 78

City Shops Run Out of Rice
(George Odiko; DAILY NATION, 16 Jan 82)..... 79

Tractors Hold Up Rice Project
(DAILY NATION, 27 Jan 82)..... 80

Traders Seek Ministry Help
(DAILY NATION, 13 Jan 82)..... 81

Federal Aid Boosts Rural Development
(Mbatau wa Ngai; DAILY NATION, 27 Jan 82)..... 82

Plan To Wreck Union Alleged
(DAILY NATION, 28 Jan 82)..... 84

New Trade Union Is Formed
(DAILY NATION, 1 Feb 82)..... 85

Energy Fund To Be 'Set Up'
(DAILY NATION, 19 Jan 82)..... 86

Kibaki Backs Pipe Plan
(DAILY NATION, 29 Jan 82)..... 87

Oil Exploration Will Continue
(Christopher Mulei; DAILY NATION, 28 Jan 82)..... 88

Ministry Forms Body To Check Sanitation
(DAILY NATION, 19 Jan 82)..... 89

Water Shortage Hits Nakuru Town
(DAILY NATION, 28 Jan 82)..... 90

Mass Layoffs in Timber Industry Possible
(Henry Omondi; DAILY NATION, 18 Jan 82)..... 91

Country To Form Own Shipping Company
(DAILY NATION, 21 Jan 82)..... 92

Railway Finances Face Large Deficit
(DAILY NATION, 26 Jan 82)..... 93

Cotton Farmers Threaten Boycott
(DAILY NATION, 14 Jan 82)..... 94

Handicraft Exports Increase
(DAILY NATION, 19 Jan 82)..... 95

Textile Workers Threaten Strike
(DAILY NATION, 23 Jan 82)..... 96

Briefs
Remote-Sensing Project 97
Sh. 90m Pact Signed 97
Forces Stay Tax Exempt 97
Fleet Visit 97
CID Chief's Son Hurt 98

Witch Hunt Killing 98
Mini-Shakeup Removes Chief 98
Water Shortages 99
Ban on Maize Sales 99
End to Narok Differences 99
Kisumu Raid Nets 40 99
Permanency of Rural Press 99
Border Racket Curbed 99
German Dam Aid 100
Strike Averted 100
Mombasa Harbor Dredging 100
Port Expansion 100
Libyan Team Denied Entry 101
Security Forces in Wajir 101
Lake Authority Rice Plan 101
U.S. Consulate in Mombasa 102
Sectarian Rows 102
Women Caught in Swoop 102
French Warships in Port 103
Indian Shopkeepers Under Fire 103
Kenya, India Ties Hailed 103
PLO Art Exhibit 103
Union Differences Resolved 104
Paraffin Shortages 104
Call for Illegal Firearms 104
Cans on Way to Uganda 104
Masai Moranism Outdated 104
African Control of Goods 105

NAMIBIA

Behind the Scenes Look at DTA Split
(Leon Kok; THE WINDHOEK ADVERTISER, 19 Feb 82)..... 106

Imbili Does Dramatic Turnabout
(THE WINDHOEK ADVERTISER, 19 Feb 82)..... 109

SOMALIA

Alleged Use of Nerve Gas in Eritrea Denounced
(HEEGAN, 5 Feb 82)..... 111

TANZANIA

Party Secretary Discusses CCM Role, Achievements
(Daudi Mwakawago Interview; SUNDAY NEWS, 7 Feb 82)..... 114

Honors Received by Nyerere
(DAILY NEWS, 15 Feb 82)..... 117

Zanzibar To Expropriate Civil Servants' Illegally Gotten Property
(Abdulla Yakuti; DAILY NEWS, 12 Feb 82)..... 118

Sweden Asked To Help SIDO Obtain Suppliers Credits
(DAILY NEWS, 19 Feb 82)..... 119

Trade Talks With Mozambique Scheduled Today
(Isaac Mruma; DAILY NEWS, 19 Feb 82)..... 120

FRG 2-Year Economic Cooperation Grant
(DAILY NEWS, 13 Feb 82)..... 121

Juwata Asks Zanzibar Government To Raise Minimum Wage
(Yakuti; DAILY NEWS, 13 Feb 82)..... 122

Nyerere Asks Crop Authorities To Reduce Overhead Costs
(Isaac Mruma; DAILY NEWS, 17 Feb 82)..... 123

Kitundu Notes Shortcomings in Leadership Code Enforcement
(DAILY NEWS, 13 Feb 82)..... 124

Extension of Tazara Railway Planned
(SUNDAY NEWS, 14 Feb 82)..... 126

Kidatu-Mufindi Power Line Project To Open in Mid-Summer
(Isaac Mruma; DAILY NEWS, 13 Feb 82)..... 127

ZAMBIA

MP's Criticize UNIP Procedures, Role
(TIMES OF ZAMBIA, 13 Feb 82)..... 128

MPs Charge Public Service Commission 'Tribal Institution'
(TIMES OF ZAMBIA, 12 Feb 82)..... 130

Budget Proposed Tax Collection System 'Unworkable'
(TIMES OF ZAMBIA, 12 Feb 82)..... 131

Government Takes Measures To Improve Exports' Transport
(TIMES OF ZAMBIA, 16 Feb 82)..... 132

NHA Starting Program To Expedite Zambianization
(DAILY MAIL, 15 Feb 82)..... 133

Auditor's Report Reveals Parastatal Losses, Irregularities
(TIMES OF ZAMBIA, 15, 13 Feb 82, SUNDAY TIEMS, 14 Feb 82)..... 134

Parastatals' Future Bleak
Parastatals Evade Audits
Report 'Catalogue of Rampant Irregularities', by Dan Mwale

Mundia Announces Measures Affecting Mining Industry
(SUNDAY TIMES, 14 Feb 82)..... 137

Mundia Directs Chinese Textile Plant Managers To Seek Loans
(TIMES OF ZAMBIA, 16 Feb 82)..... 138

REVOLUTIONARY ARMY'S ROLE PRAISED BY BEJAS

Addis Ababa THE ETHIOPIAN HERALD in English 29 Jan 82 p 2

[Text]

KERKEB (ENA) — Representatives of the Beja nationality in Eritrea region paid tribute to the Revolutionary Liberation Army's vital contribution to the alleviation of the nationality's problems of potable water and the constructive participation of the army in the life of the people.

Ibrahim Osman Idris Mohammed and Mahmud Ali Mohammed, told a visiting team of journalists that the Revolutionary Liberation Army has proved worthy of its name as a fighter, producer, agitator and organizer by routing the secessionist bandits, rehabilitating compatriots affected by the destructive acts of the bandits and actively participating in agricultural activities of members of the nationality and in other endeavours aimed at improving the life of the people in the area.

The representatives of the nationality, said that during their brief occupation of the area, the seccessionist bandits had looted members of the nationality of their cattle and other property and had forcibly used their children as instruments for the fulfilment of their anti-unity anti-people objectives.

They declared that they have identified the bandits as their arch enemies, opposed to their welfare and progress and pledged to join forces with the Revolutionary Liberation Army and pay every sacrifice in the struggle to liquidate once and for all elements of the seccessionist bandits in the region.

CSO: 4700/781

HIGH-LEVEL MEET ON RED STAR CAMPAIGN CONTINUES

Addis Ababa THE ETHIOPIAN HERALD in English 30 Jan 82 pp 1, 5

[Text] ASMARA (ENA) — The high-level meeting on the "Red Star" Revolutionary Development Campaign in Eritrea Region resumed deliberations at the Asmara Palace yesterday under the Chairmanship of Comrade Chairman Mengistu Haile-Mariam, Chairman of the PMAC and of COPWE and Commander-in-Chief of the Revolutionary Army.

The morning session was addressed by several speakers, including Comrade Taye Tilahun, Minister of Interior, and Comrade Dawit Wolde-Giorgis, COPWE Central Committee Member and COPWE representative for Eritrea Region.

Comrades Taye and Dawit briefed the meeting on the efforts made by the Revolutionary Government to solve peacefully the problem in Eritrea Region, the wanton destruction caused by the secessionist bandits and the suffering to which the people have been subjected as a result.

The resistance of the inhabitants of the Region to the secessionist movement and their sustained struggle was enumerated in the statements by the two officials who also gave a resume of the reconstruction activities undertaken following the rout of the foreign inspired traitors by the Revolutionary Liberation Army.

The atrocities perpetrated against the working people of Eritrea Region by the secessionist bandits were later exposed and strongly condemned by representatives of the masses. Comrade Afework Berhane, Chairman of the City Council and Administrator of Asmara, Comrade Gezai Sebhatu, Chairman of the Regional AETU, and Comrade Tesfu Reddi, Chairman of the Regional AEPA, took turns in vowing vengeance against secessionist adventures.

Comrade Daniel Teka, representative of the Regional REYA, and Comrade Gidey Gebre-Yohannes, Chairperson of the Regional REWA, outlined the role played by their respective associations in fighting the evil motivations of the secessionists. They solemnly declared that youth and women in the Region will struggle with unflinching resolve for the success of the multi-faceted "Red Star" Development Campaign.

Heroic Struggle

A reprsentative of the Regional Association of Veteran Resistance Fighters, Fitawrari Asresahegn Ambaye, recalled the heroic struggle of the people of Eritrea Region against invaders bent on violating the territorial integrity of the Motherland and dismembering the region from the rest of the country. He declared that patriotic Eritreans not only strongly condemn the attempt to sever the region from the Moherland but are in readiness to stand alongside the Revolutionary Army and to pay any sacrifice to destroy the last remaining bastions of secessionism.

The morning and afternoon sessions of the high-level meeting were also addressed by Comrade Yirga Bogale, Chairman of the Eritrea Regional Teachers' Association, and representatives of mass organizations and peoples militia in all the provinces of Eritrea Region pledging on behalf of their respective associations and organizations to struggle to the end to rid the region off secessionist elements and towards the success of the "Red Star" multi-faceted revolutionary campaign in Eritrea.

After three days of recess in connection with the three-day festival held in Massawa, the high-level meeting got underway with discussions on Comrade Chairman Mengistu's policy statement delivered last Monday when the meeting opened and on the explanations given on the multi-faceted Revolutionary Campaign in Eritrea region.

Representatives of workers, mass organizations, veteran resistance fighters and peoples militia in Eritrea spoke at the meeting reaffirming their determination to pay whatever sacrifices needed for the implementation and success of the "Red Star" multi-faceted Revolutionary Campaign in Eritrea region.

The meeting was attended by government and COPWE representatives as well as representatives of mass and professional associations and religious leaders throughout Ethiopia, including those in Eritrea region.

The speakers represented at the gathering were workrers, peasants, urban dwellers, youth, women, veteran resistance fighters and teachers' associations in Eritrea as well as representatives of mass organizations and peoples militia of Hamassein, Akele-Guzai, Seraye and Gash-Setit provinces of Eritrea region and representatives of mass organizations of Keren, Assab, Red Sea, Barka and Sahel provinces of the region.

They spoke outlining the unstinted effort of the Revolutionary Government to solve peacefully the problem in Eritrea region and the chauvenistic response of the secessionist bandits, and the untold destruction inflicted by the bandits on the life and property of the people of Eritrea.

Representatives of the ten nationalities in Eritrea region on their part spoke outlining the neglect and sufferings they were subjected to during the reactionary feudo-bourgeois regime and the due respect and recognition they were given following the upsurge of the Ethiopian Popular Revolution, and the divisive means and acts used by the anti-people and anti-unity secessionist bandits to attain their reactionary objectives and to re-impose on the nationalities the subjugation they had suffered during the fallen regime.

The representatives who pledged to pay every sacrifice towards the fulfilment and success of the "Red Star" Multi-Faceted Revolutionary Campaign in Eritrea region were those of the Bilen, Beja, Afar Saho, Asawirta, Reshayida, Tigre, Kunama, Ben-Amir and Baria nationalities in Eritrea region.

The High-Level Meeting was also addressed by religious leaders in Eritrea region who said that there was no time in the history of the country when the broad masses of Ethiopia were divided along religious lines, but to the contrary followers of different faiths in the country had stood in unison and endured the test of times in the defence of the unity, sovereignty and territorial integrity of the Motherland.

The leader of the followers of the Muslim faith of Asmara and Hamasien province, in particular laid bare the devisive machinations of the secessionist bandits along religious denominations and the falsification of history that asserts that Eritrea is Arab, all aimed at dismembering the country and at achieving their evil and wishful objective. The Muslim leader said that the bandits have no mandate whatsoever to speak for the people of Eritrea region and pledged on behalf of followers of the Islamic faith in Eritrea region that they would pay whatever sacrifices for the successful implementation of the Campaign.

CSO: 4700/781

BERHANU HOLDS TALKS WITH CUBAN OFFICIAL

Addis Ababa THE ETHIOPIAN HERALD in English 31 Jan 82 pp 1, 5

[Text] ADDIS ABABA (ENA) — Comrade Berhanu Bayih and Comrade Jorge Risquet Valdes, Politbureau member of the Cuban Communist Party yesterday held talks on strengthening relations between COPWE and the Communist Party of Cuba exchanging views on international issues of mutual interest and concern.

Comrade Berhanu Bayih, PMAC Standing Committee and COPWE Executive Committee member, briefed the Cuban Communist Party delegation at the COPWE Central Committee office on the continued struggle of the Ethiopian broad masses. Comrade Berhanu recalled the pre-revolution realities in the country and the sustained effort of the Ethiopian people against oppression and exploitation. He underlined the victories scored by the Revolutionary Army and the mass-based commitment to safeguard the hard-won revolutionary gains and the unity and territorial integrity of the Motherland.

Comrade Berhanu appraised the Cuban delegation on the formation of COPWE and the task being discharged by the Commission towards the formation of the working people's party. He also pointed to the need strengthening the nation's defence capability and the construction of a socialist economy.

Comrade Berhanu also briefed the Cuban delegation on the situation in the Horn of Africa and imperialist manoeuvres to arrest the revolutionary momentum.

Comrade Jorge Risquet Valdes spoke of the structural set up of the Cuban Communist Party and the efforts of the Cuban people towards continued socialist construction.

Present during the talks were Comrade Shewandagn Belete, COPWE Central Committee member and Second Deputy Head of COPWE's Organizational Affairs Department, Comrade Girma Neway, COPWE Central Committee member and Head of the Agitation and Propaganda section in COPWE's Ideological Affairs Department, Comrade Tesfaye Taddesse, COPWE Central Committee member and Deputy Editor-in-Chief of "Serto Ader," the organ of COPWE Central Committee, other members of the Cuban delegation and the Cuban Ambassador to Socialist Ethiopia, Comrade Buenaventura Reyes Acosta.

CSO: 4700/781

CHAIRMAN RECEIVES CUBAN CP POLITBUREAU MEMBER

Addis Ababa THE ETHIOPIAN HERALD in English 29 Jan 82 pp 1, 6

[Text] ASMARA (ENA) — Comrade Chairman Mengistu Haile-Mariam Chairman of the PMAC and of COPWE and Commander-in-Chief of the Revolutionary Army, yesterday received and had talks with Comrade Jorge Risquet Valdes here at Asmara Palace.

Comrade Chairman Mengistu and Comrade Jorge Risquet Valdes, Politbureau member of the Communist Party of Cuba, discussed relations between Socialist Ethiopia and the Republic of Cuba and international issues of topical relevance.

During the audience, the Cuban official delivered to Comrade Chairman Mengistu a message from Comrade Fidel Castro Ruz, First Secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Cuba, President of the Council of State and Council of Ministers and Commander-in-Chief of the Revolutionary Army.

Present on the occasion were Comrade Addis Tedla, PMAC Standing Committee member, Deputy Chairman of the National Revolutionary Development Campaign and Central Planning Supreme Council (NRDC-CPSC) and COPWE Executive Committee member, Comrade Legesse Asfaw, PMAC Standing Committee and COPWE Executive Committee member, and Comrade Dr. Feleke Gedle-Giorgis, Minister of Foreign Affairs and COPWE Central Committee member.

Also present were the Cuban officials accompanying Comrade Jorge Risquet Valdes, and Comrade Ambassador Buenaventura Reyes Acosta of Cuba.

Members of the Cuban delegation were presented to Comrade Chairman Mengistu by Comrade Mengistu Gemechu, Special Aide to the Comrade Chairman and COPWE Central Committee member.

The high-level Cuban delegation was welcomed on arrival here at Asmara Airport at noon by Comrade Legesse Asfaw, Comrade Dr. Alemu Abebe, COPWE Central Committee member and First Deputy Head of COPWE's Organizational Department, and Comrade Fasika Sidelil, COPWE Central Committee member and First Deputy Head of COPWE's Ideological Affairs.

Comrade Jorge Risquet Valdes, arrived yesterday for a working visit to Socialist Ethiopia.

Comrade Jorge Risquet Valdes was welcomed on arrival at Bole International Airport by Comrade Berhanu Bayih, PMAC Standing Committee and COPWE Executive Commtitee Member, Comrade Teka Tullu, PMAC Standing Committee and COPWE Central Committee Member, Comrade Girma Yilma, Minister of Information and National Guidance and COPWE Central Committee Member, Comrade Goshu Wolde, Minister of Education and COPWE Central Committee Member, senior government officials and Comrade Ambassador Buenaventural Reyes Acosta of the Republic of Cuba to Socialist Ethiopia.

Members of the delegation accompanying Comrade Jorge Risquet Valdes include Comrade Babelardo Colome Ibarra, Alternate Member of the Polit-Bureau of The Communist Party of Cuba, Comrade Carlos Aldana Central Committee Member of the Communist Party of Cuba, and Comrade Oscar Oramas, Deputy Minister of Foreign Affairs of Cuba.

CSO: 4700/781

SUPPLY OF BASIC GOODS IN ERITREA TO BE STEPPED UP

Addis Ababa THE ETHIOPIAN HERALD in English 26 Jan 82 pp 1, 7

[Text] ASMARA (ENA) — Preparations are underway to make basic commodities available to the masses in the districts and provinces of Eritrea region, following the routing of the secessionist bandits by the Revolutionary Liberation Army and the return of peace and tranquility in the region.

This was disclosed here by Comrade Abebe Kebede, Minister of Domestic Trade and COPWE Central Committee member, in a statement he made on the role of the Ministry of Domestic Trade in connection with the launching of the multi-faceted revolutionary campaign in Eritrea region.

Comrade Abebe said that a task force entrusted with the equitable distribution of basic commodities to the people living in the districts and provinces of Eritrea region has been formed and will assist in the implementation of the efforts being made so as to enable the Eritrean masses to benefit from the fruits of the revolution.

Comrade Abebe noted that distribution of basic commodities to the people in Eritrea was made difficult owing to the problem created by the secessionist bandits, but added that the Revolutionary Government continues to exert every effort to air-lift basic commodities to the region at high cost.

The Minister of Domestic Trade pointed out that the task force just formed is making preparations to take appropriate measures after having inspected the activities of the various committees and evaluated the strength of mass organizations in the region.

He said mechanisms for the maintenance of stable commodity prices, transport facilities and other necessary conditions will be fulfilled to facilitate the work of the task force. He underlined the need for a sound and viable role of mass organizations and active participation on the part of the people to ensure the success of the task.

Comrade Abebe said that the task force is also entrusted with providing factories with raw materials, various implements and hardware needed for the reconstruction efforts as well as the revival of agriculture and other development-oriented ventures.

The task force is forging close relation with the Ministry of Agriculture to speed up the supply of basic commodities to be distributed to peasants in Eritrea through peasants' service co-operatives, Comrade Abebe said.

CSO: 4700/781

CHAIRMAN CALLS FOR CONCERTED RECONSTRUCTION IN ERITREA

Addis Ababa THE ETHIOPIAN HERALD in English 26 Jan 82 pp 1, 5

[Text] ASMARA (ENA) — Comrade Chairman Mengistu Haile-Mariam yesterday called on the Ethiopian people, to mobilize forces to speed up development activities underway in Eritrea region by implementing the historic "Red Star" multi-faceted revolutionary campaign just launched, guarantee the inviolability of the nation's unity and territorial integrity and ensure the reign of peace, equality, common prosperity and justice in the country.

Comrade Chairman Mengistu Haile-Mariam, Chairman of the PMAC and of COPWE and Commander-in-Chief of the revolutionary army, made the call in a policy statement addressed to the Ethiopian people when opening the high-level meeting on the economic reconstruction of Eritrea region at the Asmara Palace.

The multi-faceted "Red Star" revolutionary campaign of national characteristics provides for extricating the Eritrean broad masses from the abyss of terror and inequities to which they have been subjected by the secessionist bandit groups and rebuilding the vital infrastructure destroyed by the traitorous gangs.

Comrade Chairman Mengistu told the large gathering that the "Red Star" campaign will moblize all available resources simultaneously to end once and for all, in accordance with the decisions of the Revolutionary Government and COPWE, the organized banditry which over the years exacted heavy toll in human life and caused billion Birr worth of property destruction, and to expedite the development process began in the region to bring about full equality and prosperity for all.

The historic meeting is being attended by Comrade Fikre-Selassie Wogderess, PMAC Secretary-General and COPWE Executive Committee member, Comrade Fisseha Desta, PMAC Assistant Secretary-General, Deputy Chairman of the Council of Ministers and COPWE Executive Committee Member.

Also present were Ministers, Commissioners, COPWE Central Committee Members, high ranking government officials, representatives of the Revolutionary Army and Revolutionary Police and of mass organizations and professional associations throughout Ethiopia, members of various nationalities in the country and religious leaders.

Multi-Faceted Undertaking

In the address to the nation at the high-level and historic meeting attended by 1,205 participants, Comrade Chairman Mengistu said the multi-faceted revolutionary campaign in Eritrea region encompasses all aspects of political, social and economic life. He pointed out that the goal is to restore normalcy to the region, rebuild vital infrastructure destroyed by the secessionists, organize, politicize and arm the working class and generally build a socialist order in the region He said the ampaign will be executed with the joint efforts of the Revolutionary Government, COPWE, the Ethiopian br d masses and the working people of the region.

Speaking earlier, Comrade Amanuel Amde-Mikael, Deputy Senior Minister, COPWE Central Committee Member, and Secretary-General of the multi-faceted revolutionary campaign in Eritrea region, elaborated on the characteristic and goal of the campaign.

At the outset, Comrade Chairman Mengistu made note of the character of the Revolution at this stage and said not only has it drawn the line of distinction between its allies and its enemies but has also forged ahead by scoring momentous victories. The Revolution has not been confined to Ethiopia's national frontiers but has also altered the alignment of forces in the region, Comrade Chairman Mengistu said.

The Revolutionary Leader said one of the major problems facing the nation has been that existing in Eritrea region which he described as the foundation and cradle of Ethiopia's history. He recalled the successive waves of aggression mounted against Ethiopia over the centuries through the region and said colonialism not only brought about death and destruction in its wake but also polluted culture. While Eritrea region remained under alien rule for 60-70 years, he noted, the rest of the country was in the grip of neo-colonialism. Both the feudal and bourgeois classes were bathed under this situation, it was pointed out.

Building Just System

Comrade Chairman Mengistu went on to enumerate the causes of Ethiopia's under-development and said that the objective reality prevailing in the country at the moment is such that the solution to our shortcomings lies in "a change of system, class struggle and generally Revolution."

Noting that the unity of the country and the supremacy of the Revolution have been guaranteed through immense sacrifice, Comrade Chairman Mengistu said that it is in Eritrea region alone that "we find the last die-hard reactionary stronghold bent on destroying while we build and challenging the Revolution and the people."

Comrade Chairman Mengistu said the historic gathering in Asmara was assembled to examine and make decisions on a "supreme, decisive, and revolutionary issue." He said the meeting will, on the one hand, tackle numerous problems of pressing nature and, on the other, draw up strategy for eradicating in the form of a campaign the social and economic malaise which have plagued the Ethiopian people. "We are in particular endeavouring to alleviate the extremely complex and bitter economic and social difficulties of the people of Eritrea region," he said.

Comrade Chairman Mengistu went on: "We are bracing ourselves for the task not only on the basis of truth but we also intend to untangle unassailable truths from the many that are now choked and strangled by weeds. We are arrayed to remove the dangers of death, exile, fear, hunger and deprivation which are hovering over our compatriots."

The PMAC Chairman pointed out that the secessionist bandits doubled and quadrupled their activities in the region during the revolutionary period in the belief that an opportune moment had presented itself. He said although the people of the region shouldered the brunt of the adversity, the problem is one that is shared by the entire nation.

Eventhough the dream of the traitorous bandits has come to naught, Comrade Chairman Mengistu stated, it is extremely essential that the last bastions of the movement are dismantled.

Comrade Chairman Mengistu noted that the various secessionist groups were at the forefront of the reactionary attempt at stifling the revoluion in its cradle. He said these anti-people gangs used every slogan to confuse the Ethiopian people and misinform the international community. True to the saying that "market riots benefit the thief," it was noted, the secessionist bandits took advantage of the Somalia invasion and counter-revolutionary activities in the hinterland to infiltrate major towns in the region and terrorize the people while continuing the orgy of wanton destruction and causing severe economic dislocation.

The Revolutionary Leader pointed out to the meeting that the anti-people and ani-unity traitors caused the kind of ruthless destruction which even the fascist Italian forces did not commit on their rereat. He said no matter what the cost, the Ethiopian broad masses are poised to rebuild the economy within a short period.

Comrade Chairman Mengistu went on to state that the secessionists also attempted to distort and sally the honour of a land whose age-old struggle to maintain its independence and safeguard its unity occupies a respectable place in world history. "It is a double crime that history can never forget," Comrade Chairman Mengistu said. "We are determined to settle accounts with these criminals who, having lost all sense of honour and self-respect, will not stop from attempting to sell the honour of the people."

The Revolutionary Leader pointed out that in order to achieve the unfettered advancement of the Revolution, there is no alternative to crushing the traitorous bandits and successfully completing the struggle in the region for which enormous sacrifices have been already paid.

"The all-encopassing revolutionary campaign will be seized with all political, social and economic aspects of the region," Comrade Chairman Mengistu said. "The objectives of the campaign are to ensure that the people living in this part of the country enjoy peace, to rehabilitate the economic institutions which have been destroyed, to expand the efforts towards the establishment of a new socialist community and to enable the working people protect their rights through the achievement of a higher level of consciousness as well as being better organised and better armed."

The reconstruction and development activivties in the region are to be mounted in three phases. The campaign is to be carried out by the coordinated efforts of the Revolutionary Government, COPWE and the entire Ethiopian broad masses and the working people.

Fundamental Objective

Comrade Chairman Mengistu stressed that the fundamental objective of the campaign is reconstruction and the building of a happy and peaceful future for the people of the region. "Had it been necessary to respond in kind to the provocative actions of the bandits, the people of the region would have been subjected to even worse sufferings," Comrade Chairman Mengistu pointed out. "Our goal is principally that of sparing the population further suffering, restoring peace and enabling the people to share in the victories of the Revolution."

The Revolutionary Leader concluded his rousing policy statement by calling on the entire working people of Ethiopia to stand ready and in unison to attain the historic goal upon which the nation has embarked.

Speaking earlier on the objectives of the campaign Comrade Amanuel Amde-Mikael underscored the imperative for doing away with the legacies left over by the past feudo-bourgeois regime in connection with the problem of Eritrea so as to achieve peace that would be conducive for the economic reconstruction in the region.

He recalled the futile attempts made by the secessionist bandits to sally the history of northern Ethiopia — the cradle of civilization encompassing glorious chapters tourching on heroic figures like Abraha Atsbeha, Saba, Kaleb, Ras Alula Aba Nega and Zerai Deres — and to dismember ancient and united Ethiopia. The Deputy Senior Minister declared that Ethiopia's history which is engraved with the sacrifice of the broad masses will live for eternity.

Stating that the national call for peace is still valid although it has been rejected by the bandits, Comrade Amanuel noted that in line with the resolution passed by the Second Regular Plenary Session of COPWE Central Committee, the Revolutionary Liberation Army has so far been engaged in an armed struggle and mopping up operations against the secessionist gangs.

In addition to previous rehabilitation, political orientation and economic reconstruction programmes launched in the region in line with the directives of Comrade Chairman Mengistu, this new multi-faceted revolutionary campaign encompassing military, ideological, political, organizational, cultural and economic activities has now been set in motion Comrade Amanuel said.

Comrade Amanuel disclosed that the "Red Star" campaign will free the region from the grip of the secessinist bandits once and for all, rehabilitate those dislodged from their homes, reconstruct economic projects destroyed by the bandits, chart out development plans and implement them stage by stage.

The Deputy Senior Minister pointed out that the campaign consists of several departments including those of national and public security, inspection, political affairs, military operations, economic development and military political affairs. Comrade Amanuel added that these departments were duly formed so as to fully implement the plans of the campaign and attain the desired objective.

All departments will be geared to function as part and parcel of the National Democratic Revolutionary programme in order to replace terror, poverty and ignorance with peace, unity and prosperity and thereby pave the way for a strong revolutionary future.

At the opening ceremony, colourfully attired young children fluttering the Ethiopian flag and holding palms and red flowers sang the "Internationale" and the national anthem as well as other revolutionary songs.

Various slogans reflecting the objective of the "Red Star" campaign were also hung at the auditorium where the meeting is in progress in a glittering setting.

CSO: 4700/781

BRIEFS

WATER SUPPLY PROJECTS UNDERWAY--Harar (ENA)--Construction of a water pipe at a cost of 622,350 Birr for the town of Babile in Gursum province of Hararghe region is now in progress. The Ethiopian Water Work's Construction Authority (EWWCA), undertakes the work. The water will be pumped from two underground wells dug seven kms from Babile at the rate of 140,000 litres per day. The project is envisaged to provide potable water for 15 years to the 4,500 residents of the town, according to the Manager of the Hararghe Zone Office of EWWCA. The EWWCA is also damming a spring to supply water for the 1,000 inhabitants of Bobosa in Gursum province. The United Nations Childrens' Fund, UNICEF, is assisting in the financing of the water supply projects for the town of Babile and Bobosa. [Text] [Addis Ababa THE ETHIOPIAN HERALD in English 31 Jan 82 p 8]

CSO: 4700/781

REAGAN URGED TO PRESSURE PRETORIA

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 22 Jan 82 p 6

[Editorial: "Reagan's First Year"]

[Text]

THE record of President Ronald Reagan's first year in the most powerful job in the world is extremely disappointing to many Africans especially leaders who were expecting the world's strongest democracy to assist those who are still fighting for the fundamental human rights on this continent of injustice and despotism.

The tough measures Mr. Reagan has taken against the new military regime in Poland have proved that he is an able politician who cannot give in easily to the demands of people with little respect for true democratic principles.

Unfortunately Mr. Reagan has not found it fit to take the same tough measures against violaters of human rights in Africa. The United States is still a major trading partner of the South African regime which in fact treats the majority of the people there in a worse manner than the regime in Warsaw treats the Poles.

Indeed the Pretoria government openly say they consider President Reagan to be one of the best friends of the regime in South Africa!

This is a quality of leadership which cannot be expected to bring the United States closer to the majority of free African nations. May be Mr. Reagan's greatest weakness in his African policy is that he wants to establish friendship with both the free African nations and the dictatorial White minority regime in Pretoria. His advisors should tell him that he cannot simply have the best of both worlds.

Mr. Reagan's most critical challenge for his second year in that powerful office depends on whether he will have courage to openly tell his "friends" in Pretoria to change their attitute towards their fellow citizens and accept them as equal human beings.

Such a demand from US is not only bound to be taken seriously in South Africa but will also improve relations between Washington and many African countries which now seem to regard Moscow as the one super power most concerned about the liberation of Southern African nations still being dominated by Afrikaners.

Such a move by Mr. Reagan is bound to make him win as many African friends as that great office he occupies deserves.

CSO: 4700/776

COTU GOVERNING COUNCIL ALTERS CONSTITUTION

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 25 Jan 82 p 4

[Text]

THE Cotu governing council sitting in Kisumu has amended the organisation's constitution to require the workers to subscribe 5/- to Cotu directly through the check-off system.

The meeting, first since the organisation's general meeting last year, named its college here the Tom Mboya Labour College, Kisumu, in honour of the late minister's role in the labour movement. The meeting also amended other parts of its constitution and elected a 15-member executive board and five members of the finance committee.

The governing council tackled the cost of living and affirmed the recent data collection on prices and workers' basic requirements.

The council directed the organisation to sit with a team of economic experts to formulate what a worker should expect in view of the data collected.

The meeting added another rule to the constitution which stated: "The labour college which Cotu has now established at Kisumu may at any time at the discretion of the governing council be made the subject of a separate trust by transfer from the trustees of Cotu to separate trustees appointed by the executive board of all land buildings and equipments constituting the same upon such separate trusts (including provisions for administration thereof by a separate board of governors) as the executive board may determine.

"There shall also be paid or transferred to any such separate trustees of the said labour college for the purposes of the said trusts such funds or other assets of Cotu as the executive board may from time to time at its discretion resolve."

The following were elected to the executive board: Julius Malii, Stephen Mathuki, Martin Obare, Ali Mohamed, Samuel Mburu. Geofrey Ngao, Ochola Mak'Anyengo, Charles Nguta, Abdullah Muarua, Wafula Wamusamia, S. Muthoka, John Bosco, Benjamin Nzioka, O. Nyakanga, John Ogendo and Waweru.

The finance committee comprises Hank Van der Laan, Isaac Mohamed, Samuel Oyongo, John Kilonzo and Khalakuba.

Addressing a press conference after the meeting, Mr. Juma Boy, Cotu secretary-general, thanked members for accepting proposals which he said, would benefit the college at large. He said his committee was going to sit down with economic experts and formulate how much a worker should get.

The figures he released recently were just the minimum needs for a worker and not the union demands. "The union will demand a higher wage than the minimum needs," he added.

CSO: 4700/776

INFORMATION POLICY IS DUBBED VITAL

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 2 Feb 82 p 6

[Article by Jafred S. Musisi in column: "In My Opinion"]

[Text] A POLICY on Kenya's information is not only necessary, but essential and should therefore have been formulated "yesterday".

The reason for this is that the use of information has, for a long time been taken for granted, particularly by planners and decision-makers. As a result, information has been neglected, abused and indeed wasted.

This is so because information is not a commodity which, in economic terms, can be measured in units to which can be assigned particular values, nor can it be measured in financial terms.

Unfortunately, however, information needs are often recognised only when difficulties or failures are experienced. This happened in 1957 in US. The Russians launched their first sputnik an achievement which took the Americans by great surprise because the Americans did not think that the Russians had the technical capability to succeed in such a venture at that time.

However, this surprise turned to dismay and annoyance when the Americans discovered that the necessary technical developments had already been described in the Russian scientific literature and they could have therefore anticipated the launching. The only mistake with the Americans was that they had not read the Russian scientific literature.

After the launching of this sputnik, there was a frantic rush by the Americans into the cover-to-cover translation of Russian scientific journals!

Research

Coming home to East Africa, this lack of regard for the importance of information occurred in one of Kenya's scientific reaserch stations when an African director took over one of the E.A. Community research stations. He spent a great deal of time planning research projects only to discover later that practically every project he had planned had already been carried out before by the expatriate research workers who had left masses of data in files in the office.

Thus, he incurred a lot of unnecessary expenses by duplicating time and effort.

It is a truism that the establishment of an information policy assumes the fact that information is an important resource. It also assumes that the existing arrangements for the availability of information are inadequate.

Information is important to every human being if he is to effectively contribute to the economic, political and social development of a country as well as to its quality of life. Information is also a fundamental resource, just as energy or matter which affects all human activity.

This means that information is not only a national resource, vital to scientific and economic process, but also the medium of social communication and must thus be regarded as an essential commodity to which access must be everybody's basic right. Information, like oxygen in the air, is a universal resource.

Although everybody is born with apparatus to use oxygen, however, most people lack the ability to use information.

Another parallel is that while there are obvious signs whenever people suffer from lack of oxygen, it is not equally obvious whenever there is lack of non-use of information, even when people are illiterate due to lack of documented information. This illustrates how important information is.

Recognition of the importance of information has been revealed, firstly, by the National Committee on Educational Objectives and Policies (NCEOP, 1976) when it states clearly that there is need for curriculum change and innovation. The purpose for this change is to develop individualised learning through independent study and reading.

This concept implies the availability of information and free access to it by users. The second reason arises from the President when he asked every Kenyan to pull resources in order to eradicate illiteracy throughout the country by 1983. The implication here is that every Kenyan is expected to be made literate by being provided with the right information at the right time.

Important as information is, there are a lot of inadequencies. Even though information is available in the collections of library, documentation and archive services, the potential users of these facilities are unaware of their existence and the advantage they offer.

Reports

The worst examples are found in the Government departments and research stations where there are the bulk of highly trained and qualified research scientists producing masses of research reports. These research findings, only circulate internally ending up in confidential files instead of being disseminated to the people for whom it is intended.

The problem arising out of this poor organisation of information was voiced by Vice-President Mwai Kibaki when he said: "We who deal with planning are all aware that we do not make full use of the available information and knowledge in this country. More important, we are all aware that we do not have enough information in fields in which we do have to make decision.

"We are aware that statements we make are not backed up by detailed information. If we are challenged on the basis of our statements we could not substantiate them to an audience like you."

This statement was supported by Prof. J. Mungai whe he criticised the National Symposium on Industrial Research and Development at its seminar at KIA when he said that 90 per cent of research knowledge required by Kenya is already available and there is no need to talk about industrial research and development nor was there any need to engage Unesco experts.

The seminar organisers should have known this because Kenya almost got embarrassed when it invited an ILO mission to investigate into unemployment in Kenya. This consultancy did not bring in any magic except that the report which they produced for Kenya was a compilation of the information which already existed at the University of Nairobi!

The problem is co-ordination and co-operation of the information which is available in all the library, documentation and archive services in the country. In addition to this there will need to be established a National Bibliography linked with a National Book Development Council, both of which already exist at the Kenya National Library Service.

Guidelines

The Legal Deposit Law will also need to be revised as it is not only out of date and ineffective but also inadequate in its coverage.

It can be concluded that an information policy is necessary for Kenya because of a number of reasons. In the first place, it is undisputable fact that an informed citizenry is the infrastructure of its nation.

On the other hand, an information policy would set some guidelines which will assist the Government to establish machinery through which information will flow in a systematic way.

If there was already a National Information Policy, when the National Food Policy was created, for example, the need for information would have not been taken for granted as is reflected in that document. It has not been spelled out clearly how important it is for agricultural information to be organised and simplified for dissemination to both the semi-illiterate farmers as well as the consumers of agricultural produce.

A similar inclusion is clearly missing in the National Council for Science and Technology Act. Here again, there is no sign of how scientific research findings are going to be monitored throughout the country so that duplication can be avoided and also to discover gaps and initiate investigations.

An information scientist should have been the next person to be employed when the council engaged services of the secretary because it is this trained and qualified information scientist or librarian as they are commonly called, who should compile a list of researchers, who are investigating what problems and to reveal any gaps so that the council may be in a position to know which areas to look into for development.

In the absence of a policy on our national information, we are likely to find ourselves unaware of what information is where and for what.

CSO: 4700/776

SAFEGUARDS ASKED IN ARMING WANANCHI

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 20 Jan 82 p 6

[Editorial]

[Text]

IN late 1980 and early last year when the shifta problem had reached its highest level in recent times, leaders from the North-Eastern Province requested the Government to recruit and arm civilian homeguards to combat the problem.

When the request was made in Parliament by MPs from the area, the Government rejected it. The rationale behind the Government's rejection of the proposal was that arms given to civilians in the area could be used against the population or for purposes other than containing the shiftas.

Many of the shifta bandits were believed to be either local people or foreigners known to the residents of the affected areas, some of whom at times even gave shelter, food and other forms of assistance to the bandits. The Government, therefore, had a problem of sorting out who could be and who could not be trusted with guns as homeguards.

Towards January last year, senior Government officials were quoted as saying residents of Tana River District in Coast Province, which was also affected by the shifta menace, would be armed to fight the shiftas. This was never implemented, but the idea was to identify people of good record and character who were to be trained in the use of fire arms and installed as home guards.

Now, Eastern Provincial Commissioner, Mr. Isaiya Mathenge, is reported as saying a similar exercise will be carried out in the province, especially in divisions bordering Meru and Isiolo districts.

The security situation in some of those districts has been deteriorating lately with an increase in raids by cattle rustlers especially. Recently, the bandits killed a chief and his wife and wounded several members of his family.

In an effort to contain the situation, the Government has taken a number of stiff security measures, including raising the numbers of security personnel deployed in the area.

The biggest problem that the security forces in the area face is trying to identify the bandits who easily blend with the rest of the population and disappear until they are ready to strike again. The area the security forces have to cover is also so large and the various population centres so far apart that it is difficult to know where the bandits will strike next or get there fast enough once the bandits have struck.

Since many of the bandits are known, or at least suspected by the local population, they would have been rounded up by now if those residents only gave adequate information to the authorities to identify the bandits. Failing that, information about the movement of suspected bandits would assist the security forces track the shifta, either before or soon after they had committed their atrocities.

In spite of constant calls by the provincial administration officials in the area and Government Ministers from Nairobi, the response of the local population in this respect has not been very encouraging.

Setting up a kind of militia made up of armed homeguards in the area may be a good idea in itself. But, given the reluctance of some people in the affected areas to give the necessary information to track the bandits, the Government should be careful to ensure those given arms are totally loyal and committed to the eradication of the shifta problems.

CSO: 4700/776

KARIUKI SAYS MUTAI FREE TO RETURN TO KENYA

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 1 Feb 82 p 1

[Text]

MINISTER of State G.G. Kariuki said yesterday that former Eldoret North MP Chelagat Mutai was free to return to Kenya.

Mr. Kariuki, who is in charge of internal security, said he did not think the Kenya Government would issue a statement concerning Miss Mutai who has been granted refugee status in Tanzania.

Miss Mutai, the Minister told the Nation, was free to come back since she had fled to Tanzania on her own free will. "If she wants to continue staying in Tanzania she is free to do so and if she prefers keeping the title of refugee she can do so," said Mr. Kariuki.

"I do not think the Government would issue a statement at the moment concerning her status. The story about her being granted refugee status in Tanzania came only today. All of us in Kenya know that Miss Mutai went to Tanzania on her own accord. She has a home here and if she prefers the title of a refugee she can keep it," said Mr. Kariuki.

Reports from Dar es Salaam on Saturday said Miss Mutai had been granted refugee status by the Tanzanian Government.

Tanzania's Minister for Home Affairs, Brig. Muhiddin Kimario, announcing Miss Mutai's refugee status said: "Miss Mutai has been accepted as a refugee in this country on condition that she does not use Tanzania to subvert Kenya and its Government".

Soon after Miss Mutai's disappearance from Kenya in October Kenya officially requested the Tanzanian Government to confirm her presence in that country. But the Tanzanian Government then denied knowledge of that request. The two governments have a repatriation agreement which states that criminal offenders are required to be sent back to the country where the alleged crime was committed.

The Tanzanian Minister explained that Mutai — believed to be the first Kenyan to be accorded refugee status in Tanzania — was accepted in the country like any other refugee from Burundi, Rwanda, Zaire, South Africa or Malawi. He said his country's action was in line with the Geneva Convention and the Charter of the Organisation of African Unity.

The Minister said that under Tanzanian law, refugees were not categorised under political, economic, social or other groups and that was why Mutai was accepted simply as a refugee as opposed to being given political asylum which Mutai sought in her application on entering the country last year.

CSO: 4700/776

MP UMURO AMBUSHED, KILLED BY BANDITS

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 26 Jan 82 p 1

[Article by David Nderitu and Philip Wangalwa]

[Text]

MARSABIT North MP Alex Isaac Umuro was shot dead by bandits in an ambush between Marsabit and Isiolo.

The gangsters, believed to be shiftas, struck a few miles from Merille at 6.30 p.m. on Sunday when Mr. Umuro and six others were travelling in a Toyota pick-up on the Marsabit-Isiolo road.

Mr. Umuro died instantly and his mutilated body was found in the vehicle, with its engine still running, police said yesterday.

One of Mr. Umuro's companions was injured but the other five escaped unhurt into the bush. Mr. Bundi Murianki sustained facial injuries. He was admitted to Isiolo Hospital. He is reported to have said that he counted at least eight gangsters, all armed with rifles and dressed in army uniform.

He said they first fired flares to light up the on-coming pick-up and then started shooting from all directions.

Mr. Umuro collapsed and died in the first wave of fire. People in the area said they could hear the faint sound of shooting.

Police said Mr. Umuro's body was being flown to Nairobi for post-mortem yesterday afternoon.

Motive for the attack has not so far been established, but the authorities said bandits had frequently been ambushing vehicles in the area. Isiolo Central DO Aggrey Osango said that shortly after Mr. Umuro was killed, former Marsabit MP Elisha Godana was seriously injured when his car overturned after a tyre-burst.

He said Mr. Godana was taken to Isiolo District Hospital and that he might have to be transferred to Meru Hospital for further treatment.

Scene

Mr. Osango said the accident occurred only a few miles from the scene of the ambush when Mr. Godana was travelling to Isiolo.

Later reports said Mr. Umuro's car was ahead of a convoy of three other vehicles. The bonnet and the battery of one of the other cars was also shattered by the hail of bullets and the passengers had to escape into the bush.

Mr. Umuro was elected to Parliament in 1969 after defeating Mr. Godana by 1,619 votes against 769.

In 1974, he lost the seat to Mr. Godana, who polled 1,799 votes against Mr. Umuro's 1,721. Mr. Umuro recaptured the seat in 1979, again beating Mr. Godana by 7,318 votes to 1,719

Only recently, Eastern PC Isaya Mathenge said the Government was planning to arm civilians in the area to help control the shifta menace.

Early this month, two shiftas were killed and one captured by Somali security forces. Lamu DC Ben Makosewe told the Nation then that the shiftas were killed on New Year's Eve when they entered Somalia with 295 head of cattle stolen from Kenya.

In another dispatch from Maralal yesterday the Nation learned that five West German tourists were attacked and robbed of cash and property valued at several thousand shillings at Poro Crater, a few kilometres from Isiolo town.

The attackers, said to be armed with spears, swords and rungus, confronted the tourists as they were taking photographs.

The driver of the van, owned by a Nairobi travel firm, Mr. Joseph Sakwa, was slashed on the arm and was taken to Maralal district hospital.

●The managing director of the Minet Industrial and Commercial Development Corporation, Mr. John Murenga, was seriously injured when his Volvo overturned on the Nyeri-Kiganjo road in Nyeri.

Police said Mr. Murenga sustained spinal cord fractures and was rushed to Nyeri Provincial Hospital.

The accident occurred near Honi river.

CSO: 4700/776

MOI CALLS FOR END TO CORRUPTION

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 23 Jan 82 p 1

[Text] President Moi yesterday called for an end to corruption in the co-operative movement.

He said the movement was for the benfit of farmers and they must reap the fruits of their sweat.

Addressing a mammoth crowd at Kerugoya stadium, President Moi said that Kirinyaga District earned Sh. 184 million from coffee last year but only Sh. 120 million actually reached the growers.

"When I visit agricultural shows, I do not want co-operative officers to show me graphs of how much money has been made in the movement. I want to be told how much of this money reached the farmers' pocket," he said.

Corruption

President Moi said he had recently appointed a Commissioner for Co-operatives to clean up the movement of all corruption. However, this should be done in the right manner without any witch-hunting.

The President said that corruption in society was still a big problem and that even some educational institutions were making claims for salaries for teachers who had long since been dead. "This must stop," he said. He asked teachers and the people to give him full co-operation to enable him to wipe out corruption.

Accompanied by Vice-President Mwai Kibaki, several Cabinet Ministers, Assistant Ministers, MPs and senior Government officials, President Moi renewed his call for the preservation of forests.

President Moi directed that committees be appointed under the chairmanship of provincial commissioners to safeguard forests.

He said the committees would determine the number of servants required in an area. "I do not want to go into history as the President who allowed the destruction of forests," he said, adding that his directives should be properly interpreted and implemented. He said forest workers should be assisted in forming co-operatives so that they too could benefit from forests.

Congratulating the people of Central Province for digging bench terraces for soil conservation, the President said the purpose of the liberation struggle for land would be meaningless if soil was allowed to be washed into the Indian Ocean.

On Kirinyaga politics, the President lined up the three MPs from the area Mr. Kiragu Stephen, who is deputy Kanu chief whip, Assistant Transport and Communications Minister Nahashon Njuno, and Assistant Health Minister James Njiru and asked the people to work together with them as their elected leaders.

Buried

Earlier, Mr. Njiru told the President that the three had buried their differences and decided to work in unity.

On the disputed ownership of Mwea land, President Moi dismissed an earlier suggestion by Mr. Njuno that the matter be taken to court for arbitration. He said all land disputes would be solved by elders adding that the Eastern PC, Central PC and the Minister for Culture and Social Services, Mr. Jeremiah Nyagah, should see to it that all people in the area had been properly settled.

He warned against favouritism in the granting of Mwea land saying that any leader found practising favouritism would be delt with severely.

On education, the President congratulated Kirinyaga District for coming fourth in this year's CPE results as a rural district.

He said the first rural district in CPE results was Nyeri, followed by Siaya. Murang'a was third.

Thanking the teachers for the good performance in CPE, President Moi told parents they should reward the devotion of teachers who enabled Kirinyaga pupils perform well by building them good school houses.

CSO: 4700/776

KAMERE WARNS BUSINESSES AGAINST BRIBES

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 30 Jan 82 p 3

[Text]

ATTORNEY-GENERAL Joseph Kamere yesterday warned businessmen against bribing civil servants.

He said giving and receiving bribe was a serious offence and that corrupt officials and traders would be prosecuted.

Addressing the Kenya National Chamber of Commerce and Industry monthly luncheon, Mr. Kamere said the Government was determined to root out the "cancer of corruption" from society.

Many civil servants were doing a good job just as many businessmen were playing an important role in development, he said.

But some people in the Civil Service and in the business community were fond of chai (tea), which had become the nickname for bribery, Mr. Kamere added.

He recalled that at one time, smuggling magendo was commonplace but the Government had stamped it out.

He appealed to people in industries and those in general business not to bribe public servants for any service rendered.

He said Nyayoism could not exist side-by-side with corruption. This was why the Government was determined to wipe out all elements of corruption, and all wananchi and foreigners living here should support President Moi in this exercise, he added.

The Kenya National Chamber of Commerce and Industry chairman, Mr. Francis Macharia, had earlier introduced Mr. Kamere to the chamber officials at the luncheon.

Mr. Macharia thanked the Government for co-operating with the business community. He said many traders had access to Government offices which was good for business.

He however noted that these were now difficult times and businessmen were not making money contrary to what many people thought and added: "We therefore appeal for an understanding of these hard realities on the part of our Government when it comes to the introduction of new or higher levies, at least until our economy is on sound footing, otherwise any hasty decisions could very well kill the goose that lays the golden eggs."

Campaign

The chamber resolved to continue with intensive with export campaign, by sending trade delegations to various countries.

Uganda, Egpty, Sudan and Djibouti are the countries listed to be visited by trade delegations from Kenya before going to Europe this year.

A Somali trade delegation will be coming soon and the Soviet Chamber of Commerce and Industry is expected here next month, the meeting was told.

The A-G was accompanied by the deputy Public Prosecutor, Mr. Sharad Rao.

Nicholas Gor, Kamukunji MP who is also the chairman of the Export Promotion committee, hailed the recent trade exhibitions by Kenyans held in Britain.

He however urged the Government to find ways to stop tourists from coming to Kenya with vouchers only after paying all the money abroad.

CSO: 4700/776

FRANCO-KENYAN TALKS OPEN

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 2 Feb 82 p 5

[Text] Negotiations have opened in Nairobi in which Kenya and France seek new areas of mutual economic and cultural co-operation.

France flew in a special team of six experts to negotiate a "Kenya-France joint commission". They were joined at the talks by the French Ambassador to Kenya, Mr Roger Duzer, and embassy officials.

Negotiations cover the wide-ranging fields of co-operation, including general education in higher institutions of learning, co-operation in mass-media and the teaching of French.

At these talks, scheduled to last about four days, the Kenyan team, which consists of representatives from the Ministries of Information, Higher Education, Transport and Communications and the Treasury, is being led by Mr Simeon Shitemi, director of the external aid department of the Treasury.

The negotiators expressed hope that the talks would come to a successful end and remarked on the wide knowledge the French people had on Africa.

The meeting is the second of the Kenya-France joint commission. Mr Patrick Imhaus, leading the French team, said Kenya was one of the countries in Africa with which France would like to strengthen relations.

France had long history of relations with Africa, particularly since it was a major colonial power in West Africa.

Yesterday the meeting was told that France now wanted good relations with all of Africa, not just West Africa.

Mr Shitemi said he was impressed with the way the French ruled in North and West Africa. He said the French, "unlike the British" who ruled this part of Africa, did not build schools based on racial segregation.

Mr Shitemi said there was a need to teach French as this would enable Kenya to understand what was going on in other parts of the world.

CSO: 4700/776

MOI TALKS WITH DUTCH DELEGATION

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 23 Jan 82 p 20

[Text]

PRESIDENT Moi yesterday at State House, Nairobi, held discussions with members of the visiting Netherlands parliamentary committee.

The delegation, which arrived in Kenya last week for a nine-day visit, was led by Dutch Ambassador E. Tydemann. The members visited several Dutch assisted livestock and agricultural projects, particularly in western Kenya. They leave for San'a, North Yemen, this morning.

A Dutch parliamentary committee visits Third World countries every year to assess and review development projects being assisted by their government.

Netherlands ranks fourth among Kenya's major aid donors, after the World Bank, United Kingdom and West Germany.

Some of the projects being assisted by the Dutch Government is the agriculture, water, transport and communications and livestock development.

The delegation is being led by Mr. H.J.D. Aarts, who is a member of the ruling Christian Democratic Party.

Poverty

President Moi thanked the Dutch Government for its continued assistance to Kenya, particularly in her efforts to alleviate poverty, and in development projects.

Among those who attended the talks were Vice-President Mwai Kibaki, two Ministers of State in the Office of the President, Mr. Nicholas Biwott and Mr. G.G. Kariuki, Assistant Foreign Minister Kamwithi Munyi, an Assistant Minister for Culture and Social Services, Mr. Stanley Metto, Chief Secretary, Jeremiah Kiereini and the Director of External Aid in the Treasury, Mr. Alfred Amisi.

At another function the Speaker of the National Assembly, Mr. F.M.G. Mati, said Kenya was non-aligned because of its determination to promote national and international peace, love, and unity under the leadership of President Moi.

And he said Kenya was proud to know that it has close friends like the Netherlands.

Mr. Mati was speaking to the Dutch delegation who called on him at Parliament Buildings yesterday.

CSO: 4700/776

MOI LAUDS KENYAN TROOPS IN CHAD

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 16 Jan 82 pp 1, 24

[Text]

PRESIDENT Moi yesterday said the Kenyan contingent in the Organisation of African Unity (OAU) peace-keeping force in Chad is doing an excellent job in defending democracy in a sister African country.

The President also thanked the six other African nations, including Nigeria, Zaire and Senegal, for contributing troops to OAU operations in trouble-torn Chad.

President Moi, who is the current OAU Chairman, said it was the first time the organisation had mobilised a peace-keeping force for defending democracy.

Referring to "the great sacrifice in maintaining the force," the President said it required much money and the "six countries should be commended".

President Moi was speaking at the passing-out parade of 1,348 Army and Air Force recruits at the Armed Forces Training College, Lanet, Nakuru.

South-West African People's Organisation (SWAPO), president Sam Nujoma and Nigerian Foreign Minister Ishaya Audu were among hundreds of guests who attended the parade.

President Moi introduced them to the recruits who have completed five months of rigorous training.

He praised the armed forces for maintaining peace in Kenya, saying that, unlike some other African countries, Kenya had a disciplined army. The President urged the recruits to emulate those who graduated from the college before them. This way, he said, the people will continue to have confidence in you.

Earlier, after introducing Mr. Nujoma, President Moi wished the people of Namibia a speedy independence and assured Mr. Nujoma of Kenya's full support in his struggle for independence.

President Moi said the Nigerian Foreign Minister had come with a special message from President Shehu Shagari.

President Moi yesterday conferred with the President of Swapo, Mr. Sam Nujoma at State House, Nakuru.

The Swapo delegation came to report to the OAU Chairman on the progress of liberation activities in Namibia. Mr. Nujoma was accompanied by the Swapo secretary for Foreign Relations, Mr. Peter Mueshange, a member of Swapo Central Committee, Mr. Kapuka Nauyala and Swapo's Representative in East Africa, Netumbo Nandi.

At another function, the President met the Nigerian Minister for External Affairs, Professor Ishaya Audu.

CSO: 4700/776

KENYA GIVES $500,000 to SWAPO

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 16 Jan 82 p 24

[Text]

KENYA yesterday gave US $½ million to the President of South West African People's Organisation, Mr. Sam Nujoma, to assist Namibia's liberation war, Foreign Minister Robert Ouko said last night.

Dr. Ouko said the balance of another half-million dollars will be given later. The money was a pledge made last year by President Moi, he said.

He said Swapo will use the money any way it chooses.

And Mr. Nujoma, who was present during the announcement, said the money will be used in Kenya to buy materials urgently needed by guerrillas in Namibia.

Thanking President Moi for the "generous gift", Mr. Nujoma said the money will be used to buy medicine, blankets, children's clothes and other materials needed by the fighters.

Asked what his position was, regarding the proposals made by the Contact Group, Mr. Nujoma said he was opposed to the idea of a Bantustan-type electoral system.

He said the Contact Group had proposed that there must be a mixed electoral system. "There must be one electoral system as the one being practised in Kenya," Mr. Nujoma said.

Mr. Nujoma expressed disappointment that even the Contact Group who had proposed the idea did not practise the same in their own countries.

Dr. Ouko was accompanied by his Permanent Secretary, Mr. Joe Muchemi, and a deputy secretary in-charge of OAU affairs in his Ministry, Mr. Bernard Adundo.

CSO: 4700/776

OLOITIPITIP DISCUSSES LUO POLITICS

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 30 Jan 82 p 6

[Interview with Oloitipitip by John Esibi]

[Text] ON January 12, Local Government Minister Stanley Oloitipitip sparked off a controversy when he accused Luos of voting out pro-Government leaders. Some Luo politicians, among them Ugenya MP James Orengo, objected to the statement. Mr. Orengo even asked Mr. Oloitipitip not to interfere in the affairs of the community. On January 28, Mr. Oloitipitip again castigated Luos, asking: "If a leader is a Nyayo follower, why do you vote him out?"

Here News Editor John Esibi questions Mr. Oloitipitip.

Q. Your remarks that the Luo community is fond of voting out of Parliament pro-Government leaders and therefore "Nyayo supporters" have generated a public debate. In fact some people now think you are at logger-heads with certain Luo personalities. Can you clarify the issue?

A. I am not at war with either the Luo leaders, or the Luo community as a whole. In fact ever since I became the Minister for Local Government Affairs, I have travelled wide and far to nearly every part of Luoland to see for myself development and problems there.

Since I became the Minister in this Ministry I have authorised over 100 million shillings to develop various local authorities in Luoland.

This explains therefore that personally, I have no quarrel with the Luo community. Nor do I have a quarrel with the leaders there. All I did when I was addressing wananchi in the Luoland, was ask the Luos if it was not time they thought twice.

I told them that the Luo community stayed in isolation for the last 12 years, before the Nyayo Government took over. I told them that this habit of throwing out the "Nyayo Ministers" will not assist them in developing their land.

If a strong supporter of Nyayo Government is thrown out of Parliament. . . then what do you think the people stand to gain from that type of politics?

Q. In your opinion, who are the pro-Nyayo Luo leaders who have been kicked out of Parliament through the ballot?

A. That is an obvious and open secret in Luoland. And I am sure you know them as well. For example I could enumerate quite a number of them.

Take the case of ex-Minister for Power and Communications Mr. Isaac Omolo Okero. He is the national Kanu chairman. He was voted out of Parliament just because he was a staunch supporter of Nyayo.

Another example is that of Mr. Mathews Ogutu who at one time during his term in Parliament was a Government Minister. He too was thrown out.

That is not all. I am told that even the current Ministers from Luoland are not all that safe. Go further and analyse the political situation in Luoland. How many Government Ministers were voted out of Parliament during the Kenyatta Government?

People like Mr. Odongo Omamo (now the MP for Bondo), Mr. Odero-Jowi (former MP for Ndhiwa and also one time a Government Minister) were thrown out. If the trend is going to be left to carry on like that ...then when will there ever be development in the Luoland?

Q. If what you are saying Mr. Oloitipitip is true, then one would be tempted to think that the MPs who took over from the ones who were voted out are not "Nyayo supporters". But how come that some of the replacements in Luoland are currently Government Ministers? Are you not arguing that their replacements, even though they are in the Government, are in fact anti-Nyayo?

A. No, I have not said that. First of all the one who replaced Mr. Omamo later was not in the Government. Incidentally Mr. Omamo recaptured his seat.

Same as the one who replaced Mr. Ogutu. He is not a Government Minister. These two were from Siaya alone. And as you very well know. . . a Minister is someone who ought to be respected.

A Minister is someone who is expected to make greater decisions for the benefit of their respective people. So I am not implying that they are not Nyayo supporters. Many of them say they are.

We know many of them are Nyayo supporters.... But why is this habit of throwing Ministers of the Government of day out of Parliament?

So all I was telling the Luo community was that, in order to remain in good books with the Government of the time, please think twice before you drop all or some of the Ministers out of Parliament.

If you do that, you are bound to have a new person altogether and it takes a bit of time for such a person to acquaint himself with the local problems.

Q. But it would appear that the Luo community could as well argue that the MPs they bring to Parliament are what they consider true Nyayo supporters. The fact that an MP is not a Cabinet Minister may not necessarily mean one is not a true Nyayo supporter. What is your opinion on this concept Mr. Oloitipitip?

A. I entirely agree with you. But I was just merely cautioning them when I said that. But what we hear, is that many of those who were thrown out of Parliament were very close to the Nyayo philosophy.

Q. I would like to refer you Mr. Minister to a specific case. Take for example in Ndiwa Constituency. The MP who defeated a former MP is in this Government as an Assistant Minister. Are you implying that Mr. Owigo Olang', an Assistant Minister and the MP is not supporting this Government?

A. Mr. Olang' is a true Nyayo supporter and he knows that even himself. He equally knows all what I am talking about.

Q. What is your impression regarding former Vice-President and former MP for Bondo, Mr. Oginga Odinga when it comes to politics governing the Luoland? Would you classify him as pro- or anti-Nyayo leader?

A. That one, I don't know. As far as I know Mr. Odinga is now politically no longer a leader. Therefore anybody trying to follow him is merely wasting his/her own time.

Q. Back on Luo politics, it would appear public opinion in Luoland is such that you are interfering with their own internal affairs ... suggesting who and how they should elect their leaders. How would the Masai take it if a Luo personality were to go around advising them exactly just on that?

A. I have not said and never will I ever advise the Luos as to who they should elect to Parliament. They have the freedom to do that. But all I am saying is that those they have elected, and have been given a chance by the President to become Ministers, should be given a chance to deliver the goods.

I will never tell the Luo that vote to Parliament so and so. Even myself... I don't know whether I will be re-elected, as the elections is not something one can be sure of.

Incidentally, one of the current Luo MPs who castigated me last week for having said that, (Mr. James Orengo) has himself gone on record just advising the people in Nyeri as to who they should vote to Parliament!

Q. Incidentally Mr. Oloitipitip considering the fact that Kenya is an open society which strictly speaking adheres to its constitution don't you think your views tantamount to going against the constitution?

A. I know the very constitution you are talking about. All I am giving them is fatherly advice.

Q. How is the political climate now in Masailand? Sometimes back there was some bickerings involving you as a person. What would you say the situation is like there?

A. Things are now all right. We have patched up our differences with my colleagues in Masailand. Hon. John Keen and myself are now true Nyayo leaders. We have no problem any more.

We decided to resolve our former differences in order to assist our President. And that is exactly what I am appealing to my colleagues to do in Luoland and elsewhere in Kenya.

Q. Which means that there isn't going to be much change in the Masailand in the forthcoming General Elections since you are opposed to national leaders being voted out of Parliament?

A. That, I don't know. It is hard to be sure of that.

CSO: 4700/776

OLOITIPITIP LASHES OUT AT LUOS

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 21 Jan 82 p 5

[Text]

LOCAL Government Minister Stanley Oloitipitip has attacked Luos who campaign against highly-placed Nyanza leaders during elections.

The Minister said Luos often voted out of office leading politicians who could benefit the nation. The practice, he said, had retarded development in Nyanza.

Mr. Oloitipitip was addressing a large gathering outside Homa Bay County Council offices.

The Minister upgraded Homa Bay and Migori to towns and Karungu to urban status.

"Although there were many highly educated Luos, the Minister said, Nyanza was still behind in development.

"People of this area should have nobody to blame if they do not reap the fruits of freedom during the Nyayo era," he said.

He gave a total of Sh. 34,840,000 to the four local authorities.

Of that Sh. 11,820,000 will go to projects in Homa Bay town, Migori will receive Sh. 11 million, Karungu Sh. 6.5 million. Homa Bay County Council was given Sh. 5 million for the development of Lambwe Valley game reserve and a modern market at Oyugis town.

Mr. Oloitipitip was accompanied by South Nyanza MPs, Local Government Permanent Secretary, Andrew Ligale, Assistant Minister Fred Gumo, Nairobi Mayor Nathan Kahara and acting DC J. A. Kamau.

He blasted traders who overcharged on essential commodities such as Omo, sugar and cement saying such traders should be apprehended and dealt with.

Mr. Oloitipitip said the Government, under the wise leadership of President Moi, could not allow wananchi to be exploited by get-rich-quick traders.

Earlier the Minister addressed civic leaders at the Homa Bay council chamber and hailed the co-operation among local authorities.

CSO: 4700/776

LUO MPS COMMENT ON OLOITIPITIP

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 22 Jan 82 pp 1, 32

[Text]

LOCAL Government Minister Stanley Oloitipitip was yesterday challenged over his recent statement concerning Luos voting out leading politicians.

Ugenya MP James Orengo said the Luos were not "feudalists and did not have paramount chiefs who rule forever". He said the people had the right to elect those they wanted every five years.

Mr. Orengo said Mr. Oloitipitip's statement was "unfortunate" and implied that the Minister did not recognise or value the constitutional rights of Kenyans to elect leaders of their choice.

He was reacting to a statement made by Mr. Oloitipitip in Homa Bay on Wednesday that the practice by Luos to campaign against highly-placed Nyanza leaders had retarded development in Luoland.

"People of this area (Nyanza) should have nobody to blame if they do not reap the fruits of freedom during the Nyayo era," Mr. Oloitipitip had remarked.

Mr. Oloitipitip also reportedly condemned the Luo political trend to always drop leaders close to the Government during the elections, particularly national leaders who could benefit the entire nation, not just the Luos.

Mr. Orengo said: "This is an open Government which should work with all elected by wananchi, not only with those liked by Mr. Oloitipitip."

The Minister's implication that the Government would only work with certain people and not others, Mr. Orengo said, was against the "fundamental dictates of democracy; it can shake the very foundation of good government."

"The statements by the Minister are against those made by the President that all Kenyans are Nyayo people and, therefore, the question of some being closer to the Government than others does not arise," Mr. Orengo said.

"Such careless statements are bound to bring disorder and instability because those who were defeated in the last elections can use these against the incumbent MPs," he added.

On retarded development in Nyanza, he said: "As far as I am concerned, there's a development plan every five years for the whole country, Nyanza included, and the Government is supposed to execute it. If the implementation of the plans in Nyanza is not carried out, it means the province has not been getting its cake and the Government must look into this. It implies some people are playing dirty politics against Nyanza."

He said the Luos were hard-working people and were working hand-in-hand with the Government.

Later, Energy Minister John Okwanyo supported the statement by Mr. Oloitipitip.

"There are many senior Luo politicians who have been voted out of Parliament who could have been beneficial to the country", he said.

Mr. Okwanyo said there was no need to be angry about Mr. Oloitipitip's statement. "I think he spoke the truth. Everyone has seen it", he added.

CSO: 4700/776

OLOITIPITIP DISAVOWS CHARGES THAT HE IS AMBITIOUS

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 25 Jan 82 p 3

[Text]

LOCAL Government Minister Stanley Oloitipitip at the weekend said he was not ambitious for any post and was quite satisfied with his present one.

And he said he would continue to discharge the duties bestowed upon him by President Moi without fear or favour.

Mr. Oloitipitip was speaking at a ceremony in Nyahururu where he installed Councillor C.B. Njoroge as Mayor of the newly upgraded Nyahururu Municipal Council.

Mr. Njoroge was chairman of the former county council.

The ceremony which took place at Nyahururu, was witnessed by a Minister of State in the Office of the President, Mr. G.G. Kariuki, Nairobi Mayor Nathan Kahara who is chairman of the Association of Local Government Authorities of Kenya, Assistant Ministers Ngala, Gumo, and Munene Kariuki, the District Comissioners of Nyahururu and Laikipia, Mr. Mohammed Hadji and Peter Kabiro, respectively, some councillors and civil servants.

Mr. Oloitipitip announced that a total of Sh. 70 million would be given to the new municipality, some of which was already being used to improve water and sewage systems and roads.

"Out of this grant, Sh. 2 million will be used to establish a fire station, Sh. 1 millio to tarmac Koinange Road and 500,000/- to build a modern slaughter house for the municipality," he said.

He thanked Kenyans for being peace- loving and deplored the few who were misled for selfish ends.

Mr. Oloitipitip appealed to the new municipal officers and councillors to work closely as a team under their new mayor to be able to deliver goods to the residents.

Welcoming Mr. Oloitipitip, Mr. Kariuki said Nyahururu was the 20th municipality in Kenya.

CSO: 4700/776

OLOITIPITIP HOLDS TO STATEMENT ON LUOS

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 29 Jan 82 p 1

[Text]

LOCAL Government Minister Stanley Oloitipitip said yesterday he would not withdraw last week's statement about Luos voting out leading politicians.

"If a leader is a Nyayo follower, why do you vote him out?" Mr. Oloitipitip asked, adding that it was not his intention to divide the Luo community over the issue.

He advised Luos to vote for someone who could go to the President and ask for something and be able to get it. "Our loyalty should be direct to the President and not through a second person," Mr. Oloitipitip told a delegation of councillors from the Siaya County and Town councils and the Ukwala Urban Council.

Luos, he said, should follow the adage: "if you cannot beat them, join them".

It was imprudent for some Kenyans to form small camps, he said, adding that even then they could achieve nothing.

"If I retire from politics today, I am not going to direct the Masais whom to vote for," he said, adding that the Masai knew the true Nyayo follower and would vote for him.

Saying he had agreed that Siaya County Council, Siaya Town Council and Ukwala Urban Council be granted a Sh. 23 million loan for developing the local authorities, the Minister wondered: "Is this dividing the Luo people?"

He said since he became Local Government Minister, Sh. 107 million more had been spent in developing local authorities in the Luo community.

Appealing to the Luo community to join others in national development, Mr. Oloitipitip said the country could not do without the Luos, especially because most were very educated.

"We have one President and one nation," the Minister told the councillors.

Saying that patience pays, the Minister said he patiently remained an Assistant Minister from 1964 to 1974 when he was made a Cabinet Minister.

He said he had up-graded many local authorities not because of political grounds but because they qualified to be up-graded and would enhance development. "When we up-grade a local authority we expect the elected councillors to bring about development such as water, sewerage, tarmacking streets and installing electricity," he said.

He told Siaya County Council and Siaya Town Council to stop quarrelling over the ownership of the market in Siaya town. He directed the market be owned by the Town Council which should be responsible for the loan used to build the market

CSO: 4700/776

OLOITIPITIP RAPS ODINGA'S 'JESUS ROLE'

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 30 Jan 82 pp 1, 20

[Article by Gideon Mulaki: "Minister Now Hits Out at Odinga"]

[Text]

LOCAL Government Minister Stanley Oloitipitip yesterday criticised former Vice-President Jaramogi Oginga Odinga for assuming the "role of Jesus" among Luos.

He wondered why people should pass through Mr. Odinga for his blessings for success in any political venture.

Addressing an executive committee meeting of the Association of the Local Government Authorities of Kenya (ALGAK) in Nairobi, Mr. Oloitipitip asked: "Is Mr. Odinga not just a human being like others?"

Mr. Oloitipitip said Mr. Odinga resigned from vice-presidency and later formed political party. He was later given a post by President Moi from which he also resigned, he said.

During this period, he said, Mr. Odinga had caused confusion among Luos and divided them.

Mr. Oloitipitip said he never said Luos were disloyal. "I would be mad to condemn the entire Luo society by saying they are disloyal," he said, adding: "I refute this categorically."

Mr. Oloitipitip said he had earlier advised newspapers not to publish destructive stories. He urged newspapers not to think of high sales by publishing "bad news" and added that, "when things get worse, the newspapermen will not have a special plane to escape".

He said he always preached peace and unity and that what he had said in Homa Bay was an appeal to Luos not to vote out leaders who were closer and loyal to the Government.

He wondered how people could develop if they kept throwing out experienced politicians even councillors. In this regard, he cited the examples of Mr. Okiki Amayo, Mr. Mathews Ogutu and Mr. Isaac Omolo Okero, among others.

"I never said that useless people should not be voted out. But why should people be voted out because they have not been blessed by so and so? he said.

Mr. Oloitipitip said he was a Minister appointed by President Moi for the whole country and that he had the right to advise in any part of Kenya.

Thanking the Minister, South Nyanza County Council chairman Eliab Ojow said Mr. Oloitipitip never insulted Luos when he visited the area.

He said the Minister only stressed unity and direct loyalty to the President.

●Mr. Oloitipitip yesterday clarified in an interview with the Nation that he never said all Luos were disloyal to President Moi and the Government.

"I am not at war with either the Luo leaders or the community," Mr. Oloitipitip said.

CSO: 4700/776

TANZANIA, KENYA PONDER BORDER OPENING

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 20 Jan 82 pp 1, 24

[Text] Tanzania's Foreign Minister Salim Ahmen Salim said in Nairobi yesterday the state of affairs in East Africa regarding the closure of the Kenya-Tanzania border was not the best.

Mr. Salim said the opening of the border will depend on normalisation of relations between Kenya, Uganda and Tanzania, the erstwhile partners in the now defunct East African Community (EAC).

He said the question of reopening the border could not be dealt with in isolation. "Everything is being done towards that end," Mr. Salim said on arrival at Jomo Kenyatta International Airport. He said the three States must lay the foundation of solid understanding and friendship.

He was in Nairobi for a few hours to deliver a message from Tanzanian President Julisu Nyerere to President Moi, the current Chairman of the Organisation of African Unity (OAU). He left for Dar es Salaam in the afternoon.

Mr. Salim said all the three countries wanted to normalise relations.

"The meeting of the ministers concerned in respect to the assets of the Community and everything related thereto will be taking place in July. I think all these are part of the efforts to normalise relations", he said.

"We are really determined to do everything possible to normalise relations and it is in that spirit that the question of the border must be considered", he said.

Tanzania closed its border with Kenya in July 1977, following the collapse of the East African Community, of which Uganda was also a partner. Since then, Tanzania has insisted on a satisfactory sharing of the assets of the Community as one of the conditions for agreeing to reopen the border.

Under the Community, Kenya, Uganda and Tanzania had common railways, posts and telecommunications, customs and airline among other services.

According to the World Bank-appointed mediator, Prof. Victor Umbricht, the liabilities and assets of the EAC are estimated to be worth Sh. 10 billion.

The Community's offices were based in Kenya, Uganda and Tanzania to provide common services in the region, with headquarters in Arusha, Tanzania. Dr. Umbricht's assignment followed the collapse of the EAC.

On the recently-signed East, Central and Southern Africa Preferential Trade Area (PTA) agreement, Mr. Salim said the only reason why Tanzania did not sign the treaty was that, "in our consideration of the situation we felt that considering our present obligations and some of the problems that we have, we will not be in a position to faithfully and actively implement the requirements of the agreement".

He said Tanzania's decision not to sign the agreement had nothing to do with the reopening of the border.

On his candidancy for the post of United Nations secretary-general, Mr. Salim said he did not understand why the United States cast its veto against him in the Security Council."No public or private explanation was given by the US", he said.

"You cannot have a socialist or capitalist UN secretary-general. In fact, I was not a Tanzanian candidate, but an African candidate", he said.

Mr. Salim said he was grateful to Presidents Moi and Nyerere for their support during his bid for the post. "Everything that could be done was done", he said.

Mr. Salim, whose candidature was vetoed several times by the US and he was forced to withdraw, said: "I suspect that part of the problem is the stereotype perceptions that people tend to have about individuals or other people. But essentially I think that one issue to be recognised is that the US is a permanent member of the Security Council. Like any other permanent member, they have their own perception of things and in that perception they felt that, given the circumstances, they could not support my candidature."

CSO: 4700/776

PRESIDENT NAMES ACTING CHIEF JUSTICE

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 28 Jan 82 p 1

[Text]

PRESIDENT Moi yesterday appointed Mr. Alfred Henry Simpson Acting Chief Justice in the place of Sir James Wicks, who is proceeding on leave.

Mr. Simpson was sworn in at State House, Nairobi, by the acting Registrar of the High Court, Mr. J.S. Patel, and was witnessed by Attorney-General Joseph Kamere, Chief Secretary Jeremiah Kiereini and a Permanent Secretary in the President's Office, Mr. Mr. Simon Nyachae.

Mr. Simpson has been a High Court judge since 1967.

President Moi said the post carried heavy responsibilities and wished Mr. Simpson success.

President Moi said the foundation of the country largely depended on the judiciary and added: "It is the expectation of every Kenyan that justice is not only seen to be done, but is actually done."

The President added that the judiciary should dispense justice to all without fear or favour "and should not be influenced by one's status in life".

President Moi urged Mr. Simpson to try and treat all people in accordance with the country's constitution.

Mr. Simpson thanked the President for appointing him to the post and assured him he would always uphold the judiciary's integrity. He said he would at all times be loyal to the President.

Before coming to Kenya, Mr. Simpson was deputy Public Prosecutor and crown counsel in Singapore between 1948 and 1956.

In 1956 he served as Solicitor-General in Ghana (then Gold-Coast) and twice acted as Attorney-General shortly before and after Ghana became independent. He subsequently became a High Court Judge in Ghana.

Mr. Simpson graduated with a Masters degree at St. Andrews University in 1935 and later achieved LL.B. before becoming a solicitor in 1938.

He became a barrister in New Southwales, Australia, before coming to Kenya.

CSO: 4700/776

CHIEF JUSTICE SWEARS IN NEW ADVOCATES

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 19 Jan 82 p 28

[Text]

TWENTY-THREE advocates were yesterday sworn and admitted to the High Court by the Chief Justice, Sir James Wicks.

After the swearing in ceremony the Chief Justice advised them to work diligently as officers of the court.

"You should assist the judges and magistrates in the maintenance of law, and order in this country," Sir James told them.

He reminded them to always avoid delays and to expedite matters that came before them.

He warned them against deciding on cases before they were heard in full, and warned against abandoning their clients half-way through the cases.

"Don't come to the conclusion of a case before you hear all the evidence. If you are at the Bar you should persue your clients case up to the end. If you are at the bench, do not decide the case until you have heard all the evidence and heard the address of the parties. If you fail to do this you will fail in your duty at that level," he added.

Those sworn were: Abdulhamid Mohamed Haji Aboo, Christine A. Mbara, Philip Murumba Karani, Philip Richard Okanda Owade, Jane Regina Matoke, Beatrice Njeri Mbugua, Stanley Omburru-Otema Ramogo, Clifford Owuor Rachuonyo, Meshack Johns Raboso Guto, Robinson Njeru Githae, Violet Amadi, Stephen N. W. Kinyanjui Kibunja, Abigail Lydia Shiganga, Yohanine Hedwig Kibukosya, Ernest Kahiro Kimani, Elizabeth Wambui Gakuya, Anne Albertor Athieno Chite, Perpetua Wambui Karanja, Maina Murage, Ann Muthoni Mbugua, Dominic Mukui Kimatta, Francis Eric Wasuna and Ann Wangeci Kariuki.

CSO: 4700/776

KENYA TO HOST EUCHARIST CONGRESS

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 19 Jan 82 p 1

[Text]

PRESIDENT Moi yesterday received a special message from Pope John Paul II addressed to all Catholics and the nation as a whole.

The message was delivered by Cardinal Maurice Otunga who is also the Archbishop of Nairobi, at Nakuru State House.

Cardinal Otunga was accompanied by the Vatican representative in Nairobi, the Bishop of Ngong, the Most Reverend Collin Davis and the Bishop of Nakuru, the Most Reverend Ndingi Mwana wa Nzeki.

Nairobi has been chosen by Pope John Paul II as the site for the 43rd International Eucharistic Congress. This was made public yesterday at the Vatican.

The event will bring thousands to Kenya at a date to be fixed in July-August 1985, a Press statement by the Apostolic Nunciature in Nairobi said last night.

An International Eucharistic Congress is a world gathering of Catholics, whose purpose is theological reflection and spiritual renewal, centred on the mystery of the Holy Eucharist, the sacrament of unity and charity. The Congress consists of a cultural aspect: dedicated to the study of the theme of the Congress; and a liturgical aspect: calling thousands of people to prayer before the sacrament which is the source of the Church's life.

Such congresses have been held regularly since 1881, except in times of war. The Pope usually participates at each Congress in the person of a specially designated Cardinal Legate.

A local committee will organise the preparations for the complex event, with various commissions being assigned to deal with programme matters, spiritual readiness, publicity and press, transport and accommodation, etc. The Congress usually lasts five days.

Previous congresses have been held: in Melbourne (1973), in Philadelphia (1976) and, most recently, in Lourdes (1981).

CSO: 4700/776

EX-PRESS CHIEF SUES NG'WENO

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 15 Jan 82 p 26

[Article by Irungu Ndirangu]

[Text]

FORMER head of the Presidential Press Unit Wamatu Njoroge has filed a libel suit against Mr. Hilary Ng'weno, editor of the Weekly Review and its sister publications, and the Press Trust of Kenya.

Mr. Njoroge, who is currently Deputy Secretary in the Ministry of Water Development, complains of a "malicious" story published in the Weekly Review on or about August 14.

The suit filed in the High Court through Mr. P.S.K. Kimiti, names the Press Trust of Kenya as the first defendant and Mr. Ng'weno as the second. The plaint says the defendants, without lawful cause or justification, maliciously wrote and published a story entitled "The Press: Sudden Fall, Wamatu Njoroge Sacked".

Mr. Njoroge lists three "principal untruths," ten damaging innuendoes and in the story prays for judgment in his favour on five grounds.

He says he never was sent on six-months' terminal leave, never retired and was never sacked from the service.

Mr. Njoroge says the story insinuates that he —

- is generally incompetent and lacks quality
- is unworthy of the position he holds in Civil Service,
- has insatiable ambitions
- is a grabber, reckless and generally dishonest
- the story was circulated throughout the country
- his esteem was lowered and his social standing damaged, he was subjected to public ridicule and was injured in his profession.

The plaint adds that, despite demand for apology and notice of intention to sue, the defendants refuse or neglect to admit liability or apologise.

CSO: 4700/776

MOI RAPS BANKS' INTEREST RATES

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 15 Jan 82 p 1

[Text] FINANCIAL institutions which charge high interest on loans yesterday came under criticism from President Moi.

The President accused the firms of being indifferent to wananchi's welfare.

"An interest rate of 18 per cent or more is too high for the ordinary Kenyan," he said.

President Moi, who was addressing Kakamega leaders who had called on him at Kabarak, also hit at manufacturers for cheating wananchi on the prices of commodities.

The companies, he said, should match the cost of their products to the country's per capita income.

"We cannot believe the argument that the cost of fuel is to blame for the high commodity prices in the country," he added.

The President asked Government officials to ensure people are not exploited by manufacturers.

He told the Ministries of Higher and Basic Education to ensure teachers concentrate on teaching rather than harassing students on school fees.

He said some teachers were lazy and used the excuse of lack of fees to send pupils away.

The President said some people wanted to maintain the standards achieved during "magendo era" by exploiting parents adding that "such people should now realise that those days are long gone".

He went on: "The two Ministers of Education should regularly send auditors to schools to ensure accounts books are in order and funds are used properly."

The delegation, which was led by the Water Development Minister, Mr. Moses Mudavadi, pledged their total loyalty to the President, the Government and the ruling party Kanu.

It thanked the President for the wise way in which he handled the recent crisis on the Nandi/Luhya border.

Saying that tribalism and sectionalism is the main source of many evils on the African continent, the President called on all Kenyans to be practical and sincere followers of Nyayo.

Nobody should interpret my words to suit his own interests," he added.

He said leaders should make sure that every Kenyan is served impartially and warned that any chief or sub-chief acting to the contrary would be sacked immediately.

Citing the good example set by retired Senior Chief Hezron Buyoywa of South Tiriki in Kakamega District, the President re-appointed him on a two-year contract "to continue with the good service to wananchi with effect from February 1".

●President Moi yesterday advised youth to be realistic as self-delusion would make life difficult for them.

The President was speaking when he received three books, part of 20,000/- worth of a donation from Thomas Nelson Publishing Company, for Kabarak High School.

CSO: 4700/776

IMPROVED BANK SERVICE ASKED

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 22 Jan 82 p 6

[Article by Mbatau wa Ngai]

[Text] NO country can hope to achieve any measure of economic growth unless its people save. For unless a country invests a portion of its gross national product, it will always look to outsiders for investments, often at a price the host country can ill afford.

The burden of saving must, therefore, be shouldered by a country's nationals who must be induced to postpone their immediate consumption for the future. The nation has, in turn, a responsibility to provide this inducement coupled with the assurance that the saver will get more in future for the amount saved than he would get if he spent his earnings immediately. This inducement is all the more important during inflationary times, like now, when consumerism is in vogue.

The opening and continued expansion of banks in which the State has a stake, demonstrates that the Government is aware of its role. This recognition was further underscored by the Post Office's introduction of premium bonds and the Save-As-You-Earn Scheme as well as the starting of various building societies.

The Government's noble ideals are, however, frustrated by various individuals working in some of these institutions. Many of these culpable employees seem to be unaware of what is expected of them.

Such employees fail to realise that their only excuse for being where they are is to serve. And to serve in a manner that would satisfy the most discerning customer.

The resulting dissatisfaction leads to unalloyed cynism whenever heads of such institutions promise to provide better service. For many a customer get a raw deal even as the promise is being made.

A typical example of poor service is the National Bank of Kenya in some of its branches. When it opened its door, many a mwananchi flocked there to open accounts in the belief that he was helping to build the nation much better by banking with the national bank.

Disillusionment, however, soon set in. For it was not uncommon to have a cheque returned ostensibly because the account has no funds when the employer had remitted the money 4 or more days earlier. Whereas it was bad enough when such a thing happened to the customer cashing his own cheque, it was very humiliating when he had sent another person.

Another irritant is having to wait sometimes for an hour before the cheque is cleared for payment especially when the customer can clearly see bank employees milling around seemingly doing nothing. The customer may be forgiven for deducing that the employees delay his cheque with the sole intention of impressing on him how important they are and, therefore, how unimportant he is.

The sum total of such employees' irresponsibility is that customers begin trikling out although, thanks to the difficulty of opening an account, not in the numbers that they flocked in. The majority remain, seething with suppressed anger and frustration, because they realise how impotent they are to change anything.

A few brave souls leave the whole banking establishment opting to get their earnings, which may not be too impressive to some bank employees, in cash.

Needless to add, the taking out of such funds at a time when the country needs all the money it can get to finance various activities does serious harm to the economy. It also contributes to the general decline in the country's productivity.

The only rational alternative is to replace the few employees who do not have the service concept with those who do. There are many unemployed but qualified people who would jump at the offer.

At another level, the Government and the private sector to a lesser extent, must imbue their employees with the knowledge that the country cannot thrive unless everyone learns that the absence of oil and other natural resources leaves it with no other option than to sell the best service it can while trying to produce high quality goods.

The country — and more especially the banking community — must borrow a leaf from such resource-poor countries as Japan, Hong Kong, and Singapore which are effectively competing with such resource-rich nations as America and others.

CSO: 4700/776

LIFE IN BORDER TOWN DESCRIBED

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 15 Jan 82 pp 13, 16-17

[Article by Rashid Mughal]

[Text]

NAMANGA is a sleepy little town of about 200 huts and houses. The borderline is particularly interesting as the Kenyan and Tanzanian houses stand back to back. The main street, highway, shopping centre, can be walked through within half an hour if you aren't in a hurry. Most of the buildings are ramshackle dwellings made of wood, mud, and mabati.

Saddled in the mountainous shadows of Ol Donyo Orok, Longido, Mt. Meru, Kilimanjaro and countless hills, Namanga has only two service stations, Shell and Agip. Agip Motel (almost everyone calls it "Ahjeep") is the hub of activity, offering wayside motel facilities and a big curio shop. Opposite the motel is the curio market, selling genuine Masai handwork and artifacts.

There are pretty young girls and fat ugly women, slim young men and fat ugly men. And lots of kids everywhere. The bars are noisy and filled with smoke, much like any place else.

Some Somali men while away their time nibbling miraa. Smoking, drinking and chewing miraa are the "national pastimes". There's nothing else to do. Miraa is cheap — ten bob a "kilo" (a "kilo" is a bundle). Loud transistor music fills the air.

The landscape is everywhere dominated by the glistening 19,340ft. snow-cap of Kilimanjaro which appears to the traveller on clear days like a gigantic sugarloaf sitting serenely in a peaceful landscape. Thus Africa's highest mountain provides a fitting backdrop to a wild region where the pastoral Masai and their cattle have lived in harmony with wild creatures for many a century.

There are open plains; extensive clumps of yellow-barked acacia woodland; rocky, lava strewn thorn-bush country; swamps and marshes, and, above the border town of Namanga, the 8,000ft massif of Ol Donyo Orok, which remains zoologically unexplored to this day.

Namanga itself is only 165km. from Nairobi through a beautiful tarmac road that is, for the most part, fairly idle. There is hardly any traffic to speak of. During our 2½hr. drive, we saw only about a dozen oncoming cars and trucks and perhaps five or six Kombis with a handful of tourists each.

As you enter Namanga, roadside signs announce Excellent Accommodation, Good Food, Swimming Pool — leading up to Namanga River Hotel, the best place in town. However, there was no trace of a booking made a day earlier by telephone from Nairobi. Here, the rates, compared to Nairobi hotels, are rather high.

There is only one school in the town. Ali H. Hamud is a Std. VI pupil at Namanga Primary School. Born and brought up in Namanga, Ali has no idea what he wants to become when he grows up. After CPE, he says, he wants to work in Nairobi.

Why Nairobi? "Well, what is there to do in Namanga? I don't want to be a businessman. The only thing here is business. I want to work and make money. After CPE I'll go to Narok or Kajiado for my secondary education, then find a job in Nairobi," young Ali says.

Lamu's former District Commissioner, Mr. George Njenga Miingi, is now the DC for Kajiado District. In fact, he's been around these parts since November 1981. When I met him at "Ahjeep" service station and motel he was busy with preparations to receive President Moi at Stanley Oloitipitip's son's wedding last weekend. Flags and drapings graced the little town.

The DC reckons the population on the Kenya side of the border to be between 2,000 and 3,000 — "that's my very good guess".

He says very few Kenyans cross into Tanzania but people from our southern neighbour pass through mostly personnel from international companies and agencies, UN bodies, charitable organisation churches, and others who have official clearance from the Tanzanian side.

It is generally easier for people from Tanzania to pass through, but very difficult for people to get through the Tanzanian border control, I was told.

The DC voices everyone's sentiments when he says everyone wants to see the border open again. "The border has now been closed for five years and the closure has affected business.

"The lifeblood of Namanga is the tourists and visitors on their way to or from Amboseli — that is what makes the town survive," he says.

"The main crime here is smuggling, but at present it is well under control. Smuggling involves mostly foodstuffs, and, of course, as you all know, currency." The DC says 100/- Kenyan shillings can fetch 500/- Tanzanian shillings.

The town has two churches, one run by the African Inland Mission, the other a Roman Catholic establishment. The AIC church is just past the border post as you enter from Tanzania. Behind this church is the Namanga Health Centre, which is a Government-run clinic opened by President Moi as Vice-President in 1969. There are skeletal in-patient and out-patient facilities but no qualified doctor around.

The man in charge is Clinical Officer Theophilus K. Mukonza, 30. He is married with six children, three boys and three girls. The stone-built building contains a laboratory for HB estimation, blood grouping, stool and urine tests — "simple tests as no sophisticated equipment is available", he says.

The general ward has seven beds and usually admits children. The health centre closes at 4.15 p.m. but from then on one member of staff is on call until morning.

The only qualified staff are "technicians, two common nurses and one enrolled nurse. About 100 cases are examined daily, but when they hold the MCH FP "clinic", about 80 cases are average. Most are minor cases and serious ones are referred to Kajiado District Hospital 100km. away.

Maternity emergencies are likely at night. There is no electricity and health centre staff use dim-lit hurricane-lamps which strain the eyes. The patients, I understand, come from both sides of the border.

Obviously more staff are needed. But most important is the need for a fence round the health centre as animals trespass fairly often. "The other day there were lions where you have parked your car," Mr. Mukonza told me.

There's also a stone-built mosque which is nearly ready, run by Maalim Omar of Mombasa. About five-dozen people attend Friday prayers. There's a madrassa next to the mosque, run by a Kokni teacher from Nairobi.

There is no cinema, no disco, no entertainment. "When we do get a film, it is usually shown at Agip motel where the restaurant is used to screen the films, which come about once every year. It's so irregular no one seems to remember. Tickets are 8/- and 10/- per head and the crowd is cantankerous and noisy," says Mohamed Tahir alias "Kondoo".

"The only night life exists at Maisha Bar, which is a kind of night club for us," he adds. Maisha Bar, I found out, is a mud-built house about 100 yards off the main Namanga-Arusha road a couple of hundred yards from the Tanzanian border. Here men and women mix freely in a noisy atmosphere that's filled with loud music, cigarette smoke and idle chatter.

"Occasionally there's a disco at Agip and at weekends at the Namanga River Hotel. People pay 15/- per head to enter and the shannanigans can go on till dawn. Usually these discos end about three in the morning," says Kondoo.

"The only sport is Darts; and the only dartboard exists at Matapato Bar which is part of the best and biggest hotel in the area, the Namanga River Hotel. However, the swimming pool announced on the big welcoming billboard is non-existent: it has been out of commission for nearly a year and no one has any idea when it will come into use again. The receptionist, Sheila, hazards a guess. "It might be in use again about the middle of this year," she says, trying to be nice about it in the scorching heat of the day.

There are no qualified mechanics in the town either, no garage and no spare-parts dealers. The repairs are carried out, again, at "Ah-jeep" where Kondoo (one of the most likable persons in Namanga — everyone greets him, everyone knows him, and everyone respects this young man) helps out the tourist traffic with minor repairs.

The first hotel (what a glorious word that is — hotel!) on your left as you enter from the Tanzanian side is Bismillahi Hotel, within 50 yards of The Fence. Even Ali Aden, 26, agrees business is dull. "The good old days are gone," he says ruefully. "But life goes on."

Aden has no big ambitions, no big pleasures to seek out of life. It doesn't matter whether there is cinema or other forms of entertainment so long as there is business. And, right now, business is bad.

Mrs. Rose Peter is a buxom country girl from Machakos. This 20-year-old mother of two lovely girls says business is dead. "It was very good before Tanzania sealed the border," she says.

Rose sells dresses and imported sports sneakers and ladies' shoes. When I asked her the price of some fine Adidas-type sneakers, she asked me which side of the border I had materialised from. When I said Kenya, she said one hundred and sixty bob; then I asked what I would have had to pay if I was from Tanzania. She thought, sized me up and said, "Hey, you some kind of reporter?" I said I was just trying to figure out the difference. She told me she would have charged me 450/- if I had come from across the border.

Both her daughters attend the Catholic school. She'd like to see cinema and other forms of entertainment introduced in the town.

At the next dress and shoe shop from Rose's, I speak to a fat woman behind the counter who's reluctant to give me any personal details. At first she agrees she owns the shop, then turns round and says she works there. No matter. How do you sell these shoes? "180/- Kenya money, 450/- Tanzania money," she says.

Why this difference? "You see, Tanzanians have a lot of money, but nothing to buy. So they come to do their shopping here."

What sort of things do they buy? "Everything. Clothes, shoes, soap, ghee, cooking fat, even salt and sugar and rice."

Pravin Pattni is grabbing the tourist market with locally made curios and jewellery in silver. Pendants, bracelets, rings, ear-rings, the lot. "This is not pure silver," he explains. "It's sterling silver."

Compared with Nairobi his prices are fairly reasonable, but no one in his right mind can expect the Masai to buy such fancy stuff.

Sakina Ashraf is 39. Her husband works in Nairobi and visits the family about five or six times a year. She has been doing business in Namanga selling cigarettes, sweets and biscuits for 14 years. Unlike all the other shopkeepers, she says at present "business is better than of late because of the drought. During the rains, when there's lots of food, business is bad. But at present virtually everyone lives on soda and mandazi."

She shuts shop about eight every night. Then there's cooking to do, feeding her two boys and two girls, and then — "what else — sleep!"

Life begins to stir around seven in the morning, but Sakina opens her shop at 10 or 11 a.m. Before that there are cows and goats to tend, lunch to be prepared for the children, the oldest of whom is a pretty girl of eleven.

Most shops remain open up to 10 p.m. "as we have moonlight right now" — it is fairly light at night. Hotels close about 10 p.m. and bars at 11.

The Masai Hotel run by Abdul Razak serves cheap meals, fairly good. You can have mutton curry and rice for 13/50 and chicken or steak or sukuma and mchuzi and ugali for 13/50. He also sells biscuits, soda, sweets, tinned food, squashes, creams and a few patent medicines, with Vaseline predominant on his shelves.

Opposite the hotel is Safari Canteen, in the Shell service station, which sells shirts, hats, caps, belts, sweets, soft drinks, key-rings, ballpoint pens, cigarettes, matches — the usual haberdashery of most general kiosks in town.

Francis Kamau is 18. He goes to Olkejuado High School and will sit his EACE this year. He has been living in Namanga since 1969. "There are many tribes here — Kikuyu, Masai, Luo, Kamba, Somali, and Indians," says Francis.

He complains about life being drab and would like to see cinema become a regular feature of his life. "But the most important thing, of course," says Francis, "is that when I finish school this year I don't see a hope in hell to get a job in Namanga."

His friend Wanjiru agrees. She echoes the same sentiments. In fact she's through with school and without hope of getting a job. So what do you do? "Well, I help at home."

Home is a ramshackle mabati tenement which the Government authorities say falls in the No Man's Land zone, so it's got to come down Soon. They will, of course, be given alternative land "this side of the Border Control Post".

The shopkeepers, kiosk men and women, traders, everyone, laments the border closure. "Business was extremely good before the border was sealed. Today we have no business," says Rose, her cute left eye squinting defectively.

Francis says there's no hassle in going through the Kenya border control; the trouble starts at the Tanzania Control Post just 200 yards away. "There you are searched, asked endless questions, searched. Some Asians are also beaten up — they are the worst victims."

Mohamed Hassan is a driver, father of five. He's been out of work for a year but still loves Namanga "as the cost of living is cheap". His 18-year-old son works in Nairobi.

Zablon Mwita, 23, is a waiter who comes from Machakos. He has worked in Namanga for just over 10 months. "Life here is fairly quiet but very peaceful. I like it here," says this handsome and smart-looking fellow, "even if you think there's no life." Point taken.

CSO: 4700/776

POLICE ALLEGED TO HARASS INNOCENT PEOPLE

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 29 Jan 82 p 15

[Article by Kimani Gecau in column "Bwana Shida": "O, The Lawlessness of Our Law Keepers:]

[Text] I SPENT the good part of last night in police custody. As I was walking home from the bus stop at about 8 p.m. I heard somebody call Mama, wewe Mama! Kuja hapa. You know how it is when somebody calls you like that at Kibera; it was my firm belief that these were thugs who could set upon me and, out of malice because I did not have any money on me, beat me up to an inch of my life.

However, on turning I discovered that these were not thugs but policemen. One of them was hanging on to the leash of a fierce looking dog which was growling in a not too friendly manner as I diffidently approached the couple.

One of them was an impatient lad who asked me gruffly to state what business I had walking about at this time of the evening. It did not occur to me then to ask him what was wrong with this.

And assuming reason would prevail, I told him innocently that I was coming from seeing my employer's children off to bed and was now on my way home. "I work as a maid, you see."

The policemen haw-hawed at this and told me to come off it. Old women like me, he said, are as sly and cunning as tortoises. And if I knew what was good for me, I would tell them where I had hidden the chang'aa. Now, in my old age, I have given up the pleasures of the body and turned to spiritual nourishment through the immaculate virgin Mary and Jesus.

I therefore crossed myself and swore before Mary, Jesus and his father God, that not only am I a respectably employed mother and grand-mother, but that I have not let the vile taste of alcohol defile the very breath which calls upon God.

But the policeman — as all of them seem to be — is a veritable heathen and would not understand how anybody could be a teetotaller.

"I have never known any time when a drink was out of season," he told me. "Why, even now, I would not mind a drink... if you had a pound on you."

I saw the drift of the man's talk. But I only had five shillings on me. And this was for buying my daughter's child a loaf of bread and milk the following monring. When I told the policeman how things were, he wanted me to give him even that five shillings.

My protests met deaf ears. But I would not stop. What had I done to deserve being kept up late? Being torn away from my home and children? Was this what the law was for? But instead of listening to me and taking pity, these men flung more and more threats at me.

As they drove me around, I was thinking of that other time when I was again the victim of policemen. I was walking to work very early in the morning because my then employer was preparing to take his family on a holiday jaunt and wished me to be around to help clothe and feed his children. But as I neared his house, which I admit was in a rather secluded and protected area, a police car drove up and I was bundled into it without so much as by your leave.

I don't know why policemen get all the more suspicious when you tell them that you are an honest worker. Maybe it is because they are used to dealing with crooks. And in any case in the colonial times, all Africans were assumed to be criminals.

Our policemen seem to think in this vein for even this first time of my brush with the law; nobody seemed to know that there are such people as honest workers who are law abiding, and that it is not their fault that they are a bit shabby looking, they walk (not drive) and have to be up and about during unholy hours because of the demands of their jobs.

I was to spend a week there till my employer, getting worried that I had gone missing which is not a very unusual thing these days, tracked me all the way there, paid whatever fine it was that I could not raise and took me away.

Last night, as I was taken all over Kibera and environs, I was to think of this earlier experience with the police. And the biting cold made me also remember my brushes with the law during the days of colonialism when, as a more youthful person, I used to support those who were struggling against the injustices of colonialism then....

After moving around all night, we were eventually taken to court this morning. I was determined that this time I would not plead guilty to a charge I was not guilty of. If they wanted to send me to jail, let them. And if I did not survive it for my age, they would have to explain to my granddaughter what wrong I have done.

I told all this to the magistrate, and more. He let me go. But I do not feel satisfied. Who is going to pay me back for the embarrassment, the cold, the sleeplessness? Who is going to give me back my feeling of peace and security? For it is true that I will no longer feel secure and protected even when I go about my way trying to be a good and law abiding citizen.

And if those who are charged with keeping the law and protecting us are like this, who are the children of this land going to turn to?

CSO: 4700/776

SOMALIS ALLEGE HARASSMENT BY SECURITY FORCES

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 30 Jan 82 p 3

[Text]

KENYA's security forces have been accused of harassing innocent people in Wajir District.

The accusation was made by Wajir East MP Abdi Mohamed who said in a statement that while Somalis living in the district tried to be good citizens certain people were trying to wreck peace among them.

But he said Somalis in Kenya should consider themselves lucky to be living under President Moi's rule. He said his people owed President Moi a "great debt" for ensuring that peace, love and unity prevailed over evil.

He appealed to the authorities to restrain security forces from harassing travellers. Mr. Sheikh alleged that security officers had been arresting innocent people and locking them up in cells since last year.

"Somalis have been victims since the killings and burning of manyattas in October last year," Mr. Sheikh claimed. He said security problems in the district should not be blamed on the Somali community.

On the recent killing of Marsabit North MP Alex Umuro, Mr. Sheikh said: "I appeal to the Government to launch a thorough investigation to find out the people responsible for the callous murder."

He said the investigation would help clear people's mind whether the atrocities were "part of a calculated plan by people who were out to create chaos and instability in the area for their political ends. . . ."

Mr. Sheikh said those behind killings in the region could be cattle rustlers.

The MP said participation in national development by people of Somali origin had been enhanced during the Nyayo era. He thanked the Government for sending famine relief to his people.

Saying that supplies were far from adequate, Mr. Sheikh said the shortage had been caused by an influx of residents.

CSO: 4700/776

MAASAI EVICTION FEARS ARE DISPELLED

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 21 Jan 82 p 3

[Text]

KAJIADO District Commissioner George Miingi has assured Purko Maasai they would not be evicted from Mosoro area when land adjudication starts.

Mr. Miingi, speaking at a baraza also addressed by his Narok counterpart, Mr. Samuel Oburu, said land adjudication had not started and no one would be forced out of the area.

Purko Maasai leaders had expressed fears there was plan to expel their people to Narok District.

Appealing for calm, the district commissioners said that the public would be informed when demarcation starts and local committee of elders would be set up to assist the Government in adjudication.

They said people with legitimate claims would be allocated land.

Disturbed

An Assistant Minister for Water Development, Mr. Meshak ole Nampaso, who also addressed the baraza, said the residents were disturbed by reports that some people had been allocated land in the area without public knowledge.

"We welcome the Government explanation that the area falls under Kajiado District. But any move to expel some people now living in Mosoro would be unfair," Mr. Nampaso said.

Other leaders called on the Government to ensure that a peaceful solution to the land issue in the area was found so the Maasai clans could live in peace.

Both district commissioners made it clear that district boundaries were for administrative use and not aimed at dividing the people. They said wananchi could have land anywhere as long as it was acquired legitimately.

CSO: 4700/776

KIPSIGIS ARE TOLD TO GO HOME

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 27 Jan 82 p 4

[Text] THE Kipsigis from Kericho District who had settled on land in Emarti Location, Narok, without the owners' consent have been told to go home.

Narok District Commissioner Samuel Oburu and Kericho DC Harry Wamubeyi advised the Kipsigis to respect other people's property.

Mr. Oburu told a mammoth baraza at Emarti Primary School that the Government would continue to protect private property. He advised those with land problems to forward their cases to the provincial administration.

The two district commissioners warned those who acquired land illegally without the consent of the owners to move out immediately before the Government took drastic measures against them.

Mr. Oburu appealed to those living along Narok/Kericho border to maintain law and order and assured hem that the Government was capable of protecting them and their property.

- Kericho DC Mr. Wamubeyi cautioned people of his district against selling their land in hope of getting land in Narok District.

They condemned stock thefts in the two districts and advised leaders to co-operate in eradicating the menace.

The meeting was attended by the MP for Chepalungu, Mr. John arap Koech, the MP for Narok West, Mr. Francis Sompisha, local leaders and security officials from the two districts.

● Some people living at Kapsuswa near Shauriyako in Eldoret have been ordered to leave the area within two weeks.

The quit order was issued by Eldoret town chief Mr. Bruno Nambiro. He said the land, registration block 11/25 LR 8637, belonged to the Government and those who had settled on it had done so illegally.

CSO: 4700/776

PROBE ON STATUS OF SQUATTERS IS OPENED

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 27 Jan 82 p 1

[Article by Philip Wangalwa]

[Text]

THE Office of the President yesterday ordered full investigations into the status of squatters.

This follows President Moi's recent directive regarding the preservation, conservation and management of forests.

A statement issued yesterday said President Moi had already pointed out that his directive did not mean that squatters be harassed.

Instead the district commissioners and forest officers must give maximum assistance to the squatters to save them from undue suffering, the statement from State House, Nairobi, said.

Where it is necessary to move a squatter in order to enhance afforestation in a particular area, the movement of squatters must be done in the most orderly and humane manner, the statement said.

The statement added: "It has become necessary for the district commissioners to ensure that the Presidential directive is implemented in an orderly manner".

The Ministry of Environment and Natural Resources had earlier issued instructions that forest workers and squatters living in the forests be properly controlled.

"It should be clarified for general information that in all areas, where there is need to review the presence of squatters, the district commissioners must, in conjunction with their respective forest officers, carry out full investigations regarding the status and other aspects of those squatters," the statement said.

Under no circumstances, the statement said, should the growing of crops, huts and other materials belonging to squatters be destroyed. In any case, alternative arrangements must be provided to them to enable them support their families.

"It is also the wish of the Government that forest workers be assisted to earn their livelihood legally out of forest operations," the statement went on.

They should, for example, be assisted to form co-operatives which could participate in activities such as:

- Supplying fuel wood to consumers outside forest lands.
- Running shops within forest areas.
- Selling crops and vegetables grown within forest areas.

CSO: 4700/776

MOI SUSPENDS ALL HARAMBEE MEETINGS

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 13 Jan 82 p 1

[Text]

PRESIDENT Moi yesterday suspended all Harambee meetings until June 30.

The directive took effect from yesterday and will remain in force throughout Kenya until after June 30.

In a statement issued from State House, Nairobi, President Moi said the suspension of fund-raising meetings was intended to give Kenyans time to fulfil their other commitments, including payment of school fees for the children and preparing land for development.

President Moi's statement added that the money collected before the directive should be deposited in banks to earn interest.

He also directed all district commissioners to ensure that the directive was adhered to.

The statement said, in part: "Due to the fact that all Kenyans are engaged in paying school fees for their children and other commitments, including land preparation, and in view of hardships facing the ordinary people throughout the Republic, Harambee meetings of all kinds with a view to collecting money for development projects should stop with effect from today (January 12) until June 30. From then onward, people can carry out Harambee meetings."

This is the third time President Moi has suspended Harambee meetings to give the people time to concentrate on other specialised development activities.

On October 8, 1979, the President suspended the activities until the civic and Parliamentary elections then under way were over.

In May 1980, President Moi again suspended such meetings to give the farming community and those in the agricultural industry time to concentrate on food production.

●The visiting Commonwealth Development Corporation general manager, Sir Peter Meinertzahagen, yesterday paid a courtesy call on President Moi at State House, Nairobi.

The London-based corporation's chief executive is visiting Kenya to inspect projects financed by the corporation.

The President thanked the corporation for its assistance and expressed hope that it would increase its aid to various development projects in the country this year.

Sir Peter was accompanied by the corporation's regional controller for East Africa, Mr. Alistair Boyd.

The discussions were also attended by the Chief Secretary, Mr. Jeremiah Kiereini, Deputy Secretary in the Office of the President, Mr. Donald Okiro, the Deputy Secretary, Treasury, Mr. Alfred Amisi, the Director of External Trade in the Treasury, Mr. Simon Shitemi and other senior Government officials.

CSO: 4700/776

GATU ALARMED BY MORAL SLUMP

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 25 Jan 82 p 5

[Text]

INCREASED sexual immorality and corruption among Kenyans yesterday drew scathing remarks from a leading Protestant clergyman.

The moderator of the Presbyterian Church of East Africa, Rev. John Gatu, addressing a rally in Nairobi, said most Kenyans had turned "beer, prostitution and money into gods".

"Prostitution and corruption has become routine to most Kenyans, particularly some of those in high office," he said.

The churchman accused senior Kenyans of forcing women into immorality before giving them promotion at work.

"No girl can be promoted until she grants the boss favours. Girls can't get jobs until they discard their morals. What kind of Kenya are such people shaping?" he asked.

Amidst applause from the mammoth crowd at the City Stadium. Rev. Gatu went on: "Tourists coming into this country have turned our young boys into women just because of money."

He added that some national leaders were known to have been at conflict due to lust for power and money.

Bickering and wrangles, he said, were common in the City Council. He blamed them on civic leaders who worshipped "unknown gods".

"The mayor we elect is a leader for all. We should not continue fighting among ourselves. If you want to be elected wait until election time comes," he said.

Rev. Gatu also condemned among Kenyan leaders who amassed wealth at the expense of wananchi

"Some leaders want to own everything, including the smallest kiosk.", he said.

Nairobi mayor Nathan Kahara, who also attended the interdenomination service expressed happiness at the peace and stability in the city.

CSO: 4700/776

GREATER BORDER SECURITY COOPERATION IS URGED

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 30 Jan 82 p 6

[Editorial: "Border Example Worth Following"]

[Text] It is noteworthy that Tanzania's President Julius Nyerere has gone on record praising Kenyan security forces for helping curb cattle rustling along the common border.

President Nyerere, who was closing a convention of the Tanzania ruling party, Chama cha Mapinduzi commended both the Kenyan security forces and the Kenyan administration officials for helping stamp out cattle rustling along the border. The hard work which earned the Kenyan's praise from the Tanzanian leader should set an example worth emulating for cattle rustling is not a Kenyan and Tanzanian problem alone.

Cattle rustling is common along all the four borders of Kenya. Border security meetings between Kenya and her neighbours have been a common feature--more so between Kenyan and Tanzanian officials. While Kenyans have a right to feel gratified by the praise from Dar, they probably feel that their hard work in maintaining border security should be reciprocated not only by Dar, but also other countries neighbouring Kenya. Keeping our border, secure would not only end hooliganism such as cattle rustling but also other forms of crime such as murder, smuggling, poaching and other forms of lawlessness.

Only last week, the former MP for Marsabit North, Mr Alex Isaac Umuro, was brutally murdered by armed bandits believed by the police to have been cattle rustlers.

Although the culprits have yet to be apprehended, we suggest that if our borders were made more secure, the infiltration of criminals, and worse still arms from neighbouring countries, would reduce considerably.

We would therefore like to appeal for more border security co-operation meetings between administration officials from neighbouring provinces of Kenya, Somalia, Uganda and Ethiopia. It is a fact that the good job done by the Kenyan security an and administrations officials which earned them praise from Nyerere was made possible partly by the high-level tslks between the two countries in Nairobi, in February last year. Such meetings between Kenya and her other neighbours would do a lot to enhance border security and curb arms smuggling.

We would therefore like to laud the suggestion by Tanzanian Minister for Home Affairs Brig. Muhiddina Kimario, that such border security meetings should be held at least four times a year. Border security between Kenya and her neighbours not only makes wananchi concentrate their efforts in development projects but also leaves tourists who visit our countries go about their business without any fear of molestation.

CSO: 4700/776

CITIZENS TO BE ARMED AGAINST SHIFTAS

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 19 Jan 82 p 1

[Text] WANANCHI will be armed, in a bid to counter the shifta menace in Garbatulla Division, Eastern Province.

Eastern Provincial Commissioner Isaiah Mathenge said the Government would supply guns to wananchi and tighten security measures in the division bordering on Meru and Isiolo districts until the situation returns to normal.

Speaking during the official opening of Kina African Inland Church yesterday, Mr. Mathenge warned shifta cattle rustlers to stop their activities forthwith.

He told Kina residents not to sympathise with or harbour strangers. He said the Government was aware that banditry in the area was perpetrated by a "few cattle thieves" who caused terror and fear among the local people.

Condemning the killing of ex-chief Wako Wario and his wife by rustlers who struck in the area recently, Mr. Mathenge reassured wananchi that the Government had deployed maximum security measures and the people should therefore not live in fear.

He urged the people to report any strangers immediately to the authorities noting that no nation could go about its activities without peace, love and unity as advocated by President Moi.

The PC was welcomed to the church by the African Inland Church Bishop, Rev. Ezekiel Birech and the district commissioners for Meru and Isiolo, Messrs. Antony Waituika and Peter Saisi, respectively, and other local leaders.

Earlier, Bishop Birech called on all Christians to pray for an end to shifta activities and stock thefts.

He said the Government and the Church were one entity and should aggressively fight against social ills.

Others at the ceremony included the Assistant Police Commissioner in charge of Eastern Province, Mr. J. W. Ngatia, Deputy Meru Mayor Yusuf Mucheke and Isiolo County Council Chairman Coun. Boja Harake.

In Mandera, a shifta who was captured by administration policemen at Kutulo in Elwak Division, was paraded outside the District Commissioner's office.

And his G3 rifle and a Krashkow rifle left behind by another bandit who escaped were also displayed at the same venue.

District Commissioner J. R. O. Ondieki told the crowd which gathered to see the bandit that 94 rounds of ammunition, a Kenyan identity card and medicine were among the items found in the bandit's bag.

He said soldiers posted to the area were well-trained to wipe out the shifta menace from the area. He appealed to the people from the district to co-operate.

CSO: 4700/776

PRIMARY SCHOOL TEACHER CENSUS IS LAUNCHED

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 19 Jan 82 p 28

[Text]

A NATIONWIDE primary school teacher head-count starts today as ordered by Basic Education Minister Jonathan Ng'eno.

Thousands of enumerators will visit primary schools between today and Wednesday collecting information on the numbers of teachers and pupils, their grades and geographical distribution.

The exercise, Prof. Ng'eno said, would help planners in their work and enable the Teachers Service Commission to speed up payment of salaries.

Prof. Ng'eno warned that any teacher not counted would be considered to have left Government service.

The teachers must produce identity cards, professional certificates, certificates of academic qualifications, appointment letters, latest posing letters, registration certificates and pay slips.

Meanwhile, thousands of teachers thronged the offices of district basic education officers, principals of teacher training colleges and the Teachers Service Commission during the last week to collect copies testimonials they had lost or failed to collect.

It is the first teachers' census ever conducted in Kenya. The force has always been estimated at 120,000, 40 per cent of whom are untrained.

•Teachers have been urged to maintain high professional standards.

The call was made by the chief inspect - of schools in the Higher Education Ministry, Mr. D. M. Mbiti, in a speech read on his behalf by the Coast senior Provincial Inspector of Schools, Mr. L. Noble, during the opening of a chemistry teachers in-service course at Kanamai conference centre, Mombasa.

Mr. Mbiti said teachers had a duty to make pupils think critically, identify problems and solve them.

He disclosed that the new chemistry syllabus would be examined for the first time next year, but added that the form of questions and levels of difficulty would not differ much from current ones.

The chief inspector advised the participants to take interest in their students and work with dedication.

"We shall use school inspectors as policemen when staff behave unprofessionally," he said.

He said the Ministry was expanding the inspectorate and would recruit more subject inspectors from experienced teachers.

The Ministry, Mr. Mbiti added, had embarked on a programme to produce more teachers with diploma certificates.

CSO: 4700/776

MINISTRY HALTS UNIVERSITY PLAY

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 30 Jan 82 p 20

[Article by Wahome Mutahi]

[Text]

THE Higher Education Ministry has suspended the staging of "Muntu", a play that started on Wednesday night at the Kenya National Theatre.

The play is by a Ghanaian, the late Joe de Graft and was supposed to run until February 7.

In a letter to the play's director, Mr. David Mulwa, Kenyatta University's Registrar L. M. Mungai said: "I am writing to communicate the decision by the Ministry of Higher Education that "Muntu" currently being performed at the Kenya National Theatre be suspended immediately."

The inaugural performance was officially opened by Culture and Social Services Minister Jeremiah Nyaga who hailed the staff and students of Kenyatta University for staging it.

He had pledged that his Ministry would provide a bus to the cast to enable them reach the rural areas and had also said the Ministry would sponsor the play at the theatre for one night at a cost of 1,650/-.

The Registrar told Mr. Mulwa, and two leading actors in the play, Dr. Arthur Kemoli and Mr. Francis Imbuga, that the play had been suspended because it is violent.

But the play's director and the two actors who are also lecturers at the University denied that the play was violent.

Mr. Mulwa said the play is harmless and in fact condemns violence.

The play is an "O" level set book being examined for the first time this year and Mulwa wondered how the Higher Education Ministry could have chosen it if it was violent.

Dr. Kemoli said "Muntu" is in quest for order and harmony among mankind "that is why it was written at first for the World Council of Churches in 1975".

He said the play has been performed many times before at the Kenyatta University College in 1979 and at the Kenya National Theatre in 1979. It was also performed for the Catholic Centenancy in Nairobi and at Kabarak High School.

Mr. Imbuga said the play's popularity had been attested to by the fact that the National Theatre had been fully booked until the last day of the play's performances.

CSO: 4700/776

SCIENCE STUDENTS FORCE REVOCATION OF EXAMS

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 20 Jan 82 pp 1, 24

[Text]

SCIENCE students of Nairobi University yesterday forced their dean to draft a letter revoking some examination results released on Monday.

Earlier, the dean, Prof. G. K. Kinoti, admitted some irregularities in the marking of the results. However, he drafted a letter surrounded by irate students at Chiromo campus, the protestors refused to accept it, saying it was too vague.

The draft said: "The Faculty Board of Examiners has decided to recommend that the provisional examination results announced early in December 1981 stand." Prof. Kinoti said the letter, in effect, nullified some other results released on Monday.

But the students drafted another letter for him to sign. Prof. Kinoti said he could not sign it without the authority of Vice-Chancellor Joseph Maina Mungai.

The argument between the students and the dean lasted for nearly three hours in the presence of Deputy Vice-Chancellor Philip Mbithu.

And when Prof. Kinoti still refused to give in the students marched him to the main campus to see Prof. Mungai.

The students said there was a deliberate attempt at mass failures in some key areas of study. They said some expatriate lecturers were discriminating against certain students.

In the morning, Prof. Kinoti had called an urgent Examiners' Board meeting to consider the issue. The students had already gathered outside the campus offices by the time the meeting ended.

They demanded to talk to Prof. Kinoti, who agreed and told them the board had reconsidered its decision and that all students who had been asked to repeat the examination could now go ahead.

But a student asked Prof. Kinoti about the decision on first failing and then passing one of his colleagues.

Prof. Kinoti admitted that a "unit examination result was returned by the student's lecturer as a fail while it was a pass."

He said the lecturer in Unit 267 of the Computer Science Department had failed to include all the marks for all papers of the student concerned and failed him.

The mistake was discovered, he said, adding that the student was allowed to re-sit some of the papers. But another lecturer in the Physics Department failed to mark a paper on the understanding that the student had already been discontinued.

He said he had written two letters to the lecturers pointing out the gravity of the mistakes.

The students said the provisional results released by Prof. Kinoti in December stood and the student who had been wrongly discontinued be called back and given special consideration in his next examinations.

The protest was over the provisional results of supplementary science examinations between November 25 and 30.

Prof. Kinoti and Prof. Mbithi later told the Nation the letter signed by the dean was of no consequence in so far as the provisional results were concerned.

"Examinations can only be nullified by the University Senate and only the Vice-Chancellor can sign examination results on behalf of the Senate," Prof. Mbithi said.

"I signed the students' letter to stave off violence," Prof. Kinoti said. He said he had only signed the letter on the recommendation of Prof. Mbithi.

Prof. Mbithi said the students were annoyed because the provisional results were delayed as a result of which students lost about two months from the start of the academic year on November 30.

He said only five students were affected. Prof. Mbithi noted that the Deans Committee met yesterday morning to discuss the provisional results and that the Senate was scheduled to meet on Friday to discuss the matter.

CSO: 4700/776

MANY SCHOOL LEAVERS TURNING TO SELF-EMPLOYMENT

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 27 Jan 82 p 9

[Article by Henry Omondi]

[Text]

THOUSANDS of Kenya's school leavers who haven't been able to land jobs are drumming out a living from scrap metal!

The Nation last week talked to many drop-outs, those having only school leaving certificates and many who are armed with various certificates and are fully involved in business at Nairobi's Shauri Movo metalwork business within the famous Kamukunji grounds. They are "sincerely very happy" with life; thus proving that the Government must ensure that more and more village polytechnics and technical schools are established in the country.

Now listen to the experts at the Kamukunji's small "industrial area" as they talk. They are setting an example that could be copied in Kisumu, Mombasa, Nakuru, Thika, and, indeed, in every corner of the country.

John Njuguna, a bachelor, has employed four other school leavers on a temporary basis. "Soon, I shall provide permanent employment for them," he says

Now, who is Njuguna? He hails from Wamagana village in North Tetu division of Nyeri.

"I just refused to look for employment after leaving school because I knew it was going to take a long time. I decided to start on my own; on the side of self-employment," he says.

Njuguna, who attended Sigalagala Technical School in Western Province, says he would like to be known as a complete "sheet-metal worker". "I'm also a good blacksmith," he adds.

Njuguna runs a workshop at Kamukunji and makes "tarimbos" which are used in digging terraces, all kinds of washing troughs, jikos, mutugis and sheet metal work to order. Like father, like son: Njuguna's father, for instance, is doing the same kind of work in Nyeri. But working in a city, the son is presumably doing much better than his father.

"The demand is great," says Njuguna. "We have got numerous whole sale orders from far off places such as Kisumu, Nakuru, Thika, Nyeri, and Meru for various items that we make around here."

Mr. Njuguna points out that most of his work is done using scrap metal.

"We do not go to the hardware stores for raw materials because they are very expensive for us," he tells you. "Scrap metal is cheaper, so most of the sheet metal workers in Nairobi rely on scrap dealers. Among the suppliers of the scrap metal in the city are A.H. Miwani and Kenemco in Nairobi's Industrial Area. But there are also other dealers in Eastleigh Section III.

Stressing it is rather difficult to expand business because the lending firms in the country have become "quite mean" and very unwilling to give loans, Njuguna says the scrap metal dealers are fulfilling a great need.

Njuguna lives in Kariobangi Estate and points out with pride that he does not need to be on any kind of salaried employment. "Business is good and we are serving this country in our own special way as Kenyans," he goes on.

Njuguna's hobbies include dancing and watching football "when time allows".

Bulasio Ayoo Ogunde is another sheet metal worker in Kamukunji. He heads a workshop with eight people working under him.

"All my colleagues are people who have been to different schools and passed through various standards," says Ogunde who learned sheet metal work in Uganda from a Makerere University graduate who was doing the same job.

Ogunde was in Kampala looking for employment when he met the Makerere graduate who had opened his own workshop in Kampala. Within a short time, says Ogunde "I had mustered the trade and soon afterwards, decided to come back to Kenya".

He first settled on his own in Kisumu but decided to come and operate from Nairobi in 1979. His first stop in the city was at the Kamukunji open-air metal work area, where he is now comfortably established.

"Our customers come from all the races and we are even receiving orders from abroad", he pointed out. "We have a new make of jiko that is being marketed abroad, especially in Jamaica and in the Middle East."

The new jiko, called the "Economic Firing Boiler", in a great demand is "even here in Kenya".

School leavers, Ogunde advises, should be careful before starting to ignore jobs which have already proved to be a great source of earning an honest living. The metal worker, who receives wholesale and retail orders for various items at his workshop, is willing to train individuals on the job and even to hire the services of qualified people at his workshop.

Mr. Ogunde and his staff work from 8 a.m. until 6 p.m. except Sundays. "We do not want to let down our customers because it can only mean bad business to them", he says while giving the final touch to a jerrican. Around him are watercans, metal boxes of different sizes, jerricans, jikos and several other domestic items.

Although Nairobi will remain his base of operation, Ogunde still frequently visits his home in Seme, Kisumu District.

Charles Ngacha left school recently from one of the private schools in Nairobi and joined the ranks of the self-employed at the Shauri Moyo metal work camp as a trainee on the job.

"Oh, yes, I am now a professional man and feeling good," he says.

Ngacha makes iron beds for children and adults.

"There is money in our kind of business but very few people seem to know it but it is all because we are involved in serving the common man who happens to be in the majority group", Ngacha notes with a sense of pride.

Peter Rajula, 19 is a Standard VII drop-out. He is not even contemplating any other job. "What for?" he asks.

Rajula comes from West Alego and like many of the experts in Kamukunji, gets wholesale orders for his jikos from various parts of the country.

Rajula lives in Kibera and helps his parents "whenever possible".

The integrity of these self-employed persons should provide much inspiration to many of Kenya's unemployed people.

CSO: 4700/776

EMPLOYERS GROUP BACKS EXPATRIATE CHECK

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 18 Jan 82 pp 1, 20

[Article by Pius Nyamora]

[Text] THE executive director of the Federation of Kenya Employers, Mr. Tom Owuor, yesterday said that asking employers to submit returns was quite in order.

And he called on all FKE members to co-operate with the Government in maintaining a smooth Kenyanisation programme.

Mr. Owuor said employers had been submitting such returns from time to time. "I think what the Immigration Department is trying to do is to have an up-to-date record following the changeover of the issue of permits from the Ministry of Labour to the department sometime ago," Mr. Owuor said.

Mr. Owuor was reacting to a Government directive that all companies, partnerships and proprietors submit full employment returns to the Government within 30 days after the publication of the Kenya Gazette notice of January 15.

The notice was signed by Principal Immigration Officer J. Mutua, who told the Nation that the Government wanted to ensure that non-Kenyans holding jobs which citizens could do were replaced. Another reason was to up-date work permit records.

Commenting on Mr. Boy's call on trade unions to submit a list of undesired non-Kenyan workers, Mr. Owuor said: "It is not for me or Mr. Boy to say which people are not required. Let us leave that to the Immigration Department."

He said the FKE supported the Government's Kenyanisation policy, but the programme should be carried out systematically to avoid killing any industry.

Mr. Owuor said the Kenyanisation programme had been successful in institutions like Shell, East Africa Industries, Chemelil Sugar Company and Kisumu Cotton Mills.

It was only in a minority of cases, especially in some parastatal bodies, where the programme had been done so hurriedly that the progress of those institutions had been adversely affected, he said.

And he said there were several areas like the sugar and cement industries where Kenya would continue to use foreign engineers and technologists until enough Kenyans got appropriate training for the jobs.

Mr. Owuor said it was not enough to boast of having university graduates. "The most important thing is to train these graduates for the relevant jobs."

Meanwhile, the Secretary-General of the Central Organisation of Trade Unions (Cotu), Mr. Juma Boy, called on all trade unions to compile a list of undesirable non-Kenyans working in the country to enable the Government to replace them with citizens.

And on employment returns, he said: "I am very delighted by the Government move. I would like to welcome Mr. Mutua's directive on behalf of all Kenyan workers."

He said the list to be compiled by union secretaries-general would be forwarded to the Government by Cotu.

And he called on the Government to examine the tourism and sugar industries where there were many expatriates whose work could be done by Kenyans.

On wages, he said all trade unions would meet in Nairobi to discuss their memorandum to the Government asking for increases.

CSO: 4700/776

COTU SEEKS HUGE PAY INCREASE

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 20 Jan 82 p 24

[Article by Ochieng Konyango]

[Text] THE Central Organisation of Trade Unions (Cotu) yesterday proposed massive pay increases for workers in Kenya.

The proposal is to be submitted to the Cotu governing council today and, if approved, to the Government.

A research paper prepared by a committee recently appointed by Cotu, a worker would need a minimum wage of 3,194/25 a month in Nairobi and Mombasa, 1,955/- in other major towns and 1,471/60 in plantations and rural areas.

The research says the minimum one needs for rent in Nairobi and Mombasa was 500/-. The same person spent 1,719/- on food every month. More than 700/- went to charcoal, water, detergents, transport, school uniforms and fees for a family of six.

In other major towns, the document says, one needed 1,035/- to meet basic food needs and 300/- to rent a house. For plantation workers, it is now necessary to have over 500/- for rent, charcoal, firewood, water, soap and kerosine.

The wage levels of the low income workers had little or no relation at all to the rate of inflation the document said and added: "Inflation is being imported in the form of higher oil prices and higher prices of manufactured goods".

Inflation was also caused by "greedy landlords, some unscrupulous businessmen, land speculators and hoarders of essential commodities", it said.

The study states that low income worker's power of purchase for quality food items to sustain proper health was negligible.

"The only practical solution to the problem is to increase the wages of such workers", the memorandum says.

A 1,719/- diet a month would be considered inadequate by many nutritionists according to the document, which also said though it was assumed that food prices were controlled and were available this was not always the case.

It said that items such as maize meal, milk, bread were often not available.

The Cotu secretary-general Mr. Juma Boy said the document was based on a factual study of the basic needs of workers following the rising cost of living.

Mr. Boy said the document attempted to make a budget for a family of six but he noted that some families were larger than six.

It was estimated that such a family would need 36 packets of maize meal, 10 kilos of rice, eight kgs. of meat and four kgs. of fish a month.

A member of the family who goes to work also spends a minimum of 150/- on meals.

CSO: 4700/776

NATIONAL ARCHIVES BUILDING NOT TO BE MUSEUM

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 20 Jan 82 p 11

[Article by Wahome Mutahi: "The End of a Kenyan Dream?"]

[Text] SOME two years ago, somebody had a beautiful dream. The dream was about the current National Archives building. He did not think of the building in the context of its present functions but in terms of a structure to house and reflect Kenya's national art. The building was to be an art gallery where the best of Kenya's artists would exhibit their work and the area sorrounding it was to be a reflection of this creativity.

The area next to Standard Bank now taken by a bus stage and the space taken by taxis in front of the Archives building was to be dominated by art. Sculpture and other forms of art were to occupy all this space and as much as possible was to be done to make the area surrounding the envisaged art gallery be as aesthetically inviting as possible.

However, this dream, noble as it was, was nearly futile. Though this former Kenya Commercial Bank headquarters had been acquired by the relevant Government body to be turned into an art gallery, its functions were to change but not before artists and the authority running the archives clashed over a number of issues.

The art gallery dream sprung from a very rational base; the Department of Culture did not exist then in the Social Services Ministry and its present activities were being carried out by such institutions as the Museum, the Archives and the Institute of African Studies. When the culture department was created it inevitably had to take these functions. Consequently, no vote could be allocated to the Archives to finance an art gallery leave alone trying to realise the dream of creating an art centre in the heart of the city.

Fired by hopes of seeing an art gallery become a realify, a large number of Kenyan artists had began to define themselves in relation to Kenyan art and the role that they hoped the art gallery would play. Most of them saw national art as that art "which belongs to, reflects on, and addresses the people of that particular nation."

They saw the proposed National Art Gallery as a place that would "house, preserve and promote those visual art forms that are the product of, and address the people of this nation."

The art gallery was to open sometime in 1980 with a seminar on art and a mammoth art exhibition. The then director of the Archives, Dr. Kagombe invited one of the art associations, Kenya Artists and Designers Association (KADA) to make preparations for the opening.

This association, together with the Central Art Club of Kenya (CACK) consequently did a nationwide campaign to collect works for the exhibition. Provincial art collectors were appointed and a vigorous campaign soon involved over two thousand artists and designers. There was overwhelming response to the campaign and over 3,000 works of art were selected.

By mid-July, 1981, the associations had completed the selection of works and were ready to mount the exhibition. But then other events were influencing the structure of the archives including change in leadership.

However, to the artists who were involved in the preparation of the exhibition one event upset their plans — they were informed that what is now called the Murumbi Collection which was in fact bought from him by the National Archives, had to be accommodated in the archives building and in the exhibition. The artists would not hear of it.

They said: "Having carefully examined the Murumbi collection and its records we have come to realise, much to our astonishment, that a larger part of it is not Kenyan art. Now, to feature foreign art in the National Art Gallery would be against the very principle that motivated us to work for a national art exhibition."

They said they were not against the Murumbi pieces being exhibited as such but were opposed to those that are of foreign origin. They also felt that if the entire collection was exhibited, it would take all available space in the gallery.

But even when the artists were organising the exhibition, it was not quite clear who was going to finance it. The archives was not giving financial assistance though the associations were expecting it. In a letter to the Chief Archivist dated October 7, 1981, Kada Chairman George Kamau said little progress was being made in the exhibition's plans because the "art associations are voluntary, non-profit making bodies and their projects can only be successful if assistance is given by third parties."

In reply to this letter the acting chief archivist, Mr. M. Musembi said although his department was willing to provide the archives' gallery free of charge, and also other necessary services eg. security, it has not been possible for us to give any direct financial assistance. . . . Under these circumstances, you may consider to withdraw your art work(s) in your custody with immediate effect."

Latest reports are that some artists have started to withdraw their works and that the entire Murumbi collection is remaining. And one thing that is sure is that no exhibition will take place. To put it more bluntly, charming dreams and determined efforts for the last two years will come to nothing. After all, the archives committed to preserving origina records of all kinds.

CSO: 4700/776

KIBAKI CALLS ON PARASTATALS TO SHOW PROFIT

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 22 Jan 82 p 32

[Text]

VICE-PRESIDENT Mwai Kibaki yesterday told parastatals to make profits and to collect all outstanding debts.

Mr. Kibaki said Government-owned companies were required to make profit rather than offer free service.

He said the Government itself was providing free services to the people in the form of health care and education and that such expenditure was part of Government budget.

But parastatals must work like efficient commercial organisations, Mr. Kibaki said while receiving share certificates and dividend, on behalf of the Government, from the Kenya External Telecommunications Co. (Kenextel): The presentation was made by Extelcoms chairman Eli Habwe.

He said the Government was encouraged by the fact that both the Kenextel and its sister company the Kenya Posts and Telecommunications Corporation (K P and T) were making profits and were also effective in collecting debts owed to them.

He expressed the hope that other parastatal organisations would follow the example set by the Kenextel and the K P and T.

He also thanked the Kenextel for providing efficient communication services, which he said made Nairobi one of the best communication centres in Africa.

And Transport and Communications Minister Henry Kosgey said the Kenextel had been a fully Government owned corporation for the last three years when the East African Community collapsed.

In its first year of operation, the corporation made a profit of Sh. 65,363,396 before taxation from which it paid a dividend of Sh. 20 million and corporation tax of Sh. 31,500,000, he said.

In its second year ending March 31, 1980, the corporation made a profit of Sh. 146,442,371 and paid corporation tax of Sh. 70 million and declared a dividend of Sh. 20 million, he said.

He said the results of its third year of operation showed that Kenextel made a profit of Sh. 121,919,558 from which corporation tax of Sh. 65,225,862 and dividend of Sh. 20 million, was payable

CSO: 4700/776

GREATER GOVERNMENT CONTROL OF INDUSTRIES CALLED FOR

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 22 Jan 82 p 6

[Article by Christopher Mulei]

[Text] AT a recent symposium on Industrial Research and Development held in Nairobi, a teacher in chemistry at the University of Nairobi argued quite effectively that there exists in Kenya the required raw materials and the infrastructure to warrant the establishment of a bona fide manufacturing chemical industry.

In his well researched paper, entitled, "The Role of the Chemical Industry in Development", Dr. Raphael M. Munavu, a senior lecturer in organic chemistry at the University, rightly pointed out that although the existing chemical companies give a semblance of being manufacturers, most of them are actually processors of imported chemicals or chemical raw materials.

He continued: "An industry is never secure or viable, however, unless it has a secure raw materials base, and uncontrolled importation of raw materials never creates this base."

The figures for various types of chemicals imported into Kenya are astonishing. In 1979 Kenya imported chemicals worth Sh. 1,444 million, mineral fuels and lubricants worth Sh. 2,858 million and vegetable and animal fats and oils worth Sh. 316 million.

There are cogent doubts as to whether some of the chemicals imported into this country are actually necessary. There are some chemicals like cosmetics and toiletries which have been proved to be injurious to health. There are tonics and vitamins sold in the country to treat undernourishment. Now, how can you treat undernourishment this way? What's more, a large part of the medicines sold in developing countries have little or no therapeutic advance over previous medicines. Yet, such medicines are used extensively because of heavy marketing pressures.

Only 0.3 per cent of the big companies' research budget is spent on ailments common in the Third World. Some big chemical firms have not even hesitated to test their products on unsuspecting human beings in the Third World.

If there had been more emphasis on establishing locally oriented expertise using local materials, the danger of proliferating chemicals would be minimised as utility would be the main consideration taking into account the lack of production facilities to engage in useless ventures whose motive is simply to make profit out of the unsuspecting poor.

If we want to establish a viable indigenous manufacturing sector, we must do something towards encouraging the establishment of essential small industries aimed at tapping local materials. The production of drugs from traditional herbs comes into mind. To sustain such local oriented industry, more support, both moral and financial, will be expected from the government which is also charged with getting the priorities right regarding the country's needs for chemicals.

Industrialisation can only be meaningful if the available local technologies are utilised to the maximum and when foreign oriented technologies are adapted as locally as possible with imported machines dismantled and reassembled to suit local conditions. That is how China, Japan and Russia became industrialised.

In our situation, we should ensure that foreign firms are encouraged to invest in industrial projects only when it is shown that such industries are likely, given effective government control, to contribute significantly to the laid down development plan. Industries put up in the country should not be designed to produce luxuries for the limited high-income groups, they should process exports to increase their value, provide necessities for mass consumption, and, increasingly produce farm tools and fertilisers as well as construction materials and simple transport equipment to contribute to increased productivity throughout the economy.

After all, the essential of planning economic development consists in assuring an amount of productive investment which is sufficient to provide for a rise of national income substantially in excess of the rise in population, so that per capita national income increases. The strategic factor is investment, or more precisely productive investment. Consequently the problem of development planning is one of assuring that there be sufficient productive investment, and then of directing that productive investment into such channels as will provide for the most rapid growth of the productive power of national economy. Such planning, to be meaningul in implementation, must be geared to economic independence and bold political will.

CSO: 4700/776

NDEGWA CALLS FOR GREATER CAPITAL INVESTMENT

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 25 Jan 82 p 10

[Text]

TO maintain total output above population growth, Kenya needs to invest at least 20 per cent of its Gross Domestic Product (GDP), Governor of the Central Bank of Kenya, Mr. Duncan Ndegwa, said at the weekend.

Mr. Ndegwa who was addressing about 500 guests at the second annual dinner of the Kenya Institute of Bankers said Kenya was receiving less and less from abroad.

"The net result is a decline in total money — both currency and bank deposits," said Mr. Ndegwa.

If overseas expenditure was going to finance consumer items, capital investment in the country was going to decline, he said.

Mr. Ndegwa said that Kenya's foregin reserves had recently risen after receiving Special Drawing Rights (SDR) of Sh. 60 million from the International Monetary Fund (IMF).

He said: "The understanding with the Fund will also open doors for credit lines from the World Bank and other lenders."

But, he cautioned that "these receipts would not end our problems — they can nevertheless provide an opportunity for Kenya to carry out an adjustment and bring expenditures to the level of our means".

Mr. Ndegwa, who was accompanied by several leading banking personalities including the association chairman, Mr. S.K. Muumbi, said the time for easy options had passed.

Kenya, like the rest of the world, was severely affected by the sharp rises in prices of imported goods.

CSO: 4700/776

KENYA-INDIA TIES SAID TO BE STRONG

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 26 Jan 82 p 11

[Text]

THE year 1981 will for long be remembered as a very eventful year in Kenya-India relations. With the top leaders of the two countries exchanging visits for the first time after their independence — and all within a span of six months — the year has ushered in a new era of closer political understanding and appreciation of each other.

A number of agreements in the economic, trade and cultural fields have been signed which in the words of President Moi "must have profound impact upon the future practical substance of relations between the Republic of Kenya and the Republic of India".

It all began with the visit to India last February of President Moi, who took with him a high-powered delegation to study and discuss with their counterpart in India the prospects for closer co-operation between the two developing countries.

The visit was so successful that it prompted the Kenyan President to say at the conclusion of his visit: "I certainly cannot recall any other such brief period of time in which affairs and understandings were so intense, spectacular and constructive. The ending of this formal phase marks the beginning of a new and stronger era of mutual co-operation."

And his words came so true that within three months of his visit, the President of India, Mr. Neelam Sanjiva Reddy, was paying a return State visit to Kenya, which coincided with the Madaraka Day celebrations. In a rare gesture of honour the President of Kenya requested President Reddy to address the nation at Uhuru Park.

But more was to come. It was soon announced that the Prime Minister of India, Mrs. Indira Gandhi, would pay an official visit to Kenya. The occasion was the International Conference on New and Renewable Sources of Energy held in Nairobi in August last year. This afforded another opportunity for a dialogue between the leaders of the two countries and to review the follow-up action that had been taken in the wake of the earlier top-level visits.

To any political observer, it may have seemed rather unusual to have witnessed so many high-level visits taking place between the two countries within such a short period. However, considering the many commonalities between the two nations, their coming closer perhaps was only natural. Both are non-aligned developing countries, devoted to the urgent task of nation-building.

While in their internal affairs, the two are guided by the same democratic ideals of equality and economic and social justice for their peoples, on the International front, they share the conviction that the non-aligned movement and respect for the principles enshrined in the Charters of the United Nations and the Organisation of African Unity alone could ensure world peace and progress.

With a common history of struggle against imperialism and geographical proximity adding to these factors, it was natural that they should turn to each other in a spirit of co-operation amongst developing countries themselves rather than look only to the developed world for assistance.

In this context, it may not be out of place to mention that many of the developing countries have found India a suitable partner in their attempt at self-reliance in agricultural, industrial and other fields mainly because Indian technology, unlike that of the Western countries, is far more appropriate to the conditions prevailing in the Third World.

It is not surprising, therefore, that the most significant effects of the closer relationship have been on the economic and industrial fronts. While there were a number of Indian joint ventures in Kenya earlier, specific areas for future technical collaboration between the two countries have now been identified. These are in the areas of machine tools, agricultural machinery, electronics, textiles, leather and tanning, pesticides and pharmaceuticals.

A number of other agreements have also been concluded between the two countries, including a 100-million Rupees line of credit between the Industrial Development Bank of India and the Industrial Development Bank of Kenya and an agreement for avoidance of double taxation.

Last year also saw Kenya taking part in the India International Trade Fair in New Delhi in November-December 1981. The Kenyan pavilion at the exhibition attracted many visitors, including the Prime Minister Mrs. Grandhi.

In the field of education and technical training, there has been co-operation between the two countries. While it is estimated that more than 1,500 Kenyan students are currently studying in Indian universities, a number of Kenyan officials have also been receiving short-term training in India in management, public administration, rural development, small-scale industries and other fields. After President Moi's visit to India last year, the number of scholarships and training fellowships available for Kenya have been almost doubled. The procedure for the admission of Kenyan students in India has also been streamlined.

India is also expected to provide a large number of experts in several disciplines.

In the cultural field too, several positive steps were taken. A cultural exchange programme was finalised for the period 1981-83. An Indian cultural troupe visited Kenya in August last year and gave performances in Nairobi and other major towns. This has now been reciprocated by the visit to India of a 25-member troupe of Harambee Dancers from the Bomas of Kenya who are participating in the Festival of African Performing Arts being held in New Delhi. This troupe would also give performances in other major Indian cities.

Symbolic of the all-round strengthening of relations, the year also witnessed the inauguration of Kenya-India Friendship Association, a body formed with the aim of promoting social, cultural and economic ties between the two countries.

The association has embarked on an active programme in pursuit of those goals.

The ties between Kenya and India, which have always been friendly and cordial, received a tremendous boost last year. With the growing understanding and personal friendship between the leaders of the two countries, the outlook for further strengthening of these relations in the coming years appears very bright.

CSO: 4700/776

ISRAELI UNEP CONSTRUCTION DEAL TAGGED 'SPECULATION'

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 26 Jan 82 p 24

[Text] THE Information Director of the United Nations Environment Programme (Unep), Mr. George Muhoho, yesterday described as "speculation" a report that the Israeli construction company, Solel Boneh, may be re-awarded the tender to build the Unep extensions in Nairobi.

The report, contained in the London-based Africa Economic Digest dated January 15, had said that the Israeli company, which in June 1980 lost the contract to build the extensions "may still get the job".

Mr. Muhoho said tenders were opened on January 11 and a total of 18 construction companies were represented at the offices of Mutiso Menezes International, the architects.

But Mr Muhoho said the tender would not be awarded until the quantity surveyors, M/S Daveson and Ward made their recommendations to the architects after scrutinising the tender documents.

The architects would in turn make a report of their recommendations to the Unep contracts committee which would then advise Unep Executive Director, Dr. Mustafa Tolba, to enable him award the tender.

"Until the recommendations are made, it is futile to speculate on who might land on the tender," Mr. Muhoho said.

During the opening of the tenders on January 11, the lowest bidder was a Kuwaiti Firm Ahmadiah Contracting and Trading Company, who quoted Sh. 149,619,634.

The second lowest was International Contracting Company — Sh. 157,732,147, followed by Al-Hani Construction Co. — Sh. 165,997,804 and Mohd Abdul Mohsin Kharafi — Sh. 174,263,462.

According to the Africa Economic Digest, the first four lowest bidders were all Kuwaiti firms.

The fifth lowest bidder was a Chinese firm which quoted Sh. 184,149,830 followed by a Kenyan company, Jadva Mulji & Sons — Sh. 191,392,181. Jadva Mulji are the contractors who originally built the Unep headquarters at Gigiri.

Solel Boneh were the seventh lowest bidders with a quotation of Sh. 191,975,000.

Talking to the Nation, Mr. David Mutiso, of Mutiso Menezes International, said he expected to send his report to the Unep contracts committee by February 8.

He said several of the companies that had applied for the tender had indicated they would give a discount of certain percentages from the figures they had quoted.

In June 1980, Unep reportedly bowed to Arab and African pressure and denied the $22.2-million contract to Solel Boneh although theirs was the lowest bid for the contract

The United States, which contributes about a quarter of Unep's annual budget, threatened at the time to cancel its financial support to the organisation.

Arab and African states had urged Unep to reject Solel Boneh's bid on the grounds that both the company and Israel were racist and had dealings with South Africa.

Mr. Mutiso said a US company, Losinger Ltd., had offered to give management services to the Kuwaiti firm, Ahmadiah Contracting and Trading Co., if the latter won the tender.

The cost of building the Unep extensions, which includes a conference centre, and the UN Centre for Human Settlement (Habitat), is estimated to have risen by 20 per cent since the first tender was called in June 1980.

CSO: 4700/776

MBATHI PRAISES INDIAN PRODUCTS

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 29 Jan 82 p 3

[Text]

LABOUR Minister Titus Mbathi yesterday urged Kenyans to buy Indian goods because they are of high quality and cheaper than European ones.

He was speaking at Jomo Kenyatta International Airport on arrival from India where he had led a five-man goodwill mission.

The delegation included Parklands MP Krishan Gautama, Bondo MP Odongo Omamo, the chairman of the Nation Group, Mr. A.A.A. Ekirapa, and East African Building Society chairman L.J. Pandit.

Only Mr. Mbathi and Mr. Ekirapa returned yesterday. The other members of the team are still in India.

Mr. Mbathi said the delegation met Indian President Sanjiva Reddy and the Ministers for External Affairs and Labour.

They also met industrialists and Kenyan students in Bombay and New Delhi.

Said the Minister: "We were very impressed with India's industrial progress. She makes her own capital goods."

Mr. Mbathi said that at independence, India was importing capital goods like Kenya. But the country's able leadership had eliminated the problem, he said.

India had advanced in technology and now even "exports scientists," Mr. Mbathi added.

Indian technology, he said, was labour intensive and suitable for Kenya.

Mr. Mbathi said India was willing to train Kenyans for modern industries.

The Kenyans visited the Indian atomic energy plant and were highly impressed.

The country, he said, used nuclear science to treat diseases such as cancer and was also self-sufficient in food.

Mr. Mbathi, who is also the chairman of the Kenya-Indian Friendship Society, said some Kenyan students in India faced financial problems and the association was planning to start a fund to help them.

The Minister said India was a democratic country with several political parties. "But we were able to convince them our one-party system worked quite well," he added.

Mr. Ekirapa, who was on his first visit to India, said Kenyans had been misled to believe that Indian goods were of lower quality than those from Europe.

"A visit there gives a different impression," he said. "Indian goods are as good as any but cheaper".

On farming technology, Mr. Ekirapa said India's was simple and suitable for the small-scale farmer.

"Indian tractors are operated and repaired by the local people," he said.

He called for more exchange visits to make Kenyans aware of development in India.

"It doesn't make sense for a farmer to buy a tractor which has to be taken about 300 miles away for repairs," he said.

CSO: 4700/776

WHEAT FLOUR IN SHORT SUPPLY IN NAIROBI

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 14 Jan 82 p 10

[Text]

WHEAT flour is in short supply in Nairobi, Nation learned yesterday.

A survey showed that shopkeepers were receiving supplies in very small quantities and at intervals of up to two months.

Uchumi Supermarkets in the city centre had no baking flour yesterday, "and the situation has been like this for the last one month," said an attendant at the Muindi Mbingu branch.

But all traders who were interviewed said that they had been victimised by millers in the past whenever they gave comments to the Press.

A baker who said he had spoken to at least nine colleagues said: "The situation is bad at the moment, and we are wondering what happened to the announced surplus of wheat about four months ago?"

He said he received "very little" supplies once a week and "even this little is through a lot of coaxing".

And a bakery official said: "Wheat flour shortages or disappearances should only be seen not talked about."

She said that if millers discovered she complained to the Press she would get nothing for months as punishment.

Similar fears were expressed by a baker in Ngara who said: "The last time I gave my opinions on wheat flour shortage I paid heavily."

He said the millers did not want to see him and did not serve him for three months.

"So please, do not mention my name because though I am getting a little it is keeping me going. Please, don't quote my name."

The general manager of Elliot's Bakery declined to comment on the subject. He referred the Nation to Unga Ltd.

CSO: 4700/776

BIRGEN CALLS FOR COFFEE BOARD, CO-OP MERGER

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 14 Jan 82 pp 1, 24

[Text]

CO-OPERATIVE Commissioner Alfrick K. Birgen yesterday suggested that the Kenya Planters Co-operative Union (KPCU) and the Coffee Board of Kenya be merged to save coffee farmers unnecessary expenses.

The commissioner also directed all co-operative societies to stop investing in private financial institutions immediately.

He said societies should withdraw their deposits from private institutions and put them in the Co-operative Bank of Kenya immediately.

Mr. Birgen, who was addressing the Kenya National Federation of Co-operatives staff in Nairobi, said the channels the money went through before reaching coffee farmers was too long and should be shortened.

"The money first comes from the Coffee Board of Kenya to the Kenya Planters Co-operative Union, the Co-operative Bank, co-operative unions and co-operative societies before reaching the farmer," he said.

Coffee payments, he said, should be made direct to a co-operative society's account at the Co-operative Bank of Kenya so farmers could get their money without delay.

Presently the KPCU processes coffee before it is marketed by the board. Once the KPCU gets coffee payouts, it pays the co-operative unions which in turn pay member co-operative societies.

And later when addressing Nairobi co-operative leaders at the Kenya National Union of Teachers Building in Nairobi, Mr. Birgen ordered Ministry officers to ensure that all co-operatives adhered to his directive on investments.

"Management committee members who defy this directive will be kicked out," Mr. Birgen said.

About Sh. 100 million has been invested in private institutions by co-operative societies.

Mr. Birgen said some "confused" co-operative leaders argued that the Co-operative Bank did not give loans for houses.

The Co-operative Bank, he said, was ready to give loans to co-operative societies for approved projects. The bank charged a smaller interest than private financial institutions, he added.

"I know some of society leaders have been benefiting from co-operative money put into private companies. They are exploiting co-operators," Mr. Birgen said.

Some society leaders were paid huge commissions while others received big loans from the institutions, he added.

The commissioner warned that if the institutions wound up, the co-operative money would be lost.

"From today, all co-operative money not required for immediate use should be deposited in the Co-operative Bank of Kenya," he ordered.

Private companies, he said, did not share their profits with members of co-operatives like the Co-operative Bank.

Mr. Birgen said all co-operative investment must be approved at general meetings and the decision passed to him for study and advice.

He said if corruption and misappropriation of funds were wiped out of co-operatives, the movement would be "a power to reckon with" and the Government might not have to borrow money from outside the country.

He said co-operatives could make the country economically independent.

Mr. Birgen referred to corrupt management committees as "hyenas" and warned they would be jailed and their property auctioned to recover stolen funds.

He ordered all co-operatives, including savings and credit societies, to insure with the Co-operative Insurance Services, a local organisation, instead of the Africa Co-operative Savings and Credit Association (ACOSCA).

CSO: 4700/776

KENYA REFUTES SWEDISH COFFEE REPORT

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 13 Jan 82 pp 1, 28

[Article by Chander Mehra and Irungu Ndirangu]

[Text] THE Government yesterday blasted the Swedish Press for publishing a malicious and slanderous story about the use of dangerous coffee pesticides in Kenya.

An 11-page statement signed by Agriculture Minister Kabeere M'Mbijjewe and issued by the Foreign Ministry said some multinational drug companies last year tried to ruin Kenya's coffee industry.

The statement said the same multinationals were now engaged in a slanderous newspaper campaign in Europe because Kenyan authorities were not taken in by their campaigns promoting other pesticides.

The statement drew pointed attention to an article appearing in the front pages of Swedish newspapers on January 3 alleging that "Kenya coffee is dangerous to consumers since it is being sprayed 10 times a year with DDT/Aldrin/Dieldrin/BHC etc., all of which are poisonous and not allowed to be used in the civilised world".

Quoting summarised and telexed information reaching the coffee industry through exporters, Mr. M'Mbijjewe's statement said the article alleged that the chemicals being used to keep back insects and fungus had caused the death of children and coffee pickers.

"The Kenya Government takes a very serious view of the allegations made in the article since its malicious nature is calculated to damage the very good reputation of Kenya's high-quality coffee in Sweden in particular and Western Europe in general," said the statement.

The statement categorically refuted the contents of the article as unfounded and totally incorrect. "There has never been any death of children or coffee pickers on account of chemicals.

We totally refute any suggestion that there has, or is, or will be use of pesticides in this country indiscriminately or without sound technical information. The country can ill-afford to waste money or risk the quality of her coffee, leave alone risk the lives of her people through the use of chemicals that are harmful on application or leave residues that could affect coffee consumers," said the statement.

It assured coffee consumers all over the world of the safety of Kenyan coffee. "Those who know how Kenya coffee is processed and prepared prior to reaching the consumers will dismiss the malicious allegations in the Swedish newspapers as baseless since residues on Kenyan coffee are an imposibility", the Minister's statement added.

"The high-quality Kenya coffee which enters the international markets is washed coffee and considerable efforts are made during the processing and preparation stages to ensure that it meets the highest international standards. The allegations, therefore, are completely without any truth," it said.

It added that Kenyan coffee is subjected to the most rigorous and sophisticated techniques comparable to the best in the developed world which ensure full protection to consumers.

"The fact that Kenyan coffee continues to enjoy complete confidence in these markets demonstrates clearly that it has passed the test. The Swedish coffee consumers and all other countries that import Kenya coffee need not be taken for a ride or scared by the malicious article published in the Swedish Press," said Mr. M'Mbijjewe.

CSO: 4700/776

COFFEE, COTTON TOP CO-OP'S LIST

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 2 Feb 82 p 8

[Text] CO-OPERATIVE societies in Oyugis Division, South Nyanza District, had a turnover of 2,665,000/- at the end of last year.

And according to the annual report released by the officer in charge of the area, Mr. J. W. Anindo, coffee and cotton co-operative societies topped the list by earning a total of 2,260,633/20.

Mr Anindo attributed the improvement to the members' day seminars which he said should be increased to encourage more members to be informed of their working procedures. He said coffee turnover improved by 224,-224,791/65 while cotton improved by 44,139/35.

The officer said over 1,000 farmers received loans totalling over Sh. 1.5 million through the new seasonal credit scheme, the small-holder coffee improved programme and the integrated agricultural development programme.

On small-holder coffee improvement projects, Mr. Anindo pointed out in his report that although 248 farmers were trained and were entitled to a loan, the scheme was hit by a snag. He said the amount approved could not finance the technical package at current inflationary prices.

He gave an example of Avoro and Ogera societies whereby the amount approved worked out at about 480/- per farmer which, he said, could only buy one bag of insecticide.

●Tobacco farmers in South Kanyamukago Location, Migori Division, South Nyanza District, have been advised to invest the money they earn from the crop to improve their living standards.

The advice was given by Kawere assistant chief Lawrence Ochola who represented South Kanyamukago Location chief Samuel Obura on prize-giving ceremonies at Achuth market and Osogo market.

Saying the area had sufficient rainfall and fertile soil, Mr Ochola called on wananchi to support President Moi's call to exploit the riches in the soil by planting more cash and food crops.

CSO: 4700/776

BRITAIN HELPS FINANCE GRAIN STORE

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 16 Jan 82 p 4

[Text] AGRICULTURE Minister Kabeere M'Mbijjewe has thanked Britain for aiding a number of development projects in Kenya.

Mr. M'Mbijjewe was speaking in Mwingi where he officially opened a Sh. 4.3 million grain store, staff quarters and offices financed by the British Government.

Mr. M'Mbijjewe apologised to Kitui farmers on behalf of his Ministry for not being considered for seasonal credit facilities last year.

The Minister, however, thanked farmers for their efforts in heeding the President's call of stepping up food production.

He commended the people of Kitui for their efforts in soil conservation and appealed to them to keep it up.

The ceremony was attended by British High Commissioner John Williams, Kitui District Commissioner Moses Okal, Labour Minister Titus Mbathi, Kitui North MP T. Mutisya Manandu, the managing director of the National Cereals and Produce Board, Mr. W.A.K. Kilwayi, Mwingi DO Alfred Ogongo, Kitui County Council chairman Newton M. Maluki and other officials.

Addressing the gathering, the High Commissioner recalled that his government had also financed the construction and expansion of grain stores in Nairobi, Thika, Sagana, Kipkelion, Machakos, Kitale and Eldoret.

The construction of the Mwingi depot was in line with the Kenya Government's food policy which had the full support of the British Government, he said.

Britain, he continued, realised the need to build strategic grain stocks of initially two million bags and later four million bags of maize.

Mr. Williams said that the national food policy paper forecast that there would be need to accommodate not less than 11.5 million bags by 1983/84 and 16 million by 1989 involving expenditure of Sh. 160 million and Sh. 180 million respectively.

Rebuilding the national grains reserve was forecast to cost Sh. 506 million at 1981 prices for four million bags of maize plus Sh. 103.5 million maintenance costs, he noted.

The Mwingi store will accommodate up to 50,000 bags of grain, Mr. Williams said, adding that his government was willing to consider further investment in grain storage in Kenya.

CSO: 4700/776

CITY SHOPS RUN OUT OF RICE

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 16 Jan 82 p 4

[Article by George Odiko]

[Text] RICE has gone missing from city shops, a Nation survey indicated yesterday.

Many shopkeepers in Eastlands and Nairobi West, said that "rice" was a name they were forgetting fast "because we can say plainly that rice has not been seen by some shops for months now".

Shopkeepers who did not want their names disclosed said that some of them had stopped handling rice a long time back.

But city restaurants said they received good supplies of rice from the National Cereals Board. Much of the rice, however, had to be obtained through other supply sources, they said.

Those interviewed said they were ready to pay any amount of money for rice to continue running their restaurants.

Asked how much they were paying for a 20 kg. bag of rice, many restaurants, thinking they were talking to a potential black market supplier of rice, said: "Bring any amount. We pay any amount."

Shops in Pumwani area said they only received rice occasionally. Some housewives suspected that certain shops were hoarding rice to sell only to friends or relatives.

It was also claimed that despite the general shortage, City executives were still feeding on rice in their houses.

Shopkeepers alleged that in the black market from where many restaurants obtained their rice, a 20 kg. packet sold for about 250/- (the official price is 123/-).

The survey also showed that certain women were able to obtain rice which they sold in cups at open-air markets.

But the women declined to disclose their sources of rice supplies.

CSO: 4700/776

TRACTORS HOLD UP RICE PROJECT

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 27 Jan 82 p 5

[Text] The Lake Basin Development Authority is experimenting with non-irrigated rice on a 10,000-acre land, authority managing director David Wasawo said yesterday.

But the authority has been able to plough only 500 hectares in South Nyanza and 1,200 in Busia due to lack of tractors and seeds, he said.

Prof Wasawo was talking to the Netherlands Ambassador to Kenya, Mr E. Kydeman, who paid a courtesy call on him at his Kisumu office.

Prof Wasawo said last year the Authority harvested 1,000 bags of non-irrigated rice.

The Government spends much money on importing rice and growing non-irrigated rice will save the much-needed foreign exchange, the director said. A major obstacle was the availability of seeds which could only be obtained from Brazil.

Prof Wasawo outlined projects within the authority's jurisdiction being aided by the Netherlands government and thanked the ambassador for his country's aid.

The recent agreement between Kenya and Netherlands to finance shallow well programmes was already being implemented.

Prof Wasawo called for control of effluents into Lake Victori. "If we are not careful, industries in Kisumu will heavily pollute the lake," he said.

Studies should be carried on six rivers within the authority, he said. The Nzoia River could produce 8 megawatts of hydroelectric power, and Miriu River 18 megawatts.

Only 17 percent of Kenya is suitable for high quality agricultural production, a Central Bureau of Statistics official said yesterday.

Mr David Mutoro told the regional workshop on natural resources and environment statistics in Africa being held in Nairobi that the remaining land surface was either desert or marginally productive.

CSO: 4700/76

TRADERS SEEK MINISTRY HELP

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 13 Jan 82 p 28

[Text] THE National Chamber of Commerce and Industry yesterday warned that unless the Ministry of Local Government intervened in the proposals to increase licence charges for 1982, most businesses might be forced to shut down by June.

"These increases are unrealistically exorbitant and in some cases even illogical," said chamber chairman Francis Macharia, who led his team during talks with the Ministry's officials.

He said that in most cases, these have been increased by between 100 and 2,000 per cent.

"If the Ministry does not look into the issue seriously with a view to having the proposed rates revised, then most business operations may close down by June this year," warned Mr. Macharia.

Permanent Secretary A. Ligale, who headed the Ministry's team, promised to forward the matter to the Minister for further consideration.

The delegation comprised chamber representatives from Mombasa, Nyeri, Kakamega, Kisumu, Thika, South Nyanza Kirinyaga, Kitale, Bungoma, Mandera Kericho, Laikipia, Kitui, Kisii and Nairobi.

The delegation also included the management committee of the chamber and leading branch officials who represented small-scale traders, said Mr. Macharia.

If the new rates are not urgently reviewed, he noted, "they will do an irreparable damage to business operations with far-reaching consequences on the economy of this country".

The chamber gave the local authorities to choose between raising the rates and seeing businesses close by mid-1982 and have no source of revenue at all.

"This is not a situation to be proud of as it will only do the country more harm than good," he stated, adding that local authorities should have conducted some study to determine the profit margins of the small and medium scale traders who are the majority.

Some of the examples given by the chamber were Mombasa rates, which had been raised from 750/- to 2,500/- for foodstuff manufacturers, an increase of 233 per cent.

In Nyeri and Voi, kiosk licences will cost 500/- from fee of 200/-, an increase of 150 per cent. At the same time, retail shop licences will cost 500/- from 75/-, an increase of more then 560 per cent.

In Thika, rates had gone up by between 1,900 and 2,000 per cent, while charges had risen by a 100 per cent average in Isiolo, South Nyanza and Kitui, said Mr. Macharia.

He noted that local authorities should not give the devaluation of the shilling and the rate of inflation as their excuse, since the devaluation was only 15 per cent and inflation stood at 18 per cent adding up to 33 per cent.

CSO: 4700/776

FEDERAL AID BOOSTS RURAL DEVELOPMENT

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 27 Jan 82 p 6

[Article by Mbatau wa Ngai]

[Text] ONLY a few years ago, the case of Robert Marangu would have been hopeless. Together with other matatu passengers, they had been involved in an accident with a lorry which claimed four lives and left sixteen seriously injured.

No sooner were the injured rushed to Chogoria Presbyterian Church of East Africa (PCEA) Hospital than the medical staff swung into action. A week later, six patients were discharged from the hospital and although Marangu was not among the lucky ones, he had no cause to worry. Instead, he was reasonably certain that he would leave the hospital in the next week or two. Events were to prove him right when ten days later he was discharged with another two patients. The others left four days later.

Friends and relatives of the sixteen injured passengers viewed their subsequent recovery in almost miraculous terms. For it would have taken an incorrigible optimist to predict such a recovery before the hospital was extended and re-equiped at a cost of several millions, some of which was contributed by the local people.

Once the importance of having a modern hospital was sold to them, the local population pledged to raise the necessary finances.

The fact that it may take some years before their collective dream of a new and well equipped hospital came true did not discourage the locals, many of whom are coffee farmers.

When a West German church organisation learnt of the people's determination to help themselves, it pledged to match the farmers' contribution 2 to 1. The pledge brought the dream a little nearer. It also strengthened the local people's resolve to raise as much as they could.

Underscore

Their determination was underscored when during a Harambee fund-raising ceremony conducted by the then Eastern Provincial Commissioner Mr. Eliud Mahihu, more than Sh. 1 million was raised. Lest this may seem a trifle sum in these days when millions are raised at a single ceremony, it is important to realise that it not only set a record then, but it did so without the active support of senior politicians in and out of the area. What is more, it was accomplished by one division with negligible assistance from the rest of the Meru District and from outside.

Subsequent Harambee meetings raised the local people's contribution until, with the Germans assistance, the then planned extension costing more than Sh. 5 million were completed. This was followed by other technical assistance from the Federal Republic all of which helped make Marangu and other road accident victims' recovery possible. What is more, these were only a tiny fraction of the number of people treated in the hospital daily.

And they are not all road accident victims either. The majority are patients suffering from many of the tropical and the not so tropical diseases afflicting other Kenyans. Some are admitted into the hospital with little hope of recovery. But, thanks to the generosity of the German people, Chogoria Hospital has become a place of hope for thousands who pass through its doors annually in search of one remedy or the other.

The well-trained staff coupled with the sophistication of the equipment available is a boon not only to the local population but also to others in the district and indeed in the country at large.

Fewer patients are now referred to other hospitals, thus averting possible congestion in such institutions.

With his other countrymen in other parts of the nation, Nyaga wa Njue does not feel neglected when it comes to the Federal Republic's assistance. There are times when he even feels that he scooped his countrymen in Chogoria. The construction of the multi-purpose Upper Tana River Reservoir may lead to enhanced food production in an area that now produces little of the food consumed locally. Indeed, there is reason to believe, at least Njue believes so, that the local people need only a bit of luck and they will not only grow enough for their immediate consumption but will propel the country into the ranks of the lucky few nations which are self-sufficient in food production.

Fantasy

That this is not one man's fantasy is borne out by the realisation that about 20 per cent of Kenya's population lives in the Tana River basin. At the completion of the project, they will be able to irrigate about 100,000 hectares whose food production — especially if modern farming techniques are followed — will be nothing short of phenomenal. The completion of the dam will also mean that James Wanjohi — another local resident — and his family of six will spend less time and money buying fertilisers and humus. For the dam will arrest the region's top-soil, most of which was washed into the sea before the dam construction, doing nobody no good. With the escalating cost of fertilisers and their unavailability, the country is likely to benefit greatly from the retention of the rich top soil to say nothing about the enhanced food production. And this will, in turn, lead to better-fed and, therefore, more healthy people who will relieve the congestion in hospitals such as Chogoria. In stepping up assistance in agriculture, the Germans, and others, would seem to follow the old adage that "prevention is better than cure".

And for Mwangi wa Njoroge, Philip Oloo and Joseph Kiptanui, among others, the Upper Tana River Reservoir is proving a boon in other ways as well, apart from the additional food available. It assures them of continued work as their employers will not be forced to curtail production as it happened following the 1979 and 1980 droughts which, in turn, led to the rationing of electricity. Needless to add, their employers are happy too, for there is reason to hope that the realisation of Masinga Dam will make such electricity rationing a thing of the past.

And that will more than justify the expenditure of Sh. 1 billion that the Federal Republic of Germany and others spent on the giant project. Of this total, Germany contributed Sh. 360 million while the European Development Fund contributed Sh. 260 million, the United Kingdom Sh. 60 million, the European Investment Bank Sh. 120 million and the Kenya Government Sh. 200 million.

The big savings the country is likely to effect when the project is completed are evident from the fact that the dam has, according to Mr. W. H. Baur, the financial adviser of the Tana and Athi Rivers Development Authority — the body charged with the development and co-ordination of projects on the river, the country has saved about Sh. 500 million, the sum it would have spent on oil to generate the amount of power the water already stored will generate.

The other Kenyans who may not have so far directly benefited from German assistance need not lose heart. Such assistance is targeted to continue and indeed increase in absolute terms even after the rate of inflation in both countries is taken into account.

This was the impression got from leaders in Government, politics, private sector and donor agencies. They all stressed during my recent two-week visit to the Federal Republic, the fact that aid will continue flowing into the country mainly because of Kenyan's demonstrated ability in absorbing and putting into good use such assistance, unlike in some other countries.

Garner

Kenya's ability to do this is partly due to the pool of trained manpower the country has been able to garner since independence. It is a recogniton of the importance of such trained personnel that has led the Federal Republic of Germany to initiate "in-country" training as opposed to sponsoring Kenyan students into German universities and institutions of higher learning. The result is that more students are trained locally with the same amount of money since certain expenses such as transport are eliminated.

There is reason to believe that Mr. Rainer Offergeld, the visiting Minister of Economic Co-operation of the Federal Republic of Germany will be telling his Kenyan host, Mr. Mwai Kibaki, the Vice-President and Minister for Finance the good news that he undoubtedly has already heard from the German envoys: Despite inflation and deepening recession the volume of aid will be stepped up.

The news will not only cheer Marangu and Njue in Meru and Embu districts respectively and their immediate neighbours. It will also cheer millions of others, scattered all over the country, who are either benefiting from such aid — directly or indirectly — and countless others who are likely to be included in the ambit of such aid.

CSO: 4700/776

PLAN TO WRECK UNION ALLEGED

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 28 Jan 82 p 20

[Text]

THE Industrial Court was yesterday told there was a conspiracy to destroy one of the trade unions.

The general secretary of the Kenya Management Staff Association, Mr. Walter Adell, told Mr. Justice Saeed Cockar and the court members, Mr. G.M. Omollo and Mr. A.K. Kerich, that something had to be done to avoid industrial unrest if matters concerning the Trade Unions Act could not be followed properly.

The dispute is over recognition agreement for the Kenya Bus Company management staff employees.

Mr. Adell is representing the workers while the Federation of Kenya Employers' (FKE) executive director, Mr. Tom Owuor, is representing the company.

Mr. Adell accused the FKE of pressurising the Labour Minister, Mr. Titus Mbathi to stop the issue from going to the Industrial Court.

"FKE is just a registered trade union like any others," Mr. Adell said.

He wondered why FKE was against the court hearing the dispute.

He said while most of his union's disputes regarding dismissals and terms of services were recommended to go to the Industrial Court, he always had problems with recognition agreements.

He observed that disputes of similar nature coming from other unions did not have problems.

Justice Saeed Cockar said he had received an official letter from the Labour Minister that the hearing of the case be deferred because "there are other things still under discussions which concern the issue".

Earlier, the court had heard that the Labour Minister, had referred the issue to the Industrial Court but later on he issued another letter requiring the dispute be deferred.

Concluding his submission he produced a letter from the International Labour Organisation which stated in part, "that the managerial staff have to be represented by a trade union".

CSO: 4700/776

NEW TRADE UNION IS FORMED

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 1 Feb 82 p 4

[Text]

A FACTION opposed to the leadership of the Amalgamated Union of Kenya Metal Workers has formed a new body — the Power and Allied Workers Union of Kenya.

The secretary-general of the union is Mr. Ponsiano A. Wasonga who told the Nation at the weekend that the chairman is Mr. Richard Omondi and vice-chairman, Mr. Samuel M. Mutunga.

Treasurer is Mr. Karanja Githina and his assistant is Mr. George Opanga Makaka. Mr. George Changweny is sole trustee.

Mr. Wasonga said the officials were elected on January 17 at Kariobangi and an application for registration has been forwarded to the Registrar of Trade Unions.

Mr. Wasonga claimed that the new body has attracted more than 3,300 members, most of them employees of East African Power and Lighting. The headquarters is in Nairobi but there are branches throughout the country.

He claimed that the general secretary of the Amalgamated Union of Kenya Metal Workers, Mr. Fred Omido, and his executive committee had failed to deliver the goods to employees of the East African Power and Lighting Company.

Mr. Wasonga hit out at the Amalgamted Union of Kenya Metal Workers for allegedly ignoring a directive from the Government to the effect that EAP&L was regarded as a parastatal organisation along with the Kenya Railways, Kenya posts and Telecommunications, Kenya Airways and the Kenya Ports Authority, whose employees all had salary increases.

"Instead, officials of our former union decided to meet with the management of EAP&L without consulting members, particularly shopstewards and branch officials, and came out with unacceptable minimum wage of Sh. 635 a month," said Mr. Wasonga.

An element of 6.5 per cent increase brought the minimum wages to that level "but this is too low said Wasonga. "Members have flatly rejected the offer because other parastatal bodies secured a much higher wage structure which is in the region of 1,200/- for some subordinate staff."

CSO: 4700/776

ENERGY FUND TO BE 'SET UP'

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 19 Jan 82 p 5

[Text]

THE Government is to set up a special fund for the development of energy, the deputy Permanent Secretary in the Energy Ministry, Mr. Stanley Muturi, said in Nairobi yesterday.

Opening a training workshop on biogas energy for rural settlements at the Kenyatta International Conference Centre, Mr. Muturi appealed to friendly countries and organisations to assist the fund.

He observed that between 40 and 50 per cent of Kenya's foreign exchange was spent on energy, and stressed the need for the development of alternative sources of energy.

About 90 per cent of the country's population lived in the rural areas and mostly depended on fuelwood which he said, would lead to depletion of vegetation and soil erosion.

He urged the mass media to help in promoting the use of biogas in the rural areas.

Dr. Arcot Ramachandran, executive director of the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements, (Habitat) appealed to the participants to concentrate on how to motivate people to use biogas in the rural areas.

He said the community biogas complex at Nderu, Kikuyu Division, Kiambu District, was a good example of a renewable source of energy.

The Nairobi workshop aims to train participants in the construction and maintenance of biogas plants.

Participants have come from Burundi, Botswana, Ethiopia, Lesotho, Malawi, Kenya, Somalia, Sudan, Tanzania, Uganda, Zambia, Zimbabwe, Mauritius, Seychelles and Swaziland.

CSO: 4700/776

KIBAKI BACKS PIPE PLAN

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 29 Jan 82 p 5

[Text]

VICE-PRESIDENT and Finance Minister Mwai Kibaki has recommended feasibility studies for the extension of the Kenya oil pipeline to the Uganda border now that the project had proved viable.

Mr. Kibaki was receiving two cheques worth Sh. 51 million from the chairman of the Kenya Pipeline Company (KPC), Mr. G.M. Muchiri, being the dividends and loan repayment to the Government which is shareholder.

The first cheque, for Sh. 31 million, accounted for the dividends while the second cheque for Sh. 20 million was for the loan repayments.

Commending the KPC for its efficiency, Mr. Kibaki called on other parastatals to be motivated by higher profit margins instead of expecting Government's subsidies.

He advised them to emulate the KPC so all efforts could be pooled together in order that the nation could fulfil the development goals.

"We are grateful for the manner in which the company has fulfilled our expectation," said Mr. Kibaki.

The Vice-President said that initially people were sceptical about the prospects of building the pipeline but the fears had been removed by the constant generation of profits.

Mr. Kibaki noted that with the construction of a pipeline to the Uganda border, congestion on the roads and the damage caused by trailers would be greatly reduced.

He added that this would also assist Kenya's neighbours to receive their deliveries faster than is the case at present.

●A high powered Kenyan team led by Mr. Kibaki held discussions with the visiting German delegation led by the Minister for Economic Co-operative, Mr. Rainer Offergeld.

CSO: 4700/776

OIL EXPLORATION WILL CONTINUE

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 28 Jan 82 p 9

[Article by Christopher Mulei]

[Text] THE managing director of Kenya-Cities Service, Incorporated, Mr. Gene E. Grogan, has given assurance that the company was not ceasing its operations in Kenya and that oil exploration was being done as planned and in conformity with the agreement entered into with the Government.

Mr. Grogan was reacting to a report in the current issue of Africa Economic Digest (AED) which gives the impression that company was folding up mainly because of "budgetary problems and the inability to find a drilling rig". Noting that there was "a lot of misinformation" in the report the oil executive pointed out in an interview with the Nation that his company was following a planned exploration programme and that it had not deviated from that plan.

Mr. Grogan continued: "We are fulfilling all the commitments stipulated by the licence."

Referring to the claim by the AED report that the company was beleagured by acute budgetary problems giving rise to pressure from creditors and other parties with whom the company has business connections, Mr. Grogan informed the Nation: "We are not being pressed by either contract conditions nor activities of other companies. We are following our planned exploration programme."

The report in the Africa Economic Digest states that although a concession was acquired by Kenya-Cities Service in 1979, only one well has been drilled so far "because the jack-up type of rig required for the shallow offshore location was not available on the market place," adding: "Last year a brand new rig was confined to port for three months because Kenya-Cities Service had apparently not taken into account the annual monsoons. The mistake cost the company 100,000 US dollars a day until the rig was moved in early September."

Countering the statement, Mr. Grogan noted that "there are problems in finding rigs from time to time as they are short in supply." As regarded the claim that the oil company did not take into account weather conditions before installing the rig, the managing director of Kenya-Cities pointed out: "The published historical information on which we based our weather evaluation was not consistent with what we found when we put a boat on location."

But Mr. Grogan agreed that the report was correct in stating that the con. any had closed down its drilling at Ungwana Bay which is situated between Malindi and Kipini. But this did not mean that the company had pulled out of the area as the plan had been to drill one well and then assemble and interpret the final data, observing: " We are evaluating the data from the well and that information has to be incorporated into the overall geology of the region."

He further advised that a rig will be brought back by the end of the year or early next year. The drill ship which was being used at Ungwana Bay moved to Thailand when the offshore well was plugged on January 6.

Kenya-Cities is subsidiary of Cities Service Company which is an American natural resource company engaged in finding, producing, manufacturing and distributing energy and chemical products in United States and around the world. Major areas of operation include petroleum, natural gas, alternate fuels, natural gas transmission, chemicals and minerals.

The company has had interests in Kenya since 1972. Originally, the company had an oil prospecting licence in Northern Kenya in conjunction with Burmah Oil Exploration. The seismic data collected was not, in the words of Mr. Grogan, "too encouraging" and so the two associated companies wound up their operations in that area.

Kenya-Cities then negotiated with the Kenya Government for a licence along the coast and an agreement was signed on November 1, 1979. The licence is of the type known as Special Oil Prospecting Licence and it entitles the company to explore for oil and gas on an area covering 4,968 hectares (12,276 acres). Presently, the company enjoys a monopoly on oil exploration in the country.

CSO: 4700/776

MINISTRY FORMS BODY TO CHECK SANITATION

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 19 Jan 82 p 3

[Text]

THE Health Ministry has set up a special body to tackle the worsening sanitation standards in Kenya.

Health Minister Arthur Magugu said the National Sanitation Council would work alongside provincial administrations to enforce health laws.

The council, Mr. Magugu told a press conference in Nairobi, would be empowered to prosecute those who failed to observe health regulations. It would have branches at the provincial, district, divisional and village levels, with members drawn from local population.

The council will be led by Prof. P.M. Githinji as Chairman while Mrs. Rose G.K. Waruhiu, Nathan Munoko, Dr. Davy K. Koech, Mrs. Selina Kimalel, the Director of Medical Services, Dr. John Otete, Dr. Leah Marangu and Prof. P.M. Mbithi would be members.

The council has been empowered to appoint committees of experts to assist in:

- Preparation of a national environmental sanitation programme,
- Formulation of a national sanitation code;
- Preparations of community based environmental health programmes;
- Providing guidance to local authorities on distribution and location of sanitation services;
- Preparation of popular environmental health education programmes for adults;
- The formulation of a curriculum for environmental health education in primary schools.

The council has also been charged with mobilising public opinion in favour of maintaining high public environmental health and keeping close liaison with the Ministry's Central Board.

The council will also prepare a national code of guidance on personal hygiene, protection of water supply, food, health hazards, latrines, and refuse pits, livestock and pets.

The council will ensure compliance with the national sanitation code through grass-root councils.

The council will meet four times each year but the chairman can call emergency meetings should the need arise.

CSO: 4700/776

WATER SHORTAGE HITS NAKURU TOWN

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 28 Jan 82 p 1

[Text]

NAKURU town faces a health hazard as a result of water shortage which entered its sixth day yesterday.

Worst hit are the Provincial General Hospital and the GK Prison. The Rift Valley Prison Commander, Mr. Mareka, said the shortage was affecting the prison sanitation. He said the little water the prison was getting with the help of tankers was being used for cooking.

Several other parts of Nakuru have also been in the grip of water shortage for the last six days. The Provincial General Hospital had no water early yesterday morning.

But Town Engineer J. Mbuthia is said to have sent a water technician to the hospital to be on standby.

Hospital Ward Councillor J. Miano, who accompanied the Nation correspondent during an on-the-spot check on water points in the town, criticised the Engineering Department for the slow pace at which work was being done to bring the situation back to normal.

Mr. Mbuthia, however, said workers had been deployed in the troubled areas to repair a burst pipe and a broken down water pump. He expressed hope that water supply may resume today or tomorrow.

Problems

The shortage is also being felt in Milimani, Section 35, London Estate, Menengai Estate and parts of the industrial area, notably the Kenya Co-operative Creameries, the Pyrethrum Board and the Veterinary Investigation Laboratory.

The KCC plant was having problems with processing milk.

About 10,000 people have not had water for a week following the breakdown of a pump at one of the six boreholes and the bursting of a 40-km. pipe.

Scores of people yesterday could be seen carrying water cans or driving to fetch water from other estates or a supply tap near the council water works.

The residence of the Rift Valley PC Ezekiel Oyugi at Milimani has also been hit. He is drawing water with the help of tankers from the Municipal Council fire brigade.

A general survey showed that the water level at the main tank was very low while two other tanks were empty.

More than 20,000 gallons of water per hour were needed to bring the situation back to normal. Coun. Miano asked Mayor D. K. Kanyi and the council to rectify the problem.

●Due to frequentual water shortage in Isiolo, the District Liquor Licensing Board has resolved not to issue licences to bars, restaurants and lodgings which do not instal water storage tanks, KNA adds.

Isiolo district public health officer J. J. Kaugi said yesterday premises must be renovated and old dustbins replaced with new ones.

●An Assistant Minister for Foreign Affairs, Mr. Ezekiel Mweu, who is also Kitui East MP, has called on the Kitui water department to repair the Mwitika water system in Zombe Location adds KNA.

CSO: 4700/776

MASS LAYOFFS IN TIMBER INDUSTRY POSSIBLE

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 18 Jan 82 p 1

[Article by Henry Omondi]

[Text]

OVER 5,000 workers in the timber industry are set to be declared redundant this week.

Already the Nation learnt yesterday Elgeyo Saw Mills has laid off workers in the Kakamega, Nandi, Kipolet, Elgeyo/Marakwet and Kiptogot forests.

The chairman of the Timber Industries Employers' Association, Mr. I. S. Keen, said the mass lay-offs would begin on Thursday unless something was done to rectify the issue of licences for felling trees.

The proposed lay-offs arise out of refusal by the Ministry of Natural Resources to allow timber firms to fell trees, the employers say.

According to Mr. Keen, "members who operate sawmills in the gazetted forests have been instructed by forest officers to cease logging operations and that no further measurement of logs will be made" until further notice.

In a letter addressed to the Chief Conservator of Forests and copied to the Ministry of Labour, the Federation of Kenya Employers and the Kenya Timber and Furniture Workers' Union, Mr. Keen stressed that the cutting-off of raw material supplies to mills could only have the most serious economic consequences to the forest industry as a whole.

Asking for clarification on when the resumption of felling would be, Mr. Keen said the executive council of the association would meet on Thursday to begin the lay-off process.

The letter from the association was sent to the Chief Conservator of Forests last week.

In an interview yesterday, the general secretary of the Kenya Timber and Furniture Workers Union, Mr. David Matheru, admitted that several firms had told the union they would be laying off workers if the Ministry of Environment and Natural Resources did not clarify the matter immediately.

"As far as the union is concerned," he said, "the Government has cautioned foresters against licensing the cutting down of trees without ensuring that the trees are replaced. And we are also aware of the formation of a committee to review the pit-sawing licences together with the establishment of a Forest Inspection and Protection Unit for curbing unauthorised cutting down of trees, illegal burning of charcoal and other malpractices in the forests".

Mr. Matheru said most timber firms had long-term licences and were authorised to fell trees under the forest department's felling programme. But, he said, "it appears that either the firms are trying to use the good intended action by the Government as a scapegoat to declare mass redundancies in the industry or the foresters are misinterpreting the Government's intention".

Mr. Matheru said he had written to the Office of the President, the Central Organisation of Trade Unions (Cotu), the Federation of Kenya Employers, the Ministry of Natural Resources and the Association of Timber Employers, regarding the intended redundancies.

The Kenya Timber and Furniture Union has over 12,000 members.

CSO: 4700/776

COUNTRY TO FORM OWN SHIPPING COMPANY

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 21 Jan 82 p 24

[Text]

KENYA will have its own shipping line before the end of the decade, Transport and Communications Minister Henry Kosgey said yesterday.

The Minister was speaking during the official opening of the Kenya Ports Authority headquarters complex in Mombasa.

The ceremony concided with the 4th anniversary of the Kenya Ports Authority.

Noting that the bulk of the country's external trade was by sea, the Minister said that because Kenya lacked her own national shipping line, her people could not take their rightful participation in the trade.

"This is a matter of the greatest concern to my Ministry, the Government and to each one of us," he said.

"As our economy continues to grow, so will the need for such a shipping line become even more imperative. In order to take our share in the carriage of sea trade, our maritime policy must now be reflected towards formation of Kenya's own national shipping line," he continued.

The Minister said amid applause: "My Miniatry is vigorously pursuing this matter and we are confident that before the end of this decade of the 80s, Kenya will have formed a national shipping line."

And he cautioned port workers, Customs, police and everyone engaged in the operation of the port, saying: "You are entrusted with the responsibility of smooth functioning and security of this port, its installations and all the goods moving through it.

"You must, therefore, be vigilant and always on the look out for any attempts of magendo through Mombasa and ensure that no smuggling is permitted through the port."

CSO: 4700/776

RAILWAY FINANCES FACE LARGE DEFICIT

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 26 Jan 82 p 9

[Text]

THE Kenya Railways Corporation whose finances have for many years been running on shaky financial rails is expected to suffer an astronomical deficit of 180 million shillings by June this year.

According to a report in the current issue of Africa Now, forecasts for the ailing Railways Corporation show a cumulative operational loss that will reach the high water-mark of 180 million shillings while debt servicing will stand at 15 million shillings. The report continues: "For the first half of 1981, the Corporation suffered losses of 64 million shillings. In 1980, the loss was 72 million shillings. In 1979 the loss figures were 104 million shilling. Sh. 71 million in 1978 and Sh. 46 million in 1977. The Corporation owes local authorities in the country a total of 97 million shillings in unpaid rates. It owes the Government Sh. 73 million which should have been paid in 1977."

However, according to the secretary-general of Kenya Railways and Harbours Union, Mr. Ochola Mak'Anyengo, the claim that the Corporation is in deep financial crisis is "false and misleading." The Railways union has no doubt an interest in the future of the Corporation since its 23,000 members were awarded salary increases and housing allowances totalling 84 million shillings by the Industrial Court. The payment of such a large sum only makes the financial position of the Kenya Railways sag further.

The Corporation's managing director, Mr. Davidson Ngini, did not have time to talk to the Nation about the financial plight of the organisation according to his secretary.

CSO: 4700/776

COTTON FARMERS THREATEN BOYCOTT

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 14 Jan 82 p 9

[Text]

COTTON farmers in the Tana Irrigation Scheme in Hola have threatened to stop growing the crop in protest over late payments.

They have decided to withhold the harvested cotton in their houses in anticipation hoping the National Irrigation Board (NIB) will buy the crop.

A survey showed that NIB paid the farmers after recovering all loans, an exercise which lasted one-and-a-half years.

It was also found that some farmers at the scheme had debts amounting to 20,000/-.

Some farmers withholding the crop are ferrying it in canoes to Zubaki and Milalulu locations where they conspire with farmers growing rain-fed cotton and sell it to the Hola Co-operative Society on cash basis.

The non-irrigated cotton growers have also decided to down their tools because the co-operative society has refused to buy their cotton on realising the racket.

They have neither prepared their farms nor collected cotton seeds for planting this season.

Following the threat, Tana River District Commissioner Mbuo Waganagwa convened a meeting with Tana Irrigation Scheme acting manager Ngolo, chief accountant Ngari, Hola Co-operative Society manager Jilo, District Crops Officer, Mugo Ndauti, and acting District Co-operative Officer Ng'ang'a.

The team resolved that the secretary manager would buy the irrigation cotton before the rain fed one.

Mr. Jilo told the DC that the co-operative society's members had complained to him over the long delayed payment after delivery of their crop.

"Farmers have, therefore decided to ferry their cotton through other channels where they will get hard cash so as to pay for school fees for their children and meet other household requirements," said Mr. Jilo.

CSO: 4700/776

HANDICRAFT EXPORTS INCREASE

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 19 Jan 82 p 9

[Text] Handicrafts exports from Kenya rose by 18 per cent in 1981 with wood carvings having accounted for 63 per cent of the exports.

Basketry exports tripled last year and accounted for 16 per cent of the total exports with a free on board (FOB) value of Sh. 2.7 million, according to a statement from the Kenya External Trade Authority (KETA).

Major beneficiaries of the increased exports are the substantial numbers of rural women who have channelled their crafts into the expanded markets, said KETA, which maintains handicrafts exports statistics.

The sharp increase, according to the authority, was due to increased orders by major importers and retail stores and orders by new buyers.

KETA's marketing section, which compiles statistics weekly, said that Sh. 16.8 million were dispatched to countries giving preferential treatment to Kenya's exports under the Lome/ACP and GSP agreements.

The statement further said that the market value of the crafts work is estimated between £4 and £5 million.

The biggest importing countries of handicrafts were the USA, Germany, UK, Japan, Canada, Australia and the Netherlands, said the authority.

Kenya has become a major source for buyers of gift-ware, decorative accessories and styled ethnic merchancise. "Importers have found that Kenya's exporters have the know-how and production capabilities to meet the market demands and consumer tastes," noted KETA.

The two fastest growing markets for the hand-made high quality merchandise have been Japan and Australia.

CSO: 4700/776

TEXTILE WORKERS THREATEN STRIKE

Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 23 Jan 82 p 7

[Text]

THE Kenya Tailors and Textile Workers Union, Changamwe branch, has threatened to call a strike at the Interfashions Garment Factory, Mombasa, if 50 workers sacked on Wednesday are not reinstated.

Labour Ministry officials have been meeting daily with the union and company officials to resolve the dispute.

According to the branch secretary of the union, Mr. Opiyo Odidi, the sackings by the management were against established industrial procedure.

"We will call a strike at the factory if the matter is not amicably resolved by the Labour Office, since the management of the company is out to victimise our members," added the union official.

He said the workers were sacked on Wednesday morning when they reported for duty on allegations that they had participated in a "strike" on Tuesday evening which the workers maintain was a "lockout".

He said investigations by the Ministry of Labour officials proved that the "lock-out" was illegal and a number of meetings had been convened since then between the union and the management to have the workers reinstated.

He said that the management of the company was refusing to negotiate directly with him to have the workers reinstated.

The Nation learned that three meetings chaired by Mr. Makopa and attended by personnel manager of the company, Mr. G.K. Wambua and Mr. Odidi for the union, had ended in a deadlock.

The labour officer has been insisting that the workers should be reinstated as they were locked out illegally.

CSO: 4700/776

BRIEFS

REMOTE-SENSING PROJECT--New York, Friday--Kenya is looking into possibilities of using space technology in exploring its natural resources. According to a Kenyan delegate at a UN sub-committee meeting, research has been carried out by local and foreign experts on ways of applying remote sensing technology in hydrological, meteorological and forestry surveys. Voice of Kenya chief engineer S. N. Macharia, addressing the UN sub-committee session on the peaceful uses of outer space here, said Kenya was a developing nation and did not have enough resources to explore the outer space. The 19th session of the UN Scientific and Technical Subcommittee will discuss, among other things, the Unispace 82 conference to be held in Vienna, Austrai. [Text] [Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 23 Jan 82 p 4]

SH. 90M. PACT SIGNED--A finance agreement for Sh. 90 million was yesterday signed between the Kenya Commercial Bank and Societe Generale of France to help Kenyan industrialists import machinery, equipment and technical services from France. The agreement for the "buyer credit" finance was signed by KCB chairman Philip Ndegwa and Societe Generale Chairman Maurice Laure at the KCB headquarters, Nairobi. The agreement stipulates that individual contracts for purchase of machinery and equipment must be for a minimum of Sh. 1.8 million while maximum "buyer credit" finance will be for 85 per cent of the contract sum. The interest rate currently applicable for "buyer credit" is 10 per cent per annum. The borrower will also pay a commitment fee of 0.5 per cent and a management fee of 0.5 per cent. And loans under the agreement must be repaid in equal half yearly instalments within a period not exceeding seven years. For a prospective borrower to quality for a "buyer credit", a financial report or a status report acceptable to the lender will be required in addition to other bank requirements, according to a Press statement. [Text] [Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 22 Jan 82 p 32]

FORCES STAY TAX EXEMPT--The Navy, Army and Air Force Institute (NAAFI) has been exempted from tax on income accruing from its operations which involve the running of special shops and canteens for the members of the Armed Forces at subsidised rate. The exemption is contained in Legal Notice No. 4 appearing in the issue of the Kenya Gazette dated yesterday which was signed by the Vice-President and Minister for Finance, Mr. Mwai Kibaki. According to the Legal Notice, the exemption is backdated to January, 1974. [Text] [Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 23 Jan 82 p 8]

FLEET VISIT--Mombasa will be "invaded" next week when a fleet of United States naval ships call in on Monday bringing about 7,000 men and officers for a five-day visit to Kenya. According to the American Consul in Mombasa, Mr. Robert Gribbin, the six ships will be headed by USS Constellation, an aircraft carrier. The ships have been cruising in the Indian Ocean and they are bringing in the crew for a rest before they go back again to the Indian Ocean's assignment. Others in the fleet are USS Truxton, a cruiser, USS Bagley, a frigate, USS Olendorf, a frigate, USS Santa Barbara, an oiler and USS Mispillion, support ship. Some of the ships arrive in Mombasa on Monday and others on Tuesday. Meanwhile a Zanzibar registered ship, Mapinduzi, docked in Mombasa port on Wednesday night with 120 Muslims from the clove island for Lamu to attend the annual Maulid. [Text] [Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 23 Jan 82 p 9]

CID CHIEF'S SON HURT--The son of CID director Ignatius Nderi and another youngster were yesterday rushed to Nyeri Provincial General Hospital after their motorcycle was in a head-on collison with a matatu on Kimathi Road, Nyeri. Mr. Nderi's son's condition was described by the hospital authorities as "improving". Antony Kagume Iriga, Ignatius Nderi Hunyu and a third person whose name was not immediately known were riding the motorcycle which was in collision with a matatu on a corner near Nyeri Municipal Hall. Kagume, the son of the CID director, sustained head and arm injuries while Hunyu sustained chest and head injuries. But the chief nurse of the hospital, Mr. H. A. Ndenda, said neither was in serious condition. Police are investigating. [Text] [Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 25 Jan 82 p 1]

WITCH HUNT KILLING--A former policeman was killed by villagers in Pokot District on suspicion that he practised witchcraft. Boiwo Chepnyokos died after day's torture during which th ears of a woman suspect were cu off by witchhunters. About 60 residents of Senetw village last Monday set out in search of witches in the area They rounded up the three men a woman and members of thei families. The former policema was among them. Chepnyoko's eldest son, Mr John Paywa, said his father refused to declare in public tha he was a witch. The villager killed him and buried his body b a river. The former lawman's body wa exhumed by police on Frida after learning of the incident. Three people are helping wit investigations while a massiv hunt has been launched for th killers, who fled their homes aft the gruesome incident. One of the torture victims, man, was admitted t Kapenguria District Hospita unconscious. Chepnyokos, 65, retired from police force recently. He joine the force during colonial period. Meanwhile, the officer commanding Kapenguria police div sion, Mr. S.N. Gachiri, ha warned wananchi against beatin up suspects Addressing a leaders meeting the police chief said incidents suspected criminals being beate had increased in Kapenguria. [Entire item as published] [Text] [Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 25 Jan 82 p 1]

MINI-SHAKEUP REMOVES CHIEF--The Deputy Supervisor of Elections, Mr. N.W. Kimani, and three District Commissioners have been transferred in a mini-shakeup, the Nation learned last night. The others are Mr. Silvester Tororey who until recently was the acting Provincial Commissioner, Western Province, Homa Bay DC Ezekiel Nyarangi and Kilifi DC Andrew Omuse. A highly placed source told the Nation that the four will be posted to various Ministries. Mr. Kimani is said to have been posted to the Health Ministry. The source said Mr. Kimani's transfer has "nothing to do with the Nyeri by-election". "It has no relation with the elections at all. He had been transferred before the nominations (Nyeri) and he was aware of it," the source said. Mr. Tororey was the acting Western PC when Mr. Nahashon Ngugi was on leave. It was not immediately known whether Mr. Ngugi has resumed work. It was also not immediately known who have replaced the officers involved in the reshuffle. [Text] [Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 13 Jan 82 p 1]

WATER SHORTAGES--Shortage of water has hit several parts of Wigot ward, Kisumu Municipality and among the worst hit is Ramogi Institute of Advanced Technology (RIAT) where water is being fetched by vehicles about 10 km from Kisumu town. [Text] [Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 27 Jan 82 p 3]

BAN ON MAIZE SALES--Selling of maize in Munyu Sub-location, Thika Division, Kiambu, has been banned. The ban was announced by Munyu assistant chief John Kimondo Thungu at a baraza at Munyu trading centre [Text] [Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 27 Jan 82 p 3]

END TO NAROK DIFFERENCES--Narok leaders have resolved to end their political differences in a meeting attended by all leaders in the district. The move was initiated by President Moi when he conferred with Maasai leaders recently at his Kabarak home. The politicians promised in the presence of the Narok District Commissioner, Mr. Samuel Oburu who chaired the meeting to maintain unity and expose those who will create any further differences. An Assistant Minister in the President's Office, Mr. Justus ole Tipis said political differences among leaders in the district had retarded development. [Text] [Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 28 Jan 82 p 5]

KISUMU RAID NETS 40--More than 40 people were yesterday rounded up in Kisumu during a surprise raid by Winam District Officer Sam Arap Korir. The raid was to root out undesirable elements in the municipality, Mr. Korir said. He was accompanied by two chiefs, assistant chiefs, administration police and council askaris. "The men and women arrested will be screened. Those with genuine documents will be released and others will be taken to court," said Mr. Korir. The raid, which started on Tuesday, continued yesterday morning Mr. Korir and his team visited several lodges, hotels and bars checking women and men. They also netted people drinking beer after hours. In one of the lodges, they arrested a man with a 14-year-old schoolgirl. One of the chiefs' commented: "This man has decided to confuse this young girl with money. He brings her to the lodgings during school hours". Mr. Korir said the raid would continue until he was satisfied that undesirable elements were removed from the township. Parking boys in the town took to their heels when they saw Mr. Korir's team approaching. [Text] [Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 28 Jan 82 p 5]

PERMANENCY OF RURAL PRESS--Information and Broadcasting Minister Peter Oloo-Aringo has said the Unesco-sponsored rural press project is a Government development plan which is there to stay. He refuted allegations that the rural press was experimental and stressed that it was the Government's policy to establish rural newspapers and radio stations in all parts of the country in a bid to hasten mass communication network and enhance fast development. Mr. Aringo made the remarks yesterday in a Kisii hotel when he was closing a one-week consultative workshop on rural newspapers. [Text] [Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 29 Jan 82 p 12]

BORDER RACKET CURBED--Illegal trade on the Kenya-Uganda border has considerably been reduced, Nyanza Deputy Provincial Commissioner Charles Murage said yesterday. Mr. Murage was talking to the Uganda High Commissioner, Mr. David Mwaka, who paid him a courtesy call at his Kisumu office. He said the Government was set to stamp out the illegal trade where "the get-rich--quickly businessmen" smuggled goods across the border. He appealed to the Uganda Government to also help in wiping out the illegal trade. "Since the government changed in Uganda we have nothing to fear at the border because Ugandans and Kenyans have decided to live as brothers and sisters and I hope it will continue for the interest of both countries," he said. He briefed the High Commissioner on the problems which the people living in the area face. "We still have a lot of room for improvement in agricultural produce," Mr. Murage said. "Sugar cane forms the bulk of agricultural produce in Nyanza although there are several problems facing the cane farmers. But the Government is doing everything possible to minimise the problem", he added. Mr. Mwaka who is on a familiarisation tour of Nyanza and Western provinces said Kenya was one of their best friends because after liberation Kenya was the first country to come to Uganda's aid. [Text] [Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 29 Jan 82 p 4]

GERMAN DAM AID--A Minister of State in the Office of the President, Mr. Nicholas Biwott, has thanked the Federal Republic of Germany for its assistance to the construction of Masinga Dam on Tana River. Mr. Biwott, who was welcoming the German Minister for Economic Co-operation to Masinga, said the Minister's tour was importan because it would enable him to see the success of his country's support. He said Kenya and Germany had very good relations. He said the project was important because it had enabled the Kenya Government to supply water for domestic purposes, irrigation and for generating hydro-electricity. The project cost K£ 53 million, with a very large portion contributed by the German Government, he said. [Text] [Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 29 Jan 82 p 11]

STRIKE AVERTED--A strike by about 200 workers of the Kenya Cinema was averted yesterday after a successful meeting between the employer, the Labour Ministry and the Kenya Union of Commercial, Food and Allied Workers. The workers decided to down their tools yesterday morning, demanding meal allowances and transport. [Text] [Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 29 Jan 82 p 8]

MOMBASA HARBOR DREDGING--Work to dredge Mombasa harbour from outside the entrance along the channel is due to start in about a week and is expected to last about seven months. The contract to do the work has been given to an American firm, Great Lakes Dredge and Drydock Co., of Chicago, Illinois, whose project manager, Mr. Russel L. Casey, is already in Mombasa. Thirty-seven members of his team who will assist in assembling the dredging equipment, arrived in Mombasa on Thursday. The dredging equipment, which include two tugs, two launches and a drilling boat, are scheduled to arrive here on Monday. Mr. Casey told the Nation that the assembling of the equipment, which will take about a week to complete, will be done at the Divecorn yard. "On completion of the assembling, the dredging machine will be towed out to the entrance of the harbour and commence work coming towards the channel", he said. According to a local news magazine, the dredging will involve removing two million cubic metres of material from the harbour's entrance. [Text] [Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 30 Jan 82 p 12]

PORT EXPANSION--The Government is spending much on expanding port facilities to handle more cargo. Coast Provincial Commissioner Luka Galgalo said this at the inauguration of the Mombasa branch of the Kenya Transport Association. The PC explained that the facilities to be expanded included the dredging of the channel, modernisation of equipment and construction of new wharfs and berths. Mr. Galgalo noted that most of Kenya's export and import cargo was currently being carried by foreign vessels, resulting in large outlays of foreign exchange. "It will, therefore, be in the interests of the Government to establish a Kenya National Shipping Line", he said. Speaking at the official opening of the Kenya Ports Authority headquarters complex last week, Transport and Communications Minister Henry Kosgey said Kenya would have her own national shipping line before the end of this decade. At the inauguration ceremony of Mombasa branch of KTA, Mr. Galgalo said that in other sectors of transport, including maritime, the Government had far-reaching aims at expanding and improving the existing facilities. Mr. Galgalo said he had deliberately cited the few observations in an effort to illustrate sketchly that the government commitment to improvement of various forms of transport systems was immense. [Text] [Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 30 Jan 82 p 9]

LIBYAN TEAM DENIED ENTRY--Two Libyans were yesterday refused entry into Kenya because they had no visas. The purpose of the Libyans' intended visit was to attend an international award function in Nairobi, according to a Press release issued by the Libyan Embassy. The release said the two-man delegation was to receive an award last night along with several others from different parts of Africa. The release (Issue No. 24) said: "A Libyan delegation officially invited to attend the prestigious International Africa Award function ... was refused entry into Kenya at Kenyatta International Airport last night (Sunday) after being held there for 24 hours." The release did not name the two Libyans involved nor did it clarify as to what the "prestigious" award or who its sponsors were nor the names of "many other delegates from different areas of Africa". A senior Kenya Government official late last evening confirmed two Libyans were not allowed to enter Kenya because they did not have visas. An official at the Immigration Department said visas were usually applied for in advance and that, in the event of state guest, the processing was done by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. Foreign Ministry officials said no such visa applications were received. [Text] [Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 2 Feb 82 p 1]

SECURITY FORCES IN WAJIR--Wajir District Kanu chairman, Mr. Adan Jiran, has commended the security forces for maintaining a high standard of discipline. Refuting allegations made by the MP for Wajir East, Mr. Abdi Mohammed Sheikh, that security forces in the district were harassing innocent wananchi, he said there have been no such incidents. What happened in the past has been amicably solved by Government officers, local leaders and wananchi, he said. Mr. Jiran said the people of Wajir District were true Nyayo followers adding that they were determined to get this year's Presidential Cup for Peace by enhancing the spirit of living together in harmony. He also said that the area had enough food. Councillor Noor Ali has in the meanwhile asked the MP to come to Wajir "instead of living in Nairobi". The District Commissioner Mr. Nicholas Mberia has also refuted the allegations made by the MP that there had been burning of manyattas in the district. He said that the MP's statement might jeopardise peace and harmony prevailing in the district. [Text] [Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 2 Feb 82 p 16]

LAKE AUTHORITY RICE PLAN--The Lake Basin Development Authority has embarked on a campaign to ensure that Western Kenya produces enough rice to sustain the establishment of a rice mill in the region. According to the Authority's ecologist

Dr. Perez Olindo, the area had high potential for growing Upland rice with Busia District topping the list. He was closing a two-day seminar of rice growers. He said Busia alone had been able to reap 9,000 tons of the crop from last year's harvest. Urging more farmers to participate in the programme, Dr. Olindo said the Authority would provide free rice seedlings for this season to encourage farmers. He said Brazil was the only country in the world growing Upland rice on pilot scheme. "If Kenya succeeds in the endeavour it will be among the few countries in the world growing Upland rice which is cheaper to grow compared to irrigated rice," he said. Dr. Olindo appealed to the tractor hire service employees to serve farmers without favour. Others present during the closing ceremony of the seminar which was attended by 83 participants included the Busia District Commissioner, Mr. Zachary Orwa. [Text] [Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 2 Feb 82 p 8]

U.S. CONSULATE IN MOMBASA--The opening of an American Consulate in Mombasa underlined the importance the United States placed on its ties with Kenya, the American Ambassador, Mr. William Harrop said. Speaking at the official opening of his Mission's Consulate in Mombasa, the envoy said: "On our part, we believe it is essential that we be represented in this growing and dynamic town, the gateway to Kenya, Uganda, Rwanda, Burundi, eastern Zaire and Sudan." The Coast Provincial Commissioner, Mr. Luka Galgalo, who officially opened the Consulate, said Mombasa was growing in importance day by day. "The opening of new banks, new offices and Consulates is enough proof to show that the town is rapidly growing in importance", he said. Kenya and America enjoyed close relationship and welcomed the opening of the consulate in Mombasa. [Text] [Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 30 Jan 82 p 5]

SECTARIAN ROWS--Murang'a District Commissioner Mbaria Maina has told a religious sect in Kandara Division to settle members' differences before the Government intervenes. Mr. Maina lashed at a few religious leaders in the area who, he claimed, sowed seeds of disunity among the wananchi. The DC, who was addressing a rally at Ithiru Location, warned that the Government would not tolerate any religious sect trying to bring hatred among wananchi. Urging wananchi to scorn such prophets of darkness, Mr. Maina appealed to Murang'a people to step up their development efforts instead of entertaining gossips that were aimed at discouraging wananchi from participating in national development. The meeting was called to find ways of improving the standard of education in the division. The area held last place in CPE results last year. [Text] [Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 14 Jan 82 p 10]

WOMEN CAUGHT IN SWOOP--Nyeri police rounded up 130 women on Wednesday night for medical check-up. A senior police officer told the Nation yesterday the operation covered only a part of the town centre. "The swoop was prompted by a public outcry over increased cases of venereal diseases (VD) in the town," the officer said. Those netted were taken to Nyeri Provincial Hospital for a VD check-up. Police swung into action at 10 p.m. Wednesday night and arrests went on till early hours of the morning. Those inside lodging places escaped the dragnet. An eyewitness said after the round-up, the women screamed as police huddled them together to await transport. He saw three lorry loads drive towards the police station. They were later heard chanting religious and later liberation songs on their way to the cells. Some of them clad lightly were seen shivering. It could not be ascertained whether some of them worked in offices but many of them claimed they were self-employed or tha they were attending courses in th town. Police sources said that those found infected with VD would appear in court. They would also get treatment for the disease. [Text] [Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 15 Jan 82 p 1]

FRENCH WARSHIPS IN PORT--The Djibouti-based Anti-Mines Division of the French Navy in the Indian Ocean, which consists of the support vessel Loire and Mine sweepers Mytho, Capella, Capricorne and Ouistreham, will make a routine call in Mombasa from January 18 to 23. The force will be under Commander de Montaigne de Poncins on board the Loire. Support vessel Loire under Commander Robillard has a company of 160 seamen. Minesweepers Mytho, Capella, Capricorne and Ouistreham have a company of 170 seamen. The vessels will be open to the public in Mombasa on January 19, 20 and 21 from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. [Text] [Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 16 Jan 82 p 11]

INDIAN SHOPKEEPERS UNDER FIRE--Recently while engaged in building business in my mission, I entered into two shops at Ruiru owned by some Asians to buy a number of bolts. The bolts I needed were of 8" by 3/4" for fixing roofing trusses. The price quoted in the first shop was 40/- per bolt of the said size. Unfortunately they were out of stock as I was told. In the second shop, they only had bolts of 6" by 1/2" costing 35/- per bolt so I was told. Surprisingly enough, I finally bought them from an African owned shop at a price of 7/- per bolt. My God! What a big difference. Personally, I was shocked and worried. How can our dear wananchi survive in this way? Even without passing judgment on the two traders this seriously portrays a great and painful moral decadence in our business affairs which our dear President has been working tirelessly to rectify. Technically, this is not just a case of differences in prices and not mere exploitation but open theft or daylight robbery. It is a clear abuse of the Nyayo's call for peace, love and unity. It is high time that something is done to stop these shopkeepers from exploiting innocent wananchi. They should be made to practise honesty and sincerity in their business transactions. No one would be against their making a margin profit but such a profit should not be so exorbitant and out of all proportions. My sincere prayer for such traders is that in their endeavours to amass riches they should do so through honest and hard work and not through exploiting others. Fr. Paul Njoroge, Ruiru. [Text] [Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 16 Jan 82 p 7]

KENYA, INDIA TIES HAILED--Labour Minister Titus Mbathi said at the weekend that cultural relationships between Kenya and India are strong. Speaking at the 7th annual gathering of the South India Cultural Society, in Nairobi, he expressed his pleasure at the efforts made by the society in strengthening the friendship between the two countries. The Minister also received a cheque for 5,000/- from the society to help Kitui Primary School Fund. Mr. Mbathi was introduced by the society chairman Mr. S.V. Raman. [Text] [Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 18 Jan 82 p 4]

PLO ART EXHIBIT--The Palestine Liberation Organisation held a two-day exhibition of Palestinian works of art and publications in Nairobi under the auspices of the Kenya-Arab Friendship Society. The exhibition, which was held at Matungulu House, was attended by leading Kenyans, including the society's chairman Mr. Martin Shikuku, Kamukunji MP Nicholas Gor and diplomats. The exhibition also had the diplomatic notes exchanged between PLO chairman Yassir Arafat and the OAU chairman, President Moi. [Text] [Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 18 Jan 82 p 4]

UNION DIFFERENCES RESOLVED--Differences have been resolved between the newly-formed permanent consultative body on unions in parastatal bodies and the Government. Mr. Ali Mohamed, secretary-general of the Union of Posts and Telecommunications Workers and a member of the body, told newsmen that officials of the four concerned unions met Labour Ministry officials on Friday to discuss the Waruhiu Committee report and the recent guidelines issued by the Government to the unions. He said the unions "got the necessary clarification" and were satisfied that the existing negotiating machinery would not be affected. The unions represented were" The Railways and Harbours Union, the Transport and Allied Workers Union, the Posts and Telecommunications Union and the Kenextel Workers Union, Mr. Mohamed said. Labour Commissioner J. M. Mutugi represented the Government, said Mr. Mohamed. Mr. Mohamed was accompanied by Mr. Raphael Okang'a (Railways), Mr. Julius Malii (Transport) and Mr. Charles Nguta (Kenextel). [Text] [Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 19 Jan 82 p 4]

PARAFFIN SHORTAGES--The paraffin shortage in Migori town in South Nyanza District is now in its third week. And charcoal dealers in the town are cashing in on the shortage by raising prices from 14/- to 25/- a bag. The hardest hit areas are Milimani, Pand Diri and Shauri Yako. Wananchi have now appealed to Migori MP who is also the Minister for Energy, Mr. John Okwanyo, and other leaders to help end the paraffin shortage. [Text] [Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 18 Jan 82 p 8]

CALL FOR ILLEGAL FIREARMS--People possessing firearms illegally in Narok and South Nyanza districts have been asked to surrender them to the Government. The appeal was made by the Narok District Commissioner, Mr. Samuel Oburu, at a meeting between Government officials in the two districts at Ongata Barragoi. Mr.Oburu said such arms were used in cattle rustling and other criminal activities, adding that those surrendering arms would not be prosecuted. He said that the Government was capable of protecting its people and that there was not need for anyone to carry arms. The DC further appealed to the leaders of the two districts to hold regular meetings so that they could sort out their differences amicably. South Nyanza DC Allan Kamau warned that chiefs and assistant chiefs who misinterpreted Government directives to wananchi would be sacked. [Text] [Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 18 Jan 82 p 4]

CANS ON WAY TO UGANDA--The Kakamega branch of the Kenya Industrial Estates (KIE) has made four thousand watering cans which are to be exported to Uganda. In a statement to KNA yesterday, the branch manager of KIE, Dr. I. Nasibi, said that the production of the cans became possible as a result of a contract given to the branch by the West German Embassy in Nairobi to make the cans to be sent to the Ministry of Agriculture in Uganda. Dr. Nasibi said the production of the cans, which took three months to make, created employment for fourty young school leavers who worked under the supervision of the branch workshop manager, Mr. Daniel Wafula. Flanked by the Industrial Adviser at the Kakamega branch of KIE, Mr. Siegfried Jenders, Dr. Nasibi told KNA that the project had proved that small-scale industries can do well in Kakamega since there was available labour for industrial jobs. [Text] [Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 21 Jan 82 p 9]

MASAI MORANISM OUTDATED--"Moranism" among the Maasai boys is outmoded and should be discouraged, Kajiado District Commissioner George Miingi has said. He told chiefs and assistant chiefs from the district to ensure that no more "Moran" camps were established in their area. It is a Maasai tradition for teenage boys to abandon their parental homes after circumcision and lead a jungle life, practising how to become traditional tribal warriors, before they return home to be initiated to manhood. Mr. Miingi further directed chiefs and their assistants to establish tree nurseries in their respective areas and report to their district officers when that has been done. He stressed that chiefs must put more efforts in helping to recover agricultural loans from people in their areas. [Text] [Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 19 Jan 82 p 14]

AFRICAN CONTROL OF GOODS--A Minister of State in the Office of the President, Mr. G.G. Kariuki, yesterday said that the distribution of manufactured goods should be left to Africans. Addressing a baraza in Mathare Constituency, Nairobi, Mr. Kariuki said that European and Asian manufacturers should pass their goods to Africans for distribution. "Let Africans be given a chance", he said, adding that "time has come when Africans must take over the full distribution of goods". He said that to ask Africans to take over should not be seen as a move to punish any community or foreigners. "In fact, it will benefit manufacturers to leave distribution to Africans", he said. Mr. Kariuki said that the Government had done its best to ensure that Africans went into business. The stability of this country could only be maintained by Kenyans and not foreigners, he said, adding that that was why Africans should be given a chance in commerce. "We shall make sure that Africans take business," he said. [Text] [Nairobi DAILY NATION in English 21 Jan 82 p 24]

CSO: 4700/7761

BEHIND THE SCENES LOOK AT DTA SPLIT

Windhoek THE WINDHOEK ADVERTISER in English 19 Feb 82 pp 10-11

[Article by Leon Kok in column "From the Editor's Desk": "The DTA Drama--Behind the Scenes"]

[Text] MONDAY February 15 is a day that the DTA might prefer not to remember: it saw the Owambo-based NDP break away from the four-year old alliance.

This is the first split that has hit the DTA and has resulted in the loss to the alliance of the representative party of the biggest ethnic group in the country.

The DTA has always boasted that it is the only political organisation in SWA which has represented all 11 ethnic groups.

DTA Chairman Mr Dirk Mudge alleged at a press conference on Monday night that I had a direct hand in the split and that I stood outside the Grand Hotel (DTA headquarters) at noon awaiting DTA President and NDP leader Mr Peter Kalangula's walkout.

The second point is untrue, while I have only influenced events in as far as I am a journalist. I don't deny however that Peter Kalangula is a close friend of mine and that I have been fully aware of his thinking and the events that have unfolded in recent months.

The first cracks which culminated in Monday's break emerged months ago. The Advertiser has exhaustively reported on the problems and has repeatedly warned of the dangers. Unfortunately, as I have since come to learn, many of the people who should have taken notice of what was happening didn't even bother to read this newspaper.

That is their business. But this factor coupled with their inaction contributed considerably to what happened on Monday.

For the record, lets recap on what the problems were:

- Mr Kalangula, as President of the DTA, expressed grave reservations about the overall running of the DTA;
- He made it clear that he disliked the ethnic form of the DTA;
- He was unhappy about Mr Dirk Mudge's approach to the Western proposals which he felt was negative;
- He had great reservations about the interim constitution AG 8 — he wanted it scrapped;
- He was unhappy about the interim government's handling of Owambo;
- He expressed grave reservations about the introduction of the DTA-sponsored Terrorism Bill in the National Assembly which would have been applicable primarily to Owambo;
- And he took great exception to an allegation in the DTA official organ, Die Republikein, that the NDP had done next to nothing to promote the DTA's interests in Owambo. Mr Kalangula points out that he lost his own brother in this context.

Mr Kalangula raised these matters with Mr Mudge and the DTA Head Committee, but according to him (Mr Kalangula), to no avail. He became a highly frustrated man. His Owambo colleagues were even more frustrated. Mr Kalangula ultimately alleged that many of his DTA colleagues were misled, which in turn led to considerable antipathy on their part.

In a new approach to affairs, and perhaps naively, Mr Kalangula sought progress by attempting to widen the base of his NDP and by hoping to confront the DTA leadership with grass roots support. Hence the Tsumeb and Oshakati accords which involved Mr Kefas Conradie's NPLF and Mr Kloppers' Liberal Party.

Thereafter, there was an interesting unfolding of events. On Monday February 8 The Advertiser reported that Mr Conradie had tried at the Oshakati meeting to alienate the NDP from the DTA, but Mr Werner Neef interceded. Mr Neef, a former member of the Ministers' council and close colleague of Mr Mudge, was at the Oshakati meeting at Mr Kalangula's request. I was also there at Mr Kalangula's invitation.

Mr Conradie contested the contents of The Advertiser report and demanded from me that these be repudiated. I refused point blank to accede to Mr Conradie's demand but I did agree to publish his version of the events. This The Advertiser did and the contents have since been publicly repudiated by Messrs Kalangula and Neef.

COLLABORATORS

I understand that Mr

Conradie then spoke to Die Republikein Editor Dr Jan Spies and this led to a meeting between Mr Conradie and Mr Mudge. Mr Conradie also spoke to Mr Billy Marais, a close confidente of Mr Mudge. Mr Conradie apparently presented Mr Neef and myself in an extremely bad light, as collaborators to break the DTA, and of being a party to getting Mr Kalangula alienated from Mr Mudge.

Well, going by the events of this week, Mr Conradie's volta face certainly won him a place in the DTA, in spite of Mr Mudge's regular belittlement of him in the past. One wonders now whether Mr Conradie conforms to the ideals of Mr Kalangula or to those of Mr Mudge, or neither. Whatever, Die Republikein, which was once loath to give Mr Conradie any publicity, elevated him triumphantly on Wednesday to a 60 point front page headline.

Meanwhile, I understand that Messrs Mudge & Co were also annoyed about The Advertiser report on February 8 concerning the Oshakati accord. The pain was apparently not so much the agreement that was reached, but rather that Mr Neef was involved and that he had been appointed Mr Kalangula's personal adviser. Mr Neef resigned from the Ministers Council last July following sharp differences with Mr Mudge over the National Budget and other matters.

FALSE

Stories are now apparently doing the rounds in town that Mr Neef edged his way in with Mr Kalangula to get his revenge on Mr Mudge. I can personally testify that this allegation is totally, but totally false. I was present at a meeting in Oshakati three weeks ago when Mr Neef's name was first raised and it was decided to approach him to join the NDP. It was known to Mr Kalangula at that stage that Mr Neef was planning to set up his own political party in SWA. Mr Neef accompanied me to Oshakati the following week and the first direct contact between Messrs Kalangula and Neef was in the presence of my company. Mr Neef did not take the initiative himself.

Mr Mudge, perhaps thinking that things were getting out of control concerning Mr Kalangula and the NDP, called in some of his closest advisers to discuss the matter. He also ordered all the Windhoek Advertisers dating back to December 1 to look at the matter more closely. Following that, it was decided to confront Mr Kalangula headon.

A Head Committee meeting of the DTA was set for Tuesday February 16 and was then changed to Monday February 15. Mr Kalangula, as President of the DTA, was "summoned" by the Chairman, Mr Mudge, and Mr Kalangula duly prepared for the meeting, anticipating what was in store. He consulted fully with the Owambo members of the National Assembly and the Owambo Legislative Assembly and they gave him a unanimous mandate to say and act at the meeting however he felt fit, including an NDP withdrawal from the DTA. And so the scene was set.

The rest is now well known, having been extensively reported in the media this week. Acting DTA President Dr Ben Africa had this to say on Monday night: "Mr Kalangula was asked to come and address us and explain his criticism of us. We were interested in his viewpoint. Mr Kalangula arrived but the opposite happened. He declined to give us his reasons and told us that he was here to represent the Owambos and not because we had ordered him to be here. We were disappointed. Mr Kalangula then packed his case and left before the discussion had even been completed."

FUTILE

Mr Kalangula told me earlier that he had addressed the meeting and had touched on a number of the matters that had been raised. Besides, he felt that he had put his case to the Head Committee often enough, he had explained his position through the press on numerous occasions, and as such he felt that any further discussion at the meeting was futile. The main purpose of the meeting, in his view, was not to find common ground, but simply to shut him up. Particularly to stop talking to me. Significantly, this whole question of DTA members talking to The Advertiser, was apparently treated in great detail by Mr Mudge after Mr Kalangula and his colleagues had left.

Mr Kalangula walked out of the Grand Hotel at 11.55 and phoned me just after noon. He had this to say: "Leon, we're out." "Out of what", I asked. "The DTA", he said. Frankly, I was shocked. Mr Kalangula had told me a week before that he would never leave the DTA; that the DTA would have to kick him out. Clearly, however, the situation had been made impossible for him. Mr Kalangula then asked me to inform my press colleagues that he would hold a press conference at the Kalahari Sands Hotel at 2.30 pm to make the official announcement. This was duly held and addressed by Mr Kalangula and Mr Neef.

The DTA leader informed the press that it would put its case at a press conference to be held at the Grand Hotel at 6 pm. This was duly held and addressed primarily by Dr Africa and Messrs Katuutire Kaura, Kuaima Riruako and Mudge. Mr Kaura in particular got stuck into Mr Kalangula and among other things accused him of being "power hungry", "a confused political opportunist", "Mr Neef's lackey", "Mr Kosie Pretorius' bedfollow" and precipitating a Biafran and Katangese situation in the country. The other speakers were more tempered in their discriptions.

THORN

No so Mr Mudge, concerning myself. He launched into a vociferous attack against me for having been, in his view, a major architect of the day's events and indeed the demise of the DTA. I was told afterwards by DTA stalwart and newspaper colleague, Bill Hulme, that it was hoped that I would pack my bags and take the morning plane to Pretoria. It was felt that I have become a major thorn in the DTA's flesh, which, ironically, is the last thing I would ever have chosen to be.

Frankly, I refuse to let personal attack on me and personal prejudices affect my perception and objective judgment. Furthermore, I see no real purpose in dealing publicly with Mr Mudge's accusations unless I'm forced to do so. I told Mr Mudge after the press conference that I would be happy to answer him personally if he so desired. In any event, this aspect of Monday's proceedings was treated by the media for what it was worth.

LOOKING BACK

Looking back on the week, the immediate reaction of many DTA supporters and others to the split was shock and dismay. The DTA's credibility was then worsened with its tie-up with the NPLF, whatever principles or lack of principles might have been involved. Taking stock of the situation, however, it is true that there are unfortunate dimensions to it, particularly that years of unity between the Turnhalle leaders had once again received a setback. But equally, as this newspaper wrote on Wednesday, there are positive elements too.

Consider these points:

- The NDP could act as an important bridge between the DTA and Swapo, and that will be necessary if true independence and true national unity are to be obtained in the near future;
- The NDP could prove to be an important escape valve for many frustrated Blacks and Browns, be they Owambos or not, who might otherwise have been tempted to join the radical ranks;
- The NDP could well become the nucleus of a new moderate alliance in SWA which undoubtedly would be a healthy element in our democratic system;
- The break has hopefully made certain elements in the DTA realise that the Blacks are people too and that they cannot be pushed around indefinitely. Hopefully, similar elements in the NP have realised the same thing;
- The DTA will now have to put its foot where its mouth is and start doing something positive to end the war in Owambo and to stimulate development. Mr Bertie Botha's apparent 200 meetings in recent years is just not enough;
- It is reported in Die Republikein that the split shook the DTA out of its complacency. Good for the DTA and the interim government. Its about time!
- The NDP in turn will have to realise that it is fighting on two fronts, against both the DTA and Swapo. It too will have to be a lot more positive about improving the situation in Owambo;
- No longer will it be necessary for the NDP to have to frustratingly express, promote itself and conform to DTA ethnic ideology;
- Equally, the NDP will have to be careful now that it does not let Owambo nationalism become absolutely overriding in its approach to affairs;
- Pretoria will have to take stock of the situation in SWA again and it will have to remove many of the blinkers it has been wearing for a long time;
- And hopefully Pretoria will learn the lesson once and for all that it is dangerous to put all its eggs in one basket; the bottom of that basket might just fall out.

The DTA doesn't have a hope in hell of setting up a formidable organisation in Owambo to counter either Swapo or the NDP. Such an organisation will have to grow out of Owambo; it cannot be implanted there. And if a DTA organisation is implanted there, Owambo nationalism expressed through Swapo and the NDP will swell up against it. Which all adds up to one thing: the DTA will have to be prepared to cooperate on a loose alliance basis with the NDP and certainly not on the basis the DTA Head Committee has expressed itself towards Messrs Kalangula & Co in recent months.

The chances of the NDP returning to the DTA fold are also slim, certainly while Messrs Mudge and Kalangula remain in the picture. Mr Mudge castigated The Advertiser on Monday for saying that a major contributing factor to the split was personal differences between himself and Mr Kalangula. Mr Mudge, regretably, has a lot to learn in this respect. I wish he would recognise that. And thrashing out differences with Mr Kalangula over a drink or a cup of tea, as Mr Mudge has suggested to Mr Kalangula, simply isn't enough.

All said and done, the months ahead should prove most interesting.

CSO: 4700/783

IMBILI DOES DRAMATIC TURNABOUT

Windhoek THE WINDHOEK ADVERTISER in English 19 Feb 82 pp 1-2

[Text]

MR TARA IMBILI has returned to the DTA fold following his walkout from the DTA with his Owambo colleagues last Monday.

He has also taken up his seat as a member of the Ministers' Council although he never officially resigned.

mr Imbili told a press conference in Windhoek on Monday that he would resign and that he would hand in his resignation that afternoon.

The DTA chartered a plane yesterday morning to fetch Mr Imbili in Owambo and bring him back to Windhoek. He arrived shortly before lunch and was met by, among others, Mr Bertie Botha who has been responsible for DTA activities in Owambo.

Mr Imbili's colleagues in Owambo were not aware that the DTA had sent a plane for him yesterday and were highly surprised when they were first told about it.

The only uneasines that Mr Imbili has shown during the past few days is that he had financial difficulties, the leader of the NDP, Mr Peter Kalangula told The Advertiser this morning. Mr Kalangula declined to publicly reveal the details.

Mr Imbili met with DTA Chairman Mr Dirk Mudge yesterday afternoon and others who attended the meeting were Mr Botha and the Secretary of the DTA, Mr Johan de Waal. Mr De Waal then released a statement last night in the name of Mr Imbili giving Mr Imbili's apparent reasons for changing his mind.

Mr Imbili made these points:

- He would remain a DTA member of the National Assembly and Ministers' Council;
- It was senseless to desert the greatest body of national unity (the DTA) and hope to replace it with some other unity. He is also happy that the NPLF has joined the DTA ranks;
- He cannot identify with a move that isolates the Owambos from the rest of the country's people;
- the NDP did not give Mr Kalangula an official mandate to break from the DTA and the break as such must be seen as a personal one;
- There was nothing wrong with the NDP attempting to get other parties to join the DTA, but it is a completely different thing to get new parties to join and then precipitate a split;
- And the opposition in Owambo to the NDP's break from the DTA is considerable.

Asked to comment on developments this morning, Mr Kalangula said: "I don't want to touch on the matter now but the truth will prevail in the end. Moreover, the wishes of the people will decide the future of this country. We have said that we will stand by the people and we know that we can depend on their support".

Mr Kalangula said Mr Imbili went with him on Monday to Tsumeb and they shared the same hotel room there. Mr Imbili made it clear throughout that he believed that the NDP had done the right thing on Monday. Mr Imbili again endorsed this at an NDP meeting on Tuesday.

Mr Kalangula refuted Mr Imbili's claim that the NDP had not given Mr Kalangula a mandate to break from the DTA. Meetings were held late last week and Mr Imbili attended all of them.

Mr Kaangula's adviser Mr Werner Neef was most vehement in his criticism of the DTA this morning: "The truth of the matter will come out in time. The tragedy is that a leading Owambo leader has been discredited by his actions, something which the moderates in this country cannot afford. Indeed, it would seem that where Swapo kills moderate leaders, the DTA destroys them by discrediting them."

CSO: 4700/783

ALLEGED USE OF NERVE GAS IN ERITREA DENOUNCED

Mogadishu HEEGAN in English 5 Feb 82 pp 1, 6

[Text] MOGADISHU, Thursday — The Somali government strongly condemns the on-going genocide in Eritrea being carried out by the Fascist Mengistu regime with active support of Soviet Union, Cuba, Libya and South Yemen in an effort to exterminate the three-and-half million Eriterean people.

This was said by the Somali Minister for Foreign Affairs Jaalle Abdirahman Jama Barre in a press conference held today at the Ministry's premises.

Following is the full text of the Minister's statement:

Ladies and Gentlemen,

I would like to thank you all first for responding to my invitation to come to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs to attend this press conference on the ongoing genocide in Eritrea being carried out by the fascist Megistu regime, with the active support of the Soviet Union its allies Cuba, Libya and the South Yemen in an effort to exterminate the three and half million Eritrean people.

people's force and will in standing firmly for their

The Somali Government under these circumstances can not be silent about this barbaric crime being committed openly against the innocent people of Eritrea.

Therefore, we feel duty bound to unmask to the world public opinion these barbaric and inhuman crimes of the Mengistu regime.

As you may recall the fascist colonial regime of Addis Ababa held recently the so-called nation-wide Asmara conference chaired by Mengistu to execute the military plan for the extermination of the Eritrean people, who have been resisting the colonial oppression of Abyssinia since 1961. This conference was simply meant to be a prelude to carry out the strategy set up and agreed upon by the tripartite conference held in Aden in August, 1981, under the sponsorship of the Soviet Union, comprising Ethiopia, Libya and the peoples Democratic Republic of Yemen (South Yemen). Furthermore, follow up meetings this unholy alliance were held in Tripoli and Addis Ababa in the last part of 1981, for the implementation of the military plan envisaged particularly for the Horn of Africa. Under the present state of affairs of genocide it is obvious that the objective of the conference in Asmara was directed to annihilate the Eritrean people and their Liberation Fronts.

It is therefore, natural that the international community can not be silent about this shameful and inhuman crime against the Eritrean people, and it is because of this that we find it incumbent on the part of the Somali Government and people to reveal the true facts behind this campaign of genocide.

Both the fascist colonial regimes of Abyssinia under Emperor Haile Selassie and Mengistu opposed the independence of Eritrea and fought against the Eritrean Liberation Fronts. However, they utterly failed to eliminate the Eritrean legitimate right to self-determinationas the only peaceful solution to this long standing question of people and territory.

The present pre-emptive operation which is being launched by the fascist Mengistu regime supported by a super power and its allies against the Eritrean people at a time when that regime has undertaken intensive preparation and set to unleash a new general offensive is marked not only for the pronounced level of external intervention on the side of Abyssinia, but also indeed more gravely, for the regime's intended use of nerve gas. The Abyssinian regime has enlisted Libyan military equipment and troops, Russian Generals as Commanders of the operation, South Yemeni and Cuban pilots and other foreign experts to boost its plan of genocide against the Eritrean people. The situation has been aggravated in addition to the well-known Soviet Union deliveries by the military equipment supplies provided by Libya of which the new deliveries are 20 M..L. —24 Helicopter gunships which are being used for the first time in the war and Hercules C14's to bolster Soviet MIG-21s and MIG-23s, long under fascist Mengistu's disposal. Furthermore, Libya has furnished on January 14, 1982, four Hercules C-130 military transport planes one of which on its way to Eritrea via Addis Ababa crashed killing all its military passangers, of which 31 including the crew were Libyans, 24 Cuban officers, and 25 Ethiopian officers.

As history repeats itself we should take note of the fact that successive Abyssinian regimes have claimed that Eritrea was an itegral part of Abyssinia. Nevertheless, this territory since its illegal annexation has been under military occupation with all its consequent brutalities.

Thanks to the successful resistance of the Eritrean people and consequent failure of these regimes to crash their will to free themselves, Abyssina, as has been the case with other peoples under its domination, is now resorting to the use of foreign military forces for their annihilation. Let me pose a question here. If Abyssinia considers Eritrea «An internal problem», why would it employ such forces against its people? The answer to this question alone shall prove that Abyssinia had always seen this territory and its people's an alien force inimical to its interests and a threat to its very existence. This military campaign now in progress should be seen in that light.

We understand that the Eritrean Liberation Fronts have been courageously fighting against this new military offensive of the Abyssinian regime and indeed Mengistu's personal presence in Asmara to direcct the operation is an indicative proof that the Abyssinian colonial regime has not been able to achieve its objectives in this respect.

It is an irony of history that the fascist regime in Addis Ababa is committing crimes of genocide under the camouflage of building socialism in Abyssinia. Likewise, it shows the hypocracy of the Soviet Union and its utter disregard for the principle and norms of international law and the right of people to self-determination. Obviously, this is not the first time that the fascist Mengistu has declared his mal-intentions vis-a-vis the Eritrean people and his determination of eliminating them, though a major proportion, particularly women, children and the elderly have already taken refugee in the neighbouring countries and other parts of the world.

The Somali Government strongly condemns this inhuman course of action on the part of the fascist regime of Addis Ababa and calls upon it to stop forthwith its campaign of genocide against the Eritrean people and the denial of their right to self-determination.

Somalia also calls upon the foreign forces taking part in this genocide campaign of the Eritrean people to halt their naked intervention in this internal affair of Eritrea and leave the problem to be solved peacefully.

We call upon the United Nations, the Organization of African Unity (OAU), other international Organizations, the international community and the peace loving nations to intervene promptly in this matter inorder to avert this imminent catastrophe and to assist in finding a just and lasting peaceful solution to the problem.

In conclusion I would like to once again reaffirm Somalia's total support for the struggle and the legitimate stand of the Eritrean people to attain their inalienable right to self-determination and independence for which they have been fighting over the last twenty years.

Ladies and gentlemen may I once again thank you coming.

CSO: 4700/787

PARTY SECRETARY DISCUSSES CCM ROLE, ACHIEVEMENTS

Dar es Salaam SUNDAY NEWS in English 7 Feb 82 p 5

[Interview with Daudi Mwakawago, party chief executive secretary, by Peter Masebu at an unspecified time and place]

[Text]

Q: — Can you explain in which way CCM is supreme in this country?

A: — The supremacy of the Party is in two dimensions. First, is in its power to decide on all issues in the country, a power acquired from its historical role in the liberation of this country.

It started the struggle for independence, realised the people's aspirations and laid their strategy for eliminating colonialism. It is the Party which educated the masses of the evils of colonialism and their ability to combat it.

TANU played that role on Tanzania Mainland while ASP did so in Zanzibar. The two political parties led Tanzanians to the Union in 1964 and merged in 1977. To understand the Party it is necessary to understand that reality in our political development.

On the other hand its supremacy emanated from its supervisory role of organs of implementation. The Constitution of the United Republic recognises Chama Cha Mapinduzi (CCM) as the sole political Party in the country. The Constitution spells out that it will be the final authority in all matters.

Let me cite the National Assembly and the Armed Forces to elaborate what I said. In order to become a Member of Parliament, a Tanzanian has to be a CCM member. Since Parliament make laws, passes revenues and expenditures and supervises implementation in the Government and its organs, the supremacy of the Party is clearly shown.

In the Armed Forces, all who form them are CCM members, which naturally shows that all important organs of the country are run and headed by CCM members. These are few examples which show the Pary, its policy and leadership in the country.

Q: — But the vitality of the Party depends on the size of its members and their total involvement in its activities. Five years after CCM was formed, how has the Party mobilised the masses into its membership?

A: — Thousands of Tanzanians have joined CCM since the introduction of membership induction courses in 1978. At present the Party has 2,100,000 members. In 1977 when it was launched, the membership stood at 1,500,000, which shows there has been an increase of 40 per cent.

But I want to emphasize that the life of the Party should be gauged by implementation by members of all important directives in the Party Constitution, including payment of dues, contributions and participating in its seatings. Implementation rather than figures therefore is the determining factor of whether the Party is alive or not.

Q: — Tanzanians have a high political consciousness which, however, is not reflected in increased production. Please explain.

A: — It is quite true that Tanzanians have a very high political consciousness. However, it is important to say that politics involves many facets, including economics. Most Tanzanians depend on agriculture for their living. There is also an inescapable truth that for the past four years our country has gone through drought, floods and falling world market prices of our cash crops. These have greatly affected the efforts of our peasants who, when the climatic conditions are good, produce plenty of food and cash crops.

An example of this was in 1977 when there was a bumper maize harvest and we managed to export some abroad. It is, therefore, not true that our people have a higher political consciousness but slaken in production.

At the moment we face an acute shortage of farm implements, plough and tractor spares which are greatly needed by the peasants but which the country cannot produce enough. In the industrial sector, the scarcity of raw material and spare parts has forced most of the industries to operate under capacity.

Q: — What contribution has CCM made to the national economy?

A: — It is the Party which passes all development plans. It defines the political economy of the country. The implementors are the people themselves. CCM has passed a long term integrated plan which stresses on making investiment for a 20 year period. The success in the industrial, agricultural, commercial and other sectors of the economy is a direct outcome of the Party stand on them.

But the problems we face have not been caused by the Party. They have been caused by the war, drought and floods, a worsening world economy and partly by internal inefficiency.

Q: — Besides attempts to reduce the salary ration margins between the highest and lowest worker, in which other ways has the Party and government led this country towards equality and the elimination of classes?

A: — The task of building equality will be long. Besides the salary adjustment mechanism, the Party and Government have insisted and pressed for the spread of education, water and health facilities to all the people stage by stage.

For example, primary education is given to all children irrespective of the status of their parents. The outcome of this is that by 1984 about 900,000 Tanzanian children will have completed Class VII. These children will have gone through similar instructions.

Another sector of success is the National Service JKT and JKU for the Mainland and Zanzibar respectively. In the two organs, equality of those who take part is emphasized.

On the economic front, the internal trade policy, the institution of public production and distribution units are landmarks on the path towards equality.

At independence, the salary ratio between the highest and lowest worker stood at 1:40. Now it is 1:6.

Q: — One problem which African nations face is the transition of power, especially when they have been under a prominent and dominant leader for long. Do you think our Constitution has taken enough safeguards against that problem?

A: — The question of changing leaders without disturbing the social unity of the people is a very current subject. It has been on debate in Tanzania since 1980 when President Nyerere publicly spoke on it. The Question being asked is who steps into Mwalimu's shoes when he decides to step down? In which direction will the political stand of the country go?

The National Executive Council (NEC) of the Party started last year to debate on what changes to make in the United Republic Constitution. I am confident a smooth way of changing the top leadership of the Party will be worked out.

It is the intention of NEC that all the masses be involved in discussing the constitutional changes. In other words, we have not decided to make amendments in the Constitution in relation to this issue although work on it is still on.

Q:— Recently, NEC decided that in future, District and Regional Party Secretaries would stop being government officials. May I know why that separation bid not apply for the President and CCM National Chairman?

A:— It is at district and regional levels where most of the day to day Party and government implementation takes place. The NEC believes that two decades of independence have shown the correctness of combining the two posts. But time has come to separate the two roles in order to get more implementation initiative. Combing the two roles led to the subordination of the Party. We want a strong Party, not by mere words but by its deeds as well.

The aim is to give the Party a closer supervision role. The reasons for separating the government and Party leadership at national level could be similar to those of the two lower levels. I have mentioned, however, the NEC has decided that for the purpose of national unity and social tenacity, we should not separate the two "hats" at national level at the moment.

Q:— Last year, the Central Committee of the Party investigated leaders who violated the Leadership Code by owning taxis and accumulating wealth. When did the exercise end and what was the outcome?

A:— Let me first of all establish a principle. The Party Constitution has empowered executive councils at all levels to check on the conduct of all leaders and members. That is a permanent task.

Early last year, the NEC met in January in an extraordinary session to discuss some disturbing national issues. There were complaints about bad distribution of inadequate items and about economic sabotage. Besides ordering a better distribution system of the items, NEC also directed its Central Committee (CC) to meet and investigate purported national wide sabotage. That work lasted from January to August last year.

The CC carried out investigation and handed its findings to the President of the Republic to enable the Government implement the recommendations.

There were three types of recommendations. The first needed quick action, E.g. the steps taken against the top leadership of Air Tanzania; Tanzania Investment Bank and Tanzania Elimu Supplies.

The second recommendations dealt with a system of running organs of implementation. It is definite proposed steps in this direction would take long to implement.

The third category of recommendations concerned the party itself. The Party Constitution states that all members should have similar behaviour. When it is evident that members follow contrary norms, it is necessary that steps be taken. The work of the committee on this issue was not meant to be permanent. The Party just alerted the country. It is up to the organs of implementation to do their work, knowing that the Party is there.

Q:— Which political lessons can be drawn from the just-ended National congress of the Party?

A:—May be it is too early to evaluate the Congress. However, four issues came to light during discussions on the agenda. Firstly, the delegates endorsed the proposed changes, which is an indicator of the solidarity existing between the leaders and led as well as oneness during Party seatings.

Secondly, the delegates embraced the 1981 Party Guidelines — Mwongozo — but demanded that the theory contained in the document be fully put into practice in order to defend the Party policy of Socialism and Self-Reliance.

Thirdly, the delegates expressed dissatisfaction over the performance of some government organs. This was very vocally-expressed.

Lastly, the delegates showed a high political consciousness on issues. The level of discussion was of very high standard and I must add that the Congress conducted its business calmly and joyfully. It was a Congress of work coupled with laughter.

Q:— Tanzanians are among the most highly taxed people in the world, taking into account the salaries they get. Don't you think the voluntary contribution recently launched by the Party and the raising of membership fees and monthly subscriptions worsen the economic well-being of workers and peasants?

A:—It may be true that individual taxes are very high, but it is important to point out two things. First is the fact that Tanzania is among few countries on the planet which gives free education from primary to University levels; free medical services and free clean water to ordinary citizens. There must be a way of paying for these services.

The second is that in its 20-year plan, the Party has directed the Government to look into ways of reducing income tax as the economic situation allows. The Government started implementing that directive during the 1981/82 budget.

Your question concerns the Party. The Party NEC decided to raise entrance fees and monthly subscriptions in view of increased running costs.

Secondly, that decision only concerns CCM members who are guided by a Constitution. The system of voluntary contribution concerns CCM members only. Voluntary contributions are not new in the Party. ASP and TANU had that system which CCM intends to perpetuate and which the members understand very well. It is important to say that the Party is composed of members who have a responsibility to find funds to run it.

Lastly, the economic well-being of citizens has been drastically affected by many other aspects which have been amply explained. The people and CCM members know them. But it is true that the Party has to have funds to run its affairs. The funds have to come from the membership. The NEC decision on this issue was based on a report of a select committee which toured 10 of the country's 25 regions.

CSO: 4700/784

HONORS RECEIVED BY NYERERE

Dar es Salaam DAILY NEWS in English 15 Feb 82 p 1

[Text]

PRESIDENT Nyerere will next Wednesday receive the Dag Hammarskjold International prize Pax Mundi for the year 1981, the State House announced yesterday.

Mwalimu was nominated last December for the award which is given annually to outstanding statement for their contribution to international understanding.

Presenting the award in Brussels, the Pax Mundi President Professor Dino di Stefano said the Tanzanian leader was "a statesman who has made great contributions to international solidarity to the better understanding between North and South, to the freedom and well being of Africa".

The prize was received by Ambassador Sebastian Chale on behalf of Mwalimu.

The Pax President also praised Mwalimu as Chairman of the Frontline States which worked tirelessly for the independence of Zimbabwe.

Among the keynote speeches quoted by Pax organisers is Mwalimu's address at the Commonwealth summit in Melbourne, Australia last year in which he called for immediate action to improve the living conditions of about 700 and 800 million people living in "absolute poverty."

Later this month, the President is expected to travel to India to receive the "Third World Prize" for his oustanding contribution to Third World development.

The prize, comprising some Shs. 800,000 - (100,000 dollars) in cash and medallion has been given by the Lonson-based Third World Foundation for Social and Economic Studies.

The Third World prize was introduced in 1979 to honour individuals for outstanding contribuion to Third World development, particularly in economic, social, political or scientific fields.

The qualities which qualified Mwalimu for the award, according to the organisers, is his support for regional co-operation, Non-Alignment and closer ties between developing and developed countries.

Mwalimu was also named man of the year 1981 by a French magazine Le Point which published an extensive interview with him on a variety of issues including North-South issues.

CSO: 4700/784

ZANZIBAR TO EXPROPRIATE CIVIL SERVANTS' ILLEGALLY GOTTEN PROPERTY

Dar es Salaam DAILY NEWS in English 12 Feb 82 p 1

[Article by Abdulla Yakuti]

[Excerpt] Private property owned by civil servants still on service or retired would be expropriated by the Zanzibar Government if proved that it had been acquired illegally, the Zanzibar House of Representatives was told here yesterday.

Winding up debate on a Bill to ammend the Zanzibar Penal Code Decree, the Zanzibar Minister of State in the Office of the President of Zanzibar, Ndugu Ramadhan Haji Faki, said the move follows increased cases of misappropriation and thefts of public funds for personal gains.

The Minister explained that it had discovered that some civil servants on service or retired, will have to account for their property, or how they established themselves in business, failure to which the Government will expropriate the property", Ndugu Faki emphasised.

The Minister said prior to the ammendment, there was no such law empowering the Government to expropriate individual property.

Under the new law, any person who, be he an employee, officer or member of a public institution, causes a public institution to suffer any loss or damage to property through omission, negligence or misconduct shall be guilty of an offence.

If convicted, the offender will be liable to a fine not exceeding 5,000/- or in default to be committed to an educational centre for a period not exceeding two years.

In addition, the court can order the offender compensate the concerned institution an amount equivalent to the actual loss incurred or damaged.

In addition to bringing to book thieves, or officials who through their actions cause loss or damage to property owned by public institutions shall be convicted. This category includes economic saboteurs as well, the Minister told a cheering House.

The Representatives passed the Bill after a short debate.

CSO: 4700/784

SWEDEN ASKED TO HELP SIDO OBTAIN SUPPLIERS CREDITS

Dar es Salaam DAILY NEWS in English 19 Feb 82 p 3

[Excerpt]

SWEDEN has been asked to help the Small Industries Organisation (SIDO) obtain suppliers credits on terms acceptable to the Bank of Tanzania.

At the end of a three day-workshop on "Export, Import and Financial Management "in Arusha on Wednesday participants observed that securing foreign exchange from Bank of Tanzania for the purchase of machinery and spare parts was not easy.

The participants called on the Bank of Tanzania to speed up the processing of letters of credits, and allocate to SIDO industries, the foreign exchange they generate to enable them import raw materials.

The workshop also recommended that entepreneurs form a marketing association in each estate, to probe the current problems of marketing and distribution of their products.

It was further recommended that entrepreneurs should visit customers in order to promote their products.

Entrepreneurs were also urged to produce quality goods, and maintain continuous flow of products to their customers. The entrepreneurs with the assistance of SIDO should also look for ways and means to ensure a smooth and continuous flow of raw materials to be able to fulfil export orders.

The workshop, the first of its kind, was organised and sponsored jointly by SIDO and the Swedish International Development Authority (SIDA), and attended by officials from Tanzanian and Swedish industries, together with observers from the Bank of Tanzania, National Bank of Commerce and the Regional Trading Companies.

CSO: 4700/784

TRADE TALKS WITH MOZAMBIQUE SCHEDULED TODAY

Dar es Salaam DAILY NEWS in English 19 Feb 82 p 1

[Article by Isaac Mruma]

[Excerpt] Mozambican Minister for Foreign Trade Ndugu Salomao Manguambe was expected in Dar es Salaam last night for talks on trade relations between his country and Tanzania.

The Principal Secretary to the Ministry of Trade Ndugu N. Kitomari, said yesterday in Dar es Salaam that talks between the two countries start today with a meeting of senior officials from both sides to review the implementation of a trade agreement signed last year and on a new protocol for 1982.

Under the 1981 protocol, Tanzania was to buy from Mozambique various products including truck and tractor tyres, welding electrodes and mosquito gauges.

Tanzania on the other hand, was to export hand hoes, coffee beans, aluminium products, textiles and other products.

The Mozambican minister arrives with top officials to take part in the trade pact review starting today.

Ndugu Kitomari said the Ministers of Trade from both countries would sit as the Mozambique-Tanzania Sub-Commission on Trade next week to receive the proposals worked out by the officials and to sign the 1982 protocol.

The Tanzanian officials to attend the meeting would be drawn from the Ministries of Trade, Industries, Agriculture, Economic Affairs and Planning, the Bank of Tanzania, the National Bank of Commerce and the Board of External Trade.

CSO: 4700/784

FRG 2-YEAR ECONOMIC COOPERATION GRANT

Dar es Salaam DAILY NEWS in English 13 Feb 82 p 3

[Text]

THE Federal Republic of Germany (FRG) has granted Tanzania 585m/- on another two-year period of economic co-operation between the two countries.

The agreement was signed in Dar es Salaam on Thursday at the end of the three-day consultations. FRG's Director for Africa, Mr. Wolf Preuss, and Tanzania's Principal Secretary in the Ministry of Finance, Ndugu Fulgence Kazaura signed on behalf of the governments.

Under the agreement, FRG will finance the Mtera hydro-electric power plant, the rehabilitation of the sisal industry, construction of Mombo-Lushoto-Maganja road in Tanga region, financing Busisi-Kigongo ferry in Mwanza region and Ndundu ferry in Rufiji, Coast region.

These funds would also finance the Zanzibar Fisheries Corporation (ZAFICO).

Among other projects supported by the FRG under technical co-operation included the promotion of the Tanga Region Integrated Development Programme (TRIDEP), the Faculty of Engineering of the University of Dar es Salaam, the coconut industry, health care and training programme.

Members of FRG delegation, flew to Mufindi to see the progress of the multi-million pulp and paper factory now under construction. The project is partly financed by the FRG.

The bi-annual meeting also discussed the implementation of food aid programme between the two countries.

The delegation which arrived in the country last Monday from Nairobi, Kenya leaves for home on Sunday.

CSO: 4700/784

JUWATA ASKS ZANZIBAR GOVERNMENT TO RAISE MINIMUM WAGE

Dar es Salaam DAILY NEWS in English 13 Feb 82 p 1

[Article by Yakuti]

[Text] THE Union of Tanzania Workers (JUWATA) in the Isles has called on the Zanzibar government to review upwards the minimum wage for workers to enable them meet the rising cost of living.

A statement released by the Organization's head office in Zanzibar here yesterday said Juwata was aware of economic difficulties facing the nation, but said the drastic price rises of essentials over the years has greatly undermined the present minimum wage.

The current minimum wage of 480 a month was announced by President Nyerere in Zanzibar two years ago during May Day celebrations held at national level in Zanzibar in 1980.

The statement signed by the Organisation's Deputy Secretary General, (Zanzibar-based) Shaaban Mloo, also urged workers in the Isles to co-operate with Party and government authorities to clamp down smuggling, hoarding and price speculation.

The release of the statement coincides with the adoption of a Bill by the Zanzibar House of Representatives last Thursday giving the workers' organisation legal status as sole mass organisation representing interests of the workers in the Isles.

Since February 1977, Juwata has been running its activities in Zanzibar without statutory blessing.

Meanwhile The Zanzibar House of Representatives which ended its two-day session in Zanzibar yesterday, passed three bills on Land Distribution Juwata and the Penal Code decree.

The last bill to be passed by the house was on land distribution giving the Zanzibar Ministry of Agriculture powers to enforce land use regulations including terraced farming on sloppy areas.

The new law to be cited as the Land Distribution and Use Law of 1982 also fixed new levels for fines for those contravening the proper use of land from 100/- under the 1966 Land Distribution Act to 500/-.

Winding up the debate on the bill, the Minister for Agriculture Ndugu Hassan Nassor Moyo said the new law shall enable the ministry to enforce intensive land-use to raise agricultural productivity.

Earlier, the Deputy Minister for Health Ndugu Ali Mohamed Shoka informed the House that his ministry with assistance from the Danish International Development Agency (DANIDA) and CUAM of Italy has launched an immunisation programme against tuberculosis, polio and measles for children throughout the Isles.

He called on Party and government leaders including the representatives to educate parents on the need to have their children immunised against diseases.

The House of Representatives which has been adjourned until May 20 this year, also received a total of 42 questions which were answered by the respective ministers.

CSO: 4700/784

NYERERE ASKS CROP AUTHORITIES TO REDUCE OVERHEAD COSTS

Dar es Salaam DAILY NEWS in English 17 Feb 82 p 1

[Article by Isaac Mruma]

[Excerpt]

PRESIDENT Nyerere has directed crop authorities in the country to reduce their overhead costs so that more money could be available to at least increase cash payable to growers.

Reduction of overhead costs resulting, for example, from over-employment in the crop handling parastatals' big offices, would make available more cash to be paid to growers, he explained.

Mwalimu said this at a ceremony during which he opened a tea processing factory at Mwakaleli, some 36 kilometres outside Tukuyu in Rungwe District.

The President advised the parastatals to set aside at least 60 per cent of the world market price of crops for payment to peasants.

The world market price of tea is 16/- a kilogramme today, but the Tanzania Tea Authority (TTA) paid growers only 7/50 for the equivalent of a kilogramme of processed leaves.

"Surely, there must be something wrong somewhere if you get a 100 percent of that and fail to pay the grower at least 60 per cent", the President said.

"We must find out why the grower gets this money", Mwalimu said, adding:

"These are the things our parastatals have to solve".

The tea growers in Rungwe District had told Mwalimu in a message read on their behalf by Ndugu Samson Mwasampete that the producer price of tea set in 1977 was very low in view of rising production costs and should be reviewed.

Mwalimu said although the country in general faced problems but some of them stemmed from the way the country's parastatals were run.

The parastatals had to act to reduce these problems, Mwalimu said.

Addressing himself to the newly appointed Minister for Agriculture, Ndugu John Machunda, who was present at the ceremony, Mwalimu said: "These corporations of yours have big overhead costs".

The President said, for example, it was improper to employ five people for a job that could be done by one person.

"It appears as if we are just giving jobs to each other. We cannot have jobs to give one another", he said.

The President also asked crop authorities to speed up transportation of crops from villages to their final destinations.

Parastatals should also pay growers in hard cash and promptly — instead of buying crops on credit.

He said since growers were paid in Tanzanian currency which was readily available, they should not be discouraged by unnecessary delays.

CSO: 4700/784

KITUNDU NOTES SHORTCOMINGS IN LEADERSHIP CODE ENFORCEMENT

Dar es Salaam DAILY NEWS in English 13 Feb 82 p 1

[Text]

PARTY organs tend to shy away from exposing and ridding the Party of members violating the Leadership Code, the Commission for the Enforcement of the Leadership Code has said.

Commission Chairman, Colonel Selemani Kitundu, in an interview to appear tomorrow in the Sunday News, maintains that the Party's failure indicated that the members were not fully educated on the nature of the Commission's work.

He said: "We in the commission have realised that in the past five years of CCM's existence, it is only the CCM Chairman (Mwalimu Nyerere) and Party Vice-Chairman (Aboud Jumbe) who handed suspects to the commission in order to establish if they really had violated the code."

Col. Kitundu says that the Party Constitution under sections 33 (4), 41 (5) and 51 (6) directs branch, district and regional Party organs to observe the conduct and activities of Party members and report culprits to the appropriate authorities.

But "these organs have not so far been doing so," he adds.

He also explained: "People who violate section 8 (7) of the CCM Constitution are allowed to get away with it. A person could be removed from leadership for violating the Leadership Code, but retains the Party membership."

The Commission Chairman stresses that the commission's effectiveness is dependent on CCM members, government and parastatal leaders and all the public in general.

He, however, points out that many Party members have not been fully educated on the ills of ideological offences which the commission handles. "Consequently they do not render the kind of co-operation they are supposed to give to the commission," he says.

Regarding the contention that strict adherence to the Constitution's section 8 (7) would result into losing a lot of members and making CCM a less mass Party, Colonel Kitundu says CCM has laid down conditions for membership.

"Why should a Socialist mass party keep owners of transport companies, big businesses, and landlords in its membership?" he asks.

A "peasant" who runs a business is not a peasant any more and should be disqualified from continued Party membership," he says.

On the Party Chairman's recent concern over the quality of Party leaders, he said the Party should play the major role, firstly to mobilise the people for building a Socialist state and secondly, the instruments entrusted with the responsibility of screening Party candidates must do that job very carefully, so that the nation can get leaders committed to Socialism.

Speaking on allegations that only "clerks" or grass-root Party leaders fall victims of the Commission's task, while "big shots" violate the code and get away with it, the Commission's Chairman says they carry no truth.

He says the Commission has never received information or evidence against a person and skipped the case on grounds that he or she was a "big shot".

"Assuming such murmurs are there, then they are throwing a challenge to the Party and everyone of us."

However, Col. Kitundu conceded that the Commission had over the past five years learnt that some public leaders have overtly used their relatives and friends who are CCM members to run huge businesses which drain away public funds through tenders.

But he says it is very difficult to pin down such leaders. For such businesses are usually not registered in their names.

"The Party should make a new start, by removing from the Party unqualified members and this would make the work of the Commission very easy", Ndugu Kitundu emphasises.

He stressed the need for purity of Party membership saying that it was dangerous to allow CCM members to violate the constitution on the pretext that one was not a leader, since the Party could end up getting leaders out of members acting contrary to the Constitution

He called on employers to make the Leadership Code a part of the terms of employment to ensure effective implementation of the Party's objectives.

CSO: 4700/784

EXTENSION OF TAZARA RAILWAY PLANNED

Dar es Salaam SUNDAY NEWS in English 14 Feb 82 p 1

[Text]

PLANS are underway to extend the Tanzania - Zambia Railway (TAZARA) line to Mpulungu Port, at the southern tip of Lake Tanganyika, the Minister of Power, Transport and Communications, Ndugu Rajah Kunda, said here today.

Ndugu Kunda said he would be living for Brussels next Monday for a meeting to be convened by the European Economic Commission (EEC) for donors to finance the project. The meeting starts on February 17.

The Minister explained that the linking of the railway to the port would ease the mobility of cargo between Zambia, Burundi and Rwanda which he said were very much interested in Zambia cement and other goods.

Ndugu Kunda could not however, say how much the railway project would cost saying this would be established after feasibility studies had been finalised.

The Minister added that while in Brussels, he will finalise negotiations with the EEC on the development of the Mpulungu Harbour and the improvement of the Kapiri Mposhi TAZARA and Zambia Railways warehouse, Mpulungu is Zambia's only port and handles various exports and imports.

CSO: 4700/784

KIDATU-MUFINDI POWER LINE PROJECT TO OPEN IN MID-SUMMER

Dar es Salaam DAILY NEWS in English 13 Feb 82 p 3

[Article by Isaac Mruma]

[Text] OVER sixty per cent of the work on a 220-kilovolt power line from Kidatu to Mufindi has been completed and the project is expected to be commissioned in July or August this year.

The Tanzania Electric Supply Company (TANESCO) Planning Manager Ndugu V.H. Poonja said in Dar es Salaam that the line, to carry power from the Kidatu hydro-electric plant to Iringa and Mufindi, is expected to be completed in the middle of this year.

"Work on the line is on schedule", he said. The line is being laid by a Yugoslav firm -Energoinvest- of Sarajevo. It will cost 300 million/- on completion, of which 225 million/- is in foreign currency.

A West Germany firm — Siemens is building sub-stations for the line at Kidatu, Iringa and Mufindi. Ndugu Poonja said the substations were also expected to be completed at the same time.

He said the transformers for the substations had been tested. The Swedish firm — Asean — is providing the transformers for the stations. Each substation would have two.

The transformers are expected to arrive in the country from Sweden sometimes in March, he said.

The Kidatu-Iringa-Mufindi line is part of the south-western extension of the national power grid which will supply power to various areas in the country from Kidatu.

The south-western extension of the grid includes supply of Kidatu power to Mbeya through a line to be laid to the area from Mufindi.

Ndugu Poonja said survey work had been completed. Financing for the project needing some 230m/- was being finalised, he added.

Work on the line would "hopefully" restart in a couple of months and be completed towards the end of next year. It was earlier scheduled for the end of this year.

The government of Italy will partly finance the line and an Italian contractor —SAE — would do the work.

Due to the over-loading of the existing line from Moshi to Arusha on the north-eastern extension of the national grid, work has been going on to lay a new 132 kilovolt line between the two towns.

Ndugu Poonja said the line had been completed and work on the substations at Moshi and Arusha was still in progress. The transformers for the substations are expected in the country around April and the substations could be commissioned by July.

The line cost 85 million/- of which 75million/- is in foreign currency.

A French firm — CGEE Alsthom were the contractors for the line.

The north-west extension would carry Kidatu hydro-electric power from Iringa through Dodoma, Singida, Shinyanga, Mwanza and Mara with extensions from Shinyarga down to Tabora.

A 220 kilovolt line would carry the power up to Mwanza and down to Tabora and a 132 kilovolt one from Mwanza to Musoma.

The extension would utilise the Kidatu power and electricity from a planned hydro-power station at Mtera, north of Iringa region. Work on the station is expected to start by early next year.

CSO: 4700/784

MP'S CRITICIZE UNIP PROCEDURES, ROLE

Lusaka TIMES OF ZAMBIA in English 13 Feb 82 pp 1, 5

[Excerpt]

A MEMBER of Parliament charged yesterday that the Party was being led by appointed leaders and warned against the assumption that UNIP would rule for ever.

Contributing on the motion of estimates of expenditure for Cabinet office and the Party, Chikankata MP Mr Joshua Lumina, said he had never seen a Party which was run by appointed people as was the case in Zambia.

Party leaders all over the world were people who had the mandate from citizens through elections.

Mr Lumina said the entire Central Committee did not have the mandate of the Zambians because it was composed of people who were appointed.

There was no need for members of the Central Committee to fear elections, said Mr Lumina who is former minister of Finance and Technical Cooperation, and minister of Labour and Social Services. He was chairman for National Commission for Development Planning.

"It is absurd for this House to dissolve and at the same time appoint ourselves candidates. This is the case with the Central Committee. We cannot pretend that the Central Committee is elected.

"They (Members of the Central Committee) should be exposed to elections so that before they vet others, they can be vetted by the nation. The Central Committee ceased to be elected in 1967," Mr Lumina said.

If the incumbent leaders shielded themselves by refusing to stand for elections, it meant there was no way of eliminating them. Consequently people would have to find other means of getting rid of the leadership. This was bad, he said.

Mr Lumina's warning came when he commented on the estimates of expenditure for the proposed UNIP headquarters, which falls under the Ministry of Works and Supply.

The Party should not be equated with "Zambia" and should not be housed in Government offices. "The Party was not the same as Government because parties come and go," Mr Lumina added.

Prime Minister Mundia in a point of order wanted to know how Mr Lumina could advocate for a Party change when the country had abolished the multi-party system.

The multi-party system was abolished and this will continue unless the legislation is changed. Is the honourable member in order to advocate that UNIP should be changed?" Mr Mundia said.

Deputy Speaker Mr Raphael Chota said Mr Lumina was in order because in his contribution he was not advocating for changing UNIP but stating that things could change.

Matero MP Mr Francis Nkhoma said the Party was "totally ineffective" and existed only in name.

Those running it and the others who claimed to be its members did nothing apart from seeking personal gain.

"Although they shout slogans on television, they do nothing to make the Party effective. There is no commitment.

"They will talk of a revolution when there is none at all," Mr Nkhoma added.

Referring to Mr Lumina's contribution, Mr Nkhoma caused laughter when he said it was "refreshing that Mr Lumina said he was committed to democracy. May be reshuffles teach us a lot and I will say a lot when I meet him in the bar."

Mr Nkhoma wondered why the Government was inconsistent in making political appointments by ignoring the accepted system of replacing dismissed ministers by people from their own regions.

There was a tendency in the country where if people of a certain region in leadership were doing well, it was as though they had committed a "sin or treason and were to parade before a firing squad."

He warned against character assassinations and said malicious propaganda would set a stage to a civil war.

Mrs Mavis Muyunda (Katuba) called for fair appointments of leaders as certain regions were "being left out."

She wondered why some ministers changed drivers and office orderlies when given a new appointment.

"No one likes to be dominated, so the Government should be consistent in appointments."

Mandevu MP Mr Dingiswayo Banda said bickering among leaders was rife and called for an end to it.

He asked the Party and its Government to explain to the nation whether UNIP was a vanguard party or a mass party.

Mr Banda, who is former minister of Labour and Social Services, said incumbent leaders treated UNIP as it was a vanguard party, limited to a selected few and branding the rest as criminals.

"This is dividing the country into two camps and making other people feel unaccepted."

CSO: 4700/789

MPS CHARGE PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION 'TRIBAL INSTITUTION'

Lusaka TIMES OF ZAMBIA in English 12 Feb 82 p 1

[Excerpt]

THE Public Service Commission yesterday came under attack in Parliament with members charging that it was a tribal institution riddled with corruption and nepotism.

Contributing to the motion of supply for estimates of expenditure for the commission, the MPs claimed that some members of the commission had stayed on the commission for such a long time that they regarded it as a personal vehicle to advance the careers of their fellow tribesmen.

Mwense MP, Mr Felix Kapapula said some members had been sitting on the team since 1971 and wondered whether there was a syndicate whereby promotions were prearranged and handpicked to suit such members.

He wondered how some people had been on the commission since 1971 when "to the best of his knowledge," the stipulated contract was for two years.

Monopoly

Livingstone MP, Mr Sebastian Kapalu said no one section of the country had a monopoly over intelligence and efficiency and where one section outnumbered others the people of Zambia had a right to complain.

"Zambia is one political company and all the shareholders are entitled to take part in profit-sharing," Mr Kapalu declared.

Bweengwa MP, Mr Rex Natala urged the Government to open investigations into the affairs of senior Government officers whose files a Finance Ministry official asked to be produced in court when he was being prosecuted for irregular handling of funds.

In his contribution, Prime Minister Mundia challenged the Commission to prove to civil servants and the public that it was an impartial body which aimed not only at creating an efficient civil service, but also at justice and equality of individual officers.

He said there had been frequent allegations of favouritism based on tribal or other sectional interests in the service which the Government had investigated and brought to the attention of the Commission.

CSO: 4700/789

BUDGET PROPOSED TAX COLLECTION SYSTEM 'UNWORKABLE'

Lusaka TIMES OF ZAMBIA in English 12 Feb 82 p 2

[Excerpt] THE new tax collection system proposed in the Budget is not workable, says a consensus of economists and accountants.

Efforts to have the proposals amended to save the private business sector from collapse are to be made today when the heads of the Kitwe, Lusaka and Ndola chambers of commerce and industry meet ministers in Lusaka to make representations.

The representations are based on a proposal that from 1982/83 income must be estimated quarterly to July, September, December and March and the tax on any quarter's income should be paid by the 14th of the following month.

This will result in two years' income tax being collected in the period from July 14 1982 to April 14 1983.

In notes on the system of collecting provisional tax, an international accountancy firm points to some of the problems.

On estimation of income it says to be able to estimate its income within 14 days of a quarter end, any business would need a highly sophisticated accounting system.

Even among the international companies which have some of the best developed systems in Zambia few will be able to meet this 14-day deadline.

Yet this is what a company with a March 31 year-end is asked to do. If this is the case of international companies, how can the small business with no full time accounting staff be expected to extract meaningful estimates?

CSO: 4700/789

GOVERNMENT TAKES MEASURES TO IMPROVE EXPORTS' TRANSPORT

Lusaka TIMES OF ZAMBIA in English 16 Feb 82 pp 1, 5

[Excerpt]

THE Government has taken measures to improve the transportation of exports to outside markets which include the increased volume of traffic for Zambia Railways, Tazara and the Zambia-Tanzania Road Services.

Prime Minister Mundia who announced the measures at the end of his four-day tour of Kabwe yesterday said the move was aimed at generating more foreign exchange and rekindle the economy.

Addressing Zambia Railway workers outside the workshops after touring the area Mr Mundia said the Government wanted the mining companies — Nchanga Consolidated Copper Mines (NCCM) and Roan Consolidated Mines (RCM) to export 55,000 tonnes of copper this year.

One thousand of this should go to the international copper market through East London— a South African port — by Zambia Railways every month and another 15,000 metric tonnes by Zambia Tanzania Road Services through Dar es Salaam.

The Prime Minister said the Government had decided to allocate ZTRS "a bit more" to make it a viable transport enterprise."

Tazara who had been complaining of lack of business for sometime had been allocated 4,000 metric tonnes of copper on condition that they delivered it every month. "But immediately we find that they are failing, we shall divert it elsewhere."

On trucks which has been one of the major problems facing Tazara, Mr Mundia said to enable the "Uhuru" railwayline to cope with volume of work, the Government had decided to give them 850. The figure had now brought to 1,150 the number of trucks including the present 300 owned by Tazara, he said.

"We expect them to pay for this assistance," Mr Mundia said and added that the Government had decided to help Tazara with six more locomotive engines.

The arrangement which he said was temporary, was arrived at during a meeting between the ministries of Power Transport and Communications, Works and Supply and Commerce.

Mr Mundia said if the arrangement worked "we shall be at home" and that it had been decided to suspend the Kafue express passenger train to clear the line for that traffic.

CSO: 4700/789

NHA STARTING PROGRAM TO EXPEDITE ZAMBIANIZATION

Lusaka DAILY MAIL in English 15 Feb 82 pp 1, 3

[Text] THE NATIONAL Housing Authority (NHA) has embarked on a systematic programme to expedite Zambianisation of all posts in the parastatal firm.

Announcing this over the weekend, NHA managing director, Dr David Simonda, said a detailed programme covering a period from 1981 to 1990 had been prepared and approved by the company's board of directors.

He said NHA was one of the very few parastatals which had produced such a comprehensive development programme.

Dr Simonda dismissed recent allegations made against his management that it was de-Zambianising posts in the engineering and architectural fields as "a product of a disgruntled mind who appears to have failed to reap the benefits because of his own shortcomings and deficiences."

According to him, there is not a single post which has been de-Zambianised. He explained that 11 staff members have already been sent abroad to undergo training in the fields of engineering, architecture and accountancy.

"The provision in the budget for training expenses is being increased every year. The provision has increased from K14,000 in the year 1977 to K60,000 in 1982."

Last year, for the first time in NHA's history, three Zambians were appointed, two as senior engineers and one as senior architect. The authority never had any Zambian holding these positions.

Dr Simonda said in order to put more emphasis on Zambianisation, the administration department was strengthened and converted into the personnel and manpower development division in 1980.

The former administration manager who occupied a very junior position in the management in the company was renamed personnel and manpower development manager and was consequently promoted into a member of senior management.

"In 1981, he was sent to a university in Britain for a one-year post-graduate course in manpower development. This is a real demonstration of the National Housing Authority's policy to develop professional Zambians."

Very recently, a project development division was established composed exclusively of Zambian professionals. The department is in charge of all investment programmes, corporate planning and housing research.

Dr Simonda said as of now, four of the seven departments of the company are headed by Zambians while the rest are headed by a Canadian, a Briton and a Pakistani.

As regards the expatriates presently employed, he said, inspite of a considerable increase in the company's activities, the number of expatriates had been reduced from 42 in 1972 to 19 this year.

It is now a certainty that most of the professional posts now held by the expatriates will be taken over by the Zambian trainees in the very near future."

Dr Simonda said in view of the recent promotion of Zambian professionals to senior positions, the morale among Zambian professionals was very high.

This has accounted for the better performance of the authority as reflected in its increased construction activities and profitability.

CSO: 4700/789

AUDITOR'S REPORT REVEALS PARASTATAL LOSSES, IRREGULARITIES

Parastatals' Future Bleak

Lusaka TIMES OF ZAMBIA in English 15 Feb 82 p 1

[Excerpt] MOUNTING debts and financial indiscipline which rocked the Zambia Pork Products, Tobacco Board of Zambia and Medical Stores have cast a bleak future over the parastatal bodies.

The 1980 report of Auditor-General Mr Stubbs Nundwe on the accounts of parastatal bodies says K47,599 was provided for bad and doubtful debts relating to dishonoured cheques involving the Zambia Pork Products.

An additional K11,478 and K11,232 were also provided at ZAPP for bad and doubtful debts relating to cash-on delivery debtors for Lusaka and Kitwe branches and these had been outstanding for more than 12 months.

In this respect, fixed assets and stocks included in the balance sheet at K11,475,229 and K1,839,840 would be disposed of.

Mr Nundwe said it was difficult to verify the net book value of fixed assets included in the balance sheet at K13,894,269 and the depreciation charge of K1,801,218 included in the profit and loss account in the absence of adequate records of cost and accumulated depreciation relating to assets bought before December 31, 1976.

A ZAPP trailer of a refrigerated truck which was involved in an accident was sold to a certain person for K9,000, but the basis on which the price was fixed was not made available....

ZAPP general manager informed Mr Nundwe that documents for K21,379 of the dishonoured cheques for the period from 1974 to 1976 were lost when armed robbers blew up the safe and the management could not take legal action to recover them.

The auditor's report on TBZ says K46,704 comprising of various staff loans for ex-employees of the board was written off as bad and doubtful debts.

Under the re-organisation, TBZ schemes and assets of the production department of the board would be taken over by the Department of Agriculture at book value or at an estimated value and the assets sold by auction.

On Medical Stores, the report says that debtors ledger showed K11,860,381 as of March 31, last year was due from various organisations including private companies, district councils and Government departments.

The worst culprit is the Ministry of Health which owes the institution K10,604,344 and despite efforts made by the company to recover the debts the response had been "very unsatisfactory".

The report says Medical Stores general manager and his accountant exceeded 1,646 litres of fuel out of the authorised 5,000 litres of fuel during 1980/81 financial year.

The defunct Zambia Horticultural Products made a loss of K1.1 million during the year ended March 31, 1979 with current liabilities of K1.5 million resulting into a deficit on shareholders' fund of K533,421.

Another loss of K1.6 million was recorded for Zamhort's draft account for the year ended March, 1980 and recalls an incident where a quotation for K899 was obtained by Zamhort general manager from AFE company in February last year to buy a water pump to be installed at his farm.

Parastatals Evade Audits

Lusaka SUNDAY TIMES in English 14 Feb 82 p 1

[Text] INDECO and Zimco companies have been evasive in providing information on their operations to the parliamentary select committee on parastatal organisations.

Auditor-General Mr Stubbs Nundwe said this in his report on the accounts for parastatal bodies for 1980.

Other organisations which have flouted Parliament's directives include the Posts and Telecommunications Corporation, Zambia National Building Society and Zambia Airways Corporation. They are alleged not to have complied with the provisions of the Public Audit Act.

The report is a catalogue of misuse of public funds and irregularities in almost all parastatal companies.

Mr Nundwe's report says Zambia Railways, the Nitrogen Chemicals of Zambia and the Zambia Wholesale Marketing Corporation are among the companies which did not respond to inquiries for information on certain contracts which they entered into.

Auditors found several irregularities in the accounts of Eagle Travel where due to staff accounting errors a total of K9,391 for 1980 and 1981 was written off as differences in reconciliations.

Cash shortages amounting to K16,309 were written off by Eagle Travel where the auditors say there is shoddy book-keeping.

Amounts totalling K854,847 received between January and November, 1978 from the Ministry of Finance were, contrary to normal Government accounting practices deposited in individual officer accounts.

Several irregular transactions were authorised by the company. Whereas the Ministry of Finance had directed that payments could not be made for any bookings other than those carrying advice notes with approval of the ministry, the company approved some without notifying the ministry.

Report 'Catalogue of Rampant Irregularities'

Lusaka TIMES OF ZAMBIA in English 13 Feb 82 p 1

[Article by Dan Mwale]

[Text]

FINANCIAL irregularities and malpractices in parastatal organisations are on the increase and some managers are bent on getting a rip-off from public funds.

The Auditor-General Mr Stubbs Nundwe, in his report on the accounts of parastatal bodies for 1980, has expressed concern that previous recommendations of the parliamentary select committee on parastatals were not being implemented by the Government.

These include the scandal in which the Zambia National Commercial Bank wrote-off bad debts amounting to K5.7 million without making efforts to recover the monies from the culprits.

The Government had failed to undertake a re-appraisal of the Livingstone Motor Assemblers project as was recommended by the committee in its report for 1979.

The latest report is a catalogue of rampant irregularities in public bodies while Government investment in parastatal organisations has correspondingly increased.

The report notes that a review of the accounts of Zimco and its subsidiaries for 1977 to 1981 showed that the capital invested by the Government into the Zimco group of companies increased from K46.4 million in 1977 to K423 million in 1981 excluding grants totalling K72.4 million as of March 31, 1981.

Dividends

But Zimco has failed to declare any dividends since 1975 and as at December 31, 1980 the corporation owed the Government K54.5 million in arrears of interest on long term loans.

The report exposes several scandals in the Agricultural Finance Company (AFC) where a number of animals valued at K211,500 repossessed from a farm in Kabwe owned by a loanee were later sold by the management for only K25,000 to an expatriate farmer.

But the farmer paid only K20,000 which was deposited to the original borrowers' account and the balance of K5,000 treated as a seasonal loan to him. The farmer has since sued the AFC for K186,500 in respect of the animals and K4,274 for loss on milk sales.

Contrary to regulations a married woman employee was given a seasonal loan of K36,150 by the head office although the application had earlier been rejected by the provincial management committee.

In some cases loans were approved in excess of the amounts recommended by the provincial management committees.

Agricultural loans totalling K1,076 were granted to staff from office orderlies to the chief executive during the 1980/81 season and all employees granted loans of K20,000 and above were advised to resign "except in one or two cases."

The auditor-general found that out of K23 million taken over from the defunct Credit Organisation of Zambia only K4,845,224 had been collected.

There was a weakness in the system used to recover debts from loanees

A test check of the record maintained in the Lusaka region revealed that in 31 cases, although stop orders were issued for loans totalling nearly K2 million, no recoveries were made either through the loanees themselves or any marketing organisation.

The auditor-general questions the wisdom of the Government to continue subsidising the AFC to meet its administration expenses.

About K7.3 million was spent last year subsidising the organisation while an examination of its records and accounts showed the company received from the time of incorporation interest on loans and sundry income totalling K14.1 million.

An investigation into the financial operations of Zambia Horticultural Products (Zamhort) revealed "unsatisfactory features" including the purchase of a water pump by the general manager at a cost of K899 to be installed at his private farm without the approval of the board of directors.

The auditors found that there was rampart misuse of transport.

A Mercedez Benz truck was sold to a member of the board of directors for K3,500 for which no payment had been made at the time of investigation.

At the National Educational Distribution Company of Zambia (Nedcoz) auditors found that a South African supplier of Encyclopaedia Brittannica had given a set to the general manager as a gift which he did not report to the board of directors.

The company subsequently placed another order for sets valued at K351,000 from the supplier although because of non-availability of foreign exchange the order was cancelled. But checks by Mr Nundwe's men discovered that Nedcoz had previously placed an order for 100 sets worth K55,000 which had arrived in the country.

The report disclosed that Mweru Water Transport which had continued to receive subsidies and capital grants from the Government between 1973 to 1979 totalling K404,485 had not prepared annual accounts for 1976 1977, 1978 and 1979.

An audit check revealed financial and administrative malpractices which eventually led to the termination of employment of the manager.

CSO: 4700/789

MUNDIA ANNOUNCES MEASURES AFFECTING MINING INDUSTRY

Lusaka SUNDAY TIMES in English 14 Feb 82 p 1

[Excerpt] THE Party and its Government has taken measures aimed at increasing the volume of copper at the London Metal Exchange, Prime Minister Mundia announced in Kabwe yesterday.

Among the measures taken was the suspension of one passenger train by Zambia Railways to allow goods trains ferry copper to ports.

The Prime Minister apologised to the nation, particularly railway passengers for the inconvenience caused to them by the cancellation of the Kafue express train which will be used to transport copper to world markets.

Mr Mundia said this was a Government instruction to Zambia Raiways to suspend the running of the Kafue from yesterday to facilitate the movement of the copper pile-up.

Addressing workers at Kabwe Industrial Fabrics after a conducted tour yesterday Mr Mundia said the Government felt that it was important to exchange and increase revenue from the mining companies by the end of this year.

"So, I am apologising very sincerely on behalf of the Party and its Government for the inconvenience this arrangement has caused to the passengers on this train. But I am sure they will be able to use another train for a week or two."

The mining industry is expected to make a loss of K118 million at the end of the financial year in March, Mr Mundia said.

He said this after touring the Broken Hill division of Nchanga Consolidated Copper Mines (NCCM) to get first hand information of the problems facing the company.

The Prime Minister said as a result of the anticipated loss the Government had exempted mining companies from paying tax this year.

Mr Mundia who is on a four-day tour of Kabwe industries said the Government had thought of rationalising the operations of the two mining companies by merging them.

The merger of Roan Consolidated Copper Mines and NCCM into Zambia Consolidated Copper Mines which has already been signed, would make it the third largest mining company in the world.

"The other goodness is that as an enlarged company, we shall be able to influence the price of copper on the world market," he said.

Mr Mundia who is accompanied by ministers for National Guidance Mr Arnold Simuchimba, Legal Affairs and Attorney-General, Mr Gibson Chigaga, Minister of State for Mines, Mr Mathew Makayi, Members of Parliament and district governors, said one of the major problems afflicting the nation was lack of foreign exchange.

"With this merger, we are looking forward to the recovery of the mining industry and make a profit. We have been spending more than K2 million annually on spare parts but this will be rationalised when the merger exercise is completed."

The Party and its Government was determined to reorganise the industry because it was the largest single foreign exchange earner and the Government attached great importance to it.

CSO: 4700/789

MUNDIA DIRECTS CHINESE TEXTILE PLANT MANAGERS TO SEEK LOANS

Lusaka TIMES OF ZAMBIA in English 16 Feb 82 p 2

[Text] PRIME MINISTER Mundia has directed the board of directors of the Chinese textile complex in Kabwe to find solutions to the financial problems of the mill.

He said in Kabwe yesterday that the complex had reached a stage where it would generate its own funds by getting loans from financial institutions.

Mr Mundia gave the directive after Minister of Youth and Sport General Kingsley Chinkuli, under whose ministry the complex falls and the construction team leader Mr Ming-Zhong Wang complained that it was facing financial problems.

Mr Ming-Zhong said new workers could not be employed at the multi-million Kwacha factory because funds which were supposed to be released by the Government had not been made available yet.

There was no money to buy cotton, import dyes, chemicals and spare parts for machinery. There were problems of lack of sufficient water, electricity and sewage facilities.

"If the above problems could be solved as soon as possible, the complex would be in a position to start its formal and regular production and make a contribution to the Zambian Government and people at an early date."

Gen Chinkuli, who joined Mr Mundia's entourage yesterday informed the Prime Minister that K12.1 million was urgently required to complete the remaining work at the factory, but this did not include money needed to complete the construction of staff houses.

The minister said K600,000 was needed urgently in foreign exchange to buy chemicals and dyes, K800,000 in foreign exchange to buy spare parts for plant and equipment and K1.5 million in foreign exchange to buy pretreatment plant including sewage by the Kabwe Urban district council.

An additional K1.52 million was needed to pay the 770 workers at the complex, K512,000 for fuel and lubricants, K750,000 for the installation of a sub-station by ZESCO, K5 million for water reticulation works, K400,000 to buy long staple cotton from Lintco and K480,000 to meet living expenses for the 80 Chinese technicians at the plant.

"On the other hand, for this year alone there is a requirement for K4.1 million with which to continue the construction of living quarters for the factory personnel.

"It will be appreciated, that at the factory's present level of development, the accommodation of its workers is a matter of great concern to us. Given all the necessary operational funds needed, the factory should be able to pull through and prove to be a viable economic entity."

Approach

But Mr Mundia who toured the complex said he did not doubt the ability of the complex to raise its own funds at the level it had reached like any other Zimco company.

The board of directors chaired by Secretary of State for Defence and Security Zulu with Gen Chinkuli as his deputy "should move fast and look into this matter. If they have any problems, they should approach us".

Mr Mundia told the gathering which included Central Province Member of the Central Committee Mr Samuel Mbilishi, ministers and the Chinese charge d'affaires at the Chinese embassy in Lusaka Mr Jian Hu, that the plant had been made a limited company with freedom to raise its own financial resources from any source.

The Kabwe Urban district council had been given K3 million by the Zambia National Provident Fund as a loan to help them accomplish their commitments to the complex.

Mr Mundia directed the council to use K1.6 million of that loan as their foreign exchange to buy equipment for the water and sewage facilities at the complex.

CSO: 4700/789

END
138

JPRS 80303

11 March 1982

Sub-Saharan Africa Report

No. 2586

FBIS FOREIGN BROADCAST INFORMATION SERVICE

NOTE

JPRS publications contain information primarily from foreign newspapers, periodicals and books, but also from news agency transmissions and broadcasts. Materials from foreign-language sources are translated; those from English-language sources are transcribed or reprinted, with the original phrasing and other characteristics retained.

Headlines, editorial reports, and material enclosed in brackets [] are supplied by JPRS. Processing indicators such as [Text] or [Excerpt] in the first line of each item, or following the last line of a brief, indicate how the original information was processed. Where no processing indicator is given, the information was summarized or extracted.

Unfamiliar names rendered phonetically or transliterated are enclosed in parentheses. Words or names preceded by a question mark and enclosed in parentheses were not clear in the original but have been supplied as appropriate in context. Other unattributed parenthetical notes within the body of an item originate with the source. Times within items are as given by source.

The contents of this publication in no way represent the policies, views or attitudes of the U.S. Government.

PROCUREMENT OF PUBLICATIONS

JPRS publications may be ordered from the National Technical Information Service, Springfield, Virginia 22161. In ordering, it is recommended that the JPRS number, title, date and author, if applicable, of publication be cited.

Current JPRS publications are announced in Government Reports Announcements issued semi-monthly by the National Technical Information Service, and are listed in the Monthly Catalog of U.S. Government Publications issued by the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402.

Correspondence pertaining to matters other than procurement may be addressed to Joint Publications Research Service, 1000 North Glebe Road, Arlington, Virginia 22201.

JPRS 80303

11 March 1982

SUB-SAHARAN AFRICA REPORT

No. 2586

CONTENTS

BENIN

Qadhdhafi Addresses President, Congratulates People
(EHUZU, 22 Jan 82 1

New Police Headquarters at Tokplegbe
(F. Houehou; EHUZU, 19 Jan 82) 2

Work on Djalokou Bridge Halted by Profiteers
(EHUZU, 27 Jan 82) 3

Appeal for Fight Against Saboteurs of National Economy
(Editorial; EHUZU, 1 Feb 82) 4

BURUNDI

Briefs
New Bank in Gitega 6
PRC Trade Union Delegation 6

CHAD

Situation of Chadian Refugees in Cameroon, Nigeria
(WEST AFRICA, 15 Feb 82)..... 7

MOZAMBIQUE

Cartoon Ridicules Nkomo's Denial of Existence of Hidden Arms
(NOTICIAS, 19 Feb 82) 10

REUNION

CGPER Gives Views on 1981 Sugar Harvest
(Angelo Lauret; TEMOIGNAGES, 12 Jan 82) 11

SENEGAMBIA

Security Problems Facing Confederation Noted
(Nii K. Bentsi-Enchill; WEST AFRICA, 15 Feb 82) 14

Ruling Parties in Senegal, Gambia Harmonizing Policies
(WEST AFRICA, 15 Feb 82) 19

SOUTH AFRICA

SANA Scored as 'Racist Organization'
(MUSLIM NEWS, 29 Jan 82) 21

Van Den Berg Resigns Over Disputes
(Rika van Graan; THE CITIZEN, 23 Feb 82) 23

Macassar Muslims Reject Mancom 'Aid' for Masjid Site
(MUSLIM NEWS, 29 Jan 82) 24

Muslim Support for Urban Foundation Hit
(MUSLIM NEWS, 29 Jan 82) 25

PFP Policies, Financiers, Victory Claims Hit
(Editorial; THE CITIZEN, 22, 23 Feb 82) 28

Costly Campaign
Boasting of Victories

Malan: Terrorism on the Increase
(Chris Steyn; THE CITIZEN, 23 Feb 82) 30

Muslim Educational Council Established
(MUSLIM NEWS, 12 Feb 82) 31

Reaction to Steyn Commission Report Given
(MUSLIM NEWS, 12 Feb 82) 33

PM Botha on Power-Sharing
(Jaap Theron; THE CITIZEN, 23 Feb 82) 36

Muslims Urged To Reject Urban Foundation
(MUSLIM NEWS, 29 Jan 82) 38

Witwatersrand Students Reject Steyn Report
(THE CITIZEN, 24 Feb 82) 41

Dr T Stands Firm Against 'Power Sharing'
(Jaap Theron; THE CITIZEN, 24 Feb 82) 42

SAIC Recognized as Only Representative Indian Body
(Jaap Theron; THE CITIZEN, 23 Feb 82) 44

'NEWS' Condemns Dr Neil Aggett's Death
(Editorial; MUSLIM NEWS 12 Feb 82) 45

Inflation Rate Reported at 13.93 Percent
(Daan De Kock; THE CITIZEN, 23 Feb 82) 46

Three Plead Not Guilty to ANC Charges
(THE CITIZENS 24 Feb 82) 47

Teacher-Government Row Looms
(Keith Abendroth; THE CITIZEN, 23 Feb 82) 48

Volkskas Sells Bulk of SWA Interest
(THE CITIZEN, 24 Feb 82) 50

Security Police Question Banned Student's Teacher
(MUSLIM NEWS, 12 Feb 82) 51

Islamic Banking Concepts Praised
(MUSLIM NEWS, 29 Jan 82) 52

Reportage on Racialism in Sports
(MUSLIM NEWS, 29 Jan, 12 Feb 82) 53

Glenville, Spurs Non-racial Pretenses
Management Committees Hit

Treurnicht Views Coloureds' Future as Sensitive Issue
(Murray McNally; THE CITIZEN, 22 Feb 82) 56

SAS Kruger Sinking: 'Screen Exercise Led to Disaster'
(Murray McNally; THE CITIZEN, 23 Feb 82) 57

Obstacles Keep Places in Colleges Empty
(Lawrence Mayekiso; THE CITIZEN, 23 Feb 82) 59

Briefs
Zulu Factions Fight 60
Haig's Criticism Backed 60
Controlled Blast 60
Youth Brigades 60
State Aid for Fire Services 60
Squatter Site Raid 61
Sasol Rides High 61
Detainee's Complaint 61
SATV Contempt 62
Student Leader Killed 62
Anti-SAIC Man Detained 62
Population Increase 63

ZIMBABWE

Lord Carrington's Part in Lancaster House Talks Reviewed
(Alda Parker; THE CITIZEN, 24 Feb 82) 64

East German Experts Will Indoctrinate Public
(Aida Parker; THE CITIZEN, 23 Feb 82) 66

Briefs
Home-Grown 'Infiltrators' 67

QADHDHAFI ADDRESSES PRESIDENT, CONGRATULATES PEOPLE

Cotonou EHUZU in French 22 Jan 82 pp 1, 8

[Message from Colonel Qadhdhafi to President Kerekou, on 5th anniversary of the Day of Martyrs]

[Text] Mr President and dear brother:

On 16 January 1977, the valiant, courageous brother people of Benin succeeded in defeating an act of armed aggression that was organized, planned and financed by imperialism for the purpose of destroying the revolutionary regime you head and destabilize the sister republic of Benin!

The overwhelming victory won by the people of Benin over that horde of mercenaries heightened the prestige of all progressive Africa and constitutes a point of honor and pride for all those who would dare to take up arms in order to recover their real independence, safeguard their national dignity, the stability of their revolutionary regime and the integrity of their national territory.

The commemoration of this important historic event for all of Africa provides us with an opportunity to express to your the warm congratulations of all the Libyan Arab people, its congresses and its people's committees at all levels!

With our brother Beninese people, we share their legitimate pride and are convinced that this anniversary will help us take a new step forward on the path of tightening bonds between all the progressive nations of Africa and the Third World in order to foil and destroy all imperialist plots, whatever their origin.

We also take this opportunity to tell you of the permanent willingness of the Libyan Arab people to work to further and diversify the fraternal bonds of cooperation that so fortunately link our two countries, our two peoples and our two revolutions.

Sincerely,

Muammar Qadhdhafi
Head of the Revolution
Tripoli

11,464
CSO: 4719/546

NEW POLICE HEADQUARTERS AT TOKPLEGBE

Cotonou EHUZU in French 19 Jan 82 pp 1, 6

[Article by F. Houehou]

[Excerpts] The urban district of Cotonou III now has a new police headquarters. People living directly along the Cotonou-Lagos highway will now be much better protected from traffic accidents and will also be able to enjoy their rest.

Built within the territory of the commune of Tokplegbe, one of the four communes in the district, the police headquarters building has an office for the police commissioner, an office for the deputy commissioner, two inspectors' offices, a secretary's office, a file room and a police station.

Costing a total of 3,175,623 francs, the building covers an area of 215 square meters.

Speaking at the [opening ceremony], the representative of the commanding officer of the police headquarters, the deputy central commissioner, Comrade Darius Johnson, told of the various security problems facing people in the urban district of Cotonou III every day. "The establishment of a police headquarters here is timely, for in addition to the traditional litigation over land pitting members of the communities in the district against one another, quarrels in which dishonest individuals find profit, certain militants of dubious morality have turned the remote quarters of the district into places of heavy crime.

After asking the people to step up their vigilance, Johnson finally told police officers: "Your mission is to guarantee the security of the people in the district, inspire them with confidence and restore the peace and tranquillity which the people need in order to carry out properly the tasks assigned by our party and our Revolutionary Government."

Closing the ceremony, the secretary general of Atlantic Province, Comrade Glele, expressed his satisfaction over the tasks of national construction carried out by people in the urban district of Cotonou III. The people in that young district are doing useful work, he said, and he urged them to work harder and to step up their vigilance in order to bar the way to the enemies of our democratic people's revolution.

11,464
CSO: 4719/546

WORK ON DJALOKOU BRIDGE HALTED BY PROFITEERS

Cotonou EHUZU in French 27 Jan 82 p 3

[Text] Savalou--Comrade Abel Gandaho, head of the district of Savalou, took advantage of the opportunity provided by 16 January to preside over a meeting of CRAD [Revolutionary Committee for District Administration], expanded to include the mayor and local organs of the commune of Djalokou, located 53 kilometers west of Savalou, where there is unrest. This situation is due to the bad will of certain militants and the demobilizing, pernicious, undermining action of big landowners in the commune.

Djalokou is an important agricultural center. Every year, it produces over 500 tons of sweet potatoes, 50 tons of corn and large quantities of beans, pimento, peas, cotton, manioc, and so on.

Normally, Djalokou serves Savalou, Tcheti, Abomey, Agouna and Djidja by the only bridge connecting it with these spots. However, the bridge collapsed some time ago because of age and the effect of bad weather.

District authorities quickly reacted to repair the bridge in order to make Djalokou accessible once again. They found and made available to the commune the sum of 100,000 francs. A German volunteer offered 10 tons of cement and 40 iron bars. The construction department was ready to go into action. The people of Djalokou had but to provide the human investment.

Unfortunately, that is when the landowners and usurers came into play. The former bought the products that had not been shipped out at absurdly low prices and the latter financed their action.

It is this action that CRAD tried to fight by issuing a severe warning to the representatives who are fleeing their responsibilities, thereby becoming the accomplices of those blocking repair work on the bridge that will open Djalokou up once again. CRAD has promised to make an on-the-spot visit soon in order to see if its warning has been heeded. Otherwise, Comrade Gandaho said, we shall have to take measures to eliminate those trying to halt the irreversible march of the revolution.

Whatever the case, the head of the district of Savalou concluded, the Djalokou bridge will be rebuilt. (ABP)

11,464
CSO: 4719/546

APPEAL FOR FIGHT AGAINST SABOTEURS OF NATIONAL ECONOMY

Cotonou EHUZU in French 1 Feb 82 pp 1, 6

[Editorial: "Let Us Wage War on the Saboteurs"]

[Text] Our country's economic development essentially depends on the mobilization of our domestic resources, both material and human.

This need was quite rightly emphasized in our Program Speech on national construction. Suitable provisions necessary for its materialization were made at the proper time.

The takeovers of the vital sectors of the national economy were achieved with continuity and responsibility. Likewise, national companies, joint ventures, provincial companies and national offices were set up.

All of these actions by our Revolutionary Government had the same objective: to create and make available to the masses in our cities and rural areas the production and distribution circuits needed to supply them regularly with the various products that are indispensable for their well-being, products that will enable each individual to meet his basic, fundamental needs, which are: to have housing, clothing, food, education and medical care.

In order to apply this responsible policy, an appeal has been made to national cadres, for it is true that: "Once the proper line has been established, government employees determine everything."

But today, a lack of patriotic spirit, carelessness, incompetence, negligence, abuses of trust and misappropriations have plunged most of our national companies and offices into scandalous, revolting situations.

Instead of remaining in the hands of our people as instruments to fight all manner of speculation, most of our enterprises have become commercial clubs serving a few individuals or groups of greedy individuals.

While the honest consumer is forced to stand endlessly in line without any assurance of being able to find an adequate amount of the product sought, traffickers of all kinds obtain goods from which they will hasten to make exorbitant profits at the expense of the masses.

A veritable caste of vultures, true predators, with the complicity and participation of civil servants in whom the government and party placed their trust, intend to perpetuate the exploitation of the workers, whose achievements they turn to their own profit.

Against such individuals and their accomplices at all levels, the fight must be implacable. This will be a patriotic, class struggle in which there can be no compromise. Either one is on the side of the starvers of the people and against the revolution or one chooses to take up a resolute, merciless struggle against them and one fits into the straight line of the revolution and the people.

For an intensification of the fight against corruption and the building of an independent national economy, we shall overcome!

Death to the saboteurs! Ready for the Revolution! The fight continues!

11,464
CSO: 4719/546

BRIEFS

NEW BANK IN GITEGA--On 22 January, President Bagaza inaugurated a branch of the Republic Bank in Gitega. According to Minister of Finance Andre Bibwa, the new branch cost 36 billion Burundi francs. He also said that branches are planned for Ngozi and for Bururi. [Bujumbura LE RENOUVEAU DU BURUNDI in French 24-25 Jan 82 pp 1-2]

PRC TRADE UNION DELEGATION--The delegation of the All-China Federation of Trade Unions that had been in Burundi since 13 February left Bujumbura on 17 February. [D. Ntawurishira] [Excerpt] [Bujumbura LE RENOUVEAU DU BURUNDI in French 18 Feb 82 p 2]

CSO: 4719/626

SITUATION OF CHADIAN REFUGEES IN CAMEROON, NIGERIA

London WEST AFRICA in English No 3367, 15 Feb 82 pp 421-422

[Text] THROUGHOUT the recent debate over the political/military drama in Chad there has been a noticeable absence of attention to the plight of the tens of thousands of men, women and children who sought asylum as refugees in Nigeria and Cameroon.

In December last year, with the OAU peace-keeping forces settling into position in Chad, there was considerable reason for hope that the refugee populations in these two host countries would be radically reduced to those who were afraid or unwilling to return to a government led by President Goukhouni Oueddei. Protection and assistance had been guaranteed by the Chadian government for those who voluntarily repatriated before December 31 1981 and teams from the UN High Commission for Refugees were on the spot to organise this repatriation programme, to ensure its voluntary character and to oversee resettlement in Chad. Both host governments had, in co-operation with UNHCR, devised programmes for coping with those who did not choose to return. But the military changes which have taken place since that time have interferred with the implementation of these programmes. At the moment there is a big question mark hanging over the future of the many thousands of refugees who remain outside Chad, and the plans drawn up by Nigeria and the Cameroons are in suspense.

About two and one-half years ago refugees began arriving at Maiduguri, in Borno State, Nigeria, in large numbers. Initially, Borno State provided direct assistance and began registration. After a few months the Federal Government assumed this burden through the office of Mr. Alhaji Barko, the President's Liaison Officer in Maiduguri. Some 13,000 refugees were registered in the area with another estimated 30,000 to 110,000 unregistered Chadian refugees living there. There has always been a sizeable resident Chadian community and Maiduguri has been a traditional area for Chadians to seek employment so it may be assumed that the larger numbers of unregistered refugees were assisted by their fellow countrymen.

Two settlements were established by the Nigerian government — one in Maiduguri using a primary school which has been built for the children of military personnel and surrounding land which was privately owned and rented by the government for the purpose. (The lease on this land expired on December 31, 1981). Another settlement was established at Gambura Ngala, near the Cameroonian border.

In late 1980 the UNHCR was invited to send in an investigative mission and after a second such mission, a grant was given to the Nigerian government to provide food, health, education, and other services to the refugees. It was decided that another mission would be sent to assist in a definitive registration process and, in the course of events, the development and management of a repatriation programme. This process began in July 1981 with the arrival of the UNHCR team which is now under the direction of Mr. Christopher Thorne. Refugees who were bi- and tri-lingual (Arabic, French and English) were recruited and trained as registrars. It was determined that there were just under 10,000 living in the two settlements. The numbers living in Maiduguri being by far the largest — only about 800 people were living in the Gambura Ngala settlement with another estimated 1,200 in the border area.

In mid-December it was reported that no food distribution had been conducted in Nigeria for refugees for at least one year. Most refugees living in Maiduguri were from Ndjamena. Among them there was a small percentage of professionals, but most of the men were skilled constuction workers. In the booming economy of Maiduguri, these men were in high demand. Not only did they possess needed skills. Chadians have a reputation for being very hard workers and employers prefer them. Fortunately, jobs are plentiful so their presence caused no apparent tension among the local population. As a result most of the refugee men were employed and the settlement in Maiduguri served simply as a place for housing for those who needed it.

There is no doubt that the economy of the area is an important factor influencing refugees' decision concerning repatriation.

The smaller camp on the border was inhabited principally by people of rural backgrounds from outside Ndjamena and the possibilities for work for them were scarce. The Nigerian government had also not made provision for agricultural land for these refugees although some farming had been taking place. The UNHCR team found significant differences in the health profiles of the two populations. Medical examinations indicated that 80 per cent were suffering from two or more diseases from a list of thirty-six debilitating diseases. The Nigerian government responded to this situation with a grant of $50,000 for medicines and a doctor was provided for weekly visits. Problems of delivery of clean water persist, however, and conditions in this settlement are harsh. Nevertheless, the medical intervention caused a significant improvement in the health of the refugees. By December 1981, however, the supply of drugs for the two settlements was exhausted.

There are other differences in the populations of the two settlements. Most of the people at Gambura Ngala are women and children while in Maiduguri the refugee population is fairly evenly divided between men and women. Most are young families who were not very political, according to one observer, but simply fled because they were tired of the fighting and sought personal safety. The men who belong to families at Gambura are not, it was observed, off fighting in Chad. Rather they have wandered far afield in search of work. In Maiduguri there has been no interruption in the birth rate among the registered refugees, while there were no children under three years of age at the Gambura settlement.

With the changes in the political situation in Chad during the last half of 1981, there were a series of meetings in Lagos and Yaoundé. Both governments took policy decisions concerning their respective refugee populations. The Cameroon government, having a refugee population of around 100,000 living in a settlement at Kousseri on the Chad border, decided to establish a permanent settlement in an agricultural area some 650 kilometers south at Faro and Poli, very near the Nigerian border and well away from the politically sensitive frontier between Cameroon and Chad. It was estimated that around 20,000 refugees would opt for integration into the host country rather than return to Chad under the voluntary repatriation programme.

For Nigeria, repatriation was preferable to any of the other possible alternatives. It was decided to build a transit camp about five kilometers from the present Gambura Ngala settlement which would house the estimated five to seven thousand Chadians who would prefer to remain in Nigeria after December 31. Those who remained in Maiduguri were to be moved to this transit camp by January 15 this year. In anticipation of this transfer, the army had already begun erecting rows of tents at Ngala in December.

By mid-December last year the repatriation programme organised by the UNHCR teams in Cameroon and Nigeria was in full swing. In Maiduguri registration had been completed and loud-speaker vans toured those areas where it was known there were concentrations of Chadians outside the organised refugee settlement, informing people of the repatriation plans. People were asked what it would take to convince them to return. Refugees indicated they would need a guarantee of personal safety, of food, and of construction materials to rebuild their homes in Ndjamena. The UNHCR kept in contact with their counterparts in Chad and provided refugees with status reports. They even offered them the opportunity to send representatives with a UNHCR team to take a look at Ndjamena and report back to their people. This was, however, unnecessary. Because of its close proximity, many refugees went back and forth themselves every week and often they had fresher information on the goings on in the Chadian capital than did officials!

Although Ndjamena has been ravaged by war and there is evidence of precision bombings of such strategic sites as electrical plants, water pumping stations, and the like, in December a lot of entreprenuerial activity was reportedly going on and many more civilians were returning and setting up shops. Once the civil servants knew they would be paid their salaries again, they began returning. Many students were also back in Ndjamena. Nevertheless, by December 18 fewer than 600 people in Nigeria had taken advantage of the official UNHCR repatriation scheme, although immigration officials at the Ngala border reported that many many more had gone back home on their own.

The situation as reported in the Cameroon is more complicated. A large number of refugees are politically committed to the Forces Armées du Nord (FAN), led by the rebel Defence Minister, Hissene Habré, and are less enthusiastic about returning. Many who did travel in the lorries provided by the UNHCR team managed to find their way back to the settlement at Kousseri only a few days later. The ease of crossing the river back and forth between Chad and the Cameroons makes it absolutely impossible to keep any kind of control over refuge movements. The Chad government has encouraged the Cameroonians to move the estimated 25,000 refugees who remain at Kousseri away from the border, but the new settlement farther south is not yet ready for their transfer.

Moreover, the military situation as it now stands has profoundly complicated any humanitarian programme which the Cameroonian government together with the UNHCR might wish to implement. With Habre's forces able to threaten Ndjamena those of his supporters who have remained outside prefer now to wait — close at hand — to observe developments. Should Habre move into the capital it can be predicted that there will be a dramatic shift in refugee populations. Those supporting him will return and be replaced by a much larger number of those refugees who have now re-entered under the amnesty agreement and under the security of the OAU arrangements.

All of this has also meant that Nigeria's plans to encourage repatriation and move refugees from the settlement in Maiduguri to the transit camp at Ngala have also come to a halt. While the new barrack-style transit camp was to serve five to seven thousand refugees, observers estimated that fewer than three thousand would choose to move there. The reasons are obvious. At the moment Nigeria planned to institute a food distribution programme, but only for four months. While it could request UNHCR assistance to provide a longer term and more comprehensive programme, the location at Ngala does not lend itself to it. There is both the lack of work and the problems of providing agricultural land. However some refugees may give it a chance. The cost of transport from Ngala back to Maiduguri is only four naira and many men are earning as much as fifteen naira per day there. It would be possible for families to move to Ngala, register and take advantage of the food distribution which will become available, and then commute back to the city for work.

So while all the debate goes on about whether or not there are US military advisers in Chad and whether or not the OAU peace-keeping force is being properly deployed and adequately supplied and the relative strength of the opposing armies, the future of thousands of men, women, and children hangs in the balance.

CSO: 4700/803

CARTOON RIDICULES NKOMO'S DENIAL OF EXISTENCE OF HIDDEN ARMS

Maputo NOTICIAS in Portuguese 19 Feb 82 p 3

Joshua Nkomo, um fracasso total no Zimbabwe

[Legend: "Joshua Nkomo, a complete failure in Zimbabwe." He is portrayed as saying: "Arms??? Not on your life, I did not know about their existence!!!"]

CSO: 4742

CGPER GIVES VIEWS ON 1981 SUGAR HARVEST

Saint Denis TEMOIGNAGES in French 12 Jan 82 p 4

[Statement by Angelo Lauret, CGPER Board]

[Text] La Possession, 9 Jan--The CGPER [General Confederation of Planters and Harvesters of Reunion] reports:

The CGPER board, meeting on Saturday 8 January 1982, examined the results and the problems of the 1981 sugar harvest, among other things.

(1) Results of the Sugar Harvest

In 1981, sugar production from 2,356,172 metric tons of cane was 251,000 metric tons tons, with an average yield per ton of cane of 13.62 percent.

(a) Tonnage of Cane Processed: 2,356,172.04 Metric Tons

According to official estimates, between 10,000 and 20,000 metric tons of cane was left standing (close to 1 percent of the tonnage of cane processed).

This has meant a significant loss of income for sugar production of the island as a whole, therefore for its economy.

Furthermore, although the total tonnage of cane processed is 217,936 tons greater than in 1980, it remains less than in 1979 (2,405,925 metric tons) and also less than in 1978 (2,379,570 metric tons). In any case, it is far from the 2.7 million metric tons projected by the PMES [Plan for Modernizing the Sugar Industry] which is to terminate in 1981.

(b) Sugar Production: 251,000 Metric Tons

It is roughly equivalent to the average for the years 1967-69 (before the plan for improving cane harvests or the one for modernizing the sugar industry): 2,292,700 metric tons of cane; 247,500 metric tons of sugar.

The 1981 production figures must also be compared to the 1978 figures: 2,379,570 metric tons of cane (2,356,172 in 1981), 272,634 metric tons of sugar (251,000 metric tons in 1981).

Someone never will fail to or always will be tempted to ascribe the results of the 1981 sugar harvest to its late start. Although this fact must not be totally disregarded, it cannot be considered average. Comparison of the results of the 1981 sugar harvest to those in 1978 show that we must look elsewhere. The low tonnage in the PMES, which terminated in 1981, has not been achieved. Furthermore, one may wonder what the state of the sugar industry in Reunion today would have been if there had been no PMES.

(c) Sugar Yield: 13.62 in 1981 (13.71 in 1980)

Again, in comparison to 1980, a decrease of close to a 10th of a point is recorded in yield.

As a matter of fact, it is noted that the plan for modernizing the sugar industry, which is accompanied by mechanization of production, has meant delivery to the mills of an increasing proportion of material from all sources (cane and noncane).

Furthermore, the low yield of the 1981 cane is also not unrelated to the sample taken, not considered to be representative of the whole (method, sampler, etc.).

Finally, poor organization causes a large amount of cane to move slowly, to spoil naturally, or to be crushed by trucks on the mill platforms.

As far as the CGPER is concerned, these are the basic reasons which explain the low yield of the 1981 cane. They call for new nnd more rational organizational measures in the future.

(2) Payment

Thanks to the action of Reunion's planters' unions, for the first time the principle of final payment in January has been supported by the government.

Although the formula for subsidies and allowances still in effect will not permit "final payment" in January of this year, the principle has been won, and it is obvious that these are improvements in the sugarcane planters' situation. Of course, progress on this problem and its speedy resolution must be carefully watched.

It must also be noted that the average price paid for the 1981 sugar harvest (FR 199.21), which of course conceals some disparity, is up 11.30 percent as compared to 1980 and that the social assistance of FR 25 per metric ton of cane granted by the leftist government in 1981 represents 10 to 15 percent of the price of a metric ton of cane. Considering the difficulties encountered by the planters, this financial support is a decisive factor in the survival of a good many.

In conclusion, and despite the average results of the 1981 sugar harvest, the CGPER has recorded a few aspects which, if not encouraging, are at least positive (cooperation, increased social assistance, etc.)

But they are calling on the planters to mobilize and to act in order that the problem of the sugar industry can be integrated as a part of a coherent and overall plan for the development of Reunion.

This plan must obviously take into consideration the local economic situation as well as the regional and international situations.

First of all the struggle must be continued for:

1. the establishment of a local cane and sugar worker/management committee;

2. a truly equal worker/management composition of the CTICS [Technical Center for Cane and Sugar];

3. a key to equal distribution of taxes (CTICS contributions);

4. designation of worker/management plant committees;

5. a decrease in benefit costs in agriculture.

In regard to the Plan for Modernizing the Sugar Industry and its alternate (the Plan for Consolidating the Sugar Industry) the CGPER recalls that although it agrees with the ends, it is asking for participation on the Technical Committee of the Reunionese Association for the Modernization of the Sugar Industry in order (as do all the other planters' organizations) to make a positive contribution. These are urgent, necessary and vital measures to bring the sugar industry out of its difficulties and to encourage the planters.

9693
CSO: 4719/518

SECURITY PROBLEMS FACING CONFEDERATION NOTED

London WEST AFRICA in English No 3367, 15 Feb 82 pp 423-426

[Article by Nii K. Bentsi-Enchill]

[Text] "WE ARE secure," my friend said calmly. I did not understand the first time. I had asked how people felt about the Senegalese troops as we passed three of them looking at lappas of cloth at one entrance to the Albert Market in Banjul. The second time was when I pointed out the new Interior Ministry building on Dobson Street, "overlooking the ghetto," as somebody else said. My friend smiled: "That's what I told you; we are secure, well secure . . ." I now appreciated the irony.

For The Gambia's rulers, the presence of the Senegalese means security. After the Senegalese had put down the insurrection, and it is alleged, played a major role in arrests and interrogations, there followed administrative and judicial measures to paper over the cracks in the Gambian state. Those cracks are policed by the Senegalese gendarmerie — who will be deployed all over The Gambia — and soldiers, while some kind of Gambian security apparatus is carefully constructed.

It will take time to find sufficient numbers of Gambians who can be trusted with arms by the government, and who can form a significant contribution to the confederal forces and the paramilitary force that has been talked about. And they must be fighters in order to reduce the contrast between themselves and the Senegalese. This contrast was obvious at the parade and ceremony marking the departure of Colonel Abdulrahman N'Gom, Commander of the intervention force. During the ceremony at Macarthy Square, a simple visual comparison showed the Field Force men as comparatively older, and prettily dressed for the parade ground with what appeared to be bolt-action rifles. Meanwhile, the tall, rangy Senegalese in camouflage outfits carrying better guns, looked a totally different proposition: those boys were fighters.

A correspondent wrote that they were ". . . unobtrusive, and most polite" (West Africa, 4 January, 1981). In a country that has known only policemen, usually unarmed, the only things more obtrusive than a soldier are firstly, a real armed soldier, and secondly, an armed foreign soldier, even if a close neighbour. The Senegalese are polite, and watchful. After all, they had to fight their way to Banjul. Disciplinary problems have not been extraordinary according to official sources. The only vaguely resentful comments I heard at street-level were like this one when passing a couple of Gambian girls chatting with Senegalese troops: "When the babies are born in a few months time, they will all be wearing uniform." Otherwise, the Senegalese military presence is a matter of fact about which nothing can be done, for the moment.

Colonel N'Gom had said the question of withdrawal did not arise now that there was a confederation. How the Gambians are going to put up their contribution to confederal security is a question to be resolved. For the moment, the Senegalese appear to be running the show, beginning at State House which the Légion d'Intervention of the Gendarmerie guards. They are conveniently billeted in the old Atlantic Hotel, just down the road from State House. They provide the escort riders with unique screaming sirens when President Jawara moves by limousine. And the Senegalese also provide the personal bodyguards for Gambian ministers, and selected people such as Mr. Momodou Moussa, the businessman and father-in-law of the President.

When the Justice Minister and Attorney-General, Alhaji Lamin Saho told me that the protocols on the integration of armed and security forces was still to be negotiated, I said: "So the de facto situation is a total integration. I notice that you have a Senegalese bodyguard." He said: "I do not think it is a de facto total integration . . . Part of the Ministers had to be assigned Senegalese bodyguards. In fact, in my own personal case, I have a mixture of Gambian and Senegalese bodyguards. At the moment, I happen to be moving with a Senegalese bodyguard but now and again, I move with a Gambian bodyguard."

One government official who should know told me that The Gambia had been contributing some 50,000 dalasis a month to the upkeep of the Senegalese forces in The Gambia. This was apart from the $1m. The Gambia had paid, not as reparations but as compensation to the wounded and families of the dead Senegalese. The size of the Gambian contribution to the confederal forces is likely to be small, even if only for financial reasons. What is certain will be the continued predominance of the Senegalese in matters of confederal security. For the meantime, The Gambia is secure. However, the new arena is Senegambia: two sets of political problems have now been confederated and are heading towards union . . .

Political Trials, or the Trial of Politics?

THE GREY posters in the Ministry of Justice announce: "We don't hang around". The government has tried to make this claim a reality with regard to the prosecution of people accused of offences connected with the July 30 events. The simple reasons are time, money and politics.

In round figures, some 1,000 Gambians have been detained since July 30. Just over 100 have been released, although some could be re-arrested depending on the fruits of further investigations. Less than 100 cases were fully or partly heard, or pending by the end of 1981. Of these, 27 were on charges of treason and murder, and 13 people have so far been given death sentences. Appeals were lodged by the first seven sentenced to death within the statutory 30 days, and will be heard towards June.

There remain over 300 cases to be brought before the courts. After that, something has to be done with the remaining 600 people languishing for the most in Mile Two Prison. This is where the time and political factors come in.

Mr. Desmond de Silva, the Singhalese-British chief special prosecutor in Banjul was pleased to say that the prosecution team had been working most expeditiously, in some cases around the clock. He added the the Gambian Government had "gone out of its way" to ensure that the accused were properly defended by paying nominal fees for Gambian lawyers to represent the accused. However, with trials proceeding, often simultaneously, in Banjul, Kanifing and Brikama, the resources of the two handfuls of Gambian counsel were severely stretched. Again, although Mr. de Silva thought it reasonable to try the accused in batches of seven, any larger groups (of say 25 as informally proposed by one special prosecutor) would be inappropriate for the observance of justice.

So what is to be done? Some optimists speculate about some form of amnesty in the near future. Others speak of conditional releases, and/or fines for large numbers of detainees. Something will obviously have to be done because both time and money are running out, while the political weight of both the size of the detained population and the results of the trials is building up.

By the beginning of February, the contracts of most of the special prosecutors were about to expire (the prosecutors are: de Silva, and John Causer from England; Ebun-Thomas, Robin Coker; Solomon Berewa, and Farid Anthony from Sierra Leone; Kwaw-Swanzy, Gyeke-Darko, Heward-Mills and Akainyah, from Ghana). They have generally been very well treated by the Gambian Government with very handsome fees and per diem to accompany their comfortable accommodation in the Atlantic Hotel. There was a rumpus over an attempt by the government to recover some of its expense by taxing the lawyers at a rate approaching 70 per cent, but there is reason to believe a judicious settlement was reached.

The theory behind the recruitment of foreign judges and prosecutors was to ensure impartiality. The attitude of these individuals is on the professional level straightforward: they work according to their briefs. The two Review Tribunals composed of Gambians examine the cases of detainees and refer those whom they feel should be prosecuted to the Special Prosecutor and his team. They then look at the cases and prepare charges where appropriate, and also exercise the power to advise against prosecution. Judgment is left to the judges (Marcus-Cole, Gelaga-King, Metzger, and Cole from Sierra Leone; Aboagye from Ghana; and Ayoola from Nigeria) who, as usual, are not there to dispense charity, but are exploring the full range of penalties provided for by the emergency regulations. Maximum sentences are 14 years' imprisonment and/or a fine of 5,000 dalasis. Sentences of 18 years have been recorded, as in one case prosecuted by Mr. Gyeke-Darko, by virtue of technicalities.

It is not known how long all this can continue. The prosecutors have been away from their practices for roughly three months and some are keen to return. West Africa has just been informed that Mr. de Silva and Mr. Causer returned to England one week ago. It should be possible soon to report on the current staffing of the special prosecutors' office. It begins to appear that the Gambian Government may have to find a new batch of prosecutors on less generous terms.

On an individual and unofficial level, the attitude of the prosecutors is very different. There is naturally a variable acuteness of perception with regard to the political situation in The Gambia and the role of these trials. I believe some prosecutors see their role as an awkward one, objectively acting as instruments of the Gambian state against Gambian citizens whose grievances they are aware of if they are not necessarily in agreement. For others, it is straightforward legal business.

The only foreigner with a bodyguard is the special adviser to the government, Mr. Berthan Macauley, from Sierra Leone. This experienced, widely-travelled expert in international and constitutional law, has played an important role in the drafting of the confederation agreement, and in the administration of the state of emergency in The Gambia, including the trials. He heads the corps of foreign lawyers from his office in the Ministry of Justice, and is very ably assisted by Miss Ida Drameh, a young Gambian lawyer (and for a period, Kofi Akainyah from Ghana).

Mr. Macauley, although suggestive in enigmatic on- and off-record utterances about the confederation, refuses to be drawn out of strict legal confidentiality on behalf of his client, the Government of The Gambia. His attitude is similar to the taxi-driver hired to take a passenger to his destination, ignorant as to where the passenger came from, and what the latter will do at destination. His role is to give his expert advice; the rest is left to the Gambian Government.

The Case of Sheriff Dibba

This advice was crucial, according to other sources, when it came to the confederation agreement. The Senegalese, obviously more prepared in the circumstances, were ready to swallow up The Gambia immediately and digest it in leisure and legitimacy. The agreement signed on December 17 was largely what the Gambians were able to produce. However, there remains the sad situation of other foreigners who are more aware of what is in The Gambia's immediate and future interest than Gambians themselves, at least members of government. There is a feeling that several Gambian officials are more interested in jockeying for position in the new political context than in preserving whatever is left of Gambian sovereignty.

The importance of Mr. Macauley's advice (and that of Mr. de Silva prior to his departure) is perhaps best illustrated by these trials. When I asked President Jawara about the social impact of any eventual executions, the President insisted on another angle: what would people think if the perpetrators of July 30 were not punished? This retributive, almost vengeful approach is politically counter-productive.

By the time I left Banjul at the end of January, I had seen just how keenly people listened to the radio for news of the trials, and the comments that were made about the sentences being handed down. As I said last week, the prospect of change briefly offered by the abortive coup in July was popular. Since the trials began, a tide of opinion has been building up against the government, and the Senegalese who are perceived as running the show.

If, as one understands, the government is intent on trying as many people as possible for treason and related offences, it is likely that a substantial number will have death sentences on their heads. There are martyrs in the making who stand to be sacrificed on the altar of an unpopular confederation that is mainly policed by the Senegalese. The Gambian Government has some good advisers. In its own interests, it should take their advice.

One focus of popular attention is the case of Sheriff Dibba, leader of the Opposition. There is a feeling that the case against him cannot be strong or else he would have been brought before the courts already. The Minister of Justice tried to say that treason was a criminal, and not political, offence in The Gambia, but most people would disagree. Apart from Kukoi Samba Sanyang and nine others who escaped into Guinea Bissau, I understand that the first 14 people tried for treason were seen as those with the next greatest degree of involvement in the planning and the actions of July 30. People are watching and listening closely, in the compounds of Banjul and Serrekunda, as well as in the air-conditioned offices. Whatever the government does with Sheriff Dibba, with or against legal advice, could make those bells toll louder.

Policing the Confederation

HOW LONG can Senegal police the confederation, or eventual union, with The Gambia? There is an opinion that Senegal has since July 30 incorporated the economic, political and social problems of The Gambia into its own, thereby accelerating the crisis. It is alleged that Abdou Lahad M'Backe, leader of the Mourides in Senegal said to ex-President Senghor when the latter left office (somebody put it this subtle way: ". . . lors de sa DÉMIS-tion", meaning Senghor's allegedly forced resignation): "You should be thankful not only once or twice, but at least 20 or 30 times over . . ." That is to say, Senghor should be thankful to have been able to get out whilst he was "ahead". President Abdou Diouf has so far appeared to manage the crisis with some skill, but some would describe it a "forward flight".

It is, indeed, an interesting admission that Senegal is not "secure" if a government in any way progressive comes to power in The Gambia. Henceforth, the lid has to be kept on both Dakar and Banjul. There was another provocative opinion I picked up, literally, in an anonymous tract:

"The Gambian insurrection (500 deaths officially recognised) is the first armed insurrection of the Senegalese proletariat, according to the Senegalese proletariat . . ."

It is important to note that although the Gambian Government insists on talking about "rebels", Mr. de Silva equally insisted on describing the events of July 30 as an insurrection. His reasons were that the classic elements of a rebellion entailed not only the seizure of authority but also the exercise of the functions of government not necessarily over the whole country, but over parts of it; these conditions were not met in the week after July 30.

An insurrection then, but perhaps of a triple nature. Firstly, it was an attempted coup d'état with some ideological and political confusion. The second stage came when the Senegalese were on their way: the coup was out of control reportedly after only a few hours, and the disorganisation was accelerated when arms were given to allcomers, including prisoners. That is when the looting, and the accidental and purposeful killings by Gambians occurred. The third stage was almost a nationalist struggle, a doomed fight against the Senegalese "invaders" come to restore an unpopular government. And that is when the real killing is alleged to have taken place by virtue of the superior weaponry and infinitely superior training of the Senegalese.

The results are the confederation on one level, and on another, a bitter aftertaste for many Gambians. Sanyang's attempted coup is condemned in the obvious way by the government. Otherwise, the criticism is subtler: "That thing was all wrong", one person said, "because ordinary people were being killed instead of all those ministers." That was one expression. It seems that Sanyang's coup was welcome had it been accurately focused, and far less costly to ordinary Gambians.

There is now anxiety in certain quarters about the future, and what precisely the confederation will entail for Gambians. Although one recognises the historical, geographical, economic, cultural, and even security rationale of the confederation, there are opinions ranging from regret to hostility about how the arrangement was made. Those who should know — including members of government and parliament, and the relatively young administrative cadre — don't know what is going to happen, while the majority of Gambians in the rural areas remain uninformed and manipulable. The government can continue speaking "with a mandate" claiming overwhelming popularity for confederation but nobody is fooled.

One educated person said Gambians perceived the Senegalese as rather arrogant, but then Gambians felt a kind of inferiority complex compared to the stylish, elegantly dressed, and better educated Senegalese. Another less-educated opinion was that the Senegalese were "tapele", an Aku word meaning "forger" or "crooked". Highly unflattering, admittedly, but opinions to be borne in mind when building a union of two peoples. There was also some concern that Banjul was now threatened with the same kind of "development" as Dakar which resulted in an urban concentration of cripples, beggars and prostitutes (the latter in disappointingly large numbers) side-by-side with great wealth and superficial style.

If this is the manner in which African Unity is to be achieved, then the peoples of Africa had better watch out.

CSO: 4700/803

RULING PARTIES IN SENEGAL, GAMBIA HARMONIZING POLICIES

London WEST AFRICA in English No 3367, 15 Feb 82 pp 427, 428

[Text] THE CONFEDERATION of Senegambia came into being on February 1. Observers of the political scene in the constituent states say it is only a matter of time for a federation to be formed. They point to President Jawara's statement in January, in reply to a foreign reporter, that such a development was not objectionable provided "the people approved". This, it is pointed out, is a significant softening of the Gambian attitude to political development.

The confederal arrangements, apart from providing for the integration of the two countries' armed forces, co-ordination of external and communication policies among other things, leave the door open for co-ordination/integration in other areas. The two governments are moving fast to consolidate the new political entity. Work has already started on the protocols governing the agreement and, although it would take some time before they are drawn-up and discussed, the two parties are working towards achieving the widest possible agreement.

The customs and monetary union aspect of the agreement is likely to take a longer time to resolve, but both governments are treating it very cautiously. Both Dakar and Banjul appear to appreciate the delicate nature of this subject. President Jawara said it would take some time before the union became operative. This is obviously to soften the impact on Gambian business and customs revenue takings.

At the non-governmental level, the relationship being forged by the ruling parties in both countries could not but mean a harmonisation of policies. A joint committee of the Parti Socialiste of Senegal and the People's Progressive Party in The Gambia has been formed. The high level of the delegations at its inaugural meeting in Banjul on December 12, 1981, each led by a Minister of Justice, was indicative of the objective of adopting a common policy.

Before this political development, envoys of the PS had participated at meetings organised in Banjul following the July events. The Senegalese delegation was led by Mr. Kabirou M'Boj, an Assistant Secretary-General of the PS (and Deputy Speaker of the Senegalese National Assembly). Mr. M'Boj stressed the importance of the two Secretaries-General working closely as well as the role the PS and the PPP have to play in "every aspect of Senegambian life".

It is also significant that a Gambian delegation has been present at all constituency rallies of the PS since August. The PPP, announcing its forthcoming Congress in April, simultaneously made it known that a PS delegation will be present.

Elections are imminent in The Gambia (not later than June). President Jawara said that it is not likely that the state of emergency will be lifted completely but the regulations will be relaxed sufficiently to allow the electioneering by parties and individuals. It seems, however, judging by present trends, that it will be a non-election. The massive pull-out from the opposition National Convention Party in particular in the Baddibu constituencies, bastion of NCP support in the last elections, does not bode well for the opposition. In the Kombos, the defection of Mr. Dembo Sanneh, opposition candidate in the Kombo Central constituency in the 1977 elections and easily the most popular candidate in the Kombos, is a major setback for the NCP. In any case, the NCP image has been so tarnished following participation in the attempted coup by individual members and known supporters that the party is now regarded as the party of violence.

There is a general consensus that the elections will see the disappearance of older members of the PPP. The trend towards quality cannot now be reversed. The nomination of Mr. Bakary Darbo and his appointment as Minister of Information and Tourism and the nomination of Mr. Abdoulaye M'Boob, who is now Minister of the Interior, points to a drive to get competent people in key positions.

In Senegal, elections are due next year.

Local political analysts say it is inconceivable that Diouf will come up against any significant opposition. His popularity among the rural voters has increased considerably following his writing-off of debts owed by farmers. In the urban area, his drive against corruption has met with the approval of the young, although it is said that enquiries into assets should include those who gained their assets as far back as 1970.

No one believes that the opposition parties will come together sufficiently to form a credible opposition. Momodou Dia, although still respected in certain quarters for his role in the early years of independence, is considered far too despotic and in any case, it is said, it's time he gave way to younger people. His constant harping at the manner of Diouf's succession to the Presidency is not taken seriously. To gain the support of the rural population, he would need to talk about bread-and-butter issues.

Mr. Abdoulaye Wade has a battle to fight at two fronts. In the party, he has to reassert his leadership in the face of the rising tide towards Fara N'Diaye. Although late in January the party reaffirmed its confidence in his leadership, this is seen as nothing other than a closing of the ranks in the wake of allegations that the party had planned to overthrow the government by violent means. Nationally, he has to prove that his party seeks power through constitutional means.

1984 will be a crucial year for Senegambia.

CSO: 4700/803

SANA SCORED AS 'RACIST ORGANIZATION'

Cape Town MUSLIM NEWS in English 29 Jan 82 p 17

[Text] The South African Nursing Association must be condemned as 'a racist organisation serving the interests of the oppressors' because it blatantly violates the 'fundamental basic human right of equal representation and freedom of association.'

This view was expressed by Professor Ali Moosa, Chairman of the Natal Health Workers' Society, when asked to comment on the forthcoming SANA elections which will, for the first time, see Blacks represented on the regional boards of the organisation.

The move many appear to be progressive, said Prof Moosa, 'but on closer scrutiny it is clear that SANA is nothing more than a racist organisation whose representatives and elections are racially determined.'

The Western Cape Health Workers' Society has also come out strongly against SANA and, in a pamphlet issued to all health workers, exposed the racist character of SANA. Six of the eleven representatives elected to each of the seven regional boards will be white. This will ensure a white majority. Representation and election on racial lines is also ensured with members of a particular population group — as defined by the state — nominating and electing persons of the same population group.

The Western Cape HWS says that SANA was established and is controlled by the government. Nurses do not have the freedom to decide whether or not to be members of SANA.

The Western Cape HWS, in calling on nurses not to vote for SANA, has made the following demands:

- The right of all nurses to have an equal say in their organisation;
- The right of all nurses to elect their own representatives (not on racial lines);
- Freedom of association for nurses who have been forced to accept homeland citizenship; and
- Full and equal citizenship for all in an undivided democratic South Africa.

MUSLIM NEWS spoke to a nursing sister who works at an hospital in the Cape Peninsula and she echoed the views of the Health Workers' Society.

'I have spoken to others — qualified nurses as well as students — and all reject SANA becuase it is not democratically elected.'

She said that SANA has done nothing to alleviate the plight of the nurses. Instead, by working within the framework of the apartheid ideology and the policy of divide and rule, SANA attempts to muzzle the nurses.

'I don't want to be muzzled,' she declared. 'I also do not want to be a servant of the state. As a nurse I must serve the people but SANA is more interested in working the apartheid system.'

She added that SANA purported to represent the nurses but had done nothing about the wide gap in salaries of white and black nurses; the staff shortage; and the lack of proper training facilities.

She said that parity in salary did not exist and that the staff shortage was created by government policy.

'Many Blacks do not enter the nursing profession because they know they get a raw deal. Those who do enter the profession are frustrated during their years as students. They are deliberately failed so that they can remain in the hospital to fill in for the staff shortage.'

The nurses get third-rate training because they are expected to work long hours of night duty and then forced to study during the day.

The sister did not see the struggle of the nurses from an isolated point of view but rather as one aspect of the overall struggle for a just society in this country.

She saw no hope in SANA fighting for these ideals; rather, SANA was actively working to maintain the status quo.

Prof Moosa summed up the general feelings towards SANA:

'It is indeed ironic that an organisation representing a caring profession, whose members are all bound by an oath that emphasises equality in treatment, irrespective of race, colour or creed, should itself practise the very discrimination based on race and colour which its members are bound by an oath to avoid. This is indeed most deplorable and must be condemned for what it is — a racialist ploy to maintain white supremacy in the nursing profession.'

CSO: 4700/811

VAN DEN BERG RESIGNS OVER DISPUTES

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 23 Feb 82 p 1

[Article by Rika van Graan]

[Text] THE National Party MPC for the unopposed constituency of Germiston District, Mr Ben van den Berg, resigned his seat at an emergency executive meeting described to have been "heated" on Saturday.

The emergency meeting caused the sitting Member of Parliament, Mrs Betsie Scholtz to fly up from Cape Town on Friday night to attend the discussions.

Mr Van den Berg's resignation caused dispute, bitterness and confusion when it was claimed that the chairman of the executive committee Mr Willie Pieterse would become the National Party candidate in the coming by-election.

Nationalists feel that they are being steamrollered by their leaders who decided among themselves who was to take over from Mr Van den Berg. "This is a democratic country and each one should have a chance to nominate a candidate," they said.

Mr Van den Berg won the seat as MPC in the 1978 general election when Mrs Scholtz became MP.

Only a week ago executive members were notified of the emergency meeting.

Mr Van den Berg, at last week's Provincial Council session in Pretoria, officially notified the executive members of his resignation. He said that he had been appointed in a very senior post at Sanlam and that he would not be able to keep his seat as MPC.

"But Mr Van den Berg was obviously a very unhappy man," people said, describing the situation at the meeting. He informed the meeting he had discussions with Dr Andries Treurnicht about his problem prior to his resignation.

Nationalists were also told not to talk about Mr Van den Berg's resignation so that the NP could start organising for a by-election before other parties knew of the vacant MPC seat.

"Hard words were spoken at the meeting when it was claimed that Mrs Scholtz had had a telephone conversation with another Germiston MPC in which she had tipped Mr Pieterse to become the next Member of the Provincial Council for Germiston District.

Nationalists are very unhappy about the way things are being done and how friends were "pushing friends into senior posts".

CSO: 4700/810

MACASSAR MUSLIMS REJECT MANCOM 'AID' FOR MASJID SITE

Cape Town MUSLIM NEWS in English 29 Jan 82 pp 1, 20

[Text]

The Muslim community in Macassar find themselves without a masjid because they refuse to negotiate through the local management committee in order to secure a site.

Mr Abdul Cupido, chairman of the Macassar Islamic Society, clearly spelt out the organisation's stance towards management committees: 'The Divisional Council of Stellenbosch wanted us to apply for a site through the management committee but we refused. The very idea (of working with the management committee) cuts right across our Islamic beliefs; never mind the practicalities. The reason for our stand is that we, as Muslims, refuse to collaborate with those who side with the oppressors.'

Predicting the destiny of the management committee system and those who work it, Mr Cupido said, 'Their position is precarious; it is only a matter of time for their eventual eradication from society.'

Mr Cupido traced the background to the struggle for a masjid site in an interview with MUSLIM NEWS: 'Over the past six years we made several applications for a site to build a masjid but to no avail. The Divisional Council indicated in 1979 — by means of correspondence — that we have to wait until section five of Macassar is completed. And this could mean, according to them, another three years.'

In the meanwhile the Muslim community, comprising 120 families, has taken measures to provide itself with an Islamic educational programme. They have organised daily madressa classes in the local primary school and a jamaat khana provides salaah facilities as well as Sunday morning madressa classes.

However, Mr Cupido said that the community was not satified with these temporary measures; they intend continuing with the struggle to obtain a site.

'We have no intentions to approach or request assistance from bodies collaborating with the oppressors. But I am puzzled why the Muslims must struggle to obtain only one site for a masjid while, on the other hand, there are twelve established churches in Macassar.'

He added, 'We have nothing against the churches but partiality of this kind cannot be condoned. The government has uprooted us from our birth-place where we enjoyed all the necessary facilities, and they dumped us here, where we experience all kinds of difficulties. The Council must realise that it is a right to have a masjid in the community and not a privilege.'

CSO: 4700/811

MUSLIM SUPPORT FOR URBAN FOUNDATION HIT

Cape Town MUSLIM NEWS in English 29 Jan 82 p 2

[Article in "Moving Finger" column: "Apolitical Politicians"]

[Text] 'And what cause have ye that ye should not spend in the Cause of Allah? — for to Allah belongs the heritage of the heavens and the earth. Not equal amongst you are those who spent (freely) and fought, before the Victory, (with those who did so later). Those are higher in rank than those who spent (freely) and fought afterwards. But to all has Allah promised a goodly (reward). And Allah is well acquainted with all that ye do.' (Qur'an 57:10)

Fund-raising, loans, sponsors and grants will always remain a controversial area in man's life as long as no clarity is given on it. The Qur'an, however, furnishes very clear instructions and guidelines on these matters. For the Muslim there is no reason or cause for the confusion or doubt. This also makes it totally unnecessary for Muslims to reach out to corrupt financial institutions and resources for aid.

It is a disgusting indictment of the state of the Ummah in this country that we have to 'beg, borrow or steal' or resort to 'lesser evils' in order to obtain funds for the education of the oppressed people. It is also ironical that these financial institutions and pseudo-philanthropic bodies know everything about the constitutions and officials of Muslim organisations long before the Ummah is aware of them. In other words the enemies of Islam have direct and free access to the affairs of the Muslims while Muslims are kept in the dark.

And in South Africa, where the toss up is between Zionist, Broederbond or Western Imperialist connections it is indeed a dicy game to play with the future of the Ummah.

It is impossible that the oppressors and exploiters will finance those bodies which will bring about the donors' downfall. The people in this world who are the least naïve about finance and manipulation are the oppressors and exploiters. When they give financial backing to projects launched by the oppressed people they are not doing it for any altruistic motive; they are definitely doing it for some ulterior motive.

'Do not kill the goose that lays the golden egg,' aptly describes the attitude of those who receive funds from corrupt and corrupted sources. And by taking money from them we don't weaken them but strengthen them and weaken ourselves.

The law of cause and effect also applies to this serious question: those who accept funds from doubtful sources cannot achieve the same effect as those who do not use funds from doubtful sources.

Others again organize lavish dinners at ten rand per head in order to raise funds; a variation of this is an 'eastern evening' at five rand per head. Surely even a fool can see that money donated under these circumstances is in fact no donation at all — for something was received in return. And some time ago even gambling stalls were erected at 'trade fairs' to raise funds.

Compare these situations with one of the most beautiful and most remarkable events in histroy when Rasulullah (SAW) entered Medina. The Muhajirs were welcomed with open arms by the Ansar. This was an easy task because they had accepted the same leadership under the same ideology.

And then for the first time in history there was redistribution of wealth without a drop of blood being shed.

The Ansar of Medina shared equally whatever they had with the destitute Muhajir from Makka whose possessions had been confiscated when they migrated.

There is no sense in reading this history if it does not fire our imaginations, if it doesn't move us, incite us to emulate these deeds. And it is precisely because we have not understood the spirit of Islam correctly that we believe Islam is a pseudonym for capitalism and we resort to Urban Foundation, eastern evenings and 'fun-raising' efforts to finance our projects.

Moreover the Qur'an is clear and emphatic on the principles to be employed in serving the interests of mankind:

'They ask thee how much they are to spend; Say: "What is beyond your needs." ' (Qur'an 2:219)

'By no means shall ye attain righteousness unless ye give (freely) of that which ye love; and whatever ye give, of a truth Allah knoweth it well.' (Qur'an 3:92)

The Muslims in this part of the world collectively possess more than sufficient material wealth to take care of our most urgent projects. Some Muslims even boast that they own two cars and two or more houses; IS IT NOT POSSIBLE TO FOLLOW THE EXAMPLE OF THE ANSAR AND DONATE ONE CAR AND ONE HOUSE FOR THE EDUCATION OF THE PRESENT GENERATION?

'O ye who believe! spend out of (the bounties) We have provided for you, before the Day comes when no bargaining (will avail), nor friendships nor intercession. Those who reject faith — they are the wrong doers.' (Qur'an 2:254)

If the Muslims did this then not a single one of us would have to go begging for assistance.

'APOLITICAL'

Now what is astounding is that Muslims actually rally to the defence of Urban Foundation instead of rallying to the defence of the Ummah. And one of the escape mechanisms employed is to argue that UF is 'apolitical'!

Now the term 'apolitical' means unconcerned with politics or detached from politics.

How is it at all possible for any event in this country not to be connected to a political issue? Even the existence of separate toilets for blacks and whites at the same venue is a POLITICAL ISSUE.

Apartheid contaminates and poisons all facets of our existence. Is this again an attempt to remain non-controversial? And the excuse is to be APOLITICAL? The next thing we'll hear will be that the Broederbond is apolitical. It certainly didn't require much thinking for one of our thinkers to realize that in South Africa one must be prepared to meet absurdity at every corner!

It is in situations like these that we appreciate the Qur'anic wisdom contained in:

'Hold to forgiveness; command what is right; BUT TURN AWAY FROM THE IGNORANT' (Qur'an 7:199)

'And when they hear vain talk they turn away therefrom and say: "To us our deeds and to you yours. PEACE BE TO YOU: WE SEEK NOT THE IGNORANT" ' (Qur'an 28: 55)

We are actually also amazed at ourselves for still being shocked by the expression of such 'apolitical' sentiments by Muslims because many of them have been leaning over backwards to prove to the oppressors that they are apolitical (and possibly also amoral).

What must be clear to them, as well as to us, is that the oppressed people will not allow UFOs to move in and out amongst our ranks. They must identify themselves.

It is a truism that the fruit lies in the seed. If you sow Urban Foundation seeds then Urban Foundation fruits will blossom.

It is also a truism that the birds of a feather will flock together:

'O ye who believe! Take not for friends Unbelievers rather than Believers: DO YE WISH TO OFFER ALLAH AN OPEN PROOF AGAINST YOURSELVES?' (Qur'an 4:144)

If we have the same ideals then we are attracted to one another. And our leadership must personify the ideals of Muslims, that is, of Islam. We know a Muslim's ideals by HIS ACTIONS and in no other way.

To say therefore that the UF is an apolitical body (and therefore OK) is to suggest that Muslims are also apolitical. But this is a blatant untruth. Are we in this instance also required to believe that the 'lesser evil' is to be apolitical because the greater evil is to be political!

Our immediate task is to educate ourselves to face reality in South Africa; and by doing this we will no longer mistake quacks and charlatans for sages; and we will no longer become adjusted to maladjustment.

Please note that it is impossible for Shariah to be contained within the legal parameters of apartheid; and it is also impossible for the legal parameters of apartheid to function within the legal parameters of Shariah. Shariah IS universal, apartheid can never be universalized.

There is no such creature in Islam as an 'apolitical Muslim'. Politics legislates as to what we are allowed to do and what we are not allowed to do. And the entire Message of Islam spells out what we are allowed to do and what we are not allowed to do:

'Ye are the best of peoples, evolved for mankind, ENJOINING WHAT IS RIGHT, FORBIDDING WHAT IS WRONG, and believing in Allah.' (Qur'an 3:110)

Since when is apartheid (vis a vis UF) right and Islam wrong!

What need is there actually for Muslims to attach themselves to an 'apolitical' body like Urban Foundation?

'Yea, to those who take for friends Unbelievers rather than Believers: IS IT HONOUR THEY SEEK AMONG? NAY, — ALL HONOUR IS WITH ALLAH' (Qur'an 4:139)

The truth of the matter, however, is that the UF is not apolitical but simply the diplomatic arm of the oppressors and exploiters. But it is the diplomacy of cactus plants. A sane person, especially a Muslim, can therefore identify it blindfolded.

'Nor be like those who say, "We hear, but listen not:" For the worst of beasts in the sight of Allah are the deaf and the dumb, — those who understand not.'

CSO: 4700/811

PFP POLICIES, FINANCIERS, VICTORY CLAIMS HIT

Costly Campaign

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 22 Feb 82 p 6

[Editorial: "Wouldn't It Be Nice..."]

[Text] WE THOUGHT it would be worthwhile reviving an old column, "Wouldn't it be nice", so here goes:

Wouldn't it be nice

If the Progressive Federal Party spent more time explaining its policy of throwing open public amenities like swimming pools and recreation centres to all races rather than spend such a lot of time, money, and effort getting candidates of other parties disqualified.

★ ★ ★ ★

If the PFP could tell us who is doing all the checking up on addresses (and in one case marital problems) of its opponents and whether winning by disqualification rather than by the force of policy and argument is the better thing to do.

★ ★ ★ ★

If the PFP could tell us who is financing its costly campaign to snatch control of Johannesburg, Sandton and Randburg, since a list of its financial backers would be as interesting as the list of its candidates.

If the PFP told the voters of Hillbrow, Yeoville and Berea exactly what its integration plans are (opening up the Yeoville and Hillbrow pools and turning Hillbrow into a mixed area) instead of confusing the voters, especially the elderly, with smarmy talk of how PFP candidates look after them and what luverly times they will have if only the PFP controlled the council.

★ ★ ★ ★

If the ruling Nationalist-Independent Ratepayers' Action group realised that the big monied interests which support the PFP have poured in huge sums of money in the hope, and intention, of winning control of Johannesburg, the commercial hub of South Africa,

★ ★ ★ ★

If the anti-PFP, anti-integration, anti-big monied-control-of-Johannesburg forces appreciated that the only way to counter the PFP's well-oiled (and well-heeled) organisation is by throwing in all the resources they have now, before it is too late, as their supporters are apathetic, confused, and unaware of what PFP control would mean to them — and the city.

★ ★ ★ ★

If, in the meantime, PFP supporters prayed, as they do in the national elections, that the ruling party or alliance remains in office, since the effect on race relations (White-White as well as Black-White) will be awful if the PFP came to power.

Boasting of Victories

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 23 Feb 82 p 6

[Editorial: "The Realities"]

[Text] WITH the PFP already boasting of victory in Johannesburg, Sandton and Randburg, you'd think that its mouthpieces would be less hysterical about the country's future.

After all, control of the three councils would, in theory, give the PFP a breakthrough, which the party would regard as a signal to the rest of the country that Whites are now prepared to accept an integrated society.

The trouble with this theory, of course, is that the percentage of Whites who will take the trouble to poll in a civic election is unlikely to be high enough to be regarded as a true mandate for radical change.

The PFP will tamper with the status quo on public amenities at its peril.

But there is more to the hysteria than the civic elections.

The Progfeds know, as well as anyone else does, that the PFP has no chance of taking the rest of the country with it, even if it won Johannesburg, Sandton and Randburg.

They know that Dr Van Zyl Slabbert, the Leader of the Opposition, is as far away from power as any other PFP leader before him.

Power rests in the hands of the National Party and the PFP poses no threat to it.

Hence, the desperate calls of the PFP media for a new Tielman Roos or faction to come forward — or for the real leader of the NP to make himself known.

Which is somewhat naive, since there is no Tielman Roos or faction in the wings and the real leader of the NP remains the Prime Minister.

Only the Herstigte Nasionale Party poses any — and limited, for the present — threat to the ruling party, because it reflects the feelings and ideas of traditionalist Afrikaners and draws its support mainly from disaffected Nationalists.

The only other possibility that can bring about any change in the present political set-up is a break within the National Party itself.

There is a great deal of misgiving in the party's Right wing about proposals that might come from the President's Council.

There is talk of bringing the Coloureds and Indians into one Parliament, with the Whites, with three chambers, each representing one of the sections, and with a Council of Cabinets as a consultative body.

There is talk even of having the Coloureds back on a common roll, though this is the idea least likely to be accepted by the majority of the ruling party.

Whatever the proposals, they are not going to please the party's Right wing, which wants no diminution of White sovereignty under any circumstances.

The anxiety that this section of the party feels is reflected in the latest incident involving Dr Andries Treurnicht, the Transvaal leader.

He has objected to an editorial in the National Party's information sheet, NAT 80's, dealing with the place of the Indians and Coloureds in the new constitutional dispensation.

The editorial said that "it was logical that there could not be more than one government in a country."

Dr Treurnicht is reported to have objected to this because he interpreted it to mean that Coloured and Indian Ministers could co-govern in such a system.

Dr Treurnicht told The Citizen:

"This is a very sensitive matter. It touches on the very nerve of our politics, and I feel it is something that will have to be qualified very carefully."

Perhaps the constitutional proposals will bring about a split in the NP; perhaps they will not. The party has had an ability in the past couple of years to patch up its differences — and there is certainly nobody in it who wants to be the cause of a break that might finish off the party as it is.

Meanwhile, the PFP and its Press need not place their hopes on a new Tielman Roos, nor need they try to egg the party on to produce its "real leader".

The ball is still very much in Mr PW Botha's court — and it is he who will have to play it.

We hope he manages to score an ace, in terms of a constitutional shot that will have everyone applauding and satisfied.

CSO: 4700/810

MALAN: TERRORISM ON THE INCREASE

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 23 Feb 82 p 11

[Article by Chris Steyn]

[Text] TERRORIST incidents in South Africa during the first half of 1981 increased 200 percent over the last half of the previous year, the Minister of Defence, General Magnus Malan, said yesterday.

Opening the 15th national congress of the South African National Fire Services Institute in Alberton, he said last year had also seen the political, economic and social initiatives of the Government move "significantly closer to a goal".

"Politically, the vision of a Southern African constellation of states, within which the peoples of the region will share responsibility for maters of mutual concern, took on a more clearly defined shape with the independence of the Ciskei nation and the special agreements associated with independence", Gen Malan said.

[text missing]

make recommendations for a new political dispensation for the White, Coloured and Asian communities.

"The initiatives of the Government with regard to the social advance of all communities will allow the demands of White and Black nationalism to come to terms with each other and to live side by side in harmony, with each developing its own potential and yet merging the mutual benefit of all".

He warned of a renewed onslaught on the doorstep of the Republic, because of its stability which frustrated the ambitions of Soviet imperialism and expansionism in the Southern African context.

"This evil threat to our country requires a carefully planned counter-strategy and the introduction of new military initiatives", Gen Malan said.

He called for "a higher degree of sacrifice and a greater commitment" from all the country's citizens to ensure that the "burden of defence is shared fairly be all".

He said he regretted that existing legislation and voluntary commitments had not achieved the correct balance to meet the latest challenge to the country's survival.

"Its falls to your legislators, therefore, to introduce new measures that will extend military service and place a more equitable burden on all citizens".

He said it would not be fair to extend the period of initial military training at this stage, but rather to call on the Citizen Force, commandos and the reserve to make "a more equitable contribution to our national effort".

CSO: 4700/810

MUSLIM EDUCATIONAL COUNCIL ESTABLISHED

Cape Town MUSLIM NEWS in English 12 Feb 82 pp 1, 20

[Text] Following an historic meeting in Bridgetown two weeks ago, hopes are high that madressa education in the Western Cape will at last be placed on a more organised footing and that a uniform syllabus will be formulated.

The meeting was convened by the South African National Zakah Fund and was held at its offices at the Bridgetown Masjid on Saturday January 30. The two organisations invited to the meeting were the Majlisush Shura Al Islami and the Co-Ordinating Council of Madaris. The meeting culminated with the formation of the Muslim Educational Council.

The Zakaah Fund initiated the meeting because of the concern they felt over the appalling wages paid to the Madressa teachers. The Co-Ordinating Council was invited because the large majority of the madaris in the Western Cape — a total of 44 — are affiliated to it. The Majlisush Shura has long been active in madressa education and it too has liaison with a number of madaris. Both organizations have a syllabus which is implemented by madaris linked to the two bodies.

Delegates attending the meeting in Bridgetown resolved that the newly formed Muslim Educational Council 'shall endeavour to formulate and structure a uniform syllabus for all the affiliated madaris.'

The other historic decision taken was that a fund be established for the implementation of the syllabus and for the needs of Muslim education in general. This decision was taken in view of the critical need to pay madressa teachers a salary in keeping with the vital duty which they have to perform.

A statement by an interim committee of the Muslim Educational Council declared that 'the future of the Muslims in this troubled part of Africa is at stake. Our only guarantee for a strong, committed future generation is to ensure that our madaris are properly financed and adhere to a uniform method and content of teaching.'

A spokesman for the Zakah Fund said that there was definitely a need for a madressa fund as there were many madaris that were forced to close down because teachers could not be paid. While the Zakah Fund would be pledging a sum, to be paid on a monthly basis into the Muslim Educational Council, the spokesman added that 'there is money in the Muslim community. The need is to channel that money properly.'

He also expressed his hope that the unified syllabus would get off the ground soon, as a first step. The long-term aim, he said, was not only to provide the salary for the teacher and a syllabus for him to follow, but 'to look after the total madressa — providing text-books, equipment — and to establish new madaris.'

The Majlisush Shura spokesman said that 'a pressing problem regarding madressa education is the lack of suitably qualified teachers.

What we offer in salary at present is not enough to induce suitably qualified teachers to come forward. With the establishment of the Council this need would be seen to.

'The other more important factor is that with the Muslim Educational Council getting off the ground a goal, which we have been aiming for for years, will be reached: one unified madressa system for the Western Cape, at least.'

The Co-Ordinating Council of Madaris commented:

'The formation of the Muslim Educational Council is a great step forward for the Muslims. We pledge our whole-hearted support to the Council because it fulfills an essential need: the systemisation of madressa education.

'The need to organise madressa education is essential becasue the madressa has potentially the most powerful influence in shaping the destiny of the Muslims.

'We are confident that with the formation of the Muslim Educational Council all the madaris will realise their full potential.'

APPEAL TO UMMAH

The Muslim Educational Council 'calls upon the Muslim Ummah to swell the coffers of this fund for this is the best investment that we can make for the future of Islam in this country.'

All contributions may be sent to the Muslim Educational Council, c/o SA National Zakah Fund, PO Box 241, GATESVILLE 7764 or may be handed in at the offices at the Bridgetown Masjid in Cornflower Road. All cheques and postal orders to be in favour of the SANZAF.

More details of the Muslim Educational Council may also be obtained from the Zakah Fund offices. The telephone number is 638-6228.

CSO: 4700/811

REACTION TO STEYN COMMISSION REPORT GIVEN

Cape Town MUSLIM NEWS in English 12 Feb 82 p 2

[Article in the "Moving Finger" column: "Steyn: Truthless & Ruthless"]

[Text] 'And he who brings the truth and he who confirms (and supports) it — such are the men who do right. (Qur'an 39:33)

The Nazis were of the opinion that if you repeat a lie often enough, you will come to believe it yourself. This is a form of ideological hypnosis which is becoming prevalent in this country.

In this country the regime has decreed that the official version of history is the correct one, official terminology is the correct terminology; and the official policy is the correct policy. There can be no other. The state is your 'lord' most high!

Whenever the oppressors think that they have answers to certain problems they attempt to force their opinions down our throats no matter how repulsive they may be to the victims of such 'generosity'. Arising from this we have the twin enemies of civilization: indoctrination and dictatorship.

The present storm of protest against a state-controlled press has raised three important questions:

(i) what is the value of truth?

(ii) what is freedom of thought and speech?

(iii) what is the purpose of law?

From our point of view compulsive lying is a form of psychopathology; that is, a serious disorder of the mind. Yet there are many who have developed falsification into a fine art; and some even earn their living from this 'art'.

After the debacle of the department of 'misinformation' we are now threatened with having every report pre-digested and sanitized before we can read or report it. In other words, a government-appointed clique must put their stamp of approval on it.

Truth is the catalyst uniting man to man; and mind to mind. In this respect mind has been conceived, designed, created and evolved as a receptacle of truth.

A sane social order cannot develop on the basis of lies, distortions, ignorance and indoctrination because this is the nourishment of oppression, exploitation and injustice. And these are the characteristics of the abnormal and insane society. How is it possible for the insane to sit in judgement on the sane?

The oppressors attempts to suppress the truth about conditions in this country comes as no surprise. This is exactly the type of action that even a mediocre student of history could forsee.

What does surprise us is the fact that some people actually believe that these measures are going to prolong the life of this government and the life-style of apartheid. On the contrary, the oppressors are digging their own graves because the white electorate will be ill-informed about their own country.

The matter of truth and falsehood is not an internal and domestic affair — it is a universal and supra-national affair. Everything that affects the welfare and the destiny of humankind is our business. We are neutral in nothing which degrades, dehumanises, brutalises and terrorises the oppressed people.

To remain silent on this important issue — the right and freedom to seek the truth — or even worse, to actually support the oppressor in silencing the press is an act of self-destruction.

'Truth has (now) arrived, and falsehood perished, for falsehood is (by its nature) bound to perish' (Qur'an 17:81)

'Say: the truth has arrived, and falsehood neither creates anything new, nor restores anything' (Qur'an 34:49)

The power of truth is greater than the power of the state. And this it tacitly acknowledges when it realises that lies can only be propped up with other faleshoods. And not even this makes the original faleshood valid.

Some of the original faleshoods are:

(i) that whites are superior to blacks;

(ii) that SA is a democracy;

(iii) that the protection of the privileges of the whites is synonomous with the security of the state.

When faleshoods fail to prop up other other faleshoods then the next step follows: lies must now be protected by and with violence. And violence which has been legalised is always more respectable than violence which has not been legalised. This was the reason for the Steyn Commission.

Now if humankind had been intimidated by the threat of violence or the actual use of violence then very few truths would have been propagated. But humankind is not easily intimidated and Islam makes it obligatory for those who say that they are Muslims not to be intimidated. And this command is given in the words:

'And cover not truth with falsehood nor conceal the truth when ye know (what it is)' (Qur'an 2:42)

The whole of the oppressed people are under obligation to speak the truth even in the face of persecution.

We dare not shirk this responsibility!

To speak a word of truth is to radically transform the world: and the oppressors are the main enemies of this transformation. Is it then any wonder that Rasulullah (SAW) said:

'The greatest Jihad is a word of justice said before an unjust ruler'.

The destruction of the freedom of the press is in reality the destruction of the freedom to seek and disseminate the truth.

Our sanity is dependant on truth for the human mind has a positive affinity for truth. Moreover, the only sure and infallible basis for personal and collective action is truth.

'Apart from Truth what remains but error' (Qur'an 10:32)

'But most of them follow nothing but fancy; truly fancy can be of no avail against truth' (Qur'an 10:36) Wilful distortion of truth or concealment of truth also impairs correct judgement. No! A judgement cannot be given on falsehoods or on false evidence. And this is exactly what the Steyn Commission has done.

The acknowledgement of truth stems from man's freedom to do so. It also follows that it stems from his freedom to reject falsehood.

'Let there be no compulsion in Deen. Truth stands out clear from Error' (Qur'an 2:256)

This verse means that our Creator does not compel us to accept the Message of Islam. Now if my CREATOR does not compel me to Believe in Him who is man to compel me? By implication no tyrant, no dictator, no autocrat, no ruling clique, no army, no bureaucracy, no monarchy, priest or beast is going to compel me to believe what they expect me to believe.

The freedom to choose is therefore the inalienable right of every sane adult in the community. And it is the right of every child to be assisted and educated to make the right choices. We do not make the choices for them, but we help them to eventually help themselves.

In life there is no such concept as no choice because even the refusal to choose is a choice.

If we associate with what is unjust, and support, propagate and defend what is unjust then surely we must accept the consequences of such a choice.

If, on the other hand, we associate with what is just, and support, propagate and defend what is just we must accept the consequences of this choice.

As Muslims we associate ourselves with those who associate with Truth, Justice and Peace. And likewise we dissociate ourselves from those who associate themselves with exploiters, oppressors, racists, multi-racists, tyrants, dictators and liars.

'Of those We have created are people who direct (others) with truth and dispense justice therewith' (Qur'an 7:181)

The ayah makes it abundantly clear that to seek justice outside the context of truth is a vain search. Truth is therefore the basis for justice. And falsehood, especially government-approved and government-controlled falsehood, is the basis of injustice.

This is not the time to appeal for diplomacy but sincerity because the oppressors have now officially declared that falsehood is their principle and violence their method.

The avalanche of assaults against the oppressed people is daily being intensified; but prejudice, indoctrination, censorship, suppression, bannings, intimidation, imprisonment and not even death is going to deter us. For to live a lie is to have died a spiritual death long before our physical demise.

Truth is a necessity; freedom to choose is our right. And there can be no law and order without justice, for injustice is already a state of lawlessness and disorder.

The Steyn Commission of Enquiry into the Mass Media has successfully awakened us to the fact the government wants us to believe in illusions; it wants to prohibit critical thinking and thereby impoverish our intelligence.

We will not be sentenced to a living death for everything is subject to the criterion of truth:

'Say: Travel through the earth and see what was the end of those who rejected Truth' (Qur'an 6:11)

CSO: 4700/811

PM BOTHA ON POWER-SHARING

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 23 Feb 82 pp 1, 2

[Article by Jaap Theron]

[Text] "The concept of deliberation and co-responsibility is in our view (that of the National Party) indeed a form of healthy power-sharing," the Prime Minister, Mr P W Botha, said yesterday.

Mr Botha, who issued the statement in the wake of controversial Press speculation that Dr Andries Treurnicht, Minister of State Administration and Transvaal NP leader, had reservations about the term "one government for South Africa", made it absolutely clear that the concept of "healthy power-sharing did not mean the violation of the principle of self-determination".

"For that reason we (the NP) prefer the term co-responsibility," Mr Botha said.

The Prime Minister's statement found its way among Nat parliamentarians and may soon lead to in-depth discussions, particularly about what he meant by the term "healthy power-sharing".

Some Nats fully agreed with Mr Botha's point of view. Some preferred not to comment before they had studied the statement, while others indicated to THE CITIZEN they weren't prepared to accept the term power-sharing "no matter in what context it was put".

Dr Treurnicht was not prepared to talk to THE CITIZEN at all on the issue last night.

The whole debate started when Dr Jan Grobler, the NP's chief information officer and MP for Brits, said in an editorial of Nat 80s, the official NP mouthpiece, "it was natural there could only be one government in a country".

Dr Grobler's view, which is a reflection of the Prime Minister's, was unfortunately interpreted in certain circles as a possible reference to either a unitarian system or to power-sharing.

The Prime Minister however, clarified the whole matter in his statement which was:

"During the no-confidence debate I have again expressed myself against a system of one-man-one-vote under the Westminster system.

"I pointed out that it was not possible to institute separate instruments for Whites and Coloureds in the same country without joint deliberation on the first, second and third levels of government.

"I also stated that the self-determination of the Whites remained the Government's point of view.

"But at the same time I said that self-determination was a relative term and not an absolute one.

"To my mind too many spooks are being chasen up regarding the term 'power-sharing'.

"The Progressive Federal Party and we do not think in the same terms regarding the word 'power-sharing'.

"They (the PFP) are aiming for a untitarian state and we are not.

"But in our view the term deliberation/consultation and co-responsibility is indeed a form of healthy power-sharing, without violating the principle of self-determination.

"Therefore we (the NP) prefer the term co-responsibility.

"I have pointed out that joint services would have to be rendered to the White and Coloured population groups which would necessitate joint deliberation and (joint) decisions.

"Consequently I have declared that a sovereign parliament could-not be created for Coloureds.

"There can only be one central power of government in a country although there could be several governmental instruments.

"This principle was also laid down in the 1977 proposals of the National Party. For this reason there was at the time already clarity regarding one executive State President and a joint council of Cabinets chaired by the State President.

"From this it naturally follows that the Treasury and financial control should eventually be vested in a central power.

"Regarding the controversial article of the NP's chief information officer, I want to point out that the article should be read in the light of my explanation in Parliament. The chief information officer consults me regularly.

"We are waiting for the Presidents Council's proposals regarding a future constitutional system.

"When those proposals have been made the Government and the National Party will deliberate them meaningfully.

"I intend to lead the discussions regarding such proposals myself at each of the provincial congresses.

"I have already indicated that a referendum or referendums regarding the matter is a strong possibility," Mr Botha said.

Nat 80s Standpoint Causes Row

CAPE TOWN. — The reservations Dr Andries Treurnicht, Transvaal National Party leader, apparently has with the official NP mouthpiece, Nat 80's standpoint "that there could only be one government" yesterday led to a brief flare-up during the mini-budget debate in Parliament.

Mr Harry Schwarz (PFP, Yeoville) after completing his financial speech, referred to this controversy about the use, in Nat 80s of those words and asked the Prime Minister whether he agreed with that statement.

The Prime Minister: "Of course!"

Mr Schwarz said he was very happy to hear that, in fact, was overjoyed to hear it.

At this stage, interjections flew across the floor of the House from all sides.

Mr Schwarz: "The tragedy is that the Minister of State Administration, (Dr Treurnicht), does not. The tragedy is that it is reported that Dr Treurnicht objects to this.

"The question I therefore have to put to the Prime Minister is: 'How long is he going to allow this brake to be applied to the wheel of progress in South Africa by Dr Treurnicht.' " he said.

Apart from this incident in the Assembly, Dr Treurnicht's call for a clear qualification about what exactly was meant with one government for Whites, Coloured and Indians and his simultaneous warning that his issue touches upon one of the most sensitive nerves in our politics, was yesterday the main reason behind the scenes for the topic of discussion in political circles.

It is expected that the matter will agin be discussed by the Cabinet today and possibly also finally sorted out in the NP caucus tomorrow.

The Government cannot afford to allow a split in its ranks on a sensitive issue such as this shortly before the President's Council is expected to make a major recommendation on this matter.

CSO: 4700/810

MUSLIMS URGED TO REJECT URBAN FOUNDATION

Cape Town MUSLIM NEWS in English 29 Jan 82 pp 1, 17, 13

[Text] Muslims are becoming increasingly impatient with individuals and organisations that claim to represent them while, at the same time, collaborating with organisations which do not act in the interests of the masses.

This became evident when MUSLIM NEWS approached a number of organisations for their comments after it had been disclosed that Dr H M Kotwal, chairman of Muslim Assembly and Cape vice-president of the Islamic Council of South Africa, is a member of the Cape Regional Board of the Urban Foundation.

In a strongly worded statement Qibla, the Muslim mass movement, condemned involvement with Urban Foundation and others of its ilk:

'Apartheid has found strange bed-fellows in the form of certain Muslims and Muslim organisations. As a result monies donated by liquor outlets and other sources outlawed by Islam have been sanctified by these social chameleons.

'And yet some of them have the audacity to ask "which source of jurisprudence do our critics use to declare Urban Foundation money haraam (unlawful)"!

'In other words ribah (usury) is no longer considered haraam; neither are profits accrued from liquour outlets, etc considered haraam.

'And the very people who contribute to the Urban Foundation coffers are the biggest employers of, and therefore the worst exploiters of, the labour of the oppressed people. The present spate of labour unrest and indiscriminate detention of trade unionists is sufficient evidence.

'The oppressed people can therefore find no joy in these handouts which they sweated for in any case.

'It is self-evident that the interests of oppressors and the oppressed are neither similar nor the same. The Carlton and Good Hope conferences have indicated that the government and big business (that is, racism and capitalism) are the twin enemies confronting the oppressed people. For after all, the economy is white-owned and white-controlled.

'The oppressed people will not be palmed off by hand-outs from the oppressors and their handmaidens. Neither will window-dressing, tokenism and reformism eradicate statutory racism and legalized economic pauperism.

'The Muslims, as a supra-national anti-racist ideological unit can under no circumstances collaborate in any way to perpetuate the iniquities of racism and capitalism.'

The Muslim Youth Movement of South Africa echoed Qibla's sentiments and called on Urban Foundation to confront the real problems facing the people instead of trying to effect cosmetic changes. The MYM spokesman called on those companies contributing to the Urban Foundation to pay their workers better wages instead of spending thousands of rands just to try and improve their image.

In a telephonic interview Dr Kotwal did not deny that he was a member of the Cape Regional Board of the Urban Foundation. He was invited to serve on the board by Justice Jan Steyn and after studying the aims and objectives he accepted the position as he felt that Urban Foundation was a non-political organisation which provided assistance to mainly under-privileged people.

When told that the very people he worked with were responsible for the poor conditions of these 'under-privileged people', he said that he was not a politician and as a social worker would accept any assistance to help the community out of its present condition.

• MUSLIM NEWS approached Mr Ibrahim Bawa, the Secretary General of ICSA, for a comment. He referred us to advocate M A Bulbulia who said that he was not in a position to issue a statement on behalf of ICSA but would consider giving one as chairman of the Aligarh Old Boys Association and referred us to Dr R A M Saloojee for an ICSA statement. Attempts to contact Dr Saloojee were unsuccesful and advocate Bulbulia could not find the time to prepare a statement.

The Muslim Students Association was also approached for a comment but declined to do so. A spokesman said that he was very busy and had other priorities to attend to.

[page 13]

The uprisings which began in Soweto on June 1976 were a momentous occurence and marked the begining of another phase in the struggle of the oppressed in this country towards a society based on justice and equality for all.

Two aspects to emerge from these incidents were:

• Despite the propaganda and statements issued by the media and oppresive regime, the struggle of the masses towards liberation was stronger than ever and showed signs of intensifying. The school children received backing from parents, workers and many other organisations throughout the country.

• The people had made it clear that their opposition was not against inferior education only, but the whole system in this country. Beerhalls and Administration Board offices were spontaneously destroyed; these were tools used by the oppressor to suppress the masses and had to be destroyed to enable the struggle to continue more meaningfully.

The economic base of this system is heavily supported by large business corporations such as the Anglo-American Corporation and the Rembrandt Group. These companies thrive on legislation to accumulate enormous profits while most of their workers live in impoverished conditions and suffer many hardships.

The unrests, coupled with the rejection of the existing system in this country, did not auger well for the future interests of these companies. A change in government — whether now or later — could mean that they would lose their present very comfortable positions and give in to demands often not in their interests.

In August 1976, two of South Africa's top businessmen, Harry Oppenheimer and Anton Rupert, met in a London hotel to discuss the nationwide uprisings. They decided to call a conference at the Carlton Hotel in November inviting mostly businessmen and a few token Blacks. It was at this conference that the organisation known as the Urban Foundation was conceived. It is important to note here that none of the real representatives of the people were consulted or invited to the conference during the creation of this organisation.

STABLE MIDDLE-CLASS

The objectives of the Urban Foundation can best be described in the words of Anton Rupert: 'We cannot survive unless we have a free market economy; a stable Black middle-class.'

It hopes to improve the quality of life of certain people by providing mainly financial assistance for better housing and other facilities such as clubs, sportsfields etc. This assistance is limited to the urban areas where it is hoped that this stable middle-class will emerge.

The Urban Foundation has had a very cordial relationship with the present regime since its inception when the then prime minister John Vorster personally approved the departure of Jan Steyn from his work as a judge to become its first executive director. Mr Steyn has since admitted that 'our work will be supplementary to that of the state.'

This supplementary role entails obtaining concessions from the authorities which will enable this middle-class to develop. An example of this is the much publicised 99-year lease scheme in some townships. Under present circumstances only certain blacks (the emerging middle-class) are in a position to take up this offer which is rejected by the majority who are well aware of its intentions.

The Urban Foundation does not advocate any fundamental change because the existing laws of this country suit the profit motive of its contributors admirably. Although laws such as group areas, influx control and pass laws are said to have an ideological base, they are a deliberate means to control the labour supply enabling big business in, collaboration with the authorities, to manoeuvre cheap labour to any area with minimum opposition or discontent from the workers. The resettlement of thousands of people in townships or locations — which are really labour reserves — complements the interests of these companies and enables them to maximise profits by drawing on the vast pools of labour available. The deprived and very poor conditions in these areas are a clear indication that the people are there as a result of an inhumane policy known as apartheid and to serve the interests of those who collaborate with the apartheid regime.

SPLIT THE OPPRESSED

By establishing a substantial black middle-class the Urban Foundation hopes to achieve a number of goals.

• A strong black middle-class must be nutured to have different interests from those of the masses. This will create a split in the unity of the oppressed which has shown signs of becoming much stronger in the future.

• Members of this group that manage to secure key positions in the community can act as a moderating influence on the people. This will help to prolong the life of the existing system and hopefully suppress antagonism towards big business.

• Most of the businessmen amongst the oppressed who receive aid from the Urban Foundation do not pose any threat to these big business corporations. The aid given is to reassure them about the existing free market system so that they will become apologists of the system and promote its ideals.

The maintainence of a free market system and the present oppressive conditions have a number of benefits and advantages for big business in this country. These include:

• The preservation of a system whereby the control of key sectors of the economy remain under the control of a few peole giving them power over the lives of millions of others.

• It ensures the continual accumulation of profits by these companies at the expense of the majority of the people. The right to make profits still remains more important than the right of people to have jobs and decent living conditions.

• The natural resources of the land can be exploited by a few large companies while the masses do not derive any benefits from these resources obtained from the land of their birth.

• It enables the control of labour by an oppressive minority to continue allowing the payment of low wages and restricting worker rights. Many of the companies that have contributed to the Urban Foundation have dismal record in labour relations and have proved to be the greatest stumbling blocks to democratically elected worker representatives.

The Urban Foundation cannot be looked at in isolation. The circumstances that resulted in its creation and its aims and objectives for the future have to be closely studied to understand its exact nature. While the struggle for liberation gains momentum steadily this organisation collaborates with an oppressive regime to perpetuate the existing system and safeguard the selfish interests of a few people.

The contributors to the Urban Foundation, ie big businessmen, are the people who dictate its policy. Their main objective is the maximisation of profits even at the expense of the welfare of the people. From the outset, they have made it very clear that their major objective is the continuation of the free enterprise system which ensures their enormous profits and keeps the economic power amongst them.

They have no intention of sharing the wealth of the country with the majority of the people, and since the political situation suits their needs they are in no hurry to see it change.

In the struggle for a free and just society where the interests of all the people are most important, there is no place for bodies like the Urban Foundation. Organisations that promote such policies should be treated with utmost caution and rejected with the contempt they deserve. All those who collaborate with such organisations should be shown up for what they really are and ostracised.

CSO: 4700/811

WITWATERSRAND STUDENTS REJECT STEYN REPORT

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 24 Feb 82 p 9

[Text] SOME 700 students rose to their feet in the University of the Witwatersrand's Great Hall yesterday in unanimous rejection of the Steyn Commission's findings.

The motion, put forward by the Progressive Student Association and accepted unanimously, was worded: "We call on the Government to reject the findings of the Steyn Commission that threaten the further erosion of Press freedom in South Africa."

"We believe the Government should instead busy itself with repealing the existing legislation which inhibits the free flow of news and information in South Africa."

Speakers at the lunchtime meeting were Mr Harvey Tyson (editor of the Star), Mr Rex Gibson (editor of the Rand Daily Mail), Mr Joe Latagoma (editor of the Sowetan), Mr Ross Hutton (editor of Wits Student), Mr John Lazar (president of the SA Students' Press Union), Miss Fleur de Villiers (assistant editor, Sunday Times), Mr Percy Qoboza (former editor of World and Post) and Mr Joel Mervis (former editor of the Sunday Times). ...

CSO: 4700/813

DR T STANDS FIRM AGAINST 'POWER SHARING'

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 24 Feb 82 pp 1, 2, 3

[Article by Jaap Theron]

[Text] THE behind-the-scenes dispute in the National Party on the question of one government for Whites and Coloureds and the Prime Minister's latest remarks that the party policy boils down to one of "healthy power sharing" is likely to come to a head during today's NP Parliamentary caucus.

The dispute now centres on the rigid standpoint of Dr Andries Treurnicht, Minister of State Administration, and Transvaal NP leader.

I understand he is still taking an unyielding stance that power sharing is not, and has never been, a principle or policy of the NP, while the Prime Minister, Mr P W Botha, has made an equally challenging statement on one government for South Africa with his latest standpoint that the NP policy boils down to one of "healthy power sharing."

The Cabinet apparently discussed the matter yesterday. But there were no signs after the meeting to give the impression that a split in NP ranks was imminent or that Dr Treurnicht has been repudiated, or stands to be removed from his position.

Rift talk

Top Nats also do not expect a split in their ranks because of the "one government and healthy power sharing" issue.

But rank-and-file Nat MPs were not so sure about whether this was not the issue that was more likely than any other in recent years that could cause a smaller or larger rift in the party ranks.

Certain verligte circles thought that this was an opportune issue to use as an excuse to get rid of certain verkramptes in the party.

Waiting

At the same time, some conservative Nats told The Citizen "that there was no way they could accept any form of power sharing."

They indicated that they would make a final choice once the proposals of the President's Council was available.

"I have the impression that some of Dr Treurnicht's close friends are putting pressure on him 'to take up a public standpoint on the matter' ".

But, when approached, Dr Treurnicht again refused to comment or make any statement on it.

Arguments in NP circles in favour of Mr P W Botha's stance is that "he has no other option but to spell out a policy that could be sold to Coloured leaders and which such leaders, in turn, would be able to sell to their supporters.

It is said, for example, that "power sharing in the sense of one parliament, with two or three chambers was acceptable to some of the present Coloured leaders and they have already indicated that they were prepared to sell it to their people".

But those who are apparently pressurising Dr Treurnicht "not to keep quiet this round" say that he would have to explain to his Transvaal head committee and congress why he did not defend decisions of "non-power sharing" which were taken by various congresses.

Others again accused the Prime Minister of "anticipating the President's Council's proposals with his public support for one government for White and Brown people" — contrary to his own request to MP's not to anticipate the envisaged proposals.

Nevertheless, a revealing light that emerged yesterday was open canvassing by certain groups "for candidates for a possible vacancy of the Transvaal NP leadership should Dr Treurnicht be fired, or should he withdraw himself from the political scene".

We Reject Botha's Power Sharing--AOF

ONE central government authority in a multi-racial unitary state as envisaged by the National Party "can be nothing else than power-sharing", the chairman of Action Own Future, Dr W J G Lubbe, said yesterday.

In a statement in Pretoria, he said this deprived every nation of its right to self-determination, which was its obvious right and condition for continued free existence.

"AOF rejects any form of power-sharing, rejects Mr P W Botha's view that the right to self-determination is relative, and stands for the unqualified self-determination of every population group in the RSA on its own national territory," Dr Lubbe said. —Sapa,

CSO: 4700/813

SAIC RECOGNIZED AS ONLY REPRESENTATIVE INDIAN BODY

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 23 Feb 82 p 11

[Article by Jaap Theron]

[Text] THE Government yesterday called upon Cabinet members, the Administrators of the provinces, MPC's departmental heads and statutory bodies under their jurisdiction, to recognise the executive committee of the first fully elected Indian Council "in matters affecting the Indian Communities in their constituencies."

When he made this request Mr Chris Heunis, Minister of Internal Affairs, who officiated at the opening of the first session of the newly elected Indian Council, said the Government would look upon the South African Indian Council Indian interests on a national level.

He said the deliberations and decisions taken by the council and the conducting of council affairs by individual members will therefore not only affect the lives and future of the Indian people of South Africa, but will also have a significant influence on the grand scenario of the constitutional development of South Africa as a whole.

"I cannot predict the council's future, but I can say that the very fact that the members of this council are here today, convinces me that htey are people who grasp the realities of our situation and who were prepared to stand up and be counted as protagonists of peaceful change at a time when, for them, it could not have been the popular course to take.

"With members such as these and with leaders that are in addition, prepared to put their hearts into their work, I feel that the council will grow stronger and become a significant force in our country," he said.

CSO: 4700/810

'NEWS' CONDEMNS DR NEIL AGGETT'S DEATH

Cape Town MUSLIM NEWS in English 12 Feb 82 p 20

[Editorial: "A Death in Detention"]

[Text] The methods of suppression, and the aims and objectives of oppressors throughout history have not changed. Therefore to learn of another death in detention, that of Dr Neil Aggett, doesn't really come as a surprise. It does register with shock because we are particularly sensitive to all human beings who have pledged their lives in the course of the struggle for justice.

As the shock subsides and anger takes over we ask the very pertinent question:

Is it still worthwhile to sit in the Minister's office and talk trifle or to beg him for an audience?

All our appeals, in the past, to reason, morality, humanity and sanity were answered with bullets and bannings, detentions and deaths in detention.

The oppressed people never initiate violence — this has been the monopoly of the oppressors. But the oppressor must realise that he does not live forever.

The most important question historians are asking is: how many more deaths will have to occur before the bubble bursts? How long can the patience of an oppressed people last?

Scrapping the relevant laws under which people are detained isn't sufficient; the system of apartheid must be scrapped as well as those responsible for its propagation and implementation.

Inhumane laws cannot be humanely applied; unjust laws cannot be justly executed; and the torturer cannot sympathise with the tortured. For this reason he prefers silence. But it is a defeaning silence.

If Dr Aggett didn't die as a result of torture then it is still the system which killed him. To remain unmoved by this tragedy is to admit that you have already died spiritually.

It wasn't a 'white detainee' who died; it was simply a detainee. There is no sense in perpetuating racism beyond the grave and, as Muslims, we think it is a grave insult to the memory of Dr Aggett to describe him as 'the first white detainee to die in detention'.

For any human being to die at the hands of the enemy or in the hands of the enemy, whilst expounding truth and justice, is to die a noble death.

Threats, torture and not even deaths in detention can silence the voices of those who oppose oppression. For us it is martyrdom or victory.

Verily We have created man into toil and struggle (Qur'an 90:4)

CSO: 4700/811

INFLATION RATE REPORTED AT 13.93 PERCENT

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 23 Feb 82 p 21

[Article by Daan De Kock]

[Text] THE inflation rate as measured by the consumer price index (CPI) rose slightly less in January this year compared to the rise last December.

The rise on a year-to-year basis, however, was slightly higher than during December.

Figures released by the Department of Statistics in Pretoria showed that the "all item price index" rose 0,60 percent in January this year, compared with a 0,70 percent rise in December.

This brings the rise on a year-to-year basis in January to 13,93 percent, compared with a year-to-year rise of 13,90 percent in last December.

It was generally felt that the inflation rate would slow down considerably this year, mainly because of the expected drop in consumer spending and the cooling off in the economy in general.

The announcement by the Minister of Finance, Mr Owen Horwood, earlier this month of an increase of one percent in general sales tax to 5 percent and the 10 percent surcharge on most imported goods will definately have the effect of accelerating the cost of living.

Unless the Minister introduces some subsidy on food in the main Budget this year, one can expect a substantial rise in its contribution to the general inflation rate.

Here again it will probably be the lower income groups that will be the hardest hit because the breadwinner normally has a bigger family to support.

Apart from the higher general sales tax, consumers will also have to pay more for imported products.

Here the motor industry is in a vulnerable position because quite a large proportion of precision parts, such as engines and gearboxes, are still imported.

It is estimated that the increases in GST and import duties will push up the cost of living by at least R1 500-million this year.

If the gold price keeps falling, as it is doing at the moment, it is not excluded that the Minister will be forced to re-introduce loan levies and/or increase taxes further to balance the books.

Apart from this it now seems inevitable that there will be a further hike in the price of petrol.

One of the reaons for this, is the deterioration of the rand against most of the other world currencies, mainly the dollar. All this will add further to the inflation rate.

Although it is probably too early to make any assessments, it seems that economists will have to adjust upwards earlier forecasts on the cost of living.

CSO: 4700/810

THREE PLEAD NOT GUILTY TO ANC CHARGES

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 24 Feb 82 p 14

[Text] DURBAN. — Three men pleaded not guilty to two counts of contravening the Terrorism Act in the Durban Regional Court yesterday.

Appearing before Mr H S van der Walt were Mr Fana George Sithole and Mr Jabulani Wilfred Ngcobo of Umlaze and Mr Titi Alocia Mtenyane of Soweto. No ages were given.

It is alleged that they were all members of the banned African National Congress.

On the first count it is alleged that between August 1980 and July last year, they conspired to form an organisation known as the Africa Youth Congress, based on the ANC and intended to further the aims of the ANC.

It is also alleged that they correspnded with members of the ANC in Botswana and on Robben Island and received or negotiated for funds from ANC supporters in Botswana and Durban.

A further allegation is that they assisted people to leave South Africa for military training.

The State alleges they obtained the plan of the Caltex Oil SA (Pty) Ltd installation at Island View, Durban, and obtained information regarding security arrangements at the installation.

They are also alleged to have obtained firearms and/or explosives.

On the second count it is alleged that between October 1980 and March 1981 they incited people to leave South Africa for military training to endanger the maintenance of law and order in the Republic.

Mr Sithole also pleaded not guilty to 15 counts of contravening the Internal Security Act by contravening the terms of his banning order. — Sapa.

CSO: 4700/813

TEACHER-GOVERNMENT ROW LOOMS

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 23 Feb 82 pp 1, 2

[Article by Keith Abendroth]

[Text] The Transvaalse Onderwysersvereniging has rejected aspects of the Human Sciences Research Council investigation into education--and in the process has paved the way for possible confrontation with the Government.

Controversial

Yesterday the chairman of the TO, Professor Hennie Maree, said he could not at present enlarge on potentially controversial aspects of the discussions.

But, he said, delegates had reaffirmed that the TO would stand or fall--and brook no interference from any authority on its basic educational policy and philosophy: "We regard them as absolutely non-negotiable." The main "non-negotiable parts were:

Education in South Africa must be Christian national; separate schools and education for the different race groups and mother tongue education.

Fears

One of the main fears of the conservative Afrikaans-speaking teachers is that the HSRC recommendations, if accepted, could pave the way to eventual racial integration in education.

Conservative teachers also fear the possible implications of the proposal for the establishment of a single ministry of education for all racial groups.

Dismissed

Prof Maree told THE CITIZEN that the TO strongly recognised the right of different groups to administer their own education.

He dismissed reports that the TO was politicising the HSRC report and said that the body had in fact welcomed it as clearing the air to a degree.

He said the TO completely rejected "the role thus far played by liberal groups, especially from within the English-speaking community, in the handling of the HSRC report".

He said that the weekend meeting was held behind closed doors to allow delegates to speak as freely as they wished; to honour an undertaking to discuss standpoints with the Federal Council of Teachers' Associations first.

The TO's attitude would be conveyed to the State at the end of March before public release.

Committed

The TO committed itself to co-operating positively with all organisations and authorities concerned, but at the same time found "serious fault with the assembly of the interim working party to advise the Government on the aspects of implementation of the report".

The association seriously faulted certain recommendations and interpretations of the report of a widely differing nature.

"There are obscurities and vagueness on certain matters and a purposeful avoidance of a clear recommendation on . . . certain matters."

Unrest

Certain aspects of the report had resulted in uncertainty and unrest in Afrikaner ranks.

The weekend conference of the TO reaffirmed seven basic principles of education to be carried over to the Volkskongress on education in Bloemfontein in March. They are:

- The right of self determination of each national group in its education must be realised in practice in a new educational dispensation.
- In this dispensation with its endeavour to reach equal opportunities and equal standards, the White sector of the South African community must in no way be harmed — in the same way no other group expects to be harmed.
- The principle of decentralisation in the management and control of education must be given top priority.
- The basic principles in the Government's interim memorandum — the Christian and national character of education, the principle of mother tongue education, own schools and own education departments for each group — may in no way be harmed.
- Changes in the present education system must be introduced by gradual reformation and not in a drastic or radical way.
- Political considerations and political expediency may not be determining factors for education.
- At this stage White leadership in education must be recognised in the interest of all the national groups.

CSO: 4700/810

VOLKSKAS SELLS BULK OF SWA INTFRESTS

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 24 Feb 82 p 25

[Text] VOLKSKAS Group has agreed to sell 74,9 prcent of its interest in its wholly-owned subsidiary, Volkskas (SWA/Namibia) to 23 South West African residents as prospective shareholders in a bank holding company to be established in South West Africa.

The Walvis Bay branch of Volkskas will be transferred to Volkskas (SWA/Namibia) as part of the agreement.

The Minister of Finance has approved the agreement in principle, but the agreement and its implementation is subject to conditions that may be set by the Registrar of Banks.

The effective date of the transaction is April 1 next, when 51 percent of the interest will be transferred to a bank holding company to be established.

The remaining 23,9 percent will be transferred on April 1, 1983, when Volkskas Group will hold only 25,1 percent of the issued share capital in Volkskas (SWA/Namibia).

The bank's head office will be situated in Windhoek and with its current personnel the bank will continue to do business through the existing branches of Volkskas (SWA/Namibia) and the branch at Walvis Bay.

Official approval has also been granted for clients of the bank to do normal business through two representative offices in the Republic.

CSO: 4700/813

SECURITY POLICE QUESTION BANNED STUDENT'S TEACHER

Cape Town MUSLIM NEWS in English 12 Feb 82 pp 1, 20

[Text] In what is seen as another saga in a series of harassments the ustad of a banned former student leader was questioned by two security policemen last month.

Sheikh Hafiz Hanif Moos of Goran Road, Wynberg was visited by the security policemen at his home and asked about the repeated presence on his premises of Jamalludien Hamdulay, who is serving a five-year banning order.

The Sheikh recalls that one of the men was 'a certain Van Wyk' and when they visited him a Hifz class was in progress. He invited the two policemen to observe the children learning the Qur'an, and explained that this was the precise reason for Mr Hamdulay's regular presence on the premises. The Sheikh instructs Mr Hamdulay in Hifz on a part-time basis.

The security policemen were apparently not satisfied with this explanation and further questioned the Sheikh about his relationship with Shahid Imam Abdullah Haroon. They also asked the Sheikh what his full-time occupation was at present as they believed that he had been at some stage the Imam at the masjid in Bellville.

Commenting on the incident the South African Students' Association (SASA), of which Mr Hamdulay is a past president, said: 'It should be noted that security police investigations took place in spite of Jamalludien's adherence, this time, to the provisions of his banning order. The regime is aware that the implementation of an Islamic Revolution is impossible to contain, especially when the liberation of the oppressed is pioneered by personalities with faith, courage and conviction.

'What is now obvious is that persecution, imprisonment and bannings are not sufficient to quell resistance to repression. Contant and close surveillance of militants is a special duty of the security network to maintain the system of the white electorate.'

CSO: 4700/811

ISLAMIC BANKING CONCEPTS PRAISED

Cape Town MUSLIM NEWS in English 29 Jan 82 p 15

[Text] 'Islamic banking with its concept of interest-free, profit and loss sharing, is here to stay'. This is the view of A S Gani, the Managing Director of Jaame Limited who has just returned after attending a seminar on 'Islamic Banking and the recycling of petrodollers' held in Geneva.

'There exists today in one economic group more financial resources than can be absorbed while in another a deficit with little chance of recovery. A simple solution would be to shift funds from the rich to the poor nations. This will not be done. What is required all over the world is economic asset creation and to do this a new approach and concept is necessary. Islamic banking can make this possible,' said Mr Gani.

In his opening address to sixty delegates representing major banks and business organisations Prince Muhammed Al Faisal stated that in order to understand the real concept of the Islamic Economic System one would have to accept the following three principals:

- That man was created for one and one purpose alone, and that is Worship. Every action a human being takes is an act of worship.
- Everything in heaven and earth belongs to Allah. Man only has the right to use it, and he must do so in accordance with the law of Allah (the Shariah).
- Every human being that comes into this world has an original contract; he or she should live their whole life in accordance to Allah's law.

Other Muslim bankers and economists who addressed the seminar explained how an Islamic system would provide a viable solution to the world wide economic problem and discussed the progress made by Islamic banks presently in operation.

There are at present five Islamic banks with well over 50 branches. The progress made by these banks has been so encouraging that advanced preparations have been made to set up Islamic banks, and investment and insurance companies in a number of countries throughout the world. These include Bangladesh, Malaysia, Australia, Jordan, Britain, United States and the Bahamas.

The activities of Jaame Limited were also discussed and recognised as a pioneer project in the re-introduction of the Islamic Economic System at grassroots level.

Mr Gani noted that an economic system based on Islamic principles will ensure that the growth rate of the country will always be higher than the inflation rate while unemployment would remain at a minimum. The Shura Trust and Jaame Limited have begun to develop this system in South Africa. Increased support of these bodies would enable them to spread their activities over a much wider spectrum and save many people millions of rands in interest.

CSO: 4700/811

REPORTAGE ON RACIALISM IN SPORTS

Glenville, Spurs Non-racial Pretenses

Cape Town MUSLIM NEWS in English 29 Jan 82 pp 18, 19

[Text] It is confirmed that Glenville and Cape Town Spurs are now members of the National Professional Soccer Leque (NPSL) of Mr George Thabe and are now part of the multi-national sports set-up — whatever other pretences to non-racialism they may have.

Thabe, himself, personifies the entire mulit-national concept!

Thabe is also president of the SA National Football Association (SANFA) and the Football Council of SA (FCSA) — and what in effect does this all mean?

SANFA is the Soweto-based amateur soccer body and forms the 'black' component of the umbrella body, FCSA, which has other ethnic components in the form of FASA (Football Association of South Africa), the so-called 'white' components and the largely obscure 'coloured' and 'indian' components.

It would have been noticed in the news last week that the NFL, ie the 'white' National Football League, has finally decided to disband and to play in the promotion leagues of the NPSL.

This whole business in football is an ethnic and racist conglomeration, playing within the confines of the seperatist sports policy of the Government and opportunistically reaping the benefits of the system.

The SABC Television service which falls directly under a portfolio of a Government Minister has opened Channels 2 and 3 which is directly aimed at 'black' viewers. Channel 1 of the TV service is said to be the 'white' TV service. Ten NPSL matches will be screened live on TV 2/3 this season for which the NPSL negotiated a substantial contract.

The SABC TV service has never shown any inclination, even after requests, to screen top class national events by non-racial sportsmen.

It must be fairly obvious then that neither the Government nor the organisers of the NPSL regard that body as being non-racial — we will not dispute that it is indeed multi-racial. There is, however, a world of difference between being non-racial and multi racial. Multi-racial sport is sport based on the racial difference of sportsmen; whereas non-racial sport is based on the ability of sportsmen and the race or ethnic origin of a player never enters the discussion.

On the basis of this argument then it must now be quite clear that Glenville and Cape Town Spurs have now opted out of the non-racial sports struggle and have oppotunistically accepted the multi-national sports policy of the Government, which is in effect nothing less than a concession in the apartheid policy.

Players on the books of both Glenville and Spurs have now of their own accord disqualified themselves from all non-racial sport. They will not be acceptable to any code inside the SACOS fraternity and in most cases will not even be acceptable as spectators.

Some short-sighted and glamour-seeking fortune humters think they can go and train with these NPSL clubs without being seen, initially hoping that they might be signed on to later appear in a match on TV. We have news for these opportunists! The NPSL clubs want to place as many as possible of them in a compromising position so that the non-racial sports bodies could be embarrassed. The resolve of the non-racial bodies is strong and the principle is totally immutable: if you consort with the devil, you might as well join the devil; you are not needed in the ranks of principled sportsmen, and that goes for anybody who feels he can flout the policies and principles which the people hold sacred.

It is believed that one of the directors of Cape Town Spurs is a member of the Labour Party. We could not confirm this officially. If, however, this is true, we would like to know exactly where the Labour Party stands with regard to the NPSL, and would this management committee man now object to the amount of sponsorship offered to 'officially acceptable' NPSL as opposed to the lack of sponsorship to non-racial sports bodies?

Management Committees Hit

Cape Town MUSLIM NEWS in English 12 Feb 82 p 19

[Text] At a meeting in Bellville last week non-racial sportsmen resolved to boycott all sporting facilities in the area as well as other municipal facilities, like the Bellville Civic Centre.

The meeting also urged that members of the management committee should be completely shunned from all walks of life by the community.

The resolution also called on people to continue the condemnation and opposition to all forms of 'dummy representation' such Management Committees, Local Affairs Committees and Community Councils.

South Africa is in a unique position in world politics, in that out of a population of about 27 million people only about four and a half million are allowed by law to elect and be elected to the law-making assembly in this country.

Also the vast majority of South Africans are fast becoming 'foreigners' in the land of their birth by virtue of the Bantu Homelands Act; and the minority groups are mere appendages waiting for hand-outs as and when it pleases the law-makers.

This brings us to the Coloured Management Committees. Never in the history of political division and progress has there ever been a more voteless, toothless or powerless community than the so-called 'Coloured Community' of South Africa. And what makes it more appalingly galling is that this 'Community' —if one can call it a community — is absolutely split into opportunistic, cowardly, bickering individuals who would seek to out-manoeuvre one another for the dubious privilege to act as boss-boys on dummy councils to carry out the policies of the law-makers.

It is amazing that in this claustrophobic atmosphere of racial division in South Africa, so-called coloured people can also be trapped into seeking a 'coloured identity' and then actually to play at politics within the system, by having party political divisions.

One such 'coloured' political party is the Labour Party who by their very participation at the time, gave life and credibility to the inherently toothless but incredibly expensive play house, the CRC. We call it the playhouse because there in the CRC chambers at Bellville South, they enacted the trappings of political power and solemn debate in an hilarious air of make-believe Parliament. Almost every decision that they made was vetoed by the responsible Minister.

While the CRC has died a natural death, the Labour Party still exist; we do not know to what purpose. The Labour Party resolved at its last Conference held in Elsies River to continue to use the Management Committees as a means of official representation at local Government level. It has been proved time without number that these Committees are not wanted by the people. They are a powerless cosmetic rejected by the people.

Capable, knowledgeable people of acute political awareness do not join this coloured rat race of opportunism and never make themselves available for these totally ineffective dummy-councils.

It must, however, be admitted that these management committees are of nuisance value and its members apparently do enjoy a certain status in the townships.

Generaly oppressed blacks ignore these CMC members and do not boost their inflated egos by giving them any credibility.

SPORTING AMENITIES

In the field of sporting amenities, however, the 'white' City Councils have found an ideal way of depriving non-racial sports bodies from using certain amenities. In the Bellville area the Bellville City Council has disbanded the local controlling sports Board, which has served for a number of years, and has placed the CMC in control of the sports grounds. The sports bodies in the area have ignored the CMC and continued using the amenties to the extent of jumping over locked gates. Fierce dogs now patrol these sports grounds, particularly the tennis courts and the cricket fields.

At great cost and great sacrifice to the sportsmen in the Bellville area the sports fields are now no longer being used and they have to travel great distances all over the Cape Peninsula every weekend in order to make their sport.

Obviously the CMC want the sports bodies to come to them and the matter would be sorted out immediately — but it is a matter of principle!

The sports bodies will not lend credibility to an unrepresentative group of people who have been directly rejected by the mass of people in principle and in precept. To apply to the CMC would be to be recognise that such a dummy council has the right to exist and this the people reject.

Are the Labour Party the agents of the State machinery holding the non-racial sports bodies to ransom with their toothless dummy councils, backed up by the powers of the State?

CSO: 4700/811

TREURNICHT VIEWS COLOUREDS' FUTURE AS SENSITIVE ISSUE

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 22 Feb 82 p 1

[Article by Murray McNally]

[Text] CAPE TOWN.—Dr Andries Treurnicht, leader of the National Party in the Transvaal, yesterday described the future of the Coloureds and Indians in the new constitutional dispensation as "a very sensitive matter".

Dr Treurnicht was reacting to an article in the Afrikaans Sunday newspaper Rapport which claims he objected to references in an editorial in the National Party's information sheet NAT 80's to the place of the Coloureds and Indians in the new constitutional dispensation.

The controversy on the eve of the announcement of recommendations on this key issue by the President's Council, is likely to brew into a fullscale row in National party ranks.

Dr Treurnicht is said to have particularly objected to a statement in Nat 80's editorial that "it was logical that there could not be more than one government in a country".

Dr Treurnicht objected to this as he interpreted it to mean that Coloured and Indian Ministers would co-govern in such a system.

Dr Treurnicht said yesterday he believed that the matter would be discussed by the Government.

"This is a very sensitive matter, it touches on the very nerve of our politics and I feel it is something that will have to be qualified very carefully," he said.

CSO: 4700/810

SAS KRUGER SINKING: 'SCREEN EXERCISE LED TO DISASTER'

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 23 Feb 82 p 2

[Article by Murray McNally]

[Text] THE navy frigate SAS President Kruger and supply ship SAS Tafelberg collided during a "screening" submarine attack exercise and the 15 men still missing have officially been presumed dead.

Chief of the Navy, Vice-Admiral R A Edwards, told a Press conference in Simonstown yesterday the board of inquiry investigating the collision had recommended in an interim report, after evidence indicated that the men were dead, that their status be changed from "missing" to "missing, presumed dead".

This development strengthens speculation that the missing men, who were sleeping in the petty officers' quarters on the frigate, died on impact and probably went down with the vessel.

Vice-Admiral Edwards said that the two ships had been carrying out an exercise to counter a submarine attack at 4 am last Thursday when they collided in heavy seas 80 nautical miles south-west of Cape Town.

From the facts released so far it is apparent that the SAS Tafelberg tore a huge hole somewhere amidships in the frigate.

Its point of impact was directly over the petty officers' mess.

A memorial service for the missing 15 will be held today.

Adm Edwards visited the families of the men at the weekend to inform them that the search would be called off and that the men would be declared officially dead.

This was necessary so that the estates of the men could be wound up and the dependants receive pensions, insurances and other benefits.

He said most of the men had been married, and it was necessary to put the required legal machinery into operation as soon as possible to relieve the problems of their families as expeditiously as possible.

The legal process to have the crewman officially declared dead would take a few months, but in the meantime certain steps to help the families were being taken.

Each family had received R2 000 to cover their immediate needs.

They had also received grocery vouchers of R100 and would be allowed to continue to stay in Government houses until the end of March.

Adm Edwards praised the commander of the President Kruger, Captain Wim de Lange, for "an inspired command decision" in giving the order to abandon ship and the orderly conduct of his crew during the crisis.

Capt De Lange will head a special committee to reappoint the surviving crew of the President Kruger to other posts in the navy early next month.

Corvette May Replace Frigate

CAPE TOWN. — The surviving 177 members of the ill-fated SAS President Kruger are likely to be included in a future Corvette squadron, Vice-Admiral Bonnie Edwards, Chief of the Navy said yesterday.

"We are entering an era of Corvettes. Hopefully we will start the Corvette-building programme towards the end of this decade. Obviously, I must do everything I can to bring that programme forward.

"Captain Wim de Lange will be involved in contributing towards the establishment of the future Corvette squadron," Admiral Edwards said.

Captain de Lange was in command of the SAS President Kruger.

Admiral Edwards said he had no idea what the programme would cost.

"To replace the frigate would cost R120 million. Take that as being a starting figure. A Corvette will obviously cost less."

In the meantime the surviving ship's company is determined to keep its entry in the naval regatta later this year. They are the holders of fleet trophy called "The Cock of the Fleet," which they won last year and which went down with the President Kruger.

A new trophy will now have to be found. The old one went back to 1786. — Sapa.

CSO: 4700/810

OBSTACLES KEEP PLACES IN COLLEGES EMPTY

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 23 Feb 82 p 10

[Article by Lawrence Mayekiso]

[Text] WHILE there is national anxiety over the shortage of Black teachers in secondary schools, the authorities are making conditions difficult for pupils who want to be admitted to teacher training colleges.

This claim is made by Mrs Florence Mise, a mother, who has failed to find accommodation for her son at teacher training colleges.

Mrs Mise, said her son, who had planned to start training as a teacher from this year, was idle at home after failing to get admitted at three colleges.

"My son applied in time to a teachers' training college in Ciskei, where he was admitted to study for a higher teachers' diploma," she said.

"He was disappointed when he arrived at the school, having travelled all the way from Kimberley to Fort Beaufort to be told that the course he had applied for would not be taught because there were insufficient students."

Her son returned home because he specifically wanted that course.

"I immediately contacted the Soweto Teachers' College, where I was told there were insufficient students for the course."

"The school's authorities told me to bring my son to their school as they would be happy to accept him."

"But when I arrived, having travelled with my son from Kimberley, we were told he would have to find himself accommodation in Soweto as there were no such facilities at the school."

"Because I could not find accommodation for him with Soweto families, I had to withdraw his registration at the school."

The Soweto Teachers' College advised her to take her son to a teacher training college in Bophuthatswana which has boarding facilities.

She travelled to Bophuthatswana with her son who is Xhosa speaking.

At the Bophuthatswana college in Mabopane she was told her son would not be accepted because the school did not have language training facilities for Xhosa-speaking students.

"The authorities appeal to us to encourage our children to take up teaching because of an acute shortage of qualified teachers in secondary schools."

"But is this what our children are expected to go through when they want to be trained?" she asked.

CSO: 4700/810

BRIEFS

ZULU FACTIONS FIGHT--Seven Black men were killed and one was seriously injured when two impis clashed in the Pomeroy district, Natal, at the weekend. The police said yesterday that the two impis fought a pitched battle with assegai's, knobkieries, pangas and stocks. The battle lasted for several hours. The police have made one arrest and have confiscated a large quantity of weapons used in the battle. They believe the fight was sparked off by a border dispute between two Zulu factions. [Text] [Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 23 Feb 82 p 9]

HAIG'S CRITICISM BACKED--American Secretary of State Alexander Haig has described Lord Carrington, the British Foreign Secretary, as a "duplicitous bastard". Like the British Foreign Office, we refrain from comment, except to say that anyone who could have sold out Rhodesia like Lord Carrington did, cannot claim that Mr Haig has a tendency to exaggerate. [Text] [Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 22 Feb 82 p 6]

CONTROLLED BLAST--Engineers at the Modderfontein explosives factory set off at the weekend what a spokesman described as a "controlled blast" to destroy all traces of residual nitro-glycerine at the No 1 plant, scene this week of three accidental explosions which killed nine employees and injured others. The controlled blast had been successful, the spokesman said. Detailed investigations into the accidents were continuing, repair work was in progress and the affected plant was expected to be back on stream within a fortnight.--Sapa. [Text] [Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 22 Feb 82 p 2]

YOUTH BRIGADES--Salisbury --Zimbabweans aged between 12 and 30 will include watching for anti-government dissidents and external aggressors, the SUNDAY MAIL newspaper said today. The pro-government journal quoted a senior Youth Ministry official, Mr Tichaona Jokonya, as saying they would also do community work, including road and bridge construction. Dr Jokonya said the units would be part of a youth development programme aimed at moulding the Zimbabwean of the future, whom he described as "a socialist citizen emerging from the rubble of capitalism". Only secondary school pupils would be exempt from joining the brigades, he said. The vast majority of black pupils do not go beyond the primary level because of a scarcity of secondary schools.--Sapa-Reuter. [Text] [Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 22 Feb 82 p 9]

STATE AID FOR FIRE SERVICES--For the first time in the history of South African fire brigade services, local authorities will receive a fixed subsidy from the State to cover general fire protection and emergency services, the Minister of Defence, General Magnes Malan, announced yesterday. These subsidies will be paid to local authorities from April 1, this year. "It should be considered an important milestone in the history of South African fire brigade services," Gen. Malan said. [Text] [Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 23 Feb 82 p 11]

SQUATTER SITE RAID--Cape Town.--Riot police and Administration Board inspectors yesterday raided the dune site between Nyanga and Crossroads where about 60 squatters have been camping. An eyewitness said about 60 riot police and inspectors in 11 vans and a big truck had been used in the raid. The squatters, who had divided into three groups on the dunes, ran away. Nobody was arrested. The police then began to tear down their shelters which were erected at the weekend. A spokesman for the squatters said they had expected action from the authorities because they had defied an order from the chief commissioner of the Department of Cooperation and Development in the Western Cape, Mr Timo Bezuidenhoud, not to erect shelters on the dunes. The spokesman said they had organised the people at strategic points on the dunes to enable the women and children to escape first if they were raided.--Sapa. [Text] [Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 23 Feb 82 p 3]

SASOL RIDES HIGH--Sasol's results for the first six months of the year were far better than expected and the company is of the opinion that this trend will continue in the second half of the year. The company declared a net profit after taxation for the six months ended December 1981 of R99,7-million. This was 21,4 percent better than the R82,1-million declared in the same period the previous year. The company also lifted its interim dividend from 9,5c to 11c a share on earnings of 26,6c (22c) a share. Sasol says in its interim report that present indications are that the profits in the second part of the year should be no less than those of the past six months. This means the company could show a profit after taxation in the vicinity of R199-million, which will be an improvement of nearly 20 percent on the figure of R166-million for the full year ended June 1981. Last year's total divident was 20c a share. If nothing goes wrong in the second part of the year, the company could very easily pay a total of 23c share, this year. Sasol says it is still anticipated that Sasol II will declare a maiden dividend in the second half of this year. Construction and commissioning of Sasol Three are progressing according to plan, which visualises the first production of liquid fuels in the second half of 1982. [Text] [Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 23 Feb 82 p 23]

DETAINEE'S COMPLAINT--A complaint by a detainne, who was a student at the University of Witwatersrand was shelved as "unfounded". This was told to the Johannesburg Regional Court yesterday by Warrant/Officer W Smith of the Security Police. He was being cross-examined by defence counsel as to the admissibility of statements made by four accused who are on trial before Mr H Ooosthuizen on allegations of contravening the Internal Security Act by participating in communist activities. The four, Mr Benjamin Greyling, Miss Elaine Rose Mohamed, Mr Michael O'Donovan and Mr Leslie Lax have pleaded not guilty. Last week, Warrant/Officer Smith said he was aware Mr Greyling had complained to a doctor, a magistrate or prison inspector about the treatment he had received while in detention. He had alleged he was assaulted. After a request by the defence counsel, Warrant/Officer Smith said he would find out how far enquiries into the complaint had progressed. He told the court complaints were investigated by people unconnected with the Security Police. When cross-examination resumed yesterday, Warrant/Officer Smith informed the court he had checked all the necessary registers at John Vorster Square and according to them, the matter had been closed as Mr Greyling's complaints were felt to be unfounded. [Text] [Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 23 Feb 82 p 2]

SATV CONTEMPT--Pietermaritzburg --The Attorney General of Natal, Mr Cecil Rees, has instructed police to investigate the possible violation of the sub-judice rule or contempt of court rule as a result of the recent screening by SABC-TV of the alleged attempted Seychelles coup. The statement issued by Mr Rees yesterday reads: "It has been reported to me that SATV recently showed a programme about the alleged Seychelles coup, including a background sketch of one of the accused in the matter involved in the pending prosecution. "I have instructed the police to investigate these allegations in order to ascertain whether or not the alleged actions by SATV involves a violation of the sub-judice rule and whether or not it constitutes the offence of contempt of court." "As soon as the completed docket has been presented to me I shall decide what steps should be taken". [Text] [Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 23 Feb 82 p 3]

STUDENT LEADER KILLED--A young student from Guguletu met her death in what fellow students consider 'strange' circumstances. Ms Boniswa Mkhutshulwa was knocked down by a car on the corner of NY 108 and NY 112 on Sunday February 7 and died a few hours later in hospital. She was returning from a memorial service for a former student leader, also killed in a car accident, Joseph Siyalana. Ms Mkhutshulwa was a student at Fezeka High School and played a leading role in the school's Students' Representative Council and the Western Province Students' Regional Committee. During the 1980 student protests she was in the forefront in articulating the students' grievances and this later led to her detention along with some other members of the Regional Committee. In November 1981 she joined the Congress of South African Students (Cosas) and remained an active member of the organisation until her death. Ms Mkhutshulwa was also involved in efforts to bring sport in Nyanga, Guguletu and Langa under the non-racial banner. In this regard she was a member of the Nyagula Sports Association. In paying tribute a member of Cosas told MUSLIM NEWS, 'Boniswa, throughout her political involvement, was dedicated, strong, disciplined and had a clear understanding of the struggle. She also put a lot of effort into bringing the youth of the townships together and in mobilising them. To all who knew her, her loss is great and irreplaceable.' Ms Mkhutshulwa is survived by her mother, two brother and a sister. [Text] [Cape Town MUSLIM NEWS in English 12 Feb 82 p 19]

ANTI-SAIC MAN DETAINED--The secretary of the Transvaal Anti-SAIC Committee, which led the successful campaign to boycott the Indian Council 'elections' in November, was detained by the Security Police on Wednesday January 20. Mr Ismail Momoniat, a mathematics lecturer at the University of Witwatersrand was taken from his Lenasia home at 8.30am after a thorough search of the house by 'about twelve security policeman', according to his father Dr Mohamed Momoniat. A typewriter, belonging to Dr Momoniat, was also taken away. 'I see this detention as a vendetta against the highly successful boycott campaign launched by the Anti-SAIC Committee against the sham elections,' Dr Momoniat commented. It has been confirmed that Mr Momoniat is being held under Section 22 of the General Laws Amendment Act. In 1980, at the height of the education protest launched by Black students, Mr Momoniat spent fourteen days in detention also under the General Laws Amendment Act. [Text] [Cape Town MUSLIM NEWS in English 29 Jan 82 p 7]

POPULATION INCREASE--South Africa's population has grown 16 percent from June 1970 to June last year, and now totals 25 591 000 people. This was revealed in the mid-year population estimates by the Department of Statistics in Pretoria. The Indian population has grown more than any other group according to the figures released. Last year's figure for this group is 838 000, an increase of 30 percent on 1970's figures. However, statistics do not include Blacks from Transkei, Bophuthatswana or Venda--only those outside the homelands are included. [Text] [Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 24 Feb 82 p 8]

CSO: 4700/813

LORD CARRINGTON'S PART IN LANCASTER HOUSE TALKS REVIEWED

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 24 Feb 82 p 6

[Article by Alda Parker: "How Lord C Sold Out Rhodesia"]

[Text] GENERAL Alexander Haig's great friend - the "duplicitious bastard," Lord Carringtons, as Mr Haig described him — arrives in Salisbury this week. Which makes it appropriate to re-examine what was undoubtedly the biggest Western sell-out since Kissinger brought "the peace of the grave" to South Vietnam.

For his efforts, Kissinger won the Nobel Peace Prize. Carrington, not surprisingly, was nominated for the award. For their mutual efforts on behalf of Soviet expansionism, both richly deserved the Lenin Peace Prize.

Today, helped by men who attended Lancaster House or were closely associated with it, I can provide some hitherto unpublished details of how the ignoble Pax Carringtonae was achieved.

From the outset Carrington made it clear to the Foreign Office that he was totally indifferent to the "kith and kin" issue (sell out of fellow Britons settled in Rhodesia), an aspect that had deeply troubled even Labour leader Harold Wilson.

In 1979, a senior member of the British Special Branch visited Lusaka shortly before the scheduled Commonwealth Conference. He returned with the unequivocal recommendation that the conference should not be held in Lusaka.

Bugged

Among other things, a large contingent of KGB had been brought in and all rooms where members of the conference were to stay, meet, talk or visit were bugged.

Immediate Foreign Office reaction to this was to confirm that the conference would take place in Lusaka.

It is now also known that members of the British Foreign and Commonwealth Office had numbers of meetings with Soviet diplomats on the Rhodesian question. It was a major topic for discussion when FO officials met the Soviet Foreign Minister in New York in September, 1979.

It has also been confirmed by a senior member of the Thatcher Government, Mr Peter Blaker, that the British High Commissioner in Lusaka met the Soviet Ambassador to Zambia, Dr Vasili Solodovnikov, to discuss Rhodesian developments on a number of occasions.

Intelligence reports from a number of Western nations at the time indicated that, with a pro-Western, independent Zimbabwe-Rhodesia recognised and sanctions lifted, the Marxists were likely to lose control of Mozambique and much of their undue influence in Zambia.

For PF

Carrington's reaction to what most would regard as thoroughly good news was to send an emissary, Lord Harlech, to discuss the matter with various African leaders. In Lusaka and Dar-es-Salaam, to no one's surprise, Kaunda and Nyerere came down heavily in favour of the Marxist Patriotic Front.

But it was Nigeria, with threats of economic blackmail, which provided the real incentive to push ahead with the sell-out of the pro-Western Rhodesian forces.

When Lord Harlech went to Salisbury to ascertain Sithole's point of view, Sithole was had said. The answer was that he had not had a chance to say anything: Harlech had been telling him.

To assist in the process of bringing pressure on Mrs Thatcher, Solodovnikov gave orders to his African puppets that the greatest possible effort should be made to convince the Queen that giving way to the PF would contribute to Commonwealth unity.

The Lancaster House talks began on September 10, 1979, supposedly to last two weeks. They dragged on until December 21, ensuring that Rhodesia's top leaders were kept away from their country in a highly critical period.

Throughout that time Bishop Muzorewa, plus a number of key White Rhodesian negotiators, who were wined, dined and feted, showed themselves to be extraordinarily gullible.

Agreed to all

The Bishop was encouraged to accept that whatever proposals Carrington made to him were in his own best interests. Throughout the conference, he agreed to everything, throwing away his position at the outset as each topic was raised.

When invited to address the influential Bow Group at the Conservative Confernce in Brickpool, he even thought he had to have Carrington's permission. To the amazement of Muzorewa's White advisers, Carrington recommended that he should not go.

It was only when it was found that Joshua Nkomo was to address the Conservatives that Muzorewa decided to send Mukone, his Foreign Minister. That was the only real success scored by the Rhodesian delegation. Nkomo attracted 60 MPs, Mukone 200 or more.

So hoodwinked was Muzorewa that he agreed to a summary of the Carrington constitution without demanding that the full text be produced. On October 27 he had committed himself to acceptance of the "broad principle" of the British proposals for the transition period.

Most importantly, he was led here to believe that the existing Rhodesian Security Forces would control the run-up to the elections. In fact, the Security Forces were confined to barracks while thousands of armed terrorists flooded into the country, warmly welcomed by the British and allowed to roam at will.

On his side Nkomo was assured by Carrington that he stood an excellent change of winning by default as no single party could emerge triumphant.

The Whites would then find themselves forced to join a coalition government which would "naturally" exclude the extremist Mugabe while incorporating Nkomo.

Guarantees

As for Mugabe, he received FO guarantees that he would be allowed to campaign freely. It was also pointed out that as he had the largest number of terrorists inside the country, he stood the best chance of winning. He was assured that whatever the level of intimidation, he would not be disqualified.

In the event, election supervisors provided Lord Soames with proof that Zanla was waging terrorist campaigns in five of the eight electoral districts, with massive intimidation im Manicaland, East and West Mashonaland, Victoria and in parts of Matabeland South.

Three weeks before the election, when evidence of intimidation was overwhelming, Sir Anthony Duff, the Assistant Governor, flew to London for discussions with the FO. On his return, British and Rhodesian election officials were given orders to ignore all affidavits regarding intimidation.

During the election run-up, Soames received thousands of signed affidavits reporting major acts of intimidation. Even between the end of voting and the announcement of the results, Soames was given sufficient further evidence that would have more than justified his annulling the election. He ignored it all.

One of the most striking aspects of the Lancaster House talks was the concentrated effort to persuade the White Rhodesians (and the South Africans) that Bishop Muzorewa would be a certain winner in the second round of elections.

Mr Ian Smith recognised the trickery, but it seemed that Mr Ken Flower, a British mole at a very high level in the Rhodesian Central Intelligence Organisation, was untiring in his efforts to isolate Smith from other members of the Rhodesian delegation.

John Giles, a senior Rhodesian Government legal adviser and several others, too, caught on. Giles threatened to make his suspicions public.

Hushed up

He then appeared to commit suicide by jumping from the top floor of Lancaster House, his body not being found until the next day. There were murmurs about foul play, but the British Foreign Office succeeded in husing the whole matter up.

It is impossible to conceive of an election in Israel that would put Yassar Arafat in office as Prime Minister. The impossible happend in Rhodesia: largely, it seems, because Lord Carrington was personally committed to putting Mugabe in power.

No doubt when Carrington returns to Salisbury, he will behave as though he had just set foot in the city of God. Let South Africa be spared some sanctimonious sermon on human rights while the man who set up Rhodesia for the kill is in Zimbabwe.

CSO: 4700/813

EAST GERMAN EXPERTS WILL INDOCTRINATE PUBLIC

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 23 Feb 82 p 8

[Article by Aida Parker]

[Text] EAST GERMAN specialists are moving into Zimbabwe to assist Prime Minister Robert Mugabe, both with his international propaganda and with political indoctrination of the general public.

According to the GDR news agency, ADN, an agreement to this effect was signed in East Berlin in December. The advance guards of the GDR propaganda experts are already in Salisbury.

The agreement, according to the East Berlin reports, was negotiated by one of the most radical of Mr Mugabe's Ministers, Dr Eddison Zvogbo. Holding the portfolio of Local Government and Housing, Dr Zvogbo is also a senior member of the Zanu-PF Central Committee and the party's secretary for publicity and information.

On the East German side, the agreement was signed by Mr Hermann Axen, GDR Politburo member and secretary of the SED Central Committee.

According to the ADN report, Dr Zvogbo conveyed a personal message from Mr Mugabe to East German leader, Erich Honecker. Dr. Zvogbo also had extensive talks with Politburo members and Mr Joachim Herrman, a senior secretary of the SED Central Committee.

All told, the Zvogbo party spent 10 days in East Germany, studying the workings of the mass media and the printing industry generally. During this time, Dr Zvogbo had talks with the large numbers of Zimbabwe "cadres" now studying in East Germany.

In particular, these "cadres" are being educated in techniques of managing central-directed economies, while simultaneously being inculcated in Soviet-style socialist doctrines.

The decision to call in the East Germans as advisers on Zanu's political indoctrination campaigns is another clear indicator of Zimbabwe's increasingly rapid slide into the Soviet camp. Itself a Soviet surrogate state, the GDR conducts its African enterprises as an appendage of Soviet foreign policy.

Since the Korean War, the East Germans have spearheaded the Soviet drive to mobilise international and domestic opinion against the West. Here they have been particularly active in the UN, enlisting Third World opposition to the West generally and the US in particular.

Since the beginning of the 1980s, the GDR has been entrusted by Moscow with the advancement of Marxist revolutionary change throughout the Third World.

The East Germans are also key advisers both to Swapo and the ANC in their highly successful anti-South African propaganda campaigns.

Dr Zvogbo has been extremely active in support of Mr Mugabe's campaign for a one-party state and for the dismantling of the Lancaster House Agreement.

In a recent interview with the Mozambique news agency, he said Mr Mugabe's Governinent was working on a strategy for "neutralising" other political parties and for the removal "of the traps which were built into the Lancaster House constitution".

In the same interview, he stressed the need for the people of Zimbabwe to receive "ideological instruction".

He also strongly advocates the abolition of special White representation in Parliament.

In other interviews he has warned that Zanu-PF was studying Mr Ian Smith's Republican Front party and Bishop Abel Muzorewa's UANC. Steps would soon be taken, he said, to ensure that "they will pay more respect for the law than they are doing now".

There are unconfirmed reports in Salisbury that, under British pressure, Mr Mugabe has agreed to terminate the contracts of the North Korean intructors now attached to his highly controversial Fifth Brigade.

However, it is stated, the North Koreans will remain on as political commissars attached to the youth movements.

CSO: 4700/810

BRIEFS

HOME-GROWN 'INFILTRATORS'--Salisbury.--Three "South African agents" being held after infiltrating Zimbabwe are, in fact, Black Zimbabweans who were arrested in the Bulawayo area by the Central Intelligence Organisation, THE HERALD reported yesterday. On Sunday, the Minister of State in the Prime Minister's office, Mr Emmerson Munangagwa, said in a television programme, "three South African agents" had been arrested in the country since the start of the arms cache crisis two weeks ago. Mr Munangagwa told ZTV the men had been infiltrated into Zimbabwe by road and air to carry out reconnaissance and do "other silly things."--Sapa. [Text] [Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 24 Feb 82 p 8]

CSO: 4700/813

END

JPRS 80321

15 March 1982

Sub-Saharan Africa Report

No. 2587

FBIS FOREIGN BROADCAST INFORMATION SERVICE

NOTE

JPRS publications contain information primarily from foreign newspapers, periodicals and books, but also from news agency transmissions and broadcasts. Materials from foreign-language sources are translated; those from English-language sources are transcribed or reprinted, with the original phrasing and other characteristics retained.

Headlines, editorial reports, and material enclosed in brackets [] are supplied by JPRS. Processing indicators such as [Text] or [Excerpt] in the first line of each item, or following the last line of a brief, indicate how the original information was processed. Where no processing indicator is given, the information was summarized or extracted.

Unfamiliar names rendered phonetically or transliterated are enclosed in parentheses. Words or names preceded by a question mark and enclosed in parentheses were not clear in the original but have been supplied as appropriate in context. Other unattributed parenthetical notes within the body of an item originate with the source. Times within items are as given by source.

The contents of this publication in no way represent the policies, views or attitudes of the U.S. Government.

PROCUREMENT OF PUBLICATIONS

JPRS publications may be ordered from the National Technical Information Service, Springfield, Virginia 22161. In ordering, it is recommended that the JPRS number, title, date and author, if applicable, of publication be cited.

Current JPRS publications are announced in Government Reports Announcements issued semi-monthly by the National Technical Information Service, and are listed in the Monthly Catalog of U.S. Government Publications issued by the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402.

Correspondence pertaining to matters other than procurement may be addressed to Joint Publications Research Service, 1000 North Glebe Road, Arlington, Virginia 22201.

JPRS 80321

15 March 1982

SUB-SAHARAN AFRICA REPORT

No. 2587

CONTENTS

GUINEA-BISSAU

Briefs
Elaboration of Plan Approved 1
PRC Rice Donation 1

LIBERIA

Minister Stresses Need To Assist Small Farmers
(G. Dombo Jeboh; DAILY OBSERVER, 17 Feb 82) 2

Tippita District Citizens Contribute Funds to Power System
(DAILY OBSERVER, 18 Feb 82) 3

Bar Association President Backs Citizenship for Whites
(DAILY OBSERVER, 18 Feb 82) 4

Japanese Ambassador Donates Three Land Cruisers
(Esther F. Wreh; DAILY OBSERVER, 19 Feb 82) 6

Fringe Benefits of Employees in Concession Areas Become Taxable
(NEW LIBERIAN, 16 Feb 82) 8

Former Minister To Be Probed for Alleged Complicity in Union Scandal
(Samuel Johnson; NEW LIBERIAN, 16 Feb 82) 9

Ministry of Education Overhauling Scholarship Program
(NEW LIBERIAN, 18 Feb 82) 11

GSA Warns Reporter To Avoid Publishing School Supply Report
(NEW LIBERIAN, 19 Feb 82) 13

Bar Association Recommends Upgrading of Suspended Constitution
(DAILY OBSERVER, 18 Feb 82) 15

Briefs
Social Security Director Detained 16
West German Water Project 16

MADAGASCAR

Correspondent Discusses Cabinet Reshuffle
(Jean-Pierre Langellier; LE MONDE, 17-18 Jan 82)..... 17

MFM, MFT Economist on Devaluation
(Olivier Raparison Interview; MADAGASCAR-MATIN, 8 Jan 82)..... 19

MOZAMBIQUE

Joint Communique Issued With Yugoslavia
(NOTICIAS, 2 Feb 82)..... 21

Briefs
EEC Cooperation Expected 24
Power From Cahora Bassa 24

REUNION

Verges on Possibility of Left Acceding to Power Next Year
(TEMOIGNAGES, 11 Jan 82)..... 25

Editorial Defends Reunionese National Identity
(Editorial; TEMOIGNAGES, 13 Jan 82)..... 29

SEYCHELLES

Reportage on Visit of Cuban Communist Party Officials
(NATION, 15, 18 Feb 82)..... 31

Week's Visit
Meeting With SPPF Officials

Officials Satisfied With Ferry Service Project
(Ronnie Jumeau; NATION, 13 Feb 82)..... 33

SOUTH AFRICA

Reportage on NP Split Over Power-Sharing
(Jaap Theron; THE CITIZEN, 27 Feb 82)..... 36

Heunis Reaffirms Government Commitment To Remove Discriminatory Laws
(THE CITIZEN, 27 Feb 82)..... 40

Impact of Interest Hike on Farmers Reported
(THE CITIZEN, 27 Feb 82)..... 42

Buthelezi Gets Police Apology Over Dog's Name
(THE CITIZEN, 27 Feb 82)..... 43

General Malan: Defence 'Not Only by White Men'
(THE CITIZEN, 28 Feb 82)..... 44

Details on Oppenheimer Report Given
(Chris Steyn; THE CITIZEN, 27 Feb 82)..... 45

Briefs
Prisoners in Military Jails 47
Whites at Black Universities 47
Indian Council Backs Botha 47
Rules for Reporters 47
Rationing Ends 48
Detainee's Health 48
Mrs Mandela Ban Extended 48

SWAZILAND

Need To Store Strategic Food Reserves Stressed
(James Dlamini; THE TIMES OF SWAZILAND, 19 Feb 82)..... 49

Proposal To Borrow From South African Corporation Criticized
(James Dlamini; THE TIMES OF SWAZILAND, 18 Feb 82)..... 50

New Missionary Agency Set Up
(Mashumi Twala; THE TIMES OF SWAZILAND, 18 Feb 82)..... 51

Royal Swazi Rents Boeing 737
(THE TIMES OF SWAZILAND, 19 Feb 82)..... 52

ZAMBIA

Mundia Admits All Public Service Commissions Have Failed
(TIMES OF ZAMBIA, 25 Feb 82)..... 53

Zambia Aiding Swaziland To Review Rural Development Policy
(DAILY MAIL, 25 Feb 82)..... 54

MPs Call for Scraping of Ministry of National Guidance
(TIMES OF ZAMBIA, 20 Feb 82)..... 55

Decision To Collect Two Taxes in Year 'Detrimental' to Recovery
(TIMES OF ZAMBIA, 24 Feb 82)..... 57

MPs Say Press Victimization, Muzzling 'On the Increase'
(TIMES OF ZAMBIA, 25 Feb 82)..... 58

EEC Chief Delegate Announces Aid for 1982
(TIMES OF ZAMBIA, 20 Feb 82)..... 59

Minister Announces Measures To Rehabilitate Mining Industry
(TIMES OF ZAMBIA, 24 Feb 82)..... 60

Central Statistical Office Releases Consumer Price Report
(DAILY MAIL, 23 Feb 82)..... 61

Kaunda Says Nation Caught in Economic 'Vicious Circle'
(TIMES OF ZAMBIA, 25 Feb 82)..... 62

Kaunda Hails Kim Il-song as 'Torchbearer' of Peace
(TIMES OF ZAMBIA, 25 Feb 82)..... 63

INDECO Makes Profit for First Time in Six Years
(TIMES OF ZAMBIA, 24 Feb 82)..... 64

Government Reaches Agreement With FAO Concerning Crop Forecasting
(TIMES OF ZAMBIA, 23 Feb 82)..... 65

Briefs
Labor Ministry Clears Walamba 66
Starving Zairians Cause Problems 66
Socialist Leader's Deportation 66

BRIEFS

ELABORATION OF PLAN APPROVED--The Council of Ministers approved a decree calling for the elaboration of the First 4-Year Economic and Social Development Plan for 1983-1986. Our country will finally go forward in its efforts to arrive at a plan, indicated, moreover, since the Third Party Congress as a "cornerstone" in the construction of an independent national economy. According to the mechanism stipulated in the decree, each ministry will be expected to draw up development plans for the sectors under its jurisdiction. As coordinator of the various sectorial plans, the Ministry of Economic Coordination and Planning will draw up the final project of the 4-year plan and this will be submitted for approval by the Council of Ministers in November 1982. Among other decisions reached by the council is the assignment to the Portuguese firm, Soares da Costa, of construction work on the International Airport and the highway connecting Bissau with Bissalanca. [Text] [Bissau NO PINTCHA in Portuguese 30 Jan 82 p 1] 8568

PRC RICE DONATION--The Chinese ship, "Hongmen," with 1,000 tons of rice, a gift to our country from the government of the People's Republic of China, is expected to arrive in Bissau today. This information was revealed in a communique from the embassy of that Asian country. A supply of potatoes and onions is also scheduled to arrive in Socomin. [Text] [Bissau NO PINTCHA in Portuguese 30 Jan 82 p 1] 8568

CSO: 4742/207

MINISTER STRESSES NEED TO ASSIST SMALL FARMERS

Monrovia DAILY OBSERVER in English 17 Feb 82 p 12

[Article by G. Dombo Jeboh]

[Text]

Agriculture Minister Major Alfred Fromayan, has underscored the need for the Agricultural Development Bank located in Sinkor, Monrovia, to grant loans to small farmers in order for them to increase their productions.

He also said that he would like to see the Agricultural Extension Division of his ministry become more functional in catering to local farmers by delivering technical packages and other assistance to them.

Major Fromayan made these remarks recently when he met with the technical team from the Food and Agriculture Organization, (FAO) now in the country to inspect projects financed by the organization.

The team, which is headed by Mr. Tom Morrison, discussed the possibility of establishing several agricultural projects in the country including the development of a food production corporation; credit facilities for individual farmers through the Agricultural Development Bank, manpower training as well as the reorganization of the Mesurado Fishing Industry in a bid to make it more viable.

The establishment of an agency to absorb the Liberia Palm and Liberia Coffee and Cocoa Corporations was also highlighted during the discussions.

Other members of the FAO team included David Lintern, fisheries expert, Yousaf Chauhri, agronomist, and Tekle Haimanog Mariam, consultant.

Also attending the meeting as an observer was FAO's regional statistician based in Accra, Ghana, Mr. O.Z. Avralioglu.

In another development, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, Col. James W. Coleman, called on Liberian reseachers and other experts in the country to devote their time and energies to inventions geared towards improving the lot of the Liberian people.

Minister Coleman made the call when he visited the Central Agricultural Research Institute in Suakoko, Bong County recently.

He stressed that researchers should not only depend on sophisticated equipment to do their work but should also devise simple and cheaper means to accomplish their objectives.

Visiting Kpatawee rice and vegetable projects later, Minister Coleman urged the Liberian staff to work cooperatively with their Chinese counterparts.

He added that a developing country like Liberia should at all times appreciate the technical assistance placed at its disposal by friendly countries for the sustained and simultaneous development.

CSO: 4700/839

TIPPITA DISTRICT CITIZENS CONTRIBUTE FUNDS TO POWER SYSTEM

Monrovia DAILY OBSERVER in English 18 Feb 82 p 3

[Text]

Citizens and residents of Tippita District in Nimba County are to benefit from an improved power system as soon as plans being worked out by local LEC authorities prove well.

The electrical system will also supply the new government hospital now under construction in the district.

The chief of logistics at the Ministry of Defence, Col. John Nauhn who disclosed this during an interview recently said the citizens have embarked on the construction of a power house that will be able to supply the entire Tippita District with electricity at a total cost of about $50,000.

He said already, $12,000 of this amount has been generated by the citizens of the district to begin the construction of the power house which is to be completed by next March.

Col. Nauhn told reporters that he was in Tippita recently to meet with the citizens and residents of the area to expedite the power house project and encourage other programs.

Col. Nuahn in a message to the citizens said it was through revolutionary zeal that he was able to meet with prominent citizens and elders of the district to discuss and find solutions to common development problems in the area.

He reminded the citizens that while Liberia was going through a revolutionary period, it would not be right for the citizens to sit supinely or reluctantly and expect development to come to their district through the national government.

The logistics commander implored the citizens to rally together with county leaders and bring rapid development in the area. "While government tries to help you, it is also good for you to help yourself", he emphasized.

He disclosed that apart from the district, leaders in the Monrovia area had also given voluntary contributions mostly in the form of cash.

Among them, he said, is the Managing Director of LEC, Mr. Harry Yuan who has donated $1,000 along with the Director of Immigration, Mr. Edwin Taye, who also pledged $1000 on behalf of his wife who is a citizen of the district too.

Col. Nauhn later called on all other citizens who would wish to make a further contribution to take it at his office here upon which an official receipt will be issued.

CSO: 4700/839

BAR ASSOCIATION PRESIDENT BACKS CITIZENSHIP FOR WHITES

Monrovia DAILY OBSERVER in English 18 Feb 82 pp 1, 10

[Text]

Counsellor Peter Amos George, current president of the National Bar Association, has come out in favour of white people becoming citizens of Liberia.

He is also not in support of the law that Liberian citizens only can buy and own land.

Counsellor George took this stand on Tuesday when the National Bar Association presented its suggestions to the Constitutional Drafting Commission at the Monrovia City Hall in connection with the drafting of a new Constitution.

He wondered what made Liberia so special that white people will abandon their homes and rush here to settle if they are permitted to become citizens.

The following is the full text of the submission of Counsellor George:

Mr. Chairman and Members of the National Constitutional Commission, ladies and gentlemen of the National Bar Association, I assume to stand before you not in condemnation of the suggestions and conclusions of the National Bar Association, read and submitted to you, for I fully support all that has been presented.

But I must, as a conscientious, true and patriotic citizen of the Republic of Liberia, join issue with my colleagues on Sections 12 and 13, Article 5, Miscellaneous Provisions, of the suspended constitution hence, I am before you to present my side as I see it.

This might make me very unpopular, because at every hearing the citizens of Liberia have consistently avoided discussions on those two points in the suspended constitution.

During our deliberations, every member of the bar present agreed that Sections 12 and 13 of Article 5 of the Miscellaneous Provisions of the suspended constitution should remain undisturbed in substance but with amendment as to the wordings, except for one other person and your humble servant.

I wish to assure you Mr. Chairman, that I shall be very brief in my presentation on these all important provisions of the suspended constitution.

Interestingly, and to my awesome disappointment, the University students of all persons, did not even touch on these two issues, which in my opinion, are vital to our over all development. I feel they should have, at least, discussed the pros and the cons.

Segregation

According to Section 12, no person shall be entitled to own Real Estate in this Republic unless he is a citizen of same. Whilst it is true that the constitution, did not inhibit segregation at the time, it should be remembered that in 1945 the Government of the Republic of Liberia was invited to and is a foundation member of the United Nations and a signatory to the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

This latter document which denounces and deprecates any and all forms of segregation, Liberia readily ratified; yet she never removed these provisions from her constitution by amendment.

Secondly, Section 13 states "The great object of forming these colonies, being to provide a home for the dispersed and oppressed children of Africa, and to regenerate and enlighten this benighted continent, none but negroes or persons of negro descent shall be eligible to citizenship in this Republic" — segregation personified.

It is clear that the wordings of these Sections of Article 5 of the suspended constitution indicate unquestionably the festered resentment and hatred the framers of the suspended constitution entertained against their former slave masters, known as the white man.

We must remember that there were bitter experiences encountered by these men and the resentment therefore, emminent.

We should therefore reasonably sympathize with them for the position taken at that time, 130 years ago. But we have had 130 years of cooling off time.

Factors

As I discuss this issue, I am reminded of the legal maxim: "Reason is the sole of the law and when reason ceases to exist the law itself ceases to exist."

At the time this nation was founded, she was practically culled out of the boundaries of English and French domains.

Being surrounded by the English and French, the law at the time was quite appropriate not to permit any so called white man to become a citizen or for an alien to own Real Estate, the reason and presumption were great for if this had not been the case at the time in Liberia, France and Great Britain would have bought up all our land and left us only with the sea coast.

These provisions of the suspended constitution were good for that time for they protected us and our land.

But now all around us are independent nations: Guinea, Ivory Coast and Sierra Leone and neither America, France or Great Britain can any longer colonize Liberia or any portion thereof.

The reasons, for these provisions, you will agree, are no longer apparent.

The second reason was the fear that individual white capitalist might come to Liberia and purchase all of our lands and our children would have no land to buy in the future.

This appears to be one of the controlling factors and has contributed to these issues being completely left out of the discussions of the New Constitution.

The third is, that there is a fear if a white man becomes a citizen, he will purchase land and create blocks in such a manner that segregation will be viably practiced by him.

These fears in the past resulted to the creation of the law granting aliens the right to lease land for 20 years which in its implementation has been over stretched.

Since then, that Statute has been amended providing for an alien to lease property (land) from individuals for a period of 63 years; only that each 21 years period the rent should be increased by 10 percent. Because of this, structures erected on these leased premises are just strong enough to last for the duration of the lease.

Enjoyment

The question which comes to mind is what makes Liberia so peculiar in Africa that all of the white men of the world will leave their homes and flock to Liberia to take up residence? Is it because Liberia has something peculiar to itself that no West African Nation has? What is it?

This very constitution we anticipate writing will carry a provision prohibiting segregation and if the substance of these provisions, Sections 12 and 13 of Article 5 are permitted to remain or are inserted in our New Constitution, they would negate the very provision prohibiting segregation as well as our position, signature and ratification of that sacred document, Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

I have promised not to be long and so I must come to a close now, but before doing so, I want to here stress that there is nothing amiss or sacreligious in our permitting the white man to become a citizen of Liberia, especially those born here, and aliens, to own Realty in Liberia.

If he is permitted to be a citizen, and he is permitted to own Realty, development and progress which we are all so strongly and straneously stressing and striving for, might in the near future, be ours to enjoy.

Permit me to say here that the reason for the fear no longer exist and, therefore, the law itself should die where the reason for its existence is dead.

I do not want to name the areas but certain areas of Monsterrado County could have been well developed, but the owners of the properties have refused to sell to those who were able to develop them. I thank you.

CSO: 4700/839

JAPANESE AMBASSADOR DONATES THREE LAND CRUISERS

Monrovia DAILY OBSERVER in English 19 Feb 82 p 3

[Article by Esther F. Wreh]

[Excerpt] Three blue Toyota Land Cruisers were yesterday presented to the Ministry of Lands and Mines by the Japanese Embassy in Monrovia for use in connection with the ministry's hydro-electric development project.

The vehicles were presented by Ambassador Murono Kunihiko on behalf of his embassy at the Ministry of Lands and Mines on Capitol Hill, Monrovia.

The Ambassador said as energy development is the number one problem facing Liberia, the Government of Japan has undertaken the present pre-feasibility survey.

He said since 1978 they have seen the significance for the construction of the proposed dam site and reservoir of the Hydro-electric Development Project of the St. John River.

These vehicles, he said, can be used on the field for the final construction of the Hydro-electric Plant.

Presenting the keys to the vehicles to Lands and Mines Minister Fodee Kromah, the Japanese Ambassador said that though the quantity is limited, he hoped it would be some help to the nation-building campaign under the leadership of C-I-C Samuel K. Doe.

He also hoped that it would serve as another symbol of friendship and cooperation between Liberia and Japan.

Ambassador Murono also noted that the present 12-man Japanese Survey Mission has completed the last phase of a pre-feasibility study of the Hydro-electric project.

This, he said, is the opening path for the full-fledged feasibility study in the near future.

The Survey Mission team is headed by Mr Goto of the Japan International Cooperation Agency, he added.

On behalf of his Ministry, Minister Kromah thanked the Japanese Embassy for its kind gesture. He said that Japan has always offered help to the Ministry.

The Lands and Mines Minister told the Japanese Ambassador that the importance of the energy sector should not only be focused on locally, but globally as well.

The Minister emphasized that a steel plant in Liberia be given priority in the development project. He said when the steel market is improved, it will be profitable to sell steel.

In 1980 the Japanese Embassy contributed survey equipment amounting to $70,000 to the Liberian Catographic Survey of the Ministry. They have also provided training for Liberian professionals in the areas of survey and mining engineering.

They also undertook the first phase of the St. John's River Basin Study. The study produced topographic maps of the St. John Basin River at a scale of 1:10,000.

CSO: 4700,839

FRINGE BENEFITS OF EMPLOYEES IN CONCESSION AREAS BECOME TAXABLE

Monrovia NEW LIBERIAN in English 16 Feb 82 p 6

[Text]

A Ministry of Finance Revenue Notice issued last week, has announced that fringe benefit received by employees residing within the various concession areas in Liberia became taxable February 1.

According to Revenue Notice No. 1/82, signed by the Minister of Finance Mr. Alvin Jones, those concessions involved include the Bong Mining Company, LAMCO, Firestone Plantations Company, Liberia Agriculture Company (LAC), Liberia Company, National Iron Ore Company, among others.

The Notice said benefits received on accommodation, medical and educational facilities for employees residing within the concession areas are however excluded from taxable income.

It said notwithstanding that transportation and gasoline alloted employees residing within concession areas for personal use are now taxed at the rate of 10 percent grossed up on salaries received by the employees.

However, the Notice said, employees of concessions residing outside of the concession areas such as Monrovia and other urban centers not located within the concession areas will now have to pay taxes on accommodation, medical and educational facilities, transportation and gasoline alloted for their personal use. The rate is 20 percent grossed up on salaries received.

The new taxation took effect February 1. Meanwhile the Notice also said that taxes on such grossed up salaries shall be paid by the employees themselves and not employers.

The Notice warned that any concessionaire or employer attempting to pay on behalf of employees, the amount shall be disallowed and the employer or concessionaire taxed on said amount.

CSO: 4700/839

FORMER MINISTER TO BE PROBED FOR ALLEGED COMPLICITY IN UNION SCANDAL

Monrovia NEW LIBERIAN in English 16 Feb 82 pp 1, 6

[Article by Samuel Johnson]

[Text] Former Labour Minister Major G. Moses Duopu is to be investigated by the Justice Ministry for alleged complicity in a $62,000 scandal involving the former leadership of the Bong Workers Union, a Justice Ministry souce disclosed Monday.

Mr Duopu was relieved of his portfolio February 5 by the Head of State C-I-C Samuel K. Doe, and transferred to the PRC where he formerly served as advisor on labour and related matters.

Justice Ministry sources said Major Duopu, while serving as Labour Minister, allegedly obstructed a Justice Ministry inquest into the alleged scandal.

Denial

Mr Duopu, when contacted Monday, denied obstructing any Justice Ministry inquest into the case involving former leaders of the Union.

Matters relating to the alleged union's funds handled during the Duopu administration surfaced last December when the rank and file of the union wrote Justice Minister Isaac Nyeplu accusing their former leadership of allegedly embezzling and misappropriating several thousands dollars of Union's funds.

Workers Dissatisfied

The workers in their letter to Minister Nyeplu expressed dissatisfaction over the manner in which the case was handled by the Labour Ministry.

They also accused the Labour Ministry of denying them justice by obstructing the prosecution of the officials.

An investigation team, headed by Counsellor Flaawgan R. McFarland, was set up last month to establish the authenticity of the criminal allegations levied against the union's leadership.

Preliminary investigations by the team reportedly revealed that the Union President, William K. Sherman, and others, could not account for union's funds estimated at $62,000.00.

Union President Sherman has, however, denied, the charges.

Sherman and other officials are behind bars as the investigation continues.

Comprehensive Audit

The General Auditing Bureau, upon the request of Justice Ministry, is to conduct a comprehensive audit of the Union's financial books.

Investigation of Mr Duopu is likely to take place after the submission of the audit report, the Justice sources revealed.

CSO: 4700/839

MINISTRY OF EDUCATION OVERHAULING SCHOLARSHIP PROGRAM

Monrovia NEW LIBERIAN in English 18 Feb 82 pp 1, 4

[Text]

The over-haul of the Ministry of Education Scholarship program has begun with the deletion of 57 students from the government foreign scholarship sheme, a source at the Education Ministry disclosed Tuesday.

According to our source, these students all in the U.S. failed to meet the conditions for retaining government scholarship.

It was disclosed that the Liberian Student Counsellor in the United States, Mrs. Esther Kpor had sent a list of 14 students to the Ministry of Education here claiming no knowledge of their whereabout.

However, our source notes that some have already completed their program of studies but, have just decided to overstay their time for reasons "known to themselves."

Fourty three students according to our source, were scrapped from the foreign scholarship program by authorities of the Ministry of Education here, while Mrs. Kpor vigilance paid off with another 14; "but this is not the end we are still in the process of over-hauling and more deletions might be made if necessary."

The scholarship-over-haul exercise will not be merely confined to the U.S. but, also Europe or any country with a large concentration of government sponsored students, our source noted.

It was disclosed that some students in Europe have already been dropped from the program however, our source did not say how many. Up to press time the number of students on government scholarship was notdisclosed due to the Ministry's current over-haul.

The Ministry's new Director of Scholarship Dr. Gbenyon Natt, a veteran educator told me that in line with its over-hauling program, the Ministry of Education is keeping in constant touch with Liberian Counsellors in Europe and the United States.

"We have asked the various counsellors to furnish us reports from schools which have scholarship students. This will enable us to determine whether they (students) are specifically meeting up with the government's requirements.

According to him, a criteria has been established wherein a candidate for foreign scholarship will be required to have a pre-conditional grade of three points.

Dr. Natt said since assuming office a month ago, Education Minister has called his attention to the myriad of problems within the scholarship division. An irregularity which he said was baffling "is the tendency of up dating the files of scholarship students."

As an example the Director noted that some students who were given scholarship in 1974 for an undergraduate program are still being carried on the Ministry's scholarship list, although they should have graduated by "at most 1979."

Reasons: "Every year the label on these students file are changed. A 1974 student now have a label indicating that he began the program in 1977."

Dr. Natt said the local scholarship students will not be excluded from the over-haul.

He said with a pre-conditional grade point of 78 percent, students on the local scholarship program, will for the first time have to fill forms and bring in grade reports from their various schools.

Dr. Natt said the measures being taken are for several reasons among which are to have a proper means of identifying each student on the local program and to check up each student's progress.

"Such as how often a student transfer from schools or how many years a student has been on the program.

Source at the Ministry said a deletion of students who have proven unfit for scholarship is also in process for the local program. "Hopefully by next week an authentic list of government scholarship students will be sent to the various schools.

The over-haul of the Ministry of Education's subsidy program comes in line with a recent directive from the Head of State Samuel K. Doe, who ordered a complete over-haul of both the Ministry's Scholarship and Grant an Subsidy Program.

CSO: 4700/839

GSA WARNS REPORTER TO AVOID PUBLISHING SCHOOL SUPPLY REPORT

Monrovia NEW LIBERIAN in English 19 Feb 82 pp 1, 6

[Text]

A Reporter from this paper has received jail threats from the Director General of the General Services Agency, if he dares publish an interview held with Education Ministry Authorities on a GSA 6 months delay of $46,000 worth of supplies for Public Schools.

Education's Assistant Minister for Administration, Lansana Kromah, on Wednesday disclosed that some pub[illegible] schools will face a di[illegible] shortage of school materials during the beginning of the coming academic year due to GSA's inability to make available supplies that were requested since October 1981.

- EMBARRASSING -

Kromah said it was very embarrassing to his Ministry, because, the supplies were needed for the second semester of 1981: "Schools have opened and we still do not have these things."

But when this Reporter contacted the GSA for a balance in his story, the Deputy Director General of the Agency, Mr. Blamo Nelson, willingly gave an interview, (taperecorded) and explained that his agency was not aware of any problems facing the Education Ministry, as far as its relationship with the GSA.

- NELSON -

However, the level-headed Nelson's attempt at explaining GSA's purchasing procedure proved to be short lived, when his cigar chomping Boss Charles Taylor stormed his (Nelson) office with a barrage of threats; "I beg you do not tolerate this boy, I want to handle this matter myself," he warned his Deputy. The insults and threats continued: "Forget my Deputy, I am the Director General here and I am telling you that if a story is printed without the knowledge of the Minister of Education or his Deputy on the GSA system, I personally will lock you up."

"This is complete irresponsibility and we cannot tolerate this nonsense," he added, while asking the Reporter out of the office of his Deputy. The complete episode of Taylor's histrionics was recorded apparently unknown to him. The cassette is now in the custody of the NEW LIBERIAN.

Present during Mr.Taylor's "command" performance, were Deputy Director Blamo Nelson, Mr. Horatio Flomoku (a one time reporter from the Liberian Age) and Mr. Tidjani Darrah of the GSA, among others.

In an attempt at getting a fuller story, the Reporter later contacted Education Minister George Boley, who confirmed what his Assistant Minister (Kromah) had disclosed during a telephone interview.

"The GSA bulk purchasing system is not working. What do they expect of us, to keep quiet?" Major Boley questioned with concern.

He said nearly all Ministries are complaining, because they cannot receive their supplies on time from the General Services Agency. The Minister also expressed surprise that the Director General of the Agency would try to muffle the press and hoodwink the public.

Major Boley said the centralized system of purchasing leaves a lot to be desired by his Ministry, because "we just cannot get our school supplies."

CSO: 4700/839

BAR ASSOCIATION RECOMMENDS UPGRADING OF SUSPENDED CONSTITUTION

Monrovia DAILY OBSERVER in English 18 Feb 82 pp 1, 10

[Text]

The National Bar Association has said that a new Constitution would not solve the problems facing Liberia, but rather the management of public offices by men and women of trust and confidence.

The Bar asseverated that what went wrong in the country had nothing to do with the Constitution, but rather with the implementation of the principles and precepts embodied in it.

The lawyers who made the proposal Tuesday when they met with the National Constitution Commission at the Monrovia City Hall, said the suspended Constitution is a "good one" with fundamental principles that needed "very little updating and improvement."

They had therefore proposed the upgrading of the suspended Constitution for use in the second republic.

The lawyers suggested that the presidential term of office in the second republic be limited to a four-year-term, and that the incumbent President be allowed only a second four-year term "if the people so desire."

The legal experts also expressed their "agreement with the "substance and wording" of article four under the nonmenclature, judicial department which, they said, had provisions to ensure an independent judiciary.

On the formation of political parties, the experts called for the retention of the laws that permitted the formation of political parties by any three hundred men or women capable of voting.

The legal practitioners also suggested that several articles including one, three and five be upgraded with respective sections to cope with present day reality.

The further called for the changing of the word "commonwealth" in the preamble, to "republic" and the deletion of "christian" as a qualification to "religion." —LINA

CSO: 4700/839

BRIEFS

SOCIAL SECURITY DIRECTOR DETAINED--The Managing Director of the National Social Security and Welfare Corporation, Mr George Bolo, has been detained at the Monrovia Central Prison for his alleged involvement in a $317,000 misappropriation case at the corporation. Preliminary inquiry into the case got underway at the Ministry of Justice last Friday. Bolo is being investigated along with his Comptroller, Anthony Selma, also reportedly trapped in the misappropriation web. The investigation stemmed from an audit exercise ordered by Head of State C-I-C Samuel K. Doe. [Text] [Monrovia NEW LIBERIAN in English 16 Feb 82 p 1]

WEST GERMAN WATER PROJECT--The superintendent of Grand Cape Mount County, 2nd Lt J. Hezekiah Bowen has given the assurance that the people of his county will offer their full support and cooperation for the implementation of the 2.06 million dollars water project that is to be undertaken in Robertsport City by the government of Liberia and West Germany. Speaking in an interview, Superintendent Bowen noted that the recent negotiations between the two Governments for the construction of the water project was a clear manifestation of the People's Redemption Council's commitment to improve the living condition of the people. West Germany recently signed an agreement in Monrovia for the Liberia Water and Sewer Corporation to undertake a 2.06 million dollars water project in Robertsport, Grand Cape Mount County and a 3.5 million dollars water project in Kakata, Gibi Territory. Superintendent Bowen said that all efforts would be made to ensure the successful completion of the project in his county. [Text] [Monrivia DAILY OBSERVER in English 18 Feb 82 p 3]

CSO: 4700/839

CORRESPONDENT DISCUSSES CABINET RESHUFFLE

Paris LE MONDE in French 17-18 Jan 82 p 4

[Article by Jean-Pierre Langellier]

[Text] Antananarivo (AFP)--Madagascar's president, Didier Ratsiraka, announced a cabinet shake-up on Friday, 15 January.

Prime Minister Desire Rakotoarijaona, who has been in office since 1977, remains in his position. Mr Rokotovao-Razakaboana (financial affairs and planning) and Rarivoson (economic affairs and commerce) lost their cabinet positions. They were replaced, respectively, by Mr Pascal Rakotomavo (financial affairs and planning, which is henceforth directly attached to the office of the president) and Mr Georges Solofoson, the new minister of commerce and industry. These two men previously held the positions of managing director of the Aro insurance firm and chief of staff of President Ratsiraka's civilian cabinet.

Lastly, there were three resignations from the High Revolutionary Council--Charles Ravoajanahary, Sambson Gilbert (to become minister of justice) and Robert Koto.

The previous government had been in place since August 1977 and had the same number of ministers.

By Our East Africa Correspondent

Nairobi--The main upshot of this shake-up--the fourth since the 1975 revolution--was the ousting of the Malagasy government's two principal "technocrats," Mr Rarivoson and Rakotovao-Razakaboana. The former, minister of economic affairs and commerce, had never shown himself to be very enthusiastic about socialism. The latter, minister of financial affairs and planning, had gradually been distancing himself from an experiment he seemed increasingly reluctant to endorse.

These two individuals, trained in the school of economic liberalism, embodied the faction within the governing team that was most critical toward socialist methods, which had led primarily to scarcity and to the creation of an inflated bureaucracy. They were also opposed to the growing influence of the Soviets and North Koreans on Madagascar.

The removal of Mr Rakotovao-Razakaboana doubtless also relates to more directly political concerns. In the eyes of the Merina middle-class of the high plateaus, who are hostile to the regime, he had over the years come to embody--sometimes over his own protest--the hope for a possible return to economic and political liberalism. It is certainly no coincidence that his dismissal follows by only a few days Mr Ratsiraka's announcement that he intends to seek re-election for another 7-year term as president. By sacking a potential rival, the head of state has clearly signaled that this is not the time for alternation. The former minister was named to the Supreme Council of the Revolution, where he will easily be neutralized.

The cabinet shuffle does not really represent a new episode in the power struggle between the "pragmatists" and the "ideologues." Mr Simon Pierre, a man known for his extremist rhetoric, was removed from his key position as minister of agriculture, where he had been less than a shining success. Mr Ratsiraka has above all brought in men in whom he can trust, who could not be suspected of laxity or disloyalty. An example is the new minister of planning, Mr Georges Solofoson, who showed his loyalty for some years as head of the presidency's civilian cabinet.

The changes in Antananarivo raise at least two questions. Messrs Rarivoson and Razakaboana had the advantage of credibility with international economic circles, particularly the IMF [International Monetary Fund], whose aid is vital for Madagascar. Their departure could complicate the task of a government in need. Finally, it might be asked whether changes of personnel will be enough to cure an economy whose ills are above all structural: agricultural decline, debt, incompetence, and corruption.

9516
CSO: 4719/496

MFM, MFT ECONOMIST ON DEVALUATION

Tananarive MADAGASCAR-MATIN in French 8 Jan 82 pp 1, 2

[Interview with Mr Olivier Raparison, an economist in the "Red and Expert" technical branch of the MFM/MFT [Militants for the Establishment of a Proletarian Regime/Militants for the Realization of the Revolution], interviewer, date and place not given]

[Text] [Question] First of all, what do we mean by devaluation?

[Answer] This is when a state voluntarily alters the parity of its currency. By doing this, the state decreases the value in gold of its monetary unit and as a corollary the exchange value of the currency in relation to foreign currencies.

[Question] Why would a state be compelled to devalue its currency?

[Answer] Devaluation can have many causes. For example, a state devalues its currency simply to remain in line with the devaluation adopted by another state, in order to protect its trade and the expansion of its economy. But devaluation may also be an official recognition of an already accomplished deterioration of the state's currency caused perhaps by domestic inflation or by chronic balance of payments problems, and most often by both together. Devaluation thus facilitates a stabilization of the situation, when the economic disorders entailed by those two kinds of problems have become intolerable.

[Question] What effect does monetary imbalance have on consumption?

[Answer] A monetary imbalance does not really influence consumption in the short term except in situations of scarcity, when the public wants to resume its old habits; or in the long term, except when individuals realize they have too much cash in hand. Economic actors then think they are more wealthy and have the impression that they have climbed a rung on the income ladder. They might then suddenly start thinking about buying things, primarily durable goods: autos, houses, etc., which previously they had not hoped to afford. This produces disturbances in the economic machinery.

[Question] Let us go back to devaluation. Can the IMF force a state to devalue its currency?

[Answer] No. It is the state and the state alone that has the sovereign right to devalue its currency. Nevertheless, it is possible that the state in question may have been constrained to make this decision in order to get into a position where it can conform to the financial guidelines imposed by the IMF on a member country who asks its help in resolving its monetary problems.

[Question] Can devaluation improve the economy?

[Answer] Yes. But only if it results in re-creating the conditions for expansion on a sound basis. In other words, it is absolutely necessary for it to be carried out at a time when the economic situation has begun to stabilize, so that there is hope for a substantial improvement in the balance of payments and an abatement of inflation. Otherwise, disaster is guaranteed.

[Question] What is the optimum rate of devaluation?

[Answer] There is no standard optimum. It varies according to the condition of the economy in the country in question. Too small a devaluation does not produce the expected results, while too large a devaluation throws the economic machinery out of gear.

[Question] And reevaluation?

[Answer] It is precisely the opposite of devaluation. In plain words, the state increases the parity of its currency in relation to gold and other foreign currencies.

[Question] Why would a state revalue its currency?

[Answer] To pay less for its imports and its debts.

But reevaluation, like devaluation, is a two-edged sword--because if in fact the state can pay for imports and meet its debt obligations for less, then there is also the risk that its exports may be ruined, because the products it puts on the world market will cost its customers more dearly, and the latter may then turn to other countries to supply their needs.

[Question] Can a reevaluation be successful, and what, in your opinion, is required to make it a success?

[Answer] Yes, reevaluation can be perfectly successful, but in order to understand the conditions for success, one must be in a position to assess what the state can hope to gain by it, in other words, the relative amount gained by paying less for its imports and debts, on the one hand, and the amount lost by the "slackening" caused by a decline in its exports. Then, one must carefully analyze the impact of that "slackening" both on overall economic activity and on the balance of payments.

[Question] Are you personally in favor of devaluation or reevaluation when a country is having monetary problems?

[Answer] No one can make a logical decision on this question without an in-depth analysis of the factors at play at a given point in time. However, I will say that either step can solve a country's monetary problems, if the state's credibility is intact both domestically and internationally.

9516
CSO: 4719/496

JOINT COMMUNIQUE ISSUED WITH YUGOSLAVIA

Maputo NOTICIAS in Portuguese 2 Feb 82 p 3

[Text] At the conclusion of an official visit of a Yugoslav diplomatic delegation to our country, the following joint communique was issued:

At the invitation of his excellency, Joaquim Alberto Chissano, minister of foreign affairs of the People's Republic of Mozambique [RPM], his excellency, Josip Vrhovec, federal secretary for foreign affairs af the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia [SFRY], paid an official and friendly visit to the RPM from 27 to 29 January of this year.

During his stay in the RPM, SFRY's federal secretary for foreign affairs laid a floral wreath on the Monument to Mozambican Heroes and visited the Museum of the Revolution.

Foreign Affairs Minister Joaquim Alberto Chissano and Foreign Affairs Federal Secretary Josip Vrhovec held official conversations. They thoroughly discussed views on bilateral relations between their two countries and on international questions of concern to both sides. They noted that relations and cooperation between the RPM and the SFRY are successfully developing and expanding and reaffirmed the importance of meetings and the exchange of views at all levels between the two countries.

The RPM minister of foreign affairs informed the SFRY federal secretary for foreign affairs about the efforts and determination of the Mozambican people, under the leadership of FRELIMO, to overcome underdevelopment in the 1980-1990 decade.

The two parties reaffirmed their mutual interest in the greatest diversification possible in economic cooperation between their two countries. They supported in initiatives by Yugoslav economic organizations in actively participating in RPM's economic development, particularly in sectors involving projects in investment, energy, communications, civil engineering, geology and agriculture and in regional projects connected with development, information, health and scientific research.

The two ministers expressed deep concern over the general deterioration of the international situation, characterized by an ever-increasing use of force and interference in the life of independent and sovereign countries.

They noted that world instability is being aggravated not only by continued intensification of the arms race but also by the fact that crises which affect the world have not been resolved while new ones continue to emerge; there is also a continuing widening of the gap between north and south and ever-increasing tension in relations between the superpowers and blocs.

The two ministers devoted particular attention to the importance and role of the movement of nonaligned countries in resolving the principle international political and economic problems. They concluded that the policy of nonalignment has been reaffirmed as a strong and independent element of nonadherence to blocs and has itself become a point of assured support and the only alternative for the independence of countries and peoples and the only alternative remaining to avoid a division of the world.

The two ministers stressed the importance of strengthening cooperation among nonaligned countries and their solidarity and unity of action based on the fundamental principles of the nonaligned policy. They felt that any disputes and conflicts among nonaligned countries should be resolved through peaceful means and in accordance with the UN Charter, the OAU and the nonalignment policy.

The two parties repeated their readiness for close cooperation with other nonaligned countries in preparing for the Seventh Summit Conference of the Heads of State of the Governments of Nonaligned Countries to be held in Bagdad in September 1982.

During the conversations special attention was directed toward the problems of Africa, particularly the situation in southern Africa. The two parties noted that southern Africa is becoming a dangerous scene of crisis from day to day, threatening the peace and security not only of the countries in that area but also of those in other areas.

The two ministers strongly condemned the illegal occupation of Namibia and attacks by the racist regime of South Africa against its neighboring states as well as the policy of racism and apartheid practiced by the Pretoria regime. They reaffirmed their complete support for the struggle of liberation of the Namibian people and for SWAPO, their only and legitimate representative. Lastly, they stressed the need for immediate measures to be taken to implement the UN plan with respect to Namibia as contained in Resolution 435 decided upon by the UN Security Council.

The two ministers reaffirmed their support of efforts and initiatives aimed at transforming the Indian Ocean into an area of peace.

"In analyzing the Middle East situation, the two parties noted that a just and lasting peace in this area will be possible only if Israel withdraws from all Arab territories taken over in the 1967 war and recognizes the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people to establish their own state in Palestine. They reasserted their support for the PLO as the only and legitimate representative of the Palestinian people and strongly condemned Israel's recent annexation of the Golan Heights.

"The two parties called for a peaceful and just solution to the present world crisis, so that people everywhere may exercise their sovereign rights and independence and be free to determine their own future.

"In examining the status of international economic relations, the two parties expressed great concern over the difficult situation being experienced by developing countries."

They reaffirmed the need to reach agreement within the context of the United Nations on beginning worldwide negotiations aimed at establishing a new international economic order. The two parties stressed the importance of strengthening economic cooperation between nonaligned countries and other developing countries.

The two ministers expressed satisfaction at the results obtained during their conversations which were held in an atmosphere of cordiality, traditional friendship and mutual understanding.

His excellency, Josip Vrhovec, the SFRY federal secretary for foreign affairs, expressed his profound gratitude to his excellency, Joaquim Alberto Chissano, the RPM minister of foreign affairs, for the warm and friendly reception and hospitality given him and his delegation during their stay in the RPM.

Lastly, the SFRY federal secretary for foreign affairs invited the RPM minister of foreign affairs to pay an official visit to Yugoslavia. The invitation was accepted with pleasure.

8568
CSO: 4742/207

BRIEFS

EEC COOPERATION EXPECTED--Official conversations between delegations of the government of the People's Republic of Mozambique [RPM] and the EEC began yesterday in Maputo. The EEC committee arrived in our country yesterday morning and was met at the Maputo Airport by Sergio Vieira, minister of agriculture, and Alcantara Santos, minister of ports and land transport. Sergio Vieira, who is heading our country's delegation in the conversations, said that "EEC's thinking is not unanimous with regard to our area insofar as the political problems of southern Africa are concerned." However, Mozambique is expecting this meeting to produce definite forms of bilateral cooperation, for "people do not cooperate on things which divide them," Minister Sergio Vieira said. Edgar Pisani, commissioner for EEC development and head of the visiting delegation, said, in turn, that his organization is ready to cooperate with the countries of southern Africa to seek a solution to urgent political problems and fruitful cooperation. Shortly after his arrival at the airport, Pisani said that the conversations to be held with the Mozambican officials will be centered around aspects of bilateral cooperation between our country and the EEC within the framework of the SADCC [Southern African Development Coordination Conference]. In addition to the minister of agriculture and the minister of ports and land transport, the Mozambican delegation includes Joaquim Jose Tenreiro de Almeida, secretary of state for fishing, and Fernando Honwana, special assistant to the president of the republic, and other government members. The EEC delegation also includes Victor Allard, Belgian ambassador to the RPM, and Maurice Foley, assistant director general for EEC development. [Text] [Maputo NOTICIAS in Portuguese 6 Feb 82 p 1] 8568

POWER FROM CAHORA BASSA--"Beginning next year, Zambezia Province will receive electric power from Cahora Bassa," Radio Mozambique announced yeaterday. The power supply line will follow the Caia-Quelimane-Mocuba route. However, the installation of the line is experiencing certain difficulties due to the rain which has been falling without interruption and making the roads impassable. This project will make the supply of electric power available to various sectors of Zambezia Province and will subsequently provide power to Nampula and Cabo Delgado provinces. [Text] [Maputo NOTICIAS in Portuguese 1 Feb 82 p 1] 8568

CSO: 4742/207

VERGES ON POSSIBILITY OF LEFT ACCEDING TO POWER NEXT YEAR

Saint Denis TEMOIGNAGES in French 11 Jan 82 p 12

[Article: "To Prepare for Change in Reunion; Yesterday at the Joint Meeting of the General Committee and the Central Committee of the Reunionese Communist Party (PCR), Paul Verges Stated: '"The Left Can and Must Accede to Power Next Year in Reunion'"]

[Text] Yesterday morning, the General Committee and the Central Committee of the PCR held an important joint session, the first of the year 1982. The work was presided over by our comrade, Lucet Langenier, while the other members of the Secretariat, Paul Verges, Elie Hoarau, Julien Ramin, and Claude Hoarau, also took a place at the rostrum.

After a roll call of the members present, Claude Hoarau, in the name of the Secretariat, gave the introductory work report, which consisted of, to begin with, an analysis of the evolution of the political situation in France.

The essential characteristic of the year 1981 was the ascendancy to power in France of the left, and the forming of a government which includes Communist ministers, Claude Hoarau brought out.

What strikes observers is that the left is inevitably in power for 7 years, probably for 14 years, and possibly for 21 years.

This analysis is based first, on a true appreciation of the evolution of social forces in France; this optimism is then nourished by the positive results already obtained by the new government in the economic area.

Claude Hoarau reviewed the reforms undertaken at this level for the past 6 months. The nationalizations, the new rights of the workers, the increase of SMIC [Interoccupational Minimum Growth Wage], allocations for families, and aid for the handicapped, allowed for a response to the expectations of workers and for an increase in internal consumption. These dispositions expressed themselves by initiating a recovery and a slowing of inflation.

Indeed, these indicators of trends must still be confirmed but they bear witness to the healthy direction the economic evolution of France is taking. And backed by these initial results, the minister of finances and the economy is able to report only 10 percent inflation for 1982. "Here is an element that will be decisive in the political debate," emphasized the speaker.

The administrative and political reforms already taken, or that will be implemented in the coming months, also allow one to hope that the left in France will become more secure since they favor a stronger intervention by workers in politics. The democratic election of the Administrative Council of the Social Security officer, the reform of the Conciliation Board, and the decentralization are moving in this direction.

Definitively speaking, the recorded economic successes, the extension of democracy, and of course, the union of the left in France, ought to gladden Reunionese who are desirous of promoting genuine development in their country.

Reunion has not remained entirely on the fringe of change. And the balance sheet for the last several months incontestably shows some positive aspects. The increases in social aid may be cited, for example, or the improvement in aid to planters, the beginning of a policy of dialogue, or the liberation of FR3 (see below).

Nonetheless, in a global sense the change has not yet occurred, and the right is still in power here; it has not disarmed and is trying to take the political initiative. The demonstration of 11 December, the boycott of the meetings of the general and regional councils, and the last conference of the RPR (Gaullist) illustrate the strategy of tension the right has sought to apply with the goal of opposing Reunionese in the government and the Reunionese among themselves.

It is in this climate that the Council of Minister's decision was announced to hold district elections in March 1982 the same as in France. Claude Hoarau spoke on this subject, of "incontestable withdrawal" by the government, but he specified, the principle of the single assembly remains for the moment the main direction.

But it is obvious that our party and all of the left must here play a motorized role in the process of decentralization. And the interest of Reunion, and that of the Reunionese, demands that the left take power in the country.

Claude Hoarau then insisted upon the necessity of reinforcing the party. After having taken into account certain gaps which have been observed these past months, he stated: "We must considerably improve work methods in the party and be much closer to the masses." To reach this goal the priority tasks were outlined. It requires the [altering] of TEMOIGNAGES, the renewal of cares, and the forming of party cadres. As for our newspaper, it was decided to start an advance payment campaign for subscriptions, and to appreciably increase sales of the Saturday issue.

Furthermore, on the level of party organization, measures were taken to ensure a better control of activities and finances.

Lastly, our party decided to engage in an intense political battle in the upcoming district elections so as to give proof of the growth of its influence, and that of the remainder of the left on Reunion. There is no question, of course, of envisioning, by means of this conference, a leftist majority on the General Council. But these elections are the opportunity for an intense information campaign on the perspects that await us, and they are also the means of reinforcing the trust of the workers in political changes that occur with little pressure.

A discussion was then started on this report, which was widely approved and enriched by the numerous participants. Most of the comrades stressed the need to strengthen TEMOIGNAGES and the party in order to allow the entire left to push ahead to new victories. This was also the tone of the important intervention of Paul Verges. He centered all his remarks around the essential question: "What must we do, we Communists, so that in 9 weeks the left inflicts a severe defeat on the right and thus speeds up its march to power next year, when the new proportional assembly election takes place?"

Here is the perspect that each militant of the PCR must hold in their sights, clearly and permanently, for all their tasks.

Our comrade, the secretary general, showed clearly to all that the left can and must win in the coming district elections. And How: the left can and must progress in seats; the left can and must face the right to retreat, in votes, in percentages, and in seats.

This must be the signal to all Reunionese people that the left is irresistably accelerating its march to power in Reunion, in a single year.

But to do this, Paul Verges said, TEMOIGNAGES and the party must be strengthened at all costs.

We must, said Paul Verges, "...forge a truly revolutionary party, serving the people, and comprised of confessed militants, ever more responsible, never self-indulgent and fully conscious of the historical role that they were called to play in the coming months." After this intercession by Paul Verges, the proceedings were continued in commissions concretely to study the organizational measures to take to prepare for the change. We will of course have the opportunity to come back to this.

An Initial Balance Sheet of the Left on Reunion

Social Measures

- Allocations to families: + 56 percent from 1 July, 1981 (up twofold, plus 25 percent)
- Monthly allocations: + 39 percent beginning 1 January, 1982
- Old age allocations: minimum of Fr 2000 beginning 1 January 1982; for a couple, Fr 3,400 per month

Sugar Cane Growers

Social aid was granted at Fr 25 per ton for small planters. It may be further noted: -reduction of payment delays; -modification of the bonus-penalty formula; -setting up of mixed factory commissions; the election of Angelo Lauret as president president of CIICS [Expansion unknown].

Geranium Growers

Geranium growers should realize an aid of Fr 485 per hectare, and a salvage and reconversion plan will be going into effect quickly.

Policy of Dialogue

This policy was born some weeks after 10 May on the question of price increases. It also prevailed in the employment battle. On these two levels, unavoidably limited but positive results were obtained.

Information

On this level the changes are more significant. Naturally one cannot pass in silence the liberalization of FR3, characterized by a greater respect for the pluralism of information.

It must also be noted that from now on TEMOIGNAGES benefits from legal announcments which heretofore had always been denied it, despite the fact that it fulfilled all requisite conditions for them. In short, since the arrival of Mr Michel Levallois, structured and regular relations have been installed between the Prefecture and the entire press.

9802
CSO: 4710/517

EDITORIAL DEFENDS REUNIONESE NATIONAL IDENTITY

Saint Denis TEMOIGNAGES in French 13 Jan 82 p 1

[Editorial: "Proud To Be Reunionese"]

[Text] The reactionaries in our country have trouble accepting the beginning of change and taking into account by the government of the history and identity of the Reunionese people.

The celebration on 20 December was the opportunity for the reactionaires to express their spite and bad faith toward one of the great dates of Reunionese history.

However, the ones most closed-mouthed on such a change, and on progress in respecting Reunionese identity, are those who belong to the old colonial bourgeoisi bourgeoisie, the old, white bourgeoisie of Reunion; those who own the wealth of our country and exploit our people.

This is clearly evident in the report presented by Bernard Legros at the RPR (Gaullist) sessions, in which he states: "The PCR [Reunionese Communist Party] seeks to endow the Reunionese man with a history, with a Reunionese language!" Everyone will understand that such ineptitude, such stupidity, thinly disguises the rancour of this representative of the rich whites at seeing that Reunionese hisotry, not solely of European origin, is beginning to be taken into account.

It is this that bothers the colonial bourgeoisie of Reunion. Before now, official history was only the history of rich whites, the history of the bourgeoisie in Reunion.

The bitterness of the whites goes to the limits of racism when Bernard Legros states: "The goal [of the left] is to divide the people, giving priority to those of Indo-African origin."

But who before now divided the Reunionese people, if not the white bourgeoisie? They have exploited the Reunionese, regardless of origin.

It is only simple justice that today Reunionese of African, Malagasian, and Indian origin (who make up the majority of our people) find their just place, little by little in the history of Reunion, and in Reunionese society.

That Legros should feel guilty, since he defends egotistical interests, is obvious.

But we are Reunionese, from Europe, Africa, Madagascar, India, and China; and we are pround to be Reunionese from Europe, Africa, Madagascar, India, and China. And let no one demand that we choose this origin or the other with the aim of dividing us!

The Reunionese have more than 3 centuries of history, during which our people were forged.

It is precisely from this history that they sustain themselves today, so as to move toward expanding and finally to be themselves. And to reassure Legros, it is indeed for a better Reunionses understanding of his history that the Reunionese Communist Party is working for, to move toward the development of our country.

9802
CSO: 4719/517

REPORTAGE ON VISIT OF CUBAN COMMUNIST PARTY OFFICIALS

Week's Visit

Victoria NATION in English 15 Feb 82 p 2

[Text]

TWO officials of the Communist Party of Cuba (CPC) call on Mr. Guy Sinon, the Secretary General of the Seychelles People's Progressive Front, this morning at the start of a week's visit to the Republic.

Mr. Julio Miro Garcia, a member of the Matanzas Provincial Committee of the CPC, and Mrs. Maria Serra, an official in the CPC Central Committee, arrived in Seychelles yesterday afternoon.

They were met at the airport by Mrs. Sylvette Frichot, member of the SPPF Central Executive Committee and Principal Co-ordinator of the Front, and the Roberto Valdes Munoz, the Cuban ambassador to Seychelles.

The two Cuban party officials are to hold talks with a delegation from the SPPF Central Executive Committee and to call on the CEC members individually.

Mr. Miro and Mrs. Serra will also visit SPPF branches, meet officials of the National Workers' Union and the Seychelles Women's Association, tour agricultural, community and other development projects, visit the National Youth Service village and tour Praslin.

SAP

Meeting With SPPF Officials

Victoria NATION in English 18 Feb 82 p 2

[Text]

A DELEGATION from the Central Executive Committee of the Seychelles People's Progressive Front held talks yesterday morning with the two visiting officials of the Communist Party of Cuba.

Nine members of the 15-strong Central Executive Committee led by Secretary-General Mr. Guy Sinon met in the Maison du Peuple with Mr Julio Miro, a provincial CPC leader and Mrs. Maria Serra, an official from the CPC Central Committee, who arrived last Sunday for a week's visit.

The two Cuban officials were accompanied by the Cuban Ambassador to Seychelles, Mr. Roberto Valdes.

In the afternoon, the visitors called on the National Executive Board of the National Workers Union led by National Chairman Mr. Olivier Charles.

The CPC officials have already called on several members of the Front Central Executive Committee individually and more such talks will be held during the rest of the week.

Yesterday's programme for the delegation included the laying of flowers at the Zom Lib memorial to the June 5, 1977 Liberation, and a visit to the Port Glaud SPPF Branch.

Since Monday the two officials have also toured development and education projects.

SAP

CSO: 4700/841

OFFICIALS SATISFIED WITH FERRY SERVICE PROJECT

Victoria NATION in English 13 Feb 82 pp 1, 2

[Article by Ronnie Jumeau]

[Text]

PORT authorities and schooner crews said yesterday they were satisfied with the overall progress of the new ferry services between Mahé, Praslin and La Digue.

After talks last week with generally satisfied SPPF Branch officials on the two neighbouring islands, and closely following progress in the first month of services, senior transport officials said yesterday morning that passengers and schooners were settling down to the new schedule with few problems.

Last December, old faithful Lady Esme, the government inner island ferry for 20 years, was "retired' to pass the rest of her days travelling to the nearer outer islands such as the Amirantes.

Since January 1, ferry services have been handled by licensed schooners as it is believed that they can do a better and more economical job by combining these with their cargo runs.

BOON

In fact, said Captain James Ferrari, the Principal Secretary for Transport and Civil Aviation, as the schooners were based on Praslin and La Digue, the new services were a boon to the people of those islands. For example, a Praslinois could catch the schooner at Baie Ste. Anne at 6 a.m., arrive in Port Victoria about three hours later, attend to business, and return the same day at 1 p.m. or, if he wished, on the 5 p.m. Air Seychelles flight.

In the past, Captain Ferrari continued, the Lady Esme, based on Mahé, left from Port Victoria in the morning and a traveller from Praslin arrived at around 5 p.m., too late to attend to any business. He was forced to spend two nights on Mahé if he could not afford the more expensive plane fare back as the Lady Esme left on alternate days.

The new arrangements, said the Principal Secretary, were thus a big advantage to farmers on Praslin and La Digue who could now get home the same day in time for evening chores on their farms and plantations. The schooners arrive back at Praslin or La Digue between 4 and 5 p.m. If any vegetables or other produce were shipped to Seycom they were collected the same morning and stored or sold fresh. In the past, with the Lady Esme arriving after office hours, the vegetables would not make it to Seycom until the next morning.

Another advantage of the strict schedule, Captain Ferrari said, was that people living in the countryside of Praslin and Mahé, knew what times the boats would leave and could make sure of being on time to catch one.

The services are also a financial help to schooner owners, and, in the long run, will certainly boost the local boat building industry, pointed out Harbour Master Captain Robert Morgan.

Apart from having always been the main freighters of the inner islands, the schooners now have many more passengers than before, the biggest carrying over 30 a trip.

Two schooners do the Praslin service on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays — La Belle Praslinoise (32 passengers), and Louis Alfred (36). Rainbow Runner (15) takes over on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

The Aroha (20) does the slightly longer La Digue run on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, and La Perina takes over on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Between Praslin and La Digue there are two charter boats providing daily services also according to schedule.

Apart from these services, the schooners are free to operate as they wish on free days.

Meanwhile, on Praslin, bus timetables have been adapted to the departure and arrival times of the schooners.

The schooners leave Praslin or La Digue at 6 a.m. and return at 1 p.m.. A trip costs R20, compared to Air Seychelles' R80, and most Seychellois agree that in sunny, calm weather it is the best way to travel, especially if the boats cut down on the engines and use their sails. The sails help save fuel and make the trips, especially when there are few passengers, much more economical than the Lady Esme ever could.

The skippers of some schooners tied alongside the Long Pier awaiting their departure time told Seychelles Agence Presse yesterday that the new services were a good thing and they were working well. The only problem, said one skipper, was that even if a boat had a full cargo and a full complement of passengers it could not sail until the scheduled time. Other seamen mentioned unco-operative passengers who grumbled on arriving to find the schooners full. "Still", said one skipper "we have no real complaints."

While tickets are now being sold on board just before the trip, skippers are being encouraged to sell tickets in advance, guaranteeing places for later.

One problem acknowledged by both sides and being looked into by the harbour master is that there are not enough vessels on the La Digue run. However, Captain Morgan said, with much more development projects planned for the inner islands, passenger and cargo traffic was expected to increase in the long run, encouraging both the sea transport and boat building industries.

Until this happens, the harbour master is ready to help out with a government boat whenever reasonable increase in passengers warrants it — such as at the beginning and end of school terms when many children travel between the three main islands.

Port authorities, the Praslin and La Digue SPPF Branches and schooner owners would continue working close together to improve services, Captain Ferrari said

CSO: 4700/841

REPORTAGE ON NP SPLIT OVER POWER-SHARING

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 27 Feb 82 pp 2, 6

[Article by Jaap Theron]

[Text]

POWER SHARING, or non-power sharing between the Whites of South Africa and the country's Coloureds and Indians, peoples, will be the main issue under discussion at today's crucial Transvaal National party head committee meeting in Pretoria.

The Transvaal NP head committee will, in fact, today for the first time ever, have to take an emphatic decision on whether to share power — no matter to what extent — with Coloureds and Indians, a member of the Transvaal NP hierarchy, told the Citizen yesterday.

The source said the outcome, whether in favour or not in favour of any form of power sharing, was likely to detrimentally affect on the unity of Afrikanerdom.

Dr Andries Treurnicht and the MPs who walked out of NP's parliamentary caucus will today rigidly defend their view that the NP has no mandate from the electorate to share power.

The three deputy chairmen of the Transvaal congress, Mr Fanie Botha, Mr F W de Klerk and Mr Hendrik Schoeman, will back the motion of confidence in the Prime Ministers' interpretation of party policies — the very issue which lead to this biggest split ever in the ranks of the National Party.

The Prime Minister's equally determined declaration that he would continue to execute policies along the line of "Healthy power sharings", cannot be overlooked and would naturally form the basis of arguments against those of Treurnicht and his supporters.

The battle lines are thus drawn for perhaps the fiercest infight in the Transvaal NP head committee since 1948.

The Transvaal NP executive held a special meeting in Cape Town yesterday with a view to sort out the agenda for today's head committee meeting.

The anti-Treurnicht group, who attempted to appoint a chairman at yesterday's executive meeting for today's head committee meeting other than Dr Treurnicht, were immediately defeated by the Treurnicht-men who simply insisted that Dr Treurnicht should be the chairman in general discussions.

But they scored a point in getting an important decision that the head committee would elect its own chairman with regard to issues which affected the person of Dr Treurnicht.

Both sides counted heads for today's head committee meeting and both sides were confident that they would have an easy majority over the other side today.

If the Treurnicht men get a majority of votes today, Dr Treurnicht would have no problems to drive home his standpoint of non-power sharing.

Today's head committee fight would therefore also be a battle for control of the Transvaal National Party, its funds and its organisation.

Since the split in the parliamentary caucus on Wednesday it was noticeable that the measure of bitterness among the Treurnicht supporters increased, while there was an exceptionally calm and controlled atmosphere among the vast majority who stayed with the Prime Minister.

Together with Dr Treurnicht, 22 MP'S left the caucus. One of them, Mr Dirk Poggenpoel, of Beaufort West yesterday issued an apology to the Prime Minister and returned to the caucus.

Mr Poggenpoel said he, at the moment of vote in the caucus, did not fully realise what it was all about, and he "Thanked the Prime Minister for the opportunity to him and other to come to their senses."

If the other side wins, Dr Treurnicht could be expelled from the party.

The Transvaal NP head committee has the power to 'expel without giving reasons' any member of the Transvaal NP.

But it was not clear yesterday whether either the Treurnicht men or those who remained in the parliamentary caucus were planning a dramatic step, such as the immediate expulsion of those who voted against them.

It's a Lie, Says Dr T.

CAPE TOWN. — "Speculation in the Press that I supported Dr Jan Grobler's editorial calling for a "one-government system" during a Cabinet meeting, was a downright lie," Dr Andri s Treurnicht, Minister of State Administration, and Transvaal NP leader, said yesterday.

Dr Treurnicht, who briefly spoke to Pressmen after yesterday's special executive meeting of the Transvaal NP, was asked if a report were true which stated he, in fact during a Cabinet meeting, had fully accepted the controversial Nat 80s editorial statement of Dr Jan Grobler, the NP's chief information officer, "that it was natural that there could be only one government in a country."

He said he was not prepared to say more about what had happened at the Cabinet meeting, apart from saying the speculation was a "downright lie".

"But if I'm challenged about what I said (at the Cabinet meeting), I will reveal the true facts," he said. An allegation like that could only come from the Cabinet.

"In my mind there is no misunderstanding about what I said or did not say.

"In some heads the mechanismmight be wrong, not in mine."

Backing From Natal

PIETERMARITZBURG. — The Administrator of Natal, Mr Stoffel Botha, yesterday came out strongly in support of the Prime Minister, Mr P W Botha, in his clash with Transvaal National Party leader Dr Andries Treurnicht.

In a brief statement the Administrator said he "rejected with contempt" the standpoint of Dr Treurnicht and his lieutenants.

Reacting to the statement of the former Prime Minister and State President, Mr B J Vorster, the Administrator said Mr Vorster should keep his views to himself and to realise "that his time of power and influence is over. I totally reject his preconceived view of the political situation." —

Dr T Rejects TvL NP Report

CAPE TOWN. — Dr Andries Treurnicht, Transvaal National Party leader, whose political future is to be decided in Pretoria today, yesterday rejected a statement of the three deputy-chairmen of the Transval National Party, Mr FW de Klerk, Mr Hendrik Schoeman and Mr Fanie Botha, that he had created a wrong impression about the real issue at stake.

"I think I knew very well what everything was about," Dr Treurnicht said.

The three deputy-chairmen said in a statement in Cape Town they regretted Dr Treurnicht had attempted to create the wrong impression regarding the real issue at stake.

They said it was unnecessary and not in the interests of the NP, that an impression had been created that deep-rooted differences on principle existed.

They also said it wa unfair comment that the Prime Minister and 101 other caucus members had deviated from party policies.

The statement said the real issue at stake was the failure of Dr Treurnicht and the other dissidents to accept the Prime Minister's role as final interpreter of the NP's policy and his final responsibility to the NP's party congresses.

TODAY's meeting of the Transvaal National Party head committee is a crucial one, since it will determine who will control the party in this province.

If Dr Treurnicht were to do so, then the situation would arise in which the leading provincial party (the National Party is a federal organisation) would be in the hands of the faction that opposes the Prime Minister in his interpretation of National Party policy.

The party organisation, its finances and its political clout would then be ranged against the Prime Minister.

On the other hand, if the pro-PW Botha group, which includes all the Transvaal Cabinet Ministers except Dr Treurnicht and Dr Ferdi Hartzenberg, were to gain control of the party, Dr Treurnicht and his supporters may find themselves out of the Transvaal party.

They would either have to remain in Parliament as independents, form a new party, or join up with the Afrikaner Right-wing parties like the Herstigte Nasionale Party, Dr Connie Mulder's National Conservative Party and Aksie Eie Toekoms.

Not immediately, perhaps, but the pressure in time would make the idea of a united Right-wing front almost irresistible.

Whichever way the vote goes today, that will not be the end of the story.

Afrikanerdom has split right down the middle.

What has brought this state of affairs about is the very nature of the challenges that face the volk as it watches many of its ingrained political ideals crumble.

There are the Afrikaans speakers — and the nearly 200 000 votes which the HNP received in the general election last year show they are a very substantial number — who believe that to concede anything more to the Blacks is a sure way of ensuring that the Whites do not survive.

They still believe that South Africa can be run exclusively by the Whites — and that the Blacks need only be given such rights as will enable them to express their aspirations in their own areas in "White" South Africa, in the homelands and in independent Black States.

The Whites must remain baas, in the view of the Herstigtes. The Whites must maintain their sovereignty at all costs, in the view of the Treurnichites.

Against this is the verligte approach that the Whites must join with the Indians and Coloureds, who have no homelands, in a political set-up in which the three communities can have one Parliament, with three chambers, with a Council of Ministers.

Will this lead to a diminution of White power and eventually to the destruction of White sovereignty?

The Treurnichites think it will, especially as the Prime Minister has talked of "healthy power sharing", the words "power sharing" being anathema to Afrikaners who have been taught over the years that apartheid, baasskap or separate development is the only policy which can ensure the survival of the volk and of the country.

Talk of one government for South Africa and of "healthy power sharing" is the immediate cause of the split, but Afrikanerdom is deeply divided on where it and the country should be, or should go, in these challenging, dangerous times in which we live.

Thus today's meeting will decide what happens to the Transvaal National Party, but it will not finally resolve the conflict within the volk.

The fact that former Prime Minister and State President Mr John Vorster has entered the battle on the side of Dr Treurnicht shows the nature and seriousness of the fight.

The dispute will go on, at the party congresses and beyond, since what is at stake is the very heart, soul and direction of the volk.

Unless there is reconciliation, the volk will be as divided as it was in the days of Hertzog, Smuts and Malan.

And if there is no leader of vision to bring the volk together again, and to give the country the strength of purpose that it requires, we will have a fragmented ruling "tribe" at a time when this country needs a strong Government and the volk knows where it stands, provides the cornerstone of national unity, and determines the direction in which the country can and should go.

CSO: 4700/847

HEUNIS REAFFIRMS GOVERNMENT COMMITMENT TO REMOVE DISCRIMINATORY LAWS

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 27 Feb 82 p 4

[From the Parliament page]

[Text]

THE Government was committed to the removal of discriminatory laws but the tempo and scope of reform would be determined by the broad interests of the entire population, the Minister of Internal Affairs, Mr Chris Heunis, said yesterday.

Order and stability were necessary conditions for reform, he said during debate on a motion calling for the appointment of a multi-racial commission to review all discriminatory legislation.

The motion was proposed by Dr Alex Boraine (PFP, Pinelands).

"The tempo and scope of reform will be determined by the broad interests of the population as a whole and if removal of a regulation would lead to destabilisation or ineffective government, we would not be prepared to remove it," Mr Heunis said.

"In the situation in our country, complex as it is, there are a multiplicity of interests. We have no choice but to have legislation which differentiates between various groups in order to reconcile these divergent interests."

Healthy group relations were a condition for peaceful evolution in the social, political and economic spheres and it was essential for the rights and privileges of each group to be protected.

Mr Heunis said it was important to distinguish between measures which differentiated between people and groups and measures which discriminated.

Differential measures were for the sake of people, while discriminatory measures were at their cost.

In South Africa differential legislation was necessary because of the different levels of development and the different cultures of the country's various peoples.

Discriminatory measures had to disappear.

It was not necessary to appoint a commission such as was desired by Dr Boraine because it was within the ambit of the President's Council — a multi-racial body appointed by the Government — to review all legislation. — Sapa.

All Should Share in Power

POWER-SHARING in South Africa would have to include Blacks as well as Coloureds and Asians, and would necessitate the removal from the statute books of laws that discriminated on the grounds of race, Dr Alex Boraine (PFP, Pinelands) said yesterday.

He was introducing a private member's motion calling on the Government to recommend to the State President the appointment of a multiracial commission of inquiry to review all legislation "with a view to the removal therefrom of all provisions discriminating on the grounds of race, colour or sex".

Dr Boraine said South Africans had the right to know where the Government stood on the central issue of power-sharing. There was considerable confusion about this matter, he said, and quoted from Hansard speeches made by Nationalists and from a National Party pamphlet explaining the proposed new constitutional changes regarding power-sharing.

He quoted the National Party member for Benoni, Mr Chris Roncken, who had said in 1980: "We on this side of the House reject power-sharing . . . we stand for a system of the division of power."

The Minister of Police, Mr Louis le Grange, was quoted as having said: "Power-sharing is not the policy of the National Party" in 1980 and 1981 in reply to questions on whether he believed in power-sharing. "No, do not talk nonsense," he said.

The pamphlet stated that the Government did not believe in sharing power.

"It is very tricky for us inside and outside to understand what is going on inside the party," Dr Boraine said.

"You can't move away from discrimination unless you have genuine power-sharing. You can't have genuine power-sharing if you as a small White minority decide the Coloured people will forever be outside of the decision-making process.

Any law which put a man of colour at a disadvantage was discriminatory, Dr Boraine said, and should there be a multiracial commission of inquiry into legislation he had no doubt many Acts would come under consideration for repeal or radical amendment.

These included the Population Registration Act, the Group Areas Act, the Prohibition of Mixed Marriages Act, the National Education Policy Act, the Internal Security Act, the Prohibition of Political Interference Act and pass legislation.

CSO: 4700/847

IMPACT OF INTEREST HIKE ON FARMERS REPORTED

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 27 Feb 82 p 8

[Text]

THE increase in Land Bank interest rates could be the last straw financially for many farmers — and will escalate growing resentment in the agricultural community over "over-protection" by the Government of other industries.

At the least the increase is expected to result in yet a further ripple-effect jump in produce prices.

Agricultural experts in Pretoria say the farming community is feeling increasingly that it is being exploited by the authorities and is being made continual prey to "unfair" price increases granted to supplies, particularly of implements and commodities such as fertilisers.

Mr Johan Willemse, economist of the SA Agricultural Union, said yesterday the increase in Land Bank interest rates to come into force from Monday, would mean the "almost complete" end to benefits enjoyed by farmers for financing specific needs.

"It is a serious shock to agriculture, particularly where the benefits of agriculturally adapted financing is drastically and rapidly phased out and where this is due to pressure exercised by interested parties outside agriculture," he said.

He backed to an extent criticism of farmers who claim they are "paying up for over-protection of other industries".

He said the union "hopes the financing advantages enjoyed by new industries and smaller enterprises will be seriously studied — as well as tariff protection of non-strategic industries."

The Agricultural Union, through its commodity committees and affiliations, would insist that the Government allow farmers to recover their increased costs by means of higher product prices.

"Farmers who are unable to recover increased costs and who find themselves in a financial crisis caused by the doubling of interest rates within less than a year will have to be aided by the Government.

"And we in the union will have to look seriously at alternative financing possibilities for agriculture," Mr Willemse said.

A land Bank spokesman confirmed details of the actual increases, which apply to the bank's short-term rates.

He said it had been decided to increase the rate of interest charged on existing as well as future cash credit accounts — seasonal loans — to co-operatives and regulatory boards.

Thus, on all cash credit accounts on which interest is presently paid at a rate of 13,5 percent the rate is increased to 15 percent, except where members debts were financed under cash credit accounts.

In all cases where members were financed under cash credit accounts the rate of interest for the debts had been incased from 13,5 percent to 15,5 percent.

The adapted rate of interest would be increased from 14,5 percent to 16 percent he said.

CSO: 4700/847

BUTHELEZI GETS POLICE APOLOGY OVER DOG'S NAME

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 27 Feb 82 p 4

[Text]

THE South African Police had apologised to the Chief Minister of KwaZulu, Chief Gatsha Buthelezi, for the naming after him of a watchdog kept at the Ingwavuma police camp, the Minister of Police, Mr Louis le Grange, said.

Replying to a question by Mr Ray Swart (PFP Berea), Mr Le Grange said the SA Police had received a complaint from the Chief Minister of KwaZulu about the name of a dog owned by the police at Ingwavuma.

"The chief Minister registered a strong protest and asserted that he regarded it as an insult, not only to himself but to the entire Zulu nation and Black people in general.

"The matter was immediately investigated and the following facts emerged:

"The dog in question came to the police camp in November 1981 in a state of starvation and was immediately adopted and cared for by the men stationed there at the time.

"It soon developed into an alert and fearless watchdog and was perhaps for this reason named after the Chief Minister.

"The dog did not belong to any specific policeman and as the members at this camp are changed at regular intervals, it could not be ascertained with whom the name originated.

"I am sure no offence was intended and that there was no malice or ill-will towards the Chief Minister.

"I may add, however, that it is not uncommon for dogs or other pets to be named after prominent people.

"The apologies of the South African Police have been conveyed to the Chief Minister and it is trusted that he will accept them in this spirit."

Mr Le Grange added that the dog had been destroyed on the initiative of the present occupants of the camp to avoid further possible unpleasantness. — Sapa.

CSO: 4700/847

GENERAL MALAN: DEFENCE 'NOT ONLY BY WHITE MEN'

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 28 Feb 82 p 7

[Text]

CLOCOLAN. — The permanent defence force and present number of national servicemen could no longer guarantee the public's safety, the Minister of Defence, General Malan, said yesterday.

In a speech read on his behalf at the opening of the Clocolan agricultural show, General Malan said that the responsibility for the defence of the country could not be confined to the White men of the country.

"It is the task of a National Defence Force (Volksweermag)," he said.

"The writing is on the wall for a more comprehensive national service system, the details of which will be announced shortly."

To counter the threat against the country effectively and to achieve peace in South Africa, it had become imperative that each citizen became involved, in one way or another, in the process of countering the onslaught which faced the country.

"The permanent force and the present number of national servicemen are no longer capable of guaranteeing your safety," General Malan said.

One of the essentials in war was to act timeously and effectively. To wait for the enemy to gain the initiative would be disasterous as so many countries which waged war on terrorists had learnt to their detriment.

"The communist instigators have taken note that there is an evolutionary process taking off in South Africa to provide for the political needs of all its people — a process which will further improve stability and destroy the breeding ground for anarchy." — Sapa.

CSO: 4700/847

DETAILS ON OPPENHEIMER REPORT GIVEN

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 27 Feb 82 p 9

[Article by Chris Steyn]

[Text]

THE interlinked political and economic situation in Zimbabwe has now reached a crucial stage — perhaps the most crucial since its independence in 1980.

This was said yesterday by Mr Harry Oppenheimer in his report as national chairman of the South African Institute of International Affairs, at the biennial meeting of the executive council.

He warned that it would be wrong for South Africa to harp only on the negative factors, and called on South Africa to rather recognise the positive aspects of Zimbabwe's performance as an independent state.

"By building on existing links between the two states, South Africa can make a contribution to regional stability and minimise the effects of strong political differences," Mr Oppenheimer said.

He pointed out that the situation in Zimbabwe had "deep" implications for South Africa and that the South West African issue remained of prime importance to our foreign policy.

"Namibia will provide in part the key to South Africa's political fortunes in the years ahead," Mr Oppenheimer said.

He said that the Reagan Administration had brought new initiatives, on the part of the so-called contact group led by the United States, to find a solution.

"These new initiatives, under the general rubric of Security council resolution 435, are aimed at trying to restore the momentum of the initiative which was lost at the abortive Geneva talks early in 1981," he said.

Mr Oppenheimer pointed out that there were, however, a number of "hurdles" in the way of a settlement which were of concern to South Africa.

He named South Africa's view of the Soviet threat to its region as one of these "hurdles", and said that it was clear that the danger of this threat would be considerably increased by a Swapo victory in SWA.

"It may be that this question is exaggerated in the mind of the average White, but it is a factor nonetheless," he said.

Linked to this, he mentioned the view which regarded Swapo as an extremist organisation which would oppress Whites and disrupt the economy of SWA.

Constrained

"What we need to realise, however, is that Swapo is not a monolithic body of ideologues. If Swapo comes to power in Windhoek it will be seriously constrained both by economic problems and by the extensive power which South Africa can bring to bear on it," Mr Oppenheimer said.

He said that the settlement process that led to an independent Zimbabwe should have reminded proponents of the "new realism" of the constraints of the sympathies of conservatives.

"No government, however conservative, can have normal relations with South Africa until apartheid is replaced by a more equitable political and economic system," he said.

CSO: 4700/847

BRIEFS

PRISONERS IN MILITARY JAILS--A total of 577 people were detained in South African Defence Force detention centres, the Minister of Defence, General Magnus Malan, said in a written reply to a question yesterday. Mr Philip Myburgh (PFP Wynberg) asked the Minister to list the offences for which the men had been detained. He replied that 312 had been detained for refusing to undergo military training in the Citizen Force or Commando, 207 for being absent without leave, eight for housebreaking and theft, four for possessing dagga and the rest for a number of other offences. These figures had been valid on February 16. [Text] [Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 27 Feb 82 p 4]

WHITES AT BLACK UNIVERSITIES--A total of 111 White students were at present studying at Black universities, the Minister of Education and Training, Dr Ferdie Hartzenberg, said yesterday. Replying to a question by Mr Tiaan van der Merwe (PFP, Green Point), he said there were 53 White students at the Medical University of Southern Africa, 27 at Fort Hare, 24 at the University of the North and seven at the University of Zululand. [Text] [Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 27 Feb 82 p 4]

INDIAN COUNCIL BACKS BOTHA--Durban--The crisis in the National Party had a sequel at the South African Indian Council meeting in Durban yesterday when members on both sides of the house pledged their solidarity with Prime Minister P.W. Botha in the fued. In a snap debate on the right-wing rebellion, the leader of the National People's Party, Mr A. Rajbansi, and members of the opposition Democratic Party favoured support for Mr Botha on the basis of his commitment to political reform. Mr Rajbansi said it was clearly evident the issue of power sharing proposed for Whites, Coloureds and Indians precipitated the breakaway. The leader of the opposition, Mr J.B. Patel, said it was hard to predict the consequences of the split, but said the Indian people also had a role "in shaping the destiny of the country." Some divisional executives of the National Party in the Transvaal met yesterday morning to discuss political differences in the party and some will meet today after the head committee meeting in Pretoria. Others will meet on Monday.--Sapa [Text] [Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 27 Feb 82 p 8]

RULES FOR REPORTERS--Procedures for the admission of the news media to Provincial Council meetings in Pretoria have been revised, according to the Transvaal Provincial Council's public relations officer. In future, members of the news media wanting to attend council meetings will have to apply at least 14 days beforehand to the chief of Security Services. Those who do not have the necessary permission will be refused entrance.--Sapa [Text] [Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 27 Feb 82 p 7]

RATIONING ENDS--From Monday cement will no longer be subject to rationing. The cement marketing organisation had announced that there has been a marked improvement in the supply of cement and that shortages were no longer being experienced. Rationing was imposed in September last year because of unusually heavy demand, and 30 000 tons of cement had to be imported from the republic of China.--Sapa [Text] [Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 27 Feb 82 p 2]

DETAINEE'S HEALTH--The Port Elizabeth trade unionist, Mr Thozamile Gqweta, who was recently detained, was under psychiatric observation and treatment in the Johannesburg Hospital, the Minister of Justice, Mr Kobie Coetsee, said yesterday. Replying to a question by Dr Alex Boraine (PFP Pinelands), Mr Coetsee said Mr Gqweta's family had not been notified of his hospitalisation by the South African Police. When they located the family in Ciskei on February 15, it transpired that they had already been informed through an unknown source. Mr Gqweta's brother and daughter visited them twice during February. His physical condition had been described as good by the doctors, the Minister said. His mental condition was improving and he was undergoing treatment. In a supplementary question Dr Boraine asked the Minister if he was aware of newspaper reports which described Mr Gqweta's conditionas almost unrecognisable by his own brother. "How is it possible for a man in very good health after a short term in detention to be put in a psychiatric ward?" he asked. The Minister said he was aware of the reports but he also knew that many reports were exaggerated for sensational effect.--Sapa [Text] [Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 27 Feb 82 p 4]

MRS MANDELA BAN EXTENDED--A notice banning Mrs Winnie Mandela from attending gatherings for a further five years until December 31, 1986 appeared in the Government Gazette yesterday. Notice was also given prohibiting David Frank Johnson of Glyn Thomas House, Baragwanath, from attending gatherings until October 31, 1986 and withdrawing a similar prohibition notice served on Ashlatha Ramballa.--Sapa [Text] [Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 27 Feb 82 p 7]

CSO: 4700/847

NEED TO STORE STRATEGIC FOOD RESERVES STRESSED

Mbabane THE TIMES OF SWAZILAND in English 19 Feb 82 p 1

[Article by James Dlamini]

[Text]

SWAZILAND needs strategic food reserves as a disaster preparedness measure, the Minister of Finance, Mr. James Simelane told Parliament yesterday.

Mr Simelane said maize silos had to be constructed in strategic points in the country to prepare for times of famine.

"When the political climate becomes stormy, aid can be assured when we have proper storage facilities," Mr. Simelane said. "We neen to be prepared for all possibilities.

"We need not wait until the development of a food crisis to do this, he said. "The Sahara experience need not be repeated here."

Mr. Simelane said when aid came to the Saharans during the famine, food fell into the hands of a few greedy people who enriched themselves at the expense of their own people. For this reason, a political upheaval followed.

He was supporting a Bill requesting Parliament to empower him to negotiate for a E1.7 million loan from a South African industrial corporation.

Mr. Simelane said the controversy which followed the Bill's introduction in Parliament took him by surprise.

He said the plan includes the construction of a central reserve at Matsapa with the capacity to store 12,000 tons of maize. Satellite silos are planned for each district.

If the Bill goes through, a parastatal organisation will be set up to manage these food reserves. There would be a project manager at the central reserve to be assisted by two operators of conveyor belts and five workers.

Defended

The district reserves would each be managed by an operator assisted by two workers. Each area would have a seven ton truck to collect maize from producers.

Mr. Simelane strongly defended the Bill answering each criticism point by point.

He said unless these farmers were ensured of proper storage and marketing of their products they would continue to be attracted towards other agricultural crops.

As long as rural agriculture is encouraged by the construction of these silos, there can be no hope of arresting the rural-urban migration.

He said this would create employment opportunities in the rural areas and improve the standard of living. "These storage facilities are a prerequisite of this achievement," he added.

'Absurd'

On the argument that the country suffered drought and storms which damaged crops metereological records show that these disasters indicate that such disasters occur only once in 10 years.

"To abandon a project of this nature because of natural disasters would be absurd," he said.

He said the pre-independence storage tanks were unsuccessful because the inflow of maize was not properly monitored as it will be when the new project begins.

With regard to the argument that the money would be better spent on subsidising rural farmers, Mr. Simelane argued that "economic realities have shown that this is not always a wise idea. If you subsidise the produce you need to subsidise the consumer as well."

CSO: 4700/840

PROPOSAL TO BORROW FROM SOUTH AFRICAN CORPORATION CRITICIZED

Mbabane THE TIMES OF SWAZILAND in English 18 Feb 82 p 1

[Article by James Dlamini]

[Text]

A PROPOSAL that Swaziland should borrow E1.7 million from a South African corporation was bitterly criticised in Parliament yesterday.

The Bill was introduced by the Minister of Finance Mr. James Simelane, who was asking to be empowered to borrow the money from the Industrial Development Corporation of South Africa.

The money is being sought to build "maize storage silos in strategic areas."

Speakers complained that:

THE HOUSE has never discussed these silos before and now it is urgently being asked to authorise the raising of a loan to construct them.

THE TERMS of the loan were too high — calculated at a total of E255,000 — in total payment "from tax payers money."

TOO MUCH money has already been spent on unprofitable projects, such as the Rural Development Areas and the purchasing of farms by government which are not being profitably utilised.

MAIZE storage facilities were constructed in the 1950s, but they proved a total failure and they are now idle.

SWAZILAND has a shortage of maize and maize products, particularly this year when more than E500,000 worth of maize was destroyed by storms in Mahlangatsha and there was a drought in the lowveld.

Costly

"It goes without saying that silos are needed, but what are we going to fill them with? The terms are terribly costly," Mr. S.M. Dlamini said.

"Is this loan for the benefit of our people or is it for the benefit of our neighbours?" Mr. A.S. Dlamini asked.

"How long are we going to spend our efforts working for other people rather than our own?" he continued.

"I don't think this will be acceptable to the people who pay tax," he said.

Mr. L.C. Von Wissell moved that the Bill should be thrown out of the House.

"This house is being asked to authorise the raising of a loan on a principle that has never been discussed and accepted."

Mr. Von Wissell said the minister's request raises a number of questions which were not covered in his preamble.

"If this money was to be spent to subsidise small farmers and improve rural agriculture I would not negate it," Mr. E.P. Mambo said. "It would be an illusion to spend large sums of money on silos," he added.

He pointed out that borrowing money from South Africa might prove harmful to the country's image among fellow SADCC states.

Dr. G.M. Msibi supported the Bill, but criticised the Minister for not furnishing details. He stated the construction of these silos would help encourage more people to grow maize.

CSO: 4700/840

NEW MISSIONARY AGENCY SET UP

Mbabane THE TIMES OF SWAZILAND in English 18 Feb 82 p 3

[Article by Mashumi Twala]

[Text]

HIS MAJESTY, King Sobhuza, has approved the establishment of a local branch of a Southern African Christian Missionary Rural Development Agency.

Called the Africa Co-operative Action Trust, the group's aims are to help rural communities increase their food production and employment opportunities.

The chairman-elect of the Swaziland branch, Dr. Samuel Hynd has requested members to "lay the solid foundation for an on-going self help rural development programme" and to "spread the propaganda to the various communities" around the country.

The organisation was born in 1976 "because of a real concern about the future of Southern Africa," according to an information bronchures published by the organisation.

Innocent

According to the information booklet, as result of the political crisis which rocked South and South West Africa in 1976, the loss of life of innocent people, economic instability, unemployment and increased hunger sparked off a mass concern from committed christian businessmen and the ACAT group was jointly established "to help teach fellow countrymen to grow better crops to feed themselves and their families adequately."

The statement says: "We commence and concentrate our rural development programmes at grass root levels. A good foundation at grass roots level will support future development programmes. For development to take place at grass roots the people must be able to feed themselves."

At the initial meeting of the local branch members, Dr. Samuel Hynd informed members that the establishment of th ebranch establishment of the branch had received the blessings of His Majesty.

It was discussed that the Ministry of Home Affairs was expected to send a representative to join the group. The elected Secretary, Mrs. Ayiwah Dlamini is to send letters to individuals churches requesting for their participation.

The organisation has also approached the headquarters in South Africa for financial assistance towards their initial funding.

The Chief of Kaphunga Community in the Shiselweni District Mr. S. Dlamini indicated that his people were willing to act as a pilot project by providing land. "They are ready to start immediately," he told the meeting. He added that since the people at Kaphunga were willing to start in the next ploughing season, it was necessary to try and speed up the planning.

It was then decided that Dr. Hynd would communicate with the headquarters to ask for a liaison officer to visit the new branch for action.

The organisation is to form up a Board of reference who will in turn, choose the Board of Trustees.

A national director was felt necessary and the Campus Crusade for Christ has been requested to assist in this plan.

CSO: 4700/840

ROYAL SWAZI RENTS BOEING 737

Mbabane THE TIMES OF SWAZILAND in English 19 Feb 82 p 1

[Text]

ROYAL Swazi Airways will begin using a rented Mozambican Boeing 737 on its regular routes from Monday.

The aim is to test the suitability of the jet on the routes.

Announcing this yesterday, Royal Swazi Airways chief executive Dan Langeler said the jet had been on loan by the Mozambican airlines for a three-week trial to replace the South African Viscount which is being used at present.

Mr. Langeler said the Viscount, which was obtained temporarily as a replacement for the Royal Swazi Fokker F28 jet damaged in the unsuccessful coup attempt in the Seychelles, had proven "unsuitable" for the routes.

"The Viscount is being returned to Johannesburg for maintenance," he said.

Mr. Langeler said Mozambican aircraft would be manned by a Royal crew, with assistance, where necessary by Mozambican cabin staff. "The aim it to continue to give our passenger the Royal Swazi Service," he said.

He added that two members of the cabin crew had already undergone training in flying a 737 aircraft. "Eight of our girls will be leaving on Monday for training," Mr. Langeler said.

He said the loan had been made under the umbrella of the Southern African Development Conference Committee, in which Mozambique was charged with the transport and communications programme.

Mr. Langeler also disclosed that negotiations were currently being made to lease a separate Boeing 737 from one of two African aircraft carriers. If successful, he said, the talks would soon be completed and the aircraft would start operations in May.

Asked why no plans had been made to buy another aircraft, Mr. Langeler said: "We are waiting for the final reports on our Fokker and only after they have been presented can any considerations be made."

CSO: 4700/840

MUNDIA ADMITS ALL PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSIONS HAVE FAILED

Lusaka TIMES OF ZAMBIA in English 25 Feb 82 p 1

[Text]

PRIME Minister Mundia yesterday admitted in Parliament that all Zambia's public service commissions have lamentably failed and need over-hauling if they are to regain their credibility.

In a policy statement during a debate on Personnel Division, he said the Police and Prisons Service Commission, Public Service Commission and Teaching Service Commission were riddled with dishonesty, laziness, inefficiency and discrimination.

"As I said in my contribution on the service commissions, namely, Public Service Commission, Teaching Service Commission and Police and Prisons Service Commission; these institutions must work hard and honestly to serve all sections of the community without discrimination to earn themselves credibility among the people."

Although as head of Government, his task was neither to criticise nor praise any particular institution but to guide and mould, it was true these commissions had failed to deliver the goods.

He said he hoped that the Administrative Commission of Inquiry would come up with recommendations to help turn the civil service into an efficient body, capable of meeting all the hopes and expectations of the 73 tribes of Zambia.

CSO: 4700/854

ZAMBIA AIDING SWAZILAND TO REVIEW RURAL DEVELOPMENT POLICY

Lusaka DAILY MAIL in English 25 Feb 82 p 2

[Text]

MANZINI, Swaziland. — Zambia is among other African countries trying to assist Swaziland review its policy and strategy for rural development and decentralisation.

This was revealed by Dr Godwin Muyoba, principal of the President's Citizenship College who led a two-man Zambian team which attended a 12-day seminar in Mbabane as consultants.

Dr Muyoba was accompanied by Mr Frederick Siame, an official in the Ministry of Agriculture and Water Development.

Speaking at Msapa airport, before leaving here on Monday, Dr Muyoba said the seminar which started on February 10 was organised by the Pan-African Institute for Development in conjunction with the University of Swaziland.

He said Zambia, Kenya, Tanzania and Ghana attended as consultants on the formulation of a strategy that would lessen Swaziland's dependence on South Africa.

Dr Muyoba explained that at present Swazi farmers were producing a lot of maize but millers preferred to buy maize from South Africa. This also applied to other businessmen dealing in other products as well.

He said the government there felt that perhaps they were not using a correct approach in rural development and that was why it called on other countries to help frame an applicable strategy.

"I think the seminar achieved its objectives because we have been able to assist Swaziland in designing a strategy for rural development," said Dr Muyoba.

He added that Zambia was aware of the kingdom's problems but "we think they can do a little bit more than what they have done in terms of sale of products."

The trade between Swaziland and South Africa involved no foreign exchange as they both use the Rand.

On decentralisation, Dr Muyoba said Swaziland was trying to learn how other countries have managed to decentralise power and resources. — Zana

CSO: 4700/854

MPS CALL FOR SCRAPING OF MINISTRY OF NATIONAL GUIDANCE

Lusaka TIMES OF ZAMBIA in English 20 Feb 82 p 5

[Text]

MEMBERS of Parliament yesterday called for the scrapping of the Ministry of National Guidance charging that it was useless and a drain of public funds.

Its minister Mr Arnold Simuchimba was warned by Deputy Speaker of the National Assembly Mr Raphael Chota against "taking Parliament for granted".

This was at the height of a debate under the vote for the ministry when MPs, among other things, said the governors in the ministry were "residues", a word Mr Chota endorsed.

Mr Simuchimba, rising to answer some of the charges levelled against his ministry, said MPs made the charges "out of ignorance and malice" and he refused to withdraw the word "ignorance" even when advised to do so.

Mr Chota again rose to advise Mr Simuchimba to use parliamentary language in his submissions.

"The honourable minister for National Guidance should not take the House for granted because members of the House are making submissions from what they know in order to help the Government improve the ministry," he said.

Leading the attack, Mr Lioko Mbaimbai (Kalabo) said the ministry was a "dumping ground" for indisciplined governors who could not make a grade elsewhere.

The Party and its Government should abolish the ministry and assign Mr Simuchimba to a new ministry "say that of fisheries and bees".

Mr Palakasa Chiwaya (Chililabombwe) alleged that "all" the governors who had been sent to Chililabombwe from the ministry since 1975 had been smugglers and did nothing about propagating the philosophy of Humanism.

He felt the funds and a minister given to the ministry could be put to better use in other departments of the Party and its Government.

Mr Webster Chipalo (Luwingu East) said although the ministry had been established as an educational wing on the philosophy of Humanism, the quality of people sent to it left much to be desired.

Failed

The ministry had only been created to pay salaries for a group of people who had failed to make a grade in the places they had been placed before moving to the ministry.

Mr Gasalan Phiri (Chadiza) said he wished to express concern at the number of governors who had been "heaped" at Freedom House with no work to do. But Mr

Webster Lamba, MP and governor for Kalulushi asked in a point of order whether the word "heaped" was appropriate since it had implications that governors were "rubbish or sand."

Ruling on the point of order, Mr Chota said Mr Phiri was in order because he might have visited Freedom House and found that about five governors had been put in one office, which was no good.

Continuing with his contribution, Mr Phiri said the ministry wasted public funds because it only bought Humanism posters. He suggested governors in the ministry should be put in charge of funerals of Party cadres.

Circulars

In an interjection at one time, Mr Daniel Munkombwe (Choma) said the ministry had no other jobs apart from printing circulars of "know your enemy." This sent the House roaring with laughter.

Mr Sebastian Kapalu (Livingstone) said the ministry was misleading the nation. Instead of giving proper guidance because it "believes talking about marriages and chisungu (initiation ceremonies) was dealing with socialism and Humanism."

The ministry, he added, was now regarded by the Party and its Government as a dumping ground for "useless things."

Mr Kapalu said the title of governors in the ministry was too high for them. And he urged the Party and its Government to think of a less honouring title.

But Mr Simuchimba dismissed allegations that his ministry was a "dumping ground" and instead urged MPs to appreciate the work it was doing.

Because his ministry did not publicise some of its activities, like reporting erring leaders, was not a sign it was a useless organisation.

CSO: 4700/854

DECISION TO COLLECT TWO TAXES IN YEAR 'DETRIMENTAL' TO RECOVERY

Lusaka TIMES OF ZAMBIA in English 24 Feb 82 p 5

[Text]

THE Government decision to collect two taxes in a year as contained in this year's Budget is detrimental to the country's economic recovery.

And chief executive of the Zambian Industrial and Commercial Association (Zincom) Mr Humphrey Samuchapi warned in Lusaka yesterday that many companies would be forced to close down or lower production levels if the Government "stuck to its guns."

"There is no doubt that some of the firms will be forced to close down or reduce volume of production because of cash flow problems which will arise."

Zincom had already made its representations to the Minister of Finance Mr Kebby Musokotwane on the issue, but he declined to give details.

"We have now left the matter in the hands of the Government and we will wait and see what comes out of it."

But chairman of industry in Zincom and prominent Kitwe businessman Mr Murray Sanderson expressed similar views last week when the association met Mr Musokotwane and commissioner of taxes Mr Lazarus Bwalya to discuss the Budget proposals.

In a statement released after the meeting, Mr Sanderson said Zincom emphasised the grave consequences bound to result from collecting two years' tax in a single year.

This was because most businesses simply would not be able to find the money to pay unless they severely cut back on their operations.

At the meeting Zincom responded to the minister's invitation to put forward specific suggestions in writing which included the spreading of tax for 1981/82 over a period of three years.

Another suggestion was the use of the previous year's tax as a standard quarterly or half yearly payments of tax for the current year to reduce the element of self-assessment.

A special allowance for professional partnership and individuals was proposed to the Government by Zincom.

CSO: 4700/854

MPS SAY PRESS VICTIMIZATION, MUZZLING 'ON THE INCREASE'

Lusaka TIMES OF ZAMBIA in English 25 Feb 82 p 2

[Excerpt]

THE Party and its Government must desist from intimidating the Press if freedom of speech is to be maintained, Members of Parliament urged yesterday.

They said victimisation and muzzling of the Press were on the increase but noted that the truth could not be killed as it was stronger than brute force.

Choma MP, Mr Daniel Munkombwe said the country's liberty depended on the freedom of the Press.

Pressmen must work under the framework of political liberty otherwise there would be no certainty.

Mr Munkombwe cited the case of Sunday Times assistant editor Robinson Makayi who was detained in 1976.

"A reporter of high repute Robby Makayi was detained for writing what others considered to be against Government view.

"And when he was released from detention no explanation or reasons were given for the action taken."

Intimidation was indirect censorship of the Press especially in cases where reporters were threatened with arrest.

"It is difficult for newspapers to move with tape recorders for the benefit of some big people who say I did not say that and in the end the reporter is victimised."

Muzzling the Press was dangerous because those doing so feared the truth. Press freedom and freedom of speech were inseparable, he said.

"One cannot guarantee freedom of speech and at the same time order newspapers to write views of the Government only."

Malambo MP, Mr Whitson Banda said some Pressmen had been victimised so much that they had lost their responsibilities.

Speaking during the debate on a vote for the Ministry of Information and Broadcasting Mr Banda said one television interviewer from the Zambia Broadcasting Services was victimised after an interview he had with him.

The TVZ man was victimised over a point which he (Mr Banda) differed with the then Member of the Central Committee and Chairman of Appointments and Disciplinary Sub-Committee, Mr Wesley Nyirenda.

"This television man has been barred from appearing on television. People have asked through letters to the editor to have him brought back, but nothing has been done. He has even been stopped from going abroad for training."

He recalled that "a big shot" in Government once said Pressmen should not bite the hand that fed them. "This attitude is wrong."

CSO: 4700/854

EEC CHIEF DELEGATE ANNOUNCES AID FOR 1982

Lusaka TIMES OF ZAMBIA in English 20 Feb 82 p 1

[Excerpt]

THE European Economic Community has this year committed K100 million in aid to Zambia, EEC chief delegate in Zambia Mr Hugh Swift announced yesterday.

The money will be used in the mining industry, agriculture and water development, economic and social infrastructure and manpower training.

Speaking in an interview, Mr Swift said the mining industry alone would use up K53 million while agriculture and water development would account for about K26 million.

The development of economic and social infrastructure would receive K12 million to cater for the construction and rehabilitation of roads, furnishing the transport system and building rural health centres.

The rest of the money would go towards manpower development with K4 million being committed to training. Another K4 million would be used on support studies. Geological research would be allocated K1 million.

Mr Swift said it was hoped by the end of April, K70 million would have been released, but the money to boost the mining industry would be released by March.

The mining industry had taken the lion's share because the EEC was committed to reviving the performance of the Zambian economy.

Agriculture received top priority because of the EEC conviction that the country had great potential in this sector.

The EEC would like to improve links with Zambia to maximise the mutual benefits from such cooperation.

"The EEC would like to help Zambia and other countries in the region because this will enhance peace and development and the Community stands to gain from a peaceful Southern Africa."

The EEC and Zambia needed each other because each party had resources which the other needed.

He said the money allocated to Zambia this year was one of the largest amounts paid out by the Community and hoped it would help to improve performance in the targeted areas.

On February 9 President Kaunda commended EEC lending policies when Zambia and the EEC signed a loan to prop up the Zambian mining industry.

The EEC was sponsoring the courses because it sought to transfer technology from Europe to the Third World and thus enhance development, he said.

CSO: 4700/854

MINISTER ANNOUNCES MEASURES TO REHABILITATE MINING INDUSTRY

Lusaka TIMES OF ZAMBIA in English 24 Feb 82 p 1

[Excerpt]

MINISTER of Mines Mr Mufaya Mumbuna yesterday announced in Parliament far-reaching measures aimed at rehabilitating the mining industry.

Winding up debate on estimates of expenditure for the ministry, he said the measures have been taken as a planned capital investment to sustain the future production of metals.

The measures include rehabilitating existing plants by replacing worn out machinery, deepening shafts and renovating pumping systems on the mines.

Some financial help had been secured for the programme, "while the search for more continues."

The minister who could not disclose how much the whole programme would cost, said his ministry was committed to making the mining industry viable.

The recent decision announced by President Kaunda to merge the two mining companies into the Zambia Consolidated Copper Mines Limited, was the most important single step in making the mining industry a viable proposition.

Although the mining sector had a difficult period last year resulting from both local and international factors, it did its best, he said.

On the low prices of copper on the world market brought about by suppressed demand, he said the prevailing world economic situation had shown some "encouraging recovery".

He told the House that uranium prospecting by companies from Italy, France, West Germany and Japan was satisfactory and that K5 million in foreign exchange was spent by the companies last year.

The ministry would this year establish seismic stations in Lusaka, Southern, Eastern, North-Western and Northern provinces under the technical assistance of Italy.

Earlier, MPs expressed concern at delays in engaging in emerald mining while aliens continued to illegally exploit the mineral.

CSO: 4700/854

CENTRAL STATISTICAL OFFICE RELEASES CONSUMER PRICE REPORT

Lusaka DAILY MAIL in English 23 Feb 82 p 7

[Text]

DURING the last three months of 1981, there were only slight increases in the two consumer price indices.

According to a report on consumer price statistics for February this year released by the Central Statistical Office in Lusaka, the low income index went up by 1.0 per cent and the high income index by 1.8 per cent.

The low income food index reached 248.2 in December but this was not appreciably higher than in April last year when it stood at 247.9.

The report says that this stability can be partly attributed to the fact that between April and December, there were no price increases in mealie-meal, cooking oil or sugar.

The very high inflation experienced in 1976 had fallen to around 10 per cent in 1978 and remained steady at the 10 to 11 per cent level during 1979 and 1980.

last year, the figure was a bit higher for the low income group, at 14 per cent, whereas inflation for the high income group was 11.5 per cent, a little higher than in 1980.

The report says that predicting the level of inflation for 1982 is as difficult as forecasting next week's winning Pick-A-Lot numbers.

"However, as we have seen in previous year, the majority of the price rises in any year occur during the first few months of the year so perhaps in our next issue in May we will be in a better position to assess the future trend in the rate of inflation," the report says.

Price inflation during 1981 was 14 per cent for the low income group and 11.5 per cent for the high income group. "But what price rises contributed most to this level of inflation?" the report asks.

It was calculated that this is to look at the price rise for every item in the index and at the relative importance that each item in the index, as measured by the item's "weight."

The item that shows the greatest price rise in the year does not necessarily contribute most to inflation — because it may be of only minor importance in the consumption basket.

According to the table given in the report, some of the items that contributed most to the year's increase in the cost of living for the low income group are mealie-meal, chicken, bread, sugar, fresh milk and rape vegetable.

For the high income group, the items that contributed to the cost of living are chicken, fresh milk, petrol, bread, butter, car repair charges, toilet tissues, sugar, rice and mealie-meal.

CSO: 4700/854

KAUNDA SAYS NATION CAUGHT IN ECONOMIC 'VICIOUS CIRCLE'

Lusaka TIMES OF ZAMBIA in English 25 Feb 82 p 1

[Excerpt]

THE Party and its Government is determined to reconstruct the mining industry "because its collapse will be the collapse of the nation," President Kaunda said in Lusaka yesterday.

The President said this at a luncheon he hosted for the visiting World Bank vice-president Mr Willy Wapenhans at State House.

He told Mr Wapenhans that in the reorganisation, the two mining companies NCCM and RCM would soon be merged in an effort to curb high production costs.

Copper was still the country's main foreign exchange earner "and as such the collapse of the mining industry would be the collapse of the nation".

The President added that the country would continue to carry out mineral explorations while the mining of emeralds would be reorganised to stop the illegal mining of the precious stone.

Dr Kaunda informed the World Bank executive that lower export earnings, rising oil prices and high import costs were still some of the problems facing the Zambian economy today.

"Oil prices have been rising for the past eight years while at the same time goods and services needed to be imported at high costs. Our own exports have faced falling prices.

"We are caught in a vicious circle. But despite this we have not been idle. We have been trying to find solutions to these problems."

During the last UNIP National Council he emphasised the need to diversify the economy of the country, particularly through agriculture.

He told Mr Wapenhans that in 1980 a programme of action in agriculture to last ten years was launched which would look into four main areas of production.

These were peasant farmers through which wards in all nine provinces would be centres of development, cooperatives, commercial farmers and State farms.

"We have made a lot of improvements in other areas although transport, that Zambia Airways, Zambia Railways and United Bus Company of Zambia (UBZ), is still one of our main problems."

The Party and its Government was looking into the performance of the manufacturing industry which was not doing well because of foreign exchange problems.

CSO: 4700/854

KAUNDA HAILS KIM IL-SONG AS 'TORCHBEARER' OF PEACE

Lusaka TIMES OF ZAMBIA in English 25 Feb 82 p 1

[Text]

PRESIDENT Kaunda has described leader of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea Kim Il Sung as a great torch-bearer of peace.

He said in his call for the reunification of Korea President Kim had chosen peaceful means.

Dr Kaunda said it was easy for a revolutionary like Kim to say he would fight it out in his efforts to reunite Korea, but he had chosen the peaceful alternative.

The President was speaking when Vice-President of the Democratic Republic of Korea Mr Pak Sung S'l called on him at State House yesterday.

Dr Kaunda reaffirmed Zambia's support for the reunification of North and South Korea.

"We call for the withdrawal of all foreign troops in South Korea. A divided Korea is a weak Korea and it means a weak Zambia."

Dr Kaunda emphasised that Zambia's concern for the unification of Korea was a matter of deep-rooted principle. Forces of exploitation wanted to gain what they lost and re-establish themselves.

Forces of international exploitative capitalism, apartheid, zionism and racism were going to be defeated, he declared.

The President noted that the last few decades had seen great changes in the world and progressive forces had succeeded.

The temporary setback which the people of Korea had suffered would be overcome.

"We have great love and respect for Comrade Kim Il Sung because of his revolutionary spirit which is based on love for humanity." A man who fights long as he did for mankind is a lover of mankind. It is not surprising that we find ourselves together in the non-alignment movement," he said.

The Korean Vice-President handed a personal letter and greetings from President Kim. He also presented some gifts to Dr Kaunda.

The talks were attended by Party Secretary-General Mulemba and Minister of State for Foreign Affairs Mr Ottema Musuka.

When Mr Pak called on Mr Mulemba the Party chief appealed for unity among Third World countries to counter the overtures of imperialism which was bent on establishing a stronghold over the world's poor nations.

CSO: 4700/854

INDECO MAKES PROFIT FOR FIRST TIME IN SIX YEARS

Lusaka TIMES OF ZAMBIA in English 24 Feb 82 p 5

[Text]

INDECO has made a pre-tax profit of K3.5 million during the 1980/81 financial year after continuously making losses for the past six years, Zimco Director-General Mr James Mapoma announced in Lusaka yesterday.

In a statement released by Indeco, Mr Mapoma says the profit was realised from a turnover of K526.9 million which shot up by 13 per cent over the previous year.

The company, which last year made a loss of K7 million, recorded an actual pre-tax profit of K7.7 million but the K3.5 million was arrived at after charging extraordinary items arising out of writing down of assets of Nega Nega brick factory of K4.2 million to reflect their net realisable value.

Mr Mapoma says out of the group's 34 companies, 17 subsidiaries achieved a total turnover of K382 million and earned a combined pre-tax profit of K26 million.

The other 17 companies with a total turnover of K1,445 million made a loss of K22.7 million.

Kafue Textiles was singled out as the company which scored the highest profits of K5.4 million followed by Metal Fabricators of Zambia with K4.2 million.

Zambia Clay Industries performed the worst, with a loss of K5.5 million and the company was now in dormant state.

In the year under review the group paid K10 million as tax and K121.9 million as excise duty and sales tax besides locally producing K263 million worth of goods which could otherwise have been imported.

He says that in the previous year the group paid K8 million as tax and K113 million in excise duty and sales tax.

"This year's results reveal the seriousness that has been taking place within Indeco and by the shareholders to improve the performance of the group" says Mr Mapoma.

Mr Mapoma, who is the company's chairman, says he hoped these efforts would be given further impetus in the 1981/82 year, emphasising that the future success of Indeco largely depended on a number of decisions that are completely outside management control.

CSO: 4700/854

GOVERNMENT REACHES AGREEMENT WITH FAO CONCERNING CROP FORECASTING

Lusaka TIMES OF ZAMBIA in English 23 Feb 82 p 1

[Excerpt]

THE Government has clinched an agreement worth K900,000 with the Food and Agriculture Organisation (FAO) for a project in crop forecasting and early warning system.

The project would build up the capability for providing advanced information on crop production and food supply in Zambia so that suitable and timely action could be taken in case of an impending food shortage.

Director-General of the National Commission for Development Planning Dr Leonard Chivuno and FAO representative in Zambia, Mr Hackman Owusu-Agyemang signed the agreement for the project which is expected to establish a sound planning base for the implementation of the national food security policy.

The project worth more than K961,000 would train enumerators and supervisors in the field and professional and technical staff of the cooperating Government agencies based in Lusaka.

It is expected the project would establish a system for monitoring crop conditions and expected yields in the growing season, strengthen the existing system for pre-harvest forecasting of food crop production covering the major maize growing areas, improve processing of Namboard procurement and sales data.

The project would establish an early warning unit in the Ministry of Agriculture and Water Development under the guidance of a national committee.

The scheme is part of six projects identified under the FAO Food Security Assistance Scheme (FSAS) mission which visited Zambia in 1980 to make recommendations for the establishment of a national food security scheme.

CSO: 4700/854

BRIEFS

LABOR MINISTRY CLEARS WALAMBA--Mineworkers Union of Zambia deputy chairman Timothy Walamba has been cleared by the Ministry of Labour and Social Services and his union to contest tomorrow's MUZ general elections. Mr Walamba said he was very thankful to both the ministry and the union who have accorded him the opportunity to contest. Mr Walamba who sounded very jubilant said the move by the ministry and MUZ has shamed some of his colleagues who wanted him out of the labour movement. "UNIP is for all, but other people still want to be more UNIP than others and these are the same people who worked day and night to have me removed from the labour movement," he charged. Mr Walamba was one of the labour leaders detained by the Party and its Government, but were freed after court proceedings in which they contested their grounds of appeal. Mr Walamba said he was going to Ndola full of force and vigor but declined to mention the post that he intends contesting. "Just wish me good luck. The post is secondary at the moment." [Text] [Lusaka DAILY MAIL in English 23 Feb 82 p 1]

STARVING ZAIRIANS CAUSE PROBLEMS--Zaireans at Kasumbalesa border post are starving because Shaba province has not received food supplies from Kinshasa for the past seven months. And the famished Zaireans have resorted to queuing for essentials at three Zambian shops at the border causing problems to immigration and police officers. Immigration officer in charge at the border Mr Charles Mwilima, confirmed that thousands of Zaireans flocked there for 24 hours in search of food. Police and immigration officers most of the time fail to disperse the Zaireans because it means redirecting them from their normal duties. Some Zaireans interviewed by the Times revealed that Shaba province had not received food supplies from Kinshasa for the past seven months forcing them to queue for food at Kasumbalesa. The influx of the Zaireans had become uncontrollable because the aliens refuse to leave when asked to go away. Zaireans go to the border selling second-hand clothes and wristwatches and use the money to buy food from the border shops which are well stocked with essentials. [Excerpt] [Lusaka TIMES OF ZAMBIA in English 25 Feb 82 p 5]

SOCIALIST LEADER'S DEPORTATION--The Zambian Government has deported Dr Attati Mpakati, leader of the Socialist League of Malawi. Making the announcement yesterday, permanent secretary for Home Affairs Mr Langston Kawesha said Dr Mpakati had already been arrested and deported but could not indicate to which country. He said Dr Mpakati was reported to be in Zambia recently. He entered the country on a foreign travel document and had never been given refugee status.

Mr Kawesha warned refugees and other people resident in Zambia that they should not abuse the privilege accorded to them by engaging in activities against governments of friendly neighbouring states. "The policy of Zambia as an independent and non-aligned state is not to interfere in the internal affairs of other countries." Mr Kawesha appealed to people still "clinging to diplomatic passports" long after leaving the foreign service to surrender them and avoid embarrassment. The passports should be surrendered at Lusaka, Livingstone, Ndola, Chipata and Mongu where the holders would be issued with ordinary ones. [Text] [Lusaka TIMES OF ZAMBIA in English 23 Feb 82 p 1]

CSO: 4700/854

END

JPRS 80338

17 March 1982

Sub-Saharan Africa Report

No. 2589

FBIS FOREIGN BROADCAST INFORMATION SERVICE

NOTE

JPRS publications contain information primarily from foreign newspapers, periodicals and books, but also from news agency transmissions and broadcasts. Materials from foreign-language sources are translated; those from English-language sources are transcribed or reprinted, with the original phrasing and other characteristics retained.

Headlines, editorial reports, and material enclosed in brackets [] are supplied by JPRS. Processing indicators such as [Text] or [Excerpt] in the first line of each item, or following the last line of a brief, indicate how the original information was processed. Where no processing indicator is given, the information was summarized or extracted.

Unfamiliar names rendered phonetically or transliterated are enclosed in parentheses. Words or names preceded by a question mark and enclosed in parentheses were not clear in the original but have been supplied as appropriate in context. Other unattributed parenthetical notes within the body of an item originate with the source. Times within items are as given by source.

The contents of this publication in no way represent the policies, views or attitudes of the U.S. Government.

PROCUREMENT OF PUBLICATIONS

JPRS publications may be ordered from the National Technical Information Service, Springfield, Virginia 22161. In ordering, it is recommended that the JPRS number, title, date and author, if applicable, of publication be cited.

Current JPRS publications are announced in Government Reports Announcements issued semi-monthly by the National Technical Information Service, and are listed in the Monthly Catalog of U.S. Government Publications issued by the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402.

Correspondence pertaining to matters other than procurement may be addressed to Joint Publications Research Service, 1000 North Glebe Road, Arlington, Virginia 22201.

JPRS 80338

17 March 1982

SUB-SAHARAN AFRICA REPORT

No. 2589

CONTENTS

INTER-AFRICAN AFFAIRS

Researcher Interviewed on Soviet Policy in Africa
(Zaki Laidi Interview; ETUDES, Jan-Jun 82)..... 1

ANGOLA

Savimbi Speaks on UNITA, FNLA, Ties With South Africa
(Jonas Savimbi Interview; TEMPO, 21 Jan 82)..... 12

RSA Paper Foresees 'Hard-Line' Rightwing Policy
(ANGOP, 1 Mar 82)..... 23

Luanda Oil Refinery Resumes Operations
(Luanda Domestic Service, 3 Mar 82)..... 24

Briefs
Financial Agreement With Macao 25
Overplanning Harms Economy 25
Membership in Havana 26
Bottled Butane Marketing 26

CAMEROON

Paper Criticizes Kodjo Decision on SDAR
(AFP, 25 Feb 82)..... 27

CAPE VERDE

Briefs
Lusophone Summit Proposed 28

ETHIOPIA

OAU, UN Intervention Requested To End Eritrean-Ethiopian Fighting
(Mogadishu Domestic Service, 2 Mar 82)..... 29

Eritrea Guerrillas Shell Asmara Airport
(AFP, 4 Mar 82) 30

Eritrean Leader Predicts Offensive
(AL-MADINAH, 1 Mar 82) 31

GHANA

PNDC Suspends Limann Budget, Reduces Embassies
(Accra Domestic Service, 27 Feb 82) 33

Officials Asked To Resign
(Accra Domestic Service, 24 Feb 82) 35

Commentary Rejects Any Devaluation of CEDI
(David Anafglatey; Accra Domestic Service, 2 Mar 82) 36

PNDC Warns Soldiers Against Obstructing Courts
(Accra Domestic Service, 27 Feb 82) 38

Briefs
Majority Supports Revolution 39
Overstaffing Problem Discussed 39

GUINEA-BISSAU

Briefs
Economic Council Stabilization Meeting 40
DPRK Interest in Agriculture 40

IVORY COAST

Good Economic Performance Despite Crisis Reported
(Adama Diabate; FRATERNITE-MATIN, 30 Dec 81) 41

KENYA

President Receives UK's Carrington
(Nairobi Domestic Service, 3 Mar 82) 45

Briefs
Moi Criticizes 'Idle Talk' 46

MALI

Mauritanian Minister Meets Traore; Discusses SDAR
(Bamako Domestic Service, 3 Mar 82) 47

MAURITIUS

MMM/PSM Candidates Announced for General Elections
(THE NATION, 26 Jan 82) 49

Village Councils Changed Into Commissions
(L'EXPRESS, 26, 27 Jan 82)..... 51

Replacement by Commissions
Composition of Commissions

MOZAMBIQUE

Rebelo Provides Statistics in Consumer Goods, Other Fields
(NOTICIAS, 1 Feb 82)..... 53

Deserving Private Restauranteurs Receive No Assistance
(Jorge Costa; DOMINGO, 31 Jan 82)..... 58

Briefs
Italian Cooperatives' Delegation 60
No Increased Rice, Sugar Quota 60
Czechoslvoak Women's Delegation 60

NAMIBIA

South African Prime Minister Holds Windhoek Press Conference
(Johannesburg International Service, 26 Feb 82)..... 61

NIGERIA

Government Reported Investigating Aborted Coup
(DAILY TIMES, 19, 26 Feb 82)..... 62

Businessman, Army Officers Arrested, by Yakubu Momodu
Denial of Coup Arrests

Commentary on U.S.-Angola Talks, Cuban Troops
(Bimbo Oshifeso; Lagos Domestic Service, 25 Feb 82)..... 64

Swiss Company's Bribe of Legislators Reported
(Aliu Zubair, Remi Olayiwola; DAILY TIMES, 23, 25 Feb 82).... 66

DCM's Report
Ambassador Denies Knowledge

Various Planning Meetings Consider State Creation
(DAILY TIMES, 24 Feb 82)..... 68

Vice-President Chairs Panel
Shagari Meets Party Leaders
Parties Send Boycott Letter

Civil Service Technical Workers End Strike
(NAN, 3 Mar 82, Lagos Domestic Service, 4 Mar 82)..... 71

Government-Union Agreement
Work-to-Rule in Effect

Reportage on Electricity Workers Strike
(Various sources, various dates)..... 73

House Requests Work Resumption
Government Threatens Dismissal
AFP Report
Power To Be Restored
Efforts To Restore Power

Reportage on NEPA Strike, Electricity Outage
(NAN, 3, 4 Mar 82, Lagos Domestic Service, 3 Mar 82)..... 77

Workers Return to Work
Some Electricity Restored
Management Board Scored
Minister To Inspect Stations

Briefs
Police Dismissal Statistics 80
New Parties Registration 80
Commitment to SDAR 80
No Traffic Controllers Strike 80

SAO TOME AND PRINCIPE

Briefs
Exchange of Experiences With Seychelles 81

SENEGAMBIA

French-Senegalese Maneuvers Held at Camp Dodji, Linguere
(LE SOLEIL, 8 Feb 82)..... 82

Briefs
Electoral System Changed 84

SEYCHELLES

Reports Confirming South African Involvement in November Attack Cited
(NATION, 26 Feb 82)..... 85

NWU Welcomes Exchange of Labor Experiences
(NATION, 23 Feb 82)..... 87

Japanese Friendship Association Launched
(Bernard Barker, Ronnie Jumeau; NATION, 25 Feb 82)..... 89

Soviet Book Exhibition Said To Mark Friendship Ties
(NATION, 26 Feb 82)..... 90

Sao Tome and Principe Military Delegation Visits
(NATION, 23-25 Feb 82)..... 92

Meet With COS
Impressed by Economic Gains
President's Solidarity Message

Air Seychelles Revises Praslin Service
(Lovett Legaie, Ronnie Jumeau; NATION, 25 Feb 82)..... 95

New NYS Village Opens at Cap Ternay Tomorrow
(Cecile Hoareau, et al.; NATION, 20 Feb 82)..... 97

SOMALIA

Briefs
Demonstrations in Northwest 99
Defense Officials Visit Northwest 99

SOUTH AFRICA

Further Reportage on Nationalist Split
(RAND DAILY MAIL, 25, 24 Feb 82)..... 100

Details on Treurnicht's Followers, by Chris Freimond, el at.
Botha's Last Chance, Editorial
Cartoon View

Commentary on MP Split Over Power Sharing
(Editorial; SOWETAN, 25 Feb 82)..... 114

Government Urged To Retain Nuclear-Threshold Trump Card
(Editorial; DIE TRANSVALER, 19 Feb 82)..... 116

Ban on Ramokgopa Lifted
(Sello Rabothata; SOWETAN, 24 Feb 82)..... 117

Rabie Commission's Conclusions on ANC Strength Evaluated
(Patrick Laurence; RAND DAILY MAIL, 12 Feb 82)..... 118

Former ANC Leader, Moraka, Interviewed
(Patrick Laurence; RAND DAILY MAIL, 22 Feb 82)..... 120

Fate of Released Detainee Unknown
(Sam Mabe; SOWETAN, 24 Feb 82)..... 122

ANC Detainees Stage Hunger Strike
(Willie Bokala; SOWETAN, 19, 24 Feb 82)..... 123

On Death Row
Lawyers Cannot See Them

Security Police Deny Holding Joyce Masinga
(Willie Bokala; SOWETAN, 24 Feb 82)..... 125

David Ntombela Remains in Dentention
(Sam Mabe; SOWETAN, 22 Feb 82)..... 126

Communists Claim Responsibility for Leaflet Bombs in Aggett Case
(DIE BURGER, 13 Feb 82)..... 127

Survey Finds One-Third Favor Mixed Residential Areas
(Norman Chandler; SUNDAY TIMES, 21 Feb 82)..... 128

Constellation of States Idea Lands in Difficulties
(Ivor Wilkins; SUNDAY TIMES, 21 Feb 82)..... 129

Independence of 'SOWETAN' Defended
(Aggrey Klaaste; SOWETAN, 15 Feb 82)..... 130

Economic Realities Necessitate Permanence of Urban Blacks
(Dawie; DIE BURGER, 13 Feb 82)..... 132

Steady Growth of Black Spending Power Examined
(Vita Palestrant; RAND DAILY MAIL, 18 Feb 82)..... 134

Maritz: Soweto Survey 'Not Secret'
(RAND DAILY MAIL, 15 Feb 82)..... 136

'Total Onslaught,' 'Total Strategy' Discussed
(RAND DAILY MAIL, 17, 19 Feb 82, THE STAR, 18 Feb 82)..... 139

Countering Attacks, by Hermann Giliomee
'STAR's' Cartoon View
Cartoon View

MAWU Strike Ends Management Promises To Meet Demands
(Joshua Raboroko; SOWETAN, 19 Feb 82)..... 141

East Rand Distillers Workers Stage Strike
(Charles Mogale; SOWETAN, 24 Feb 82)..... 142

Cartoon Protests Rise in Sales Tax
(SOWETAN, 15 Feb 82)..... 143

Cartoon View
(DIE TRANSVALER, 24 Feb 82)..... 144

Reportage on Soweto Mayor's European Trip
(SOWETAN, 19, 22 Feb 82)..... 145

Asks for Aid
Opposes Sanctions

French Policy Toward South Africa: Business as Usual
(DIE BURGER, 9 Feb 82)..... 147

Brazilian Fact Finding Mission Visits South Africa
(DIE BURGER, 13 Feb 82)..... 150

Pretoria's Interests in Kangwane Issue Examined
(Patrick Laurence; RAND DAILY MAIL, 15 Feb 82)..... 152

Stock Exchange Millionaires Listed
(John Spira; SUNDAY TIMES-BUSINESS TIMES, 7 Feb 82)..... 154

Possibility of Gold Pact With Soviets Explored
(Stephen Orpen; SUNDAY TIMES-BUSINESS TIMES, 7 Feb 82)..... 158

South Africa Apprehensive Over Romanian Maize Barter
(DIE BURGER, 11 Feb 82)..... 159

Objectivity in Reporting Examined
(James McClurg; RAND DAILY MAIL, 22 Feb 82)..... 161

Briefs
Invited to Italy 163
Second Refugee 'Seized' 163
Banning Orders Lifted 163
Steyn Commission's 'Plagiarism 164
Parity for Transport Workers 164

TANZANIA

Briefs
Hijacked Aircraft Returned 165
President on Hijacking, Oil Reserves 165

UGANDA

Chinese Experts Aid Rice Farm Near Lira
(Perez Owori; UGANDA TIMES, 22 Feb 82)..... 166

Further Reporting on Issuance of New Bank Notes
(Paul Nsereko; UGANDA TIMES, 17 Feb 82)..... 168

Briefs
Police Deny Arresting Students 170

UPPER VOLTA

Tientaraboum Deplores Manner of SDAR Admission
(AFP, 27 Feb 82)..... 171

ZAIRE

Briefs

Elections 5 September 172
Belgian Aid 172
Legislative Elections 5 September 172
Relations With CAR Improving 172
Debt Repayment Said Doubtful 173

ZAMBIA

Briefs

Zambia, Zaire Border Dispute 174

RESEARCHER INTERVIEWED ON SOVIET POLICY IN AFRICA

Paris ETUDES in French No 356, Jan-Jun 82 pp 19-32

[ETUDES interview with Zaki Laidi, research worker at the National Center for Scientific Research, "Soviet Presence in Black Africa"; date and place not given; passages enclosed in slantlines are in italics]

[Precis in ETUDES Table of Contents: "Z. Laidi, research worker at the CNRS, CERI (Center for International Study and Research). Is Soviet penetration progressing in Black Africa? Under what form: military, ideological or economic? Through Cuba? What is the significance of the treaties which the USSR signed with Angola, Mozambique, Ethiopia and the Congo in 1976? These, in sum, are the questions put to a research worker of the CERI by ETUDES in order to update "multipolar" aspects of East-West rivalry."]

[Text] Question: /Since the Angolan crisis of 1975 the Soviet Union has continued to take its place in Africa as one of the major participants in the diplomatic-strategic game. At the same time it has advocated a policy of detente. Do you see any incompatibility here? And what reason can you give for the USSR's renewed interest in this part of the world?/

[Answer] The success of the USSR's African policy since 1975 can only be understood in the context of the relationship between the diplomatic-strategic interests of a great power and the expectations of a growing number of African states. In the context of an Africa market by aggravation of economic domination and acceleration of political changes as historically anachronistic systems like the Portuguese colonial empire or the Ethiopian empire are displaced, the political forces requesting the support of the USSR see that support as a means of consolidating their power and their sovereignty. In order to support the positions of its allies, the Soviet Union has given them privileged treatment in supplying military equipment; this is still its most effective and most tested means of action. Since 1975 it has provided aid to black Africa worth $2.5 billion, or 15 percent of its total military aid to developing countries. Between 1960 and 1974, Africa accounted for only 3 percent of these commitments. In addition to Angola and Ethiopia, the USSR sends weapons and advisers to a growing number of states whose common characteristic is not ideological or political but that they find this military assistance support for their sovereignty and a means of rationalizing their internal politics. In these conditions, weapons deliveries, a convenient source of profit and influence, are available for almost every country that asks for them. That is why parallel to the support it has given progressive regimes, up until their downfall, the Soviet Union did not hesitate to grant military support to such discredited regimes as that of N'Guema Macias in Equatorial Guinea and Idi Amin Dada in Uganda. In the first case this military assistance enabled the Soviet Union to benefit from extensive fishing rights until 1979; in the second case it gave the USSR an opportunity to maintain its political positions in eastern Africa after it withdrew from the Sudan.

The USSR is a great military power which does not easily resist the temptation of political opportunism, but it is still a power whose actions are also legitimized through ideology. By intervening as it has, it has clearly tried to show African states that the policy of detente to which it was committed was in no way incompatible with its support for liberation movements and radical social forces. Profiting from the Sino-American rapprochement, the Soviet Union had no trouble reclaiming the monopoly of ideological, diplomatic and military support to the Third World which the PRC had tried to take away from it in the 1960's. In this connection the objective identification of Chinese interests with those of the Republic of South Africa and the United Stated at the time of the crisis in Angola in 1975 is a good illustration of the reversal of the position of Chinese and Soviet forces in Africa compared to the positions they occupied at the beginning of the 1960's.

Designed to combat Chinese influence, the strengthening of Soviet action is meant to erode Western positions, especially the American position. But while trying to take advantage of the economic and political vulnerability of the West, the Soviet Union does not take action until after an irreversible weakening of regional and global constraints. And by intervening without committing its own combat forces, in juridically defensible, even unimpeachable, conditions in regions which the Americans themselves do not consider of vital interest to Western security, the USSR has been able to limit the American response. Consideration of all these elements explains why since 1975 the USSR has been able to undo, at the least possible cost, the 'girdle of detente" which Kissinger thought he had obliged it to wear indefinitely, comparing the potential gains to be derived from it to the real costs of Soviet activism. Since the Angolan crisis, the Soviet Union, like the United States, has therefore allowed itself to engage in a regional policy in Africa which does not systematically affect pursuit of the global dialogue. This uncoupling is all the easier in that it entails increased influence made (except in the case of Angola and Ethiopia) with a material and human investment which, while locally decisive, has been insignificant at the global level.

Since then, the Soviet Union's willingness to respond to African expectations as a diplomatic and military ally can be fully understood only in the context of an analysis which emphasizes the fact that its activities in Africa yield benefits for it while saving it from having to choose between global and regional objectives, between the imperatives of strategic power and the obligations of ideological power.

/Q. Since the USSR has taken an interest in Africa its policy has been invariably successful. Do you think that the progress it is making now, which appears to be spectacular, is irreversible or fragile?/

[Answer] Since 1960 the USSR's relations with the African states have been contractual ones based on the mutual consent of both parties. These relations are by their very nature much more fragile than the solid vertical ones inherit inherited from the colonial era which tie the African states to their former masters. In the 1960's, despite the apparent solidity of the links between the USSR and Modibo Keita's Mali or Nkrumah's Ghana, the Soviet "grip" [greffe"] remained limited to the diplomatic field or to the establishment of a state economy.

Despite Khruschev's wish to present the USSR as a model for an alternative form of development differing from the Western model, the Soviet presence has in no way altered the organic link between the African states and the Western countries. From the USSR's inability in the past to consolidate its gains in Guinea, Sudan, Nigeria and Somalia, one could easily say that it must inevitably withdraw from Ethiopia, Angola and Mozambique once the tensions existing in these countries have quieted down. Such an analysis enables one to emphasize that the Soviet Union has not yet solved the essential problem of continuing its influence beyond conflict situations. But having said that, and although I am convinced that in existing circumstances the Soviet Union could not create irreversible alliances, I do think that the fact that Soviet policy and the African context itself keep changing directions means that we cannot approach Soviet-African relations from so static a viewpoint.

In the first place, I think we must challenge reasoning based on a supposedly unavoidable Soviet failure, because this prejudges the superior ability of the West to respond to African expectations more effectively than the USSR. Thinking that the African states allied with the USSR are merely temporarily "led astray" has a paternalistic connotation which implies that African leaders are unable to assess the disadvantages of an alliance with the USSR.

In the second place, the USSR's action should be analyzed in connection with the globalization of the power of a country /which no longer accepts a Western right to exclusive influence in this part of the world./ If we take a closer look at the evolution of the USSR's Africa policy in the last 20 years, we see that the usual conception of that policy--timely "thrusts" followed by "withdrawals"--is rather simple. The fact is that faced with changes in regimes and changing situations which are not favorable to it the USSR is constantly adapting to local conditions in a given region and looking for substitute points of support. Thus, it lost its potential influence in Mali with the fall of Modibo Keita in 1968. Furthermore, financial debt and military dependence are levers which give the USSR a concrete means of influencing countries on the brink of bankruptcy. The military facilities for its air force which it seems to have obtained in Mopti (Mali) opportunely permit it to make up for the loss of identical facilities in Conakry. The relative importance of its trade with West Africa (60 percent of its trade with sub-Saharan Africa) helps it bridge the gap in the region caused by the weakness of its political ties with countries like Ghana, the Ivory Coast and Nigeria. In Central Africa, the USSR has made up for the failure of its adventures in Zaire by its presence in the Congo and Angola. In the Horn, in 1977 it balanced its departure from Somalia with its influence in Ethiopia. In east Africa, thanks to its military assistance, it eroded the Chinese positions in Tanzania, Mozambique, Zambia and Madagascar.

In the third place, the conditions under which the USSR intervenes have changed substantively over the past 2 years. The presence of 40,000 soldiers from the socialist bloc and the role they play in the consolidation of the Angolan and Ethiopian regimes are a new element in Soviet-African relations. The considerable increase in arms shipments contrasts significantly with the limited economic capacity of those receiving those weapons to pay for them, and puts the African states in a new position of military dependence on the USSR. The USSR, having through its action in Angola and Mozambique found the way to project its military power into such sensitive areas as southern Africa and the Horn, will undoubtedly try to preserve the positions it has acquired; all the more so in that the contradictions now besetting Africa mean that the stakes in the area are increasingly complex, and a shortterm solution is unlikely. Some 6 years after the end of Portuguese dominance and despite the independence of Zimbabwe, Angola and Mozambique still face the South African military threat, although one might have expected the difficulties of Mozambique to have been alleviated.

It is not unthinkable that even after the independence of Namibia the Republic of South Africa may maintain its military pressure on Angola by supporting UNITA, just as it does now by Supporting the opponents of Maputo. In the Horn, the Somali-Ethiopian conflict goes way beyond the African context and belongs increasingly in the broader context of the Gulf and the Middle East. The present hardening of American policy in the name of "strategic consensus" has led to a strengthening of the political intrasigence of the Republic of South Africa with respect to a Namibian settlement, inducing it to affirm its own military presence in the Horn. This has already led Angola, Mozambique and Ethiopia to strengthen their cooperation with the USSR. For this reason, and even if it is impossible to prove the theory that the Soviet Union's successes are irreversible, the theory according to which its failure is inevitable does not seem any more useful for gaining an understanding of the dynamics of Soviet-African relations as I have briefly explained them.

/Q. This brings us naturally to ask you about the real impact of the Soviet presence on the regimes it supports, particularly those which claim to adhere to "Marxism-Leninism."/

[Answer] It seems to me that this "Marxist-Leninist" label to which Angola, Ethiopia, Benin, Mozambique and the Congo officially adhere cannot be directly attributed to Soviet policy. Identification with the ideals of "scientific socialistm" for African leaders is a code of political legitimization and a lever to be used in governing which is less discredited than the sullied references to "specific socialist." At any rate, I don't think this internal dimension is anything more than doctrinary faithfulness to the USSR, even if for tactical reasons certain states use this reference as a political token to give the Soviet Union in exchange for concrete advantages, particularly military ones. Although it probably has few illusions about the Marxist orthodoxy of African leaders, the USSR uses this ideological label in order to support, justify and amplify its gains in Africa. That is why even if the principal allies of the USSR call themselves Marxist-Leninist, it is only in more concrete terms that the impact of the Soviet presence can be evaluated. Thus, and in order to go beyond the ambiguities inherent in the undifferentiated use concepts like "penetration," "domination," and "manipulation," I am tempted to view Soviet policy in terms of /gradual levels of influence/.

In its bilateral relations with Africa, the USSR has, since 1960, worked hard to become accepted as a "power like the others" and, from there, thus to reduce the hostility potential of the African states toward it. It seems to me that this initial level of influence has been largely attained, and only the Ivory Coast and Malawi refuse symbolically to establish or reestablish diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union. Working through trade and its contribution to various development projects, and also through arms sales, the USSR tries to maintain at least minimum ties with countries which have little ideological affinity with it (Ghana, Ivory Coast, Nigeria).

One of the USSR's main channels of influence is still through the training of African personnel in socialist countries. At present almost 23,000 Africans from 38 countries are involved in programs of economic, scientific and technical training in the USSR and Eastern Europe. This is a high number. It has not only doubled in less than 5 years but it represents almost half of the training program for personnel from developing countries in the socialist world. It seems to me that the potential leverage for influence which the Soviet Union can get out of these programs is all the greater in that they are given for nationals of countries well beyond those which can be considered its allies. Even though Ethiopians are the best represented, there are many more Nigerians and Malgasays than Angolans and Mozambiquans. It is also particularly interesting to note the growing role played by Eastern Europe in this area. Not only do they reduce the burden which the granting of scholarships places on the USSR, but above and beyond that, they relay the Soviet Union's influence to countries which would find it politically less compromising to send students to Eastern Europe than to the USSR. This at any rate is the result of a study comparing training programs in the USSR and in Eastern Europe for personnel from countries having tense political relations with the USSR, such as Zaire, the Sudan and Somalia. Paradoxically, in the military realm, the number of Africans training in the USSR and Eastern Europe is tending to diminish. This could be because the Soviets prefer to send military advisers to Africa or to extend the Cuban presence there. The example of Somalia is certainly there to remind us that extensive development of programs for training military and civilian personnel does not necessarily lead to the ideological subjection to the USSR of persons who will have relatively important responsibilities when they return to their own country. But at the same time one should not ignore the advantage which the USSR can hope to get from these programs, even if it is only to achieve a better balance with the Western influence among the African elite.

Beyond this level of influence, the USSR methodically endeavors to seek with care the broadest possible regional diplomatic agreements with African states, setting aside their domestic politics. It is at this second level that the results obtained by the USSR since 1975 seem the most tangible. By appearing in Angola as Africa's best ally against the Republic of South Africa, the USSR legitimized its activities in the eyes of countries which were initially hostile or reserved about its intervention (Tanzania, Zambia, Nigeria). In the Horn, a country as firmly anchored in the Western camp as Kenya judged the Soviet-Cuban intervention in support of Ethiopia a necessary evil given the Somali Irredentism which also threatened it. The perception of a Soviet-Cuban "danger" has diminished considerably, even though it has a tendency to be replaced by the Libyan "peril."

However, although these two thresholds of influence have undoubtedly been crossed, it doesn't seem so easy for the USSR to attain higher levels of influence. The diplomatic alliance it is trying to forge with African states on matters which do not directly concern Africa is far from a fait accompli. On a matter as important for the USSR as the Afghan question, only 6 African countries (Angola, Ethiopica, Mozambique, Seychelles, Madagascar, Sao Tome et Principe) voted with the Soviet Union, whereas 27 others voted against it in the United Nations. Countries like Benin, which claim the Marxist-Leninist label, or the Congo, which signed a friendship and cooperation treaty with the USSR last May, preferred to take refuge in abstention. That being said, however, we must note that in viewing the Third World as a whole, it is in Africa that the USSR gets the most diplomatic support.

The fourth level of influence which the USSR may try to attain is based on efforts to create /a structural alliance/ with its choice allies. The features of such an alliance would be related to the USSR's essential contribution to the strengthening of the regimes of these countries, to [its contribution to] the size of their agreed military investment and to their diplomatic and strategic importance. Angola and, even moreso, Ethiopia are /perhaps/ forerunners of such alliances. Over the past 6 years these two countries alone have absorbed 70 percent of all Soviet arms shipments to Black Africa made since 1960, and received 30,000 Cuban soldiers. Because of the obvious political and strategic advantage to the USSR of maintaining its position in Ethiopia, it grants Ethiopia exceptional terms for the repayment of its military debt, sells it petroleum at a preferential price, buys its coffee at advantageous conditions, and offers it credits of a size to contrast with the modest nature of Soveit economic involvement in Black Africa. In exchange, The USSR seeks, and not without difficulty, to promote the institutionalization of the military regime on the communist model and to obtain military facilities on the Red Sea. But the apparent solidity of this type of alliance in no way implies a vassalization of African states. Even if they are not unaware of the USSR's attempts to be the arbiters of their internal political affairs and to demand military advantages, they are not without means to resist these demands. In many cases the concessions the African states grant to the USSR have a purely formal meaning for the former, while the latter attaches great symbolic value to them. The Ethiopian armed forces may have accepted the principle of the creation of a communist party, but they have not reduced their control over Ethiopian public life for this reason. Madagascar voted with Moscow on the Afghan matter at the United Nations only to obtain Soviet support for its project of a conference on the Indian Ocean. One might even say that the formal concessions made to the USSR are sometimes used, paradoxically, as a way of keeping the USSR at a distance. The conclusion of a friendship treaty with the USSR enabled Angola to participate more freely in the West's attempts to achieve a settlement in Namibia. An identical treaty helped the Congo refuse the USSR the use of its port of Pointe-Noir for military purposes.

/Q. Precisely. Since we're talking about the Congo, let us recall that even more recently the USSR signed a friendship and cooperation treaty with this country. There have been other treaties of this type with other countries. What do you see as the function of these diplomatic acts, which, when viewed from the outside, look like a display of "pactomania"?/

[Answer] The treaties of friendship and cooperation which tie the USSR to Angola since 1976 and to Mozambique since 1977, to Ethiopia since 1978, and to the Congo since 1981 fairly well illustrate the contractual nature of Soviet-African relations which I pointed out earlier, as well as the possible gap between the meanings attributed to these acts by the Soviets and the Africans. For the USSR these treaties, the content of which hardly varies from one African country to another, can be interpreted firstly as a means of classical diplomacy associated with solemn acts. But above and beyond their symbolic dimension, these treaties clearly should be viewed in the context of a search for privileged allies in the Third World, with which the USSR wishes to establish close and well-structured relations. The countries who signed these treaties are meant to occupy an intermediate position between the socialist bloc and the rest of the Third World. But the Soviets generally consider them of great importance. The fact that in less than 5 years it has signed four treaties with Africa shows the great importance it attaches to its foreign policy on that continent.

To me these treaties have two essential functions. At the diplomatic level they enable the Soviet Union to assert itself alongside the United States as a power with solid allies. The adherence of the signatory countries to the general objectives of Soviet policy and the establishment of a system for regular consultation on bilateral matters as well as international matters enables the USSR to maintain a system of relations with diplomatic "clients."

Referring once again to the vote on the Afghan matter, we note that, with the exception of the Congo all the African countries which have signed these treaties of friendship took the part of the Soviet Union. We should point out right away that although this voting behavior enabled the USSR to verify the apparent "efficacy" of these treaties, the diplomatic alignment of countries like Mozambique, Angola and Ethiopia with the Soviet Union is really a result of their military dependence. It is significant that the Congo, whose dependence is limited, abstained.

The second function of these treaties is in the sphere of ideology. Despite all the reservations which should be borne in mind when using the Marxist-Leninist label, the fact that all the African countries who have signed such treaties do officially espouse this ideology enables the USSR to increase the apparent coherence of its commitment in Africa.

In the third place, these treaties contribute to a structuring and developing of links with countries which are beneficiaries of Soviet diplomatic and military support. Through what the treaties call "mutual familiarization with the achievements of the two countries," the USSR finds an appropriate context for promoting a distinctive element of its policy in the Third World: insuring its physical presence and enhancing its image. This function seems all the more important in that it contrasts noticeably with the USSR's general reluctance to establish such relations with Western countries.

Finally, the treaties meet a concern identical to that found in Proust's "la Prisonniere" by trying to impart a structure to relations with partners likely to grow cooler. This dimension, which Helene Carrere d'Encausse brought out a propos of the Soviet-Egyptian treaty, is not totally absent in black Africa.

The Soviet-Somali treaty of 1974, hastily interpreted in the West as a sign of growing subjugation of the Mogadiscio regime to the USSR, was really meant to put a stop to that country's rapprochement with moderate Arab countries. The treaty with Angola coincided with American initiatives in southern Africa; the treaty with the Congo came at a time when that country was strengthening its ties with the West.

For their part, the African states, in signing these treaties, find a way--without seriously commiting themselves--of giving the Soviet Union symbolic tokens of allegiance in exchange for substantial military assistance at relatively advantageous conditions.

/Q. Do you think that Cuba's activities in Africa should be seen as Cuba's own strategy or that they are closely linked with that of the Soviet Union?/

[Answer] If we stick to logistical and financial aspects of Cuba's activities, we must take note of the fact that they seem to be largely dependent on Soviet support. Even in Angola, where Cuba intervened initially on its own, the transport of heavy equipment and of half of the expeditionary force was only made possible by the logistical support of the Soviet Union. In Ethiopia, where everything points to the USSR having taken the initiative, Cuba's subordination seems even greater. Having said this, I think nevertheless that it would be a great oversimplification of the complexity of Soviet-Cuban relations to argue from these facts that one should deny or underestimate the importance of Cuba's motivation in intervening in Africa. I also believe it is necessary to remember that Cuba's revolutionary evangelism is a fundamental part of Castro's revolution; one of the objectives of that revolution has always been to push back American influence wherever it has its weakest links, in other words in the Third World. This worldwide strategy, which has found fertile ground in Africa since 1975, is born of Cuba's major concern to overcome, by political action beyond its borders, the economic and political asphyxia it is subjected to by the United States.

This strategy, which Cuba developed in the 1960's with great zeal but limited means in Africa (Congo) and Latin America (Bolivia,) and which simultaneously embarrassed the United States, the USSR and Canada, plunged Cuba into a double economic and political impasse. To get out of it, Havana decided, starting in the late 1960's, that it was in its best interests to work in close alliance with the USSR. This reevaluation of its position, which is still the basis of its African policy, helps us understand Cuba's essential concern, which is not to find ways of distinguishing itself from the Soviet Union, but to concentrate on what will help it serve its own interests while maintaining its freedom of action within the parameters set by Soviet foreign policy.

Thus it seems to me that the real question we should ask should be posed not in terms of Cuba's dependence on the USSR but rather of evaluating the respective advantages gained by these two countries from their alliance in Africa. From Cuba's point of view, the intervention in Angola was an important turning point in its world strategy because it was its first brilliant success in the Third World in which it scored indirectly against the United States. This success helped it considerably to hoist itself up to the rank of great military and diplomatic power even though some states question its autonomy of action with respect to the USSR. On the economic and financial level, Cuba not only got out of paying for its interventions in Africa but it gained economic advantages, especially since the 20-year agreement with the USSR in 1976. By guaranteeing prices of sugar and nickel exported to the socialist world and supplies of petroleum at low prices, the USSR assumed a financial burden to the tune of $2.5 billion. This considerable sacrifice was not made without some advantage, nor were the advantages acquired by Cuba acquired without new subjugation.

By having Cuban forces intervene instead of its own, the USSR lessens the risk of direct confrontation with the United States inasmuch as the latter would have difficulty equating Cuban intervention supported by the USSR with direct Soviet intervention. In the second place, the Cuban presence helps the USSR overcome the cultural and racial differences which have often interfered with its designs in Africa. Finally, its image of a besieged citadel in the Third World undoubtedly attenuates real or supposed perceptions of Soviet expansionism.

Having said this, we should add that the conflict in the Horn has highlighted the risk Cuba runs in participating in conflicts where the interests of the USSR are paramount. By taking sides with Ethiopia, after committing itself in 1972 to explicitly supporting the Somali claims (which the USSR never did), and by ending its support to the Eritrean movements, Cuba espoused, without any apparent advantage to itself, the perfectly understandable turnabouts in Soviet policy in the region. Finally. and this is the most important point, the massive presence of Cuban forces is not without problems for African countries who, while they consider their presence indispensable, are nevertheless annoyed, in Angola, for example, by the Cubans' habit of "giving lessons." Cuba, like the USSR, is not seen as a saving power by the African states which ask for its help, but rather as an indispensable temparary ally in difficult circumstances.

/Q. So far we have spoken mainly about various aspects of the military and diplomatic strategy associated with the Soviet presence in Africa. Doesn't economic cooperation also have a place in the USSR's Africa policy, and if so, what place?/

[Answer] First, we should recall that, unlike the Western states, the USSR has more than half the energy reserves of the world, so it doesn't really have a strategy of supply designed to remedy deficiencies in national resources. The only mineral raw material it really lacks is bauxite, and Guinea will continue supplying it with bauxite until the year 2005 at the rate of 2.5 million tons a year in exchange for the USSR's assistance in exploiting the Kindia deposits. In fact, most of the USSR's imports from Black Africa are coffee and cocoa.

This low economic dependence largely explains the small place occupied by Black Africa in the USSR's trade with developing countries (10 percent approximately). This also increases the USSR's political margin for maneuver in the face of the economically vulnerable position of the West in southern Africa. Finally, it justifies the very modest dimensions of the USSR's program of economic assistance which, since 1975, has been no more than 4 percent of its total aid to developing countries. These last years, the only economic engagement undertaken by the USSR in Black Africa was for the benefit of Ethiopia. This assistance granted to a privileged political ally is not widespread, however, since the credits open to Angola and Mozambique have been very low up to now.

The modest nature of this economic assistance is in marked contrast to the renewed political interest accorded to this continent, and I think this is because of the rationalization of the foreign policy of a country which wants to get the largest dividends possible from its actions. Soviet aid often seems ill-adapted to the needs of African states because of its traditional deficiencies: slowness of payments, delays in delivering products, the narrowness of the range of its products of interest to African states, the rigidity of its technical assistance programs, and so on. As for the traditional advantages which the African states get from cooperation with the USSR (long-term agreements with guaranteed prices, settlements by means of clearing house, payment for shipments in the form of products), these tend to get blurred because their need for foreign currency to pay for imports of manufactured goods and energy leads the African countries to turn to Western markets primarily. The USSR, having gauged the small political dividends to be obtained from its economic commitments so far, is now tending to substitute agreements defined in terms of convertible currencies for almost all of its clearing house type agreements. By only including the economic dimension in a very small way in the whole of its African policy, the USSR is depriving itself of a means of extending its political influence. But this disadvantage is largely offset by the inconvenience that would be caused to it by increasing the number of countries it already subsidizes within the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance (Cuba, Vietnam). For this reason it shows no wish to take the place of the West as a privileged economic trading partner of its political allies.

A well-known example of an uncoupling of political privileged relations with the East and close economic relations with the West is Angola, 85 percent of whose receipts from exports comes from oil, which to a great extent is exploited with the help of American companies. But at the same time, the dynamics of economic relations between the USSR and Africa seem to be achieving new complementary dimensions. The first new dimension regards a tentative socialist division of labor whereby each country in the socialist world undertakes to intervent in Africa economically in the field in which it is most competent (Bulgaria in fishing and agriculture, the GDR in textiles and telecommunications, Czechoslovakia in the supply of power stations, Romania in geological prospecting, particularly for petroleum, and Cuba in furnishing skilled labor for housing construction). The second dimension, which should not be underestimated, is the growing economic role played by arms shipments. These shipments were made in exchange for local products for periods from 8 to 10 years during the 1960's; now they are increasingly made on the basis of payment in foreign exchange. When its clients cannot meet these terms, the USSR asks to be paid in the form of strategic minerals. At any rate, this seems to be the mode of payment agreed upon for arms shipments to Mali and Zambia.

9855
CSO: 4719/459

SAVIMBI SPEAKS ON UNITA, FNLA, TIES WITH SOUTH AFRICA

Lisbon TEMPO in Portuguese 21 Jan 82 pp 16-18

[Interview with UNITA president Jonas Savimbi, By Joao Rosa, in Rabat, Morocco, in January 1981]

[Text] Rabat (TEMPO)--"We are more certain than ever that unless Portuguese of good will return to Angola, we cannot begin to think in terms of economic reconstruction. This is absolutely essential," declared Dr Jonas Savimbi, president of UNITA, in an important interview granted to us last week. In our last issue we printed statements from that interview regarding the forthcoming release of Portuguese prisoners by the UNITA forces fighting the MPLA regime.

Today we publish the continuation of the interview, which takes up major aspects of the current situation in Angola, Africa and the world--including the current situation in Portugal--and looks at the future desired by the leader of this Angolan nationalist movement, who was recently honored with an official reception in Washington by Secretary of State Alexander Haig.

It is noted that this was the fourth interview granted to us by Savimbi in the last 3 years. The first one was in January 1979, and was the first to be granted to a Portuguese journalist after the civil war began in Angola.

Combat Troops

TEMPO: In 1979 you told me that UNITA had 12,000 men trained and outfitted as regulars and another 8,000 men as militia. In 1980, you said these troops had grown, respectively, to 15,000 and 10,000 men. How many men does UNITA have today?

Jonas Savimbi: Actually, at this time we have somewhat over 10,000 men as regular forces--but 10,000 is the figure we want to give out. And we have guerrillas, but guerrillas who are also trained and equipped. We also have a number--we do not yet have a precise figure--of auxiliaries who are also better armed than they were 3 years ago.

TEMPO: In 1979 you also told me that UNITA was in 9 of the 16 administrative provinces of Angola, with administrative organizations in 5 of them. What is the current situation in this regard?

Savimbi: It is the same, but there are some added factors because we are no active in Lunda, as well, which we were not before, and we also have had good cooperation in Malanje, even in the neighborhood of the province capital.

TEMPO: It is said that UNITA even has hospitals, schools, machine shops, churches, secretarial schools and agricultural schools. Can you say something about these infrastructures and where they are located (if you can say) or their actual extent?

Savimbi: Actually, we have these clinics; we have a central hospital where surgery is performed, operations that have been observed by foreign technicians, who considered them technically sound. We also have schools and machine shops. We have post offices and agricultural projects where we have already gone from hoes to tractors. We are settling displaced populations from insecure areas in areas with greater security.

TEMPO: Regarding enemy forces, you told me in 1979 that the MPLA had 30,000 men in the FAPLA, along with 28,000 Cubans, 2,000 East Germans and 2,000 Soviet troops. In 1980, you said there were 80,000 FAPLA soldiers, plus 34,000 Cubans, 20,000 of whom were soldiers, and the same 4,000 men from the GDR and the USSR. What is the enemy's troop strength today?

Savimbi: The MPLA has not enlarged its troops, because, at that time, when they had 80,000 men, many of them were not serving. They have made an extraordinary effort, but the MPLA still does not have its 80,000 men duly armed.

There are over 100,000 men serving as a paramilitary force supporting the FAPLA troops, and there are about 40,000 Cubans (35,000 soldiers and 5,000 to 6,000 civilians, all of whom have had military training, however); there are now 3,000 Russians and 3,000 East Germans.

TEMPO: It has been said that the Cuban troops were pulled back from the front lines against UNITA some time ago. Is that true? How is this withdrawal of the Cubans explained?

Savimbi: There was a period, after 1979, when the Cubans did not participate directly in combat because they wanted to minimize the number of dead and wounded, which is understandable, since our struggle in the north was already having international repercussions. Recently, however, we have received reports that the Cubans are becoming increasingly involved in engagements against UNITA.

TEMPO: Even so, on 2 and 3 January, a Cuban soldier was killed and three more were wounded in engagements with South African troops in Cunene, 120 kilometers from the border with the Republic of South Africa. How is that? Are the Cubans in the south, then?

Savimbi: I believe these Cubans were material maintenance technicians, because the Cubans have never appeared or taken part in any combat in that area. Even the Soviet troops are much more involved than the Cubans. It was not by chance that they showed up there. The Cubans wanted to justify their presence in Angola in the eyes of the MPLA, or else they were simply technicians sent to inspect the materiel placed in that zone.

TEMPO: I have also heard that UNITA already has two companies formed by Cuban deserters. Is this true?

Savimbi: Not two companies. This is an exaggeration. We have some soldiers, officers and noncoms who deserted, but all together they would not make up one company.

TEMPO: I have seen it written, on the other hand, UNITA is recruiting mercenaries in the FRG, Great Britain, the United States and Portugal...

Savimbi: Who ever wrote that was lying. We have never had any intention of recruiting mercenaries. Even in 1975, when the other two movements were resorting to mercenaries, we always shunned this because we feel that no war was ever won with mercenaries.

TEMPO: So UNITA does not have mercenaries...

Savimbi: Not a single one. We have no foreigners in our ranks.

TEMPO: Regarding the other resistance forces, is there anything left of the FNLA? Are the remnants of the FNLA now the so-called COMIRA--Angolan Military Resistance Committee--led by Sr Armand Immarelli, a mercenary living in Kinshasa?

Savimbi: We think the FNLA is very much divided at this tiem, but we cannot ignore the fact that the FNLA still represents a nationalist front that is accepted in the north. It would be wrong to attempt to put together a national movement without considering the possibility of talking to the FNLA. It is up to the FNLA to bring together the various factions within the movement, but we think it is urgent to create a certain inclination to do this.

TEMPO: A Portuguese newspaper has reported that UNITA attacks indiscriminately, massacring villages, attempting to steal food and laying mines indiscriminately, causing injury to many innocent people, including school children. According to this report, in EXPRESSO, this has happened in the Katchiumgo, Savala and Lombambo regions. Do you want to comment?

Savimbi: Many times, when the enemy wants to denegrate others, it resorts to any tactic. They used to say we were hiding in Namibia, but now they are talking about Katchiumgo, Savala and Lombambo. Actually, they are trying to malign UNITA, which is fighting a war that already takes in Bie, Huambo and Huila provinces. It is not true that UNITA is attacking settlements and robbing people because, if we were, we could not have received support from these same settlements. On the contrary, it is the MPLA and the Cubans who are killing the people. As for laying mines, we place them on the highways, and only the MPLA uses the highways. Unfortunately, often civilian automobiles are destroyed, but this is an inescapable consequence of the war. But placing mines at the schools...we do not place mines around schools, but around MPLA headquarters. We have placed them, for example, in the Embassy of the GDR and at Aeroflot; we have placed them at the refinery. We do not consider these to be just economic targets, because they are both economic and military targets. But we have never placed a mine at a school.

Issue of South African Support

TEMPO: Regarding support to UNITA, has what you told me in January 1980 been confirmed? Has there been "an increasing willingness by more and more African and Western countries to support UNITA"? I ask--if you can say--what countries or at least what kinds of countries are we talking about?

Savimbi: As a result of my trip to the United States, which I feel was extremely important for UNITA, many African and Arab countries are now more interested in giving us substantial support, which we need. Even their political stands are much clearer and they are receiving us much more openly. I do not wish to give names, but on my last trip to some African countries I was not kept out of sight. I was openly received and so I believe that, since the American position has become clear, the African countries are also beginning to take more distant [as published] positions than they did earlier.

TEMPO: In your recent trip to the United States, it was reported in some U.S. newspapers that Dr Jonas Savimbi stated that UNITA was getting arms from China and Morocco and from France, before Mitterrand, military training in Morocco, various kinds of assistance from Senegal and even medicines and provisions from South Africa in exchange for diamonds and ivory. Do you confirm all this aid, including the aid from South Africa?

Savimbi: I would begin by saying that what the Americans said...

TEMPO: They said that you said...

Savimbi: Considering the press conference, they certainly heard me, and so it is true, but regarding South Africa, I would like to explain that this issue has not troubled us, but it has been very poorly interpreted, both in Africa and in neutral communities, even in the United States. But we have an explanation. South Africa is on the border of Angola, and while we can choose our friends, we cannot choose our neighbors. Second, we are not at all ashamed to say we have contacts with South Africa. We have contacts with South Africa because we have a market there. It is the only African country that offers this market, and for this reason we will not give up our contacts with South Africa. More: we can also say that we buy medicines, clothes and other articles from neighboring friendly African countries, just as we buy them from South Africa. There is a certain hypocrisy here, however, since all the African countries engage in millions of dollars' worth of trade with South Africa. An example is Mozambique, which could not survive without support from South Africa.

U.S. Aid and the Clark Amendment

TEMPO: Regarding U.S. aid, it is in fact essential to UNITA. However, the Reagan administration has not yet managed to annul the famous Clark Amendment.

Is this annulment essential to you and to UNITA, or is the United States already providing adequate aid?

Savimbi: The U.S. Government is seeking to create a dynamic in southern Africa, in Namibia, in angola, but we have no illusions. The Clark Amendment means that the U.S. Government is restricted in these questions. But a country like the United States does not precisely need to send missiles, because there are other ways of providing aid. If they want to give aid, they can always do so. The Clark Amendment does not mean a thing. It is a matter of principle that leads the government to respect a policy that has been approved. The situation is already being superceded. It was a situation created in 1976 when America was experiencing the Vietnam syndrome, the Watergate syndrome. Moreover, the individual who introduced the amendment was not reelected. Even the committee that elected this individual to the senate was a victim of the Clark Amendment. Therefore, for the administration to annul legistation that restricts its political and diplomatic action is one thing, and material aid is another thing. Material aid does not depend on nor is it limited by the Clark Amendment. A big country like the United States has other channels.

TEMPO: In the United States, according to the newspaper reports, Dr Savimbi said: "Today in Angola there is a three-way alliance of Gulf, the MPLA and the Cubans. Gulf puts pressure on the United States to favor the MPLA over UNITA,: It is also generally known that many other U.S. companies are pressuring the Reagan administration to withold support from UNITA, because they will be superceded by the Brazilians in business with Angola. Do you want to explain and comment?

Savimbi: We are not against Gulf, and I so stated in the United States. The oil prospecting contracts in Angola were signed with the Portuguese government, the colonial government. The MPLA honored the contracts, and any government in Angola will have to honor them. We are just sorry that Gulf is conducting this campaign against UNITA and in favor of the MPLA. I can say that we have already had contacts with many firms and I submit that this campaign is going to fall off now. The same can be said regarding the other companies. The action will be very tempered, because there is a market for everyone. There is a great difference in all this, however, There are individuals who are doing business with Angola now only out of opportunism and they know that the MPLA is not ready to give up any American business, but attacks the position of the American Government. If UNITA were participating in the Angolan government, these individuals would not only have the same guarantees or even greater guarantees, but they would be dealing with a government in which there was a force that is attuned to many of the problems facing America in this world. The MPLA propaganda regarding its acceptance by the Americans is not really true, either, because the United States of America has cancelled a $1 million contract in Texas with the MPLA. Also, there is not a businessman in the world, much less in the United States, who wants to negotiate against the Reagan government, and I am certain that Reagan will not yield to the pressure of the multinationals. On the contrary, he wants to convince the multinationals that they should back the policy of the government.

TEMPO: How do you interpret the fact that Brazil opposes, de facto and officially, any support to UNITA, even though the Brazilian regime is a prime anticommunist regime?

Savimbi: Brazil is not the only country that had declared, through its president, that it would oppose any support to UNITA; so has the Portuguese Government, in the person of Sr Goncalves Pereira, its foreign affairs minister. I think these positions are absurd because the U.S. Government will not yield to pressure from Portugal or Brazil and the proof is that he has not accepted them. It is much better not to say anything than to speak out and lose standing.

TEMPO: I would like you to comment on the theory that the more support UNITA receives from the West, the more Cubans will come to Angola and the greater the Soviet commitment in Angola will become, so this increased support to UNITA is inadvisable.

Savimbi: So is the policy of Goncalves Pereira, of counseling people to invest in the MPLA and pay for the presence of the Cubans in Angola. The Cubans are drawing wages in Angola that they never received in Cuba. The Cubans are not in Angola "for free." They demand wages, just as the Soviets are not supplying arms to the MPLA without demanding immediate payment. So it is not [increased aid to UNITA] that will increase the Cuban presence in Angola or in southern Africa. We think this [Cuban] aid is a direct result of the action of UNITA itself. This [theory] is completely discredited and the position of the Western countries regarding aid to UNITA is being modified. Also, we should keep in mind that, despite the position of certain Western countries, the United States is still the leader of the West. I do not believe that even a Socialist France will go against what the Americans do in the world. I am confident that Western support to UNITA will be increased, especially since some Western ministers have invited me to visit them.

TEMPO: A Portuguese newspaper reported recently that last July, at the Kitona military base in the strip between Zaire and Cabinda, there was a meeting of official or ex officio representatives of UNITA, COMIRA, FLEC, South Africa, the United States, Zaire and Gabon, to coordinate actions to overthrow the MPLA regime. Do you know anything about this that you can say?

Savimbi: It is absolutely untrue. First, we have never had a single meeting with the FNLA or with FLEC or with COMIRA or Gabon, much less an organized meeting in Zaire, which maintains relations with Angola. It is a speculation, like so many others, by some Portuguese journalists, but a markedly communist speculation, to alienate the other countries. Zaire can respond better than we can, however, because Zaire has diplomatic relations with Angola, and Luanda has an ambassador or, even better, it has agents in Kinshasa. They not only have a diplomat, they also have agents; they have spies. So through their spies they know everything that goes on in the capital of Zaire, and they know this is a lie.

Condemnation of South African Incursions

TEMPO: Whatever your formal position on the South African regime it seems to me you must agree that the recent invasion of Angola's southern territory by South African troops was advantageous for UNITA, providing it with a buffer zone, making it easier to maneuver and distracting the Luanda forces from their vigilance in the center and north of the country. Do you deny these real advantages?

Savimbi: I absolutely deny them, obviously. First, because we do not need a buffer zone. We are installed in a vast territory where we even have an airport, so we do not need the assistance of foreigners. In this area, where there are battles between SWAPO and in this case between the MPLA and South Africa, we are already well established, so it is a mistake to say that South Africa was seeking to take the territory away from the MPLA and give it to UNITA, because we don't need this. Moreover, we are opposed to these invasions, to these incursions.

When the South Africans attack the civilian population that is often concentrated around these bases, when they are unable to distinguish between SWAPO and UNITA, when they destroy the country's infrastructures, we cannot accept it. We denounce such attitudes. Many people try to confuse our war with the South African war.

We don't need weapons or territory captured from SWAPO, because there is no territory to capture. I would also like to explain that the South African raids against SWAPO did not begin in 1981, but in 1977. It was then that the South Africans began the raids in southern Angola, and since the South Africans always use planes and tanks, when the South Africans advance, SWAPO retreats and when South Africa pulls back, SWAPO advances. There is no possibility whatever of creating a vacuum. There was never any possibility of creating a vacuum. South Africa could install military forces in the territory, but it prefers to place them in Namibia and not in southern Angola.

TEMPO: In the United States, Dr Savimbi stated, according to the press, that UNITA gives tactical support to SWAPO, which in turn is, after all, a force allied to UNITA. Well, if the Luanda forces are official allies of SWAPO and the Pretoria forces are enemies of both the former and the latter, how are we to interpret your statement, if you made it?

Savimbi: I never stated that we give tactical support to SWAPO. We do not give SWAPO tactical support, much less political or strategic support. My statement was that, if there were free elections in Namibia, there was every possibility that SWAPO would win them. So what I sought was to alert the Western countries, primarily the United States, to watch out for their interests because there is no possibility whatever of anyone defeating SWAPO in elections.

TEMPO: Besides the question of Namibia, the question of Zimbabwe also constitutes an important piece of the "puzzle" in southern Africa. Or do you think the Zimbabwe question has been definitely settled?

Savimbi: I do not believe Zimbabwe plays a very important role. Zimbabwe is somewhat removed from the Area that I consider the "hot" zone, which comprises Angola, Namibia and South Africa. Nonetheless, Zimbabwe could play a moderating role now that it has emerged from a national liberation struggle. It still has the glow of liberation and would be a beneficial and welcome support, but if Zimbabwe plays a negative role, as far as we are concerned, it could never influence our position.

From Africa to Poland

TEMPO: This is an opportunity to ask for your evaluation of the Soviet game in Africa. Is the Soviet Union still seeking total domination in Africa or has it chosen to assert this hegemony in the Persian Gulf, downplaying domination in southern Africa?

Savimbi: I do not feel that the Soviet Union now dominates the Persian Gulf, where the Americans still have great influence, but the Soviet game, its program and its policy, have always been militaristic. They have never been regionalists. Hence the Western nations, above all the Americans, must maintain vigilance in these zones. Africa is still an important piece in the Soviet game because it not only gives them control over a strategic zone, particularly in our area, in the South Atlantic, but also access to strategic minerals. Some say that the Soviet Union does not need minerals, but if it does not need them, at least it could deny the West access to them. American industry, industry in the Western countries--France, the FRG, England--could never do without these minerals, for which there are no substitutes. Hence the Soviet Union is aiming not only at a geopolitical position but a geoeconomic one.

TEMPO: Regarding the international political situation, I will just ask you to comment on the situation in Poland and the obvious discrepancy between the reactions of the Reagan administration and of Western Europe.

Savinbi: It is to the interest of the West to align their positions with those of the Americans on the most important points because, at bottom, if there is a confrontation, Europe will be the first victim. Western Europe should also bear in mind that the Americans are leaning toward isolationism. They are not prepared to maintain their forces in Europe--I met some officials who told me this--considering the weakness of the European forces. One day the Americans could withdraw and leave them on their own. It would be a mistake on the Americans' part, but it would also be aprovocation for the Europeans not to support the strategic theories of the Americans.

Comments on Portuguese Situation

TEMPO: Regarding the situation in Portugal, would you comment on the two political facts of the past year that seem most relevant to me: the reelection of General Eanes and the instability of the AD [Democratic Alliance]?

Savimbi: It is up to the Portuguese people to choose their leaders and to define their heirarchy. President Eanes' reelection has absolutely nothing to do with UNITA. As for the instability of the AD, it is not surprising, because the disappearance of Dr Sa Carneiro created a whole range of uncertainties. Hence this instability is an indication, really, that the remaining leaders are not succeeding in reaching a meeting of minds. Portugal needs a stable government, because a stable government in Portugal will make it possible for other countries which have higher interests in Africa, and which recognize that Portugal has an African mission, to use Portugal to make these contacts. But if the instability is such that the government is changing from one day to the next, I do not think anyone will be disposed to turn to it.

TEMPO: In 1980 Dr Savimbi told me (I quote): "I have hopes that, with the AD in power, UNITA will have a better chance to expound its cause, finding a much larger and more favorable audience in the government and its parties." Have your hopes been confirmed?

Savimbi: No. The untimely death of Dr Sa Sarneiro prevented a clear definition of AD policy. It is true, however, that certain members of the AD parties have spoken with us and, within their limitations, have launched a certain movement in our favor. [Portion of text missing.] We would like to see the AD take more effective stands, but it is not doing so. We would even prefer to see the CDS [Social Democratic Center Party] or the PSD [Social Democratic Party] take stands because they might force the government to align with them, which is not happening.

TEMPO: Evaluating the present and probable future relations between Angola and Portugal, I ask you again to comment on your own statement in our 1979 interview, in which you stated (I quote): "The Portuguese must return to Angola. Whatever their respective regimes, in terms of history and their peoples, Angola and Portugal must be reconciled. From an economic standpoint, there is no one, technician or laborer, who can replace the Portuguese in Angola." Aren't the prospects for this going well?

Savimbi: In terms of reconciliation, yes. With the problems we have experienced, we understand that engineers and physicians are needed. However, to solve the problems of the people, we need the small technicians and, many times, the small tradesmen. This is what Angola lacks. The engineers and doctors from the Soviet Union can do nothing to move Angola forward. We are more certain than ever that, without the return of Portuguese of good will to Angola, we cannot think in terms of economic reconstruction. This is essential, certainly.

The MPLA and the Economic Crisis in Angola

TEMPO: Speaking of the MPLA, I recall that in the interviews with Dr Jonas Savimbi 3 years ago, he stated, for example, that "the MPLA has always experienced internal crises and will always have crises"; that "the death of Agostinho Neto has shortened our war, since it has left the MPLA much less united"; and that "Eduardo dos Santos is making peace with Neto's adversaries and we are observing a total alignment with Moscow." From your information, what is the situation now?

Savimbi: Exactly what we foresaw. First, the MPLA has come to have factions again. There are factions within the MPLA that are negotiating with private enterprises and are even supplying them with information against their own government.

Eduardo dos Santos does not control the MPLA, because there are traditional chiefs who challenge his authority. In this phase of economic liberation, if Agostinho Neto were here, he would have the personalities to keep his party on top. But not Eduardo dos Santos, certainly. As can be seen.

TEMPO: You specifically mentioned the economic situation in Angola, and I would like to hear your information, the indications you have about the evident deterioration of the living standards of the Angolan people. What do you know about this?

Savimbi: In 1974 Angola produced 480,000 tons of fish. Today they are talking about 100,000 tons, and there is no fish on the market. They have had to ask for a meeting of the Angolan-Soviet economic commission to try to prevent the Soviet Union from taking all the fish. So this is an indication that the MPLA has lost control of the situation, to the point that its allies are not honoring their contracts. Once Angola not only produced enough to supply its people, but it was exporting. We have the case of coffee. Today, Angola is not achieving even 20 percent of its former production. Angola was the world's third largest producer of coffee and now it is not even keeping up with the Ivory Coast. We also have indications that the diamonds are now being sold through Cuba. We also see indications that the MPLA is importing food from Portugal, France, the Ivory Coast and other countries; once Angola was a producer, now it is just an importer.

However, there are limits to the capacity of the MPLA government itself to pay for the food. There is also a limit to credit. So we need to consider that, in addition to the economic problems Angola is experiencing now, the most serious problem, the most pressing problem, is the food supply. We talked here in Rabat with an individual who told us that the Red Cross program was to supply as much as 15 kg of food per person per month, but now Angola receives only 8 kg. Angola is going begging for international charity.

UNITA-MPLA Dialogue

TEMPO: You told me 3 years ago that the MPLA was even debating internally whether or not to have a dialogue with UNITA. Is this debate still going on inside the MPLA?

Savimbi: There are currents that are prepared to talk to UNITA, and we can also say we have had some contacts with figures high in the MPLA, but there are other currents that are opposed and some of them are strong, I admit. We can only hope that reason will prevail and that, in the interest of the MPLA itself and, above all, in the interest of peace in Angola, the more stubborn currents will give way so that we can begin to negotiate for peace and national unity.

TEMPO: The Angolan ambassador in Lisbon recently declared that "the MPLA authorities are willing to hold discussions with Jonas Savimbi as an Angolan citizen, as soon as he dissolves his ties with South Africa. How does Dr Savimbi respond?

Savimbi: I am not nor do I consider myself as just any citizen. I am an Angolan citizen representing UNITA.

TEMPO: In 1979 you told us: "The MPLA will have to negotiate with us. We only hope it will not wait too long, because the stronger UNITA becomes, the more demands we will make on the MPLA." Now, 3 years later, UNITA is certainly stronger, and I ask again: What are your demands now? Is it still just the total withdrawal of the Cubans and other military and civilian cooperants, or are there more demands?

Savimbi: As soon as the MPLA agrees to the withdrawal of the Cubans, all the doors will be open for further negotiation. I never set any other conditions for dialogue. There are no other conditions. The main condition is the withdrawal of the Cubans and a share of the power.

TEMPO: A share of the power under what terms?

Savimbi: We want to correct Angola's foreign policy, economic policy and social policy. We will have to discuss the government program and only then will we divide up the ministerial posts. We want an honest government that will work and will present an image of the Angolan people to the world. Today this image is completely out of focus. All one hears about Angola is criticism of the Cubans or of South Africa. We want responsible individuals who have Angola's interests at heart. Even if they are not members of the MPLA, UNITA, FNLA or any other force, these individuals must join the government and make their honest and competent contribution.

TEMPO: Mr President of the MPLA, one final question. You are one of the promoters of a war that, from what you say, is in search of peace and then the solutions that may be found in that time of peace. Therefore, to ask you when this will come about is to ask you when you think the war will end and the dialogue can begin in Angola. In terms of time, you have certain plans, certain prospects. Can you give us a prediction, in terms of time?

Savimbi: When Namibia is independent, the situation in Angola is sure to change.

TEMPO: But might Namibia's eventual independence be detrimental to UNITA?

Savimbi: I think not. First, because it will completely do away with the MPLA argument that it needs the Cubans because of South Africa. Second, because it will prove that UNITA can survive without the support of the South Africans. We are already prepared for the possibility of an independent Namibia with a hostile government. The MPLA should have no great illusions--because it will certainly be disillusioned--when it sees an independent Namibia and an increasingly strong UNITA. What are we doing at this time? We are going everywhere; I have been out of the country for 2 months. Are these tourist trips? Hardly. We are strengthening our alliances, with the prospect that Namibia will have a hostile government. In the second place, the Americans themselves are peremptory; if they have not had too much sympathy for UNITA, it would not be judicious of the MPLA to delude itself that the Americans sympathize with the MPLA, right? They are not going to accept the continued Cuban presence in Angola, so the MPLA will undergo pressure from the Western countries to match the progress of the decolonization of Namibia with the withdrawal of the Cubans. When the Cubans get a move on, the reform will go forward, because the people of Angola, even those who support the MPLA, are anxious to see the Cubans leave.

TEMPO: Can you predict when...

Savimbi: I think we will achieve some progress regarding Namibia in 1982, and what happens in Namibia will have repercussions in Angola. For the year as a whole, I predict that something will happen in Namibia and at the same time, or immediately afterward, in Angola as well.

6362
CSO: 4742/222

RSA PAPER FORESEES 'HARD-LINE' RIGHTWING POLICY

AB011937 Luanda ANGOP in Portuguese 1753 GMT 1 Mar 82

[Text] Johannesburg, 1 Mar (ANGOP)--A radical change in South African policy could be effected by rightwing extremists, states an editorial published Monday by the South African Government newspaper THE CITIZEN.

The editorial, devoted entirely to the announced formation of a new party by the leader of the ultra-conservatives in the ruling party in South Africa, following his withdrawal from the National Party, notes that "Afrikaaner unity has been broken."

In fact, the withdrawal of Andries Treurnicht, former minister of the civil service, from the ruling National Party, after divergencies in the racist party leads to the supposition that soon a third parliamentary opposition movement will make its appearance.

"In the circumstances, a union between the reformists and antireformists will become inevitable and there will be a radical change in our policy," the newspaper concludes while predicting that the "pure and hardline" right will occupy a larger number of seats in Parliament after the next general elections which are expected to be held soon.

When this change takes place, it might cause an even greater hardening of the apartheid policy and constant armed confrontation between South Africa and the progressive countries in southern Africa which resolutely and firmly support the vanguard of the South African and Namibian people.

Notwithstanding this, contrary to what the racists may think, however "hardline" their policy might become, it will not stop the struggle waged by the SWAPO and ANC [African National Congress] armed wings. The nationalist guerrilla fighters will only end their struggle when they obtain real and total independence.

CSO: 4742/223

LUANDA OIL REFINERY RESUMES OPERATIONS

AB031248 Luanda Domestic Service in French 1100 GMT 3 Mar 82

[Text] The Luanda Refinery resumed operations yesterday after it was closed down for more than 3 months. The closure was as a result of its sabotage on the night of 29 and morning of 30 November last year by a group of anti-revolutionaries in the pay of South Africa and American imperialism.

A member of the Political Bureau of the party and minister for defense, Pedro Maria Tonha Pedale, presided over the solemn occasion. He praised all the laborers, workers and national and foreign technicians for the courage and determination they displayed throughout the period of repairs of the refinery. The minister described the reopening as a great victory for the party and the Angolan people. He pointed out that the resumption of operations by PETRANGOL [Angola Petroleum Company] is significant not only for our internal enemies but especially for American imperialism and racist South Africa which are trying, in vain, to destroy our revolution. Colonel Pedale also reaffirmed the Angolan people's determination to prove to the world their commitment to make the revolutionary process triumph in our country, for the development and the welfare of all the working masses.

In his speech, the minister for defense recalled the efforts made by the MPLA-Labor Party and revolutionary vanguard of the Angolan people. These efforts aim at giving the necessary moral and material support to PETRANGOL to develop the Luanda Refinery. Colonel Pedale denied any cooperation existing between PETRANGOL and (PETROFINA) of America and described such allegations as a slander by the enemies of the Angolan people and said that Angola is not a country where one can invest and develop any type of technology. It will be recalled that production capacity of the refinery which was reopened yesterday will be more than 80 percent. Several party and government officials attended the ceremony.

CSO: 4719/637

BRIEFS

FINANCIAL AGREEMENT WITH MACAO--The National Bank of Angola (BNA) and the Issuing Institute of Macao (IEM) have signed a financial agreement aimed at supporting and promoting the export of products from Macao to the People's Republic of Angola [RPA], according to information received by ANGOP [Angolan Press Agency] from the Angolan Ministry of Planning. According to the same source, the agreement, which involves the sum of $15 million (about 450 million Kwanzas), represents the first line of export credit granted by the IEM and will make it possible to fill certain commercial contracts Angola plans to place with Macao productive and export firms. Representing a major effort to increase commercial exchanges between Macao and Angola, the agreement just signed constitutes the first of a series of actions aimed at diversifying and expanding economic relations between the territory of Macao and the RPA. [Text] [Luanda JORNAL DE ANGOLA in Portuguese 2 Feb 82 p 1] 8568

OVERPLANNING HARMS ECONOMY--Often, obstacles to the timely resolution of a problem can be traced chiefly to planning which, already developed, serves only to complicate a given situation. And, in most instances, the planning ends up permitting what should have been resolved to remain unchanged. The reader has undoubtedly been witness to many planning sessions. The sessions cover the distribution of meat, fish, potatoes, wine, television sets, freezers, in fact, everything. The results show up immediately. As a result of overplanning, chickens spoil, fish and potatoes rot, half a dozen persons get into the act, etc.--" comrades, there are no more television sets." Too much planning, even applied to what has already been planned. Planning is involved even in the sale of half a dozen pots. Shoes in shoestores can be sold only after planning. And that leads directly to long lines which always have schemers in the front. In truth, there is so much planning, that we then forget an important matter which, being scheduled every day, does not fit into the list. We plan methods for neutralizing all the vagrants, black marketeers, godparents, godchildren and illegal merchants, and for taking them to previously planned places. Planning also occurs in workmen's lodges by branch of activity. Everything is planned. Companies fill shelves so that the employees may help themselves. During the first few days, a little of everything can be found. Later, nothing is planned, for the shelves are empty. Planning does not take into consideration the tons of paper wasted and the fact that the worker leaves his work station to go to a store which has nothing to offer. In short, there is so much planning that I almost forget to mention that this article was not planned and that this why it contains so many "plannings." [Text] [Luanda JORNAL DE ANGOLA in Portuguese 3 Feb 82 p 2] 8568

MEMBERSHIP IN HAVANA--Havana, 17 Feb (ANGOP)--The People's Republic of Angola was elected to the Bureau of the World Federation of Trade Unions by the workers at its 10th congress which was held in Havana (Cuba) from 10 to 15 February. The congress further adopted unanimously a statement of support and solidarity with the Angolan workers, victims of the racist South African aggression, in which it expressed its "concern in the face of the situation now prevailing in the south of Angola." The document vigorously condemns the savage acts of the racist aggression whose main victims are the defenseless workers, women and children and demands the total withdrawal of the aggressive South African forces from the free and sovereign territory of the People's Republic of Angola. "The continuation of such a situation constitutes a serious threat to world peace and security," the statement stressed. The statement calls on the trade unionists and workers of the world to show their concrete solidarity with the Angolan workers, in both their efforts at national reconstruction and the safeguarding of their territorial integrity. [Text] [AB172015 Luanda ANGOP in Portuguese 1617 GMT 17 Feb 82]

BOTTLED BUTANE MARKETING--Cabinda, 2 Mar (ANGOP)--Starting next June, the Angolan province of Cabinda will have installations for the bottling of butane gas with a capacity of 7,500 bottles a month. This was disclosed to ANGOP by Candido Feijo Junior, the provincial delegate for oil products at the Angolan National Company for Compustibles [SONANGOL]. The project, whose construction began last February, will consist of two 24-ton containers. After completion, two supply points will be constructed in order to better supply the needs of the people. On the other hand, Feijo Junior revealed that within the framework of the provincial activities for this year, a sea terminal will soon be built and a cistern ship of 1,000 metric tons will be acquired with a view to increasing means of distributing combustibles. The official also indicated that in spite of the difficulties facing SONANGOL, the company succeeded in marketing 11 million litres of refined petroleum products in that province last year. [Text] [AB022132 Luanda ANGOP in French 1950 GMT 2 Mar 82]

CSO: 4719/621

PAPER CRITICIZES KODJO DECISION ON SDAR

AB251516 Paris AFP in French 1126 GMT 25 Feb 82

[Text] Yaounde, 25 Feb (AFP)--In an editorial published on Thursday, the Cameroonian national daily newspaper CAMEROON TRIBUNE severely criticizes OAU Secretary General Edem Kodjo's "decision" to "notify" the SDAR [Saharan Democratic Arab Republic] of its admission to the organization's ministerial conference now taking place in Nairobi.

"Because of its impudence and contempt for problems and the principles of the OAU charter, this decision has an alarming content which already makes one to fear that it will result in lamentable consequences for the current process of peaceful settlement of the Western Saharan problem," writes the CAMEROON TRIBUNE.

After emphasizing that it has no intention of bringing into question the Saharan people's right to self-determination "if this is their desire," the Cameroonian newspaper recalls that the 1981 heads of state's conference in Nairobi agreed in principle that a referendum should be held "to enable the Saharan people to freely express their desire." "The OAU secretary general's sudden, unconventional and strange initiative can only be considered a maneuver aimed at compromising this process," continues the CAMEROON TRIBUNE.

"It is not the responsibility of the OAU secretary general or the Council of Ministers to decide the admission of a state to the organization," concludes the paper.

CSO: 4719/599

BRIEFS

LUSOPHONE SUMMIT PROPOSED--Cape Verde Foreign Minister Silvino da Luz has proposed the holding of a summit of the heads of state of Mozambique, Angola, Cape Verde, Guinea-Bissau and Sao Tome and Principe following the intensification of the South African aggression against Mozambique and Angola. Silvino da Luz said that historical, political and economic reasons and an identity of objectives on the type of society we want to build point toward the need to coordinate efforts so that the capabilities of each may serve all five countries. Speaking on his return to Cidade de Praia after the visit by President Aristides Pereira to six African countries, the foreign minister of Cape Verde condemned Pretoria's aggression against Mozambique and Angola. He stressed that there is a coincidence of views (?on major African issues) among the governments of Mozambique, Angola and Cape Verde. He also denounced the actions of the puppet Jonas Savimbi in Angola. [Text] [EA251528 Maputo Domestic Service in Portuguese 1030 GMT 25 Feb 82]

CSO: 4742/223

OAU, UN INTERVENTION REQUESTED TO END ERITREAN-ETHIOPIAN FIGHTING

EA021944 Mogadishu Domestic Service in Somali 1400 GMT 2 Mar 82

[Text] The Eritrean Liberation Front representative to Somalia, Challe Hamud Muhammad, has called on the UN, OAU and peace-loving international organizations to intervene to stop the war Abyssinia is waging in Eritrea and find a lasting solution based on peace and coexistence.

The representative, who was speaking at a meeting held at the Arab League headquarters in Mogadishu organized in support of the Eritrean people also said that the Abyssinians, with the assistance of Libyan soldiers and weapons, a Russian general directing operations and Cuban and South Yemeni pilots, are carrying out their plan of exterminating the people of Eritrea.

Challe Hamud commended the courageous way in which the Eritreans are fighting the black Abyssinian colonialist forcing Mengistu to visit the Eritrean capital, Asmara, to oversee operations--a clear indication that the Abyssinians have failed to overpower the Eritreans, who are fighting for the right to determine their own destiny.

History shows that Mengistu's fascist regime in Addis Ababa is oppressing the Eritrean people, with the knowledge of the Russians, who are ignoring international law on the rights of the people to determine their own destiny. This has caused many people, mostly women, children and old people, to flee to neighboring countries, said the representative.

He went on to say that the recent meeting in Asmara, chaired by Mengistu, was held to plan the genocide of the Eritrean people. This meeting was aimed at finalizing the previous tripartite talks in Aden between Abyssinia, Libya and South Yemen on the extermination of the peoples of Eritrea and their liberation front. He also urged international opinion to see the meeting as a threat to the peace and coexistence of the people in the Horn. Present at the meeting were officials of the Western Somali Liberation Front, the Somali Abo Liberation Front and other leaders.

CSO: 4797/9

ERITREA GUERRILLAS SHELL ASMARA AIRPORT

NC041744 Paris AFP in English 1727 GMT 4 Mar 82

[Text] Khartoum, 4 Mar (AFP)--Antigovernment guerrillas in Eritrea have shelled the airport at the province's capital of Asmara for the fifth time, causing heavy damage, a spokesman for the Eritrean People's Liberation Front (EPLF) said today.

The front's military wing, the Eritrean People's Liberation Army (EPLA) also killed or wounded [word indistinct] Ethiopian Government troops and captured eight others in fighting on Monday and Tuesday on the Af-Abet and northeastern Sahel fronts, the spokesman said here.

In retaliation for the airport attack on Tuesday, the spokesman added, the Ethiopian armed forces indiscriminately bombed surrounding villages.

The guerrillas on Monday launched an offensive on the right and left flanks of the Af-Abet front, dislodging Ethiopian troops from strategic areas and forcing them to retreat to the eastern lowlands, the EPLF spokesman said.

In that battle, 250 Ethiopian troops were killed or wounded and two captured along with 48 light and medium weapons and three radio sets.

On Tuesday, the EPLA attacked the right flank of the Sahel front, killing 25, wounding 40 and capturing five Ethiopian troops, and seizing 17 light weapons and two bren guns, the spokesman said.

The same day they attacked the left flank of the front, killing 20 and wounding 30 Ethiopian troops and taking on lieutenant prisoner. [As received] They also seized seven kalashnikovs and one bren gun and forced their enemy to retreat.

He gave no figures for losses among the guerrillas, who are facing a major military offensive by the Ethiopian Government. The guerrillas have been fighting government from Addis Ababa for an independent Eritrea for 20 years. [As received]

CSO: 4700/844

ERITREAN LEADER PREDICTS OFFENSIVE

GF031833 Jidda AL-MADINAH in Arabic 1 Mar 82 p 8

[Dispatch from AL-MADINAH correspondent in Khartoum]

[Text] Khartoum--Mohamed (Sa'id Bari), member of the Political Bureau and representative of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Eritrea in Khartoum, said that the tripartite military agreement among Ethiopia, Aden and Libya is being implemented in Ethiopia where units from the armies of the three countries are to take part in the sixth offensive the Ethiopian Army is preparing to launch against the Eritrean revolution this month.

Mohamed (Sa'id Bari) disclosed in an exclusive statement to AL-MADINAH that the Ethiopian forces which are being prepared to launch the offensive have been distributed along three axes in order to effect a comprehensive confrontation with forces of the popular front.

He said: The Eritrean forces have launched concentrated attacks on these forces in order to prevent them from completing their preparations and in order to create confusion among their ranks.

The Eritrean spokesman said that the popular front's forces were able to create a major psychological tremor within the Ethiopian Army when they launched several successful assaults against the capital, Asmara, during Mengistu's recent visit there. During these attacks, he said, the revolutionaries were able to destroy several planes and military positions inside the airport of the Eritrean capital Asmara.

The Eritrean spokesman said that Mengistu announced before the conference of the Ethiopian Labor Party that the sixth offensive he intends to launch against the Eritreans will be the decisive battle for which the Ethiopian forces have prepared well.

The Eritrean official announced that the popular front accepts this challenge and is preparing itself for a confrontation that may indeed be decisive. The thwarting of this offensive will result in major changes within the Ethiopian regime, which is already suffering from many contradictions and conflicts within the ranks of the ruling Military Council.

Asked about the participation of other Eritrean groups in confronting this offensive, Mr (Bari) said that the other Eritrean groups are not in a good enough military situation to enable them to participate in confronting this offensive for various reasons. He added that the popular front has always hoped and is still hoping that all Eritrean groups can take part in defending the homeland in order to regain its freedom.

Meanwhile, the Sudanese authorities expect an influx of more Eritrean refugees across the Sudanese border due to the grinding battles that have started between the Eritreans and the Ethiopian forces on various axes. The intensity of these battles is expected to increase during the coming days.

CSO: 4704/12

PNDC SUSPENDS LIMANN BUDGET, REDUCES EMBASSIES

AB270718 Accra Domestic Service in English 2000 GMT 27 Feb 82

[Excerpt] The PNDC [Provisional National Defence Council] has decided that the 1981-1982 budget proposals of the ousted Limann administration should be suspended with immediate effect. A new law repealing the Appropriations Act, 1981, will soon be published.

A statement published this afternoon explained that according to the budget proposals, the Limann administration had officially projected a deficit of 4,500 million cedis. However, expenditure trends in the last 6 months of the operations of the budget showed that the deficit was likely to go up to at least 8,000 million cedis. The tripling of the producer price of cocoa, coffee and shea nuts, which had been budgeted for, would further increase the deficit by another 2,500 million cedis. The statement pointed out that with shortages in the supply of goods, including essential items, such as drugs and food, the funding of such large deficits simply by printing more money would have meant a continuous lowering in the buying power of the cedi, a power that was already reducing at the rate of 120 percent per annum.

The PNDC has therefore taken a number of measures to control government expenditure. These measures, which take immediate effect, include the submission by all heads of establishments of nominal rolls of staff at post at the end of this month or by the 12th of next month to the director of budgets, Ministry of Finance and Economic Planning. The nominal rolls should state in detail salaries, allowances and emoluments payable to employees. Defense committees in all establishments have been asked to monitor the preparation of these nominal rolls to ensure that only genuine workers receive salaries. PNDC secretaries are also to keep strict scrutiny on the maintenance, repair, and running of official vehicles as well as the printing and purchase of stationery. Unauthorized use of official vehicles or any misuse of official public resources will be severely dealt with. The practice whereby in addition to maintenance allowances for personal vehicles, specified officials, particularly in the public boards and corporations, receive petrol coupons or cash payments in lieu of such coupons is abolished. The payment of vacation leave claim is suspended. The government has also decided to cut down the number of foreign missions from 43 to 30. In addition, the staff in these missions will be substantially reduced.

As part of its determination to infuse financial discipline into the system and in particular to ensure effective monitoring of the use of foreign exchange, the PNDC has decided with immediate effect to acquire 55 percent shares in the General Superintendence Company, SGS, Ghana Limited.

Other measures are that, with the exception of debt servicing and payment in respect of pensions and gratuity, all other recurrent expenditures not specifically mentioned are frozen. For on-going projects, payments are to be authorized only in respect of work actually done. The statement said the government takes a serious view of the practice whereby large consultancy fees are constantly paid for endless designs for projects which are not executed. It has therefore directed that such designed contracts are to be entered into without the prior permission of the director of budgets. [Sentence as heard]

The PNDC also asks all agencies, employers, manufacturing and commercial houses that collect sales taxes and excise or any other duties and taxes on behalf of the government to ensure that they are promptly paid into government chest. The same applies to social security contributions and income tax deductions from the emoluments of employees.

CSO: 4700/823

OFFICIALS ASKED TO RESIGN

AB241354 Accra Domestic Service in English 1300 GMT 24 Feb 82

[Text] Public servants who feel they cannot cope with the revolution have been given 48 hours to resign. The directive was given by the secretary to the Provisional National Defense Council, Mr Asamoah, when he addressed public servants in Accra today. Speaking on the theme "the new outlook--aims and objectives of the public servants under the new administration," Mr Asamoah said the public servant is expected to be more conscious of his performance and achievement than the position he holds. What is more important is his contribution to the society and not what he obtains. Mr Asamoah emphasized that now that the country is on the threshold of bringing relief to all, each and everyone is enjoined to make sacrifices and be aware of his responsibilities.

The secretary announced that a powerful secretariat is being set up at the castle where the aims and objectives of the public service and the country as a whole will be properly planned. The castle will be the control office to which papers from the ministries will be forwarded for processing. Mr Asamoah reminded public officers of the need to cut down on paper work in the public services. The practice of recording comprehensive minutes after meetings and the preparation of long memoranda on a subject should also be discouraged.

CSO: 4700/823

COMMENTARY REJECTS ANY DEVALUATION OF CEDI

AB021520 Accra Domestic Service in English 1300 GMT 2 Mar 82

[Commentary by David Anafglatey]

[Text] (?The statement of the) Provisional National Defense Council secretary for foreign affairs rejecting the IMF's conditions for granting aid to Ghana, is a big relief to Ghanaians who have been apprehensive that this international lending agency, otherwise known as the World Bank, would put pressure on the people's government to devalue the cedi. Among the conditions usually laid down for IMF loans are a massive devaluation, increases in the prices of consumer goods, cutbacks in social welfare programs such as free or subsidized education or health facilities.

It is as if the IMF is some sadistic monster which becomes angry at seeing people happy, and is never satisfied until it imposes harsh restrictions on the standard of living of Third World peoples. It was upon the advice of the IMF that the Sudanese Government recently increased prices of sugar and other consumer goods, an increase which led to massive anti-government demonstrations in Khartoum and which nearly brought down the Numayri regime. It is sigificant to recall that President Nyerere of Tanzania, for one, rejected the World Bank's call for devaluation, asking the bank in the process to keep their loan. One also recalls with pride how Ghana's own Osagyefo rejected the fund's pressures to devalue the cedi in the early 60's. Nkrumah is reported to have told the IMF officials that if they wanted him to stop Ghanaian children from going to school or from attending hospital as a condition for their granting of loan, then they could take their loan away. Great words from a courageous leader, indeed. Unfortunately many of the leaders Ghana has had after Nkrumah have not had the courage of the Osagyefo. They spinelessly yielded to the IMF pressures and the result has been the spate of massive devaluations of the cedi since 1967 by the National Liberation Council; then by Busia in 1971 and by the Supreme Military Council 7 years later.

In any case, the loans given by the World Bank in return for cheapening our currency are usually small and insignificant in relations to our needs. And in the atmosphere of corruption that we were in during all those periods of devaluation, the loans, such as they were, failed to make any improvement in the living standards of our people. If anything, our standard of living fell as a result of the devaluations. Much of the loans found their way into the pockets of politicians and other officials who signed contracts for the utilization of the loans. The devaluations meant that imports became more expensive and, in a country where many finished products as well as raw materials had to be imported, the net result was a loss to the country. The few extra cedis earned on our exports did not make an impact on the economy. In the end, the devaluation benefited only the few parasites who have syphoned off the people's money into overseas banks and foreign multi-nationals and their agents who are able, with each devaluation, to reap a bonanza in extra cedis.

Devaluation and IMF loans have never worked for any Third World country; otherwise Zaire, for example, would have been in a better position today after its massive doeses of IMF loans taken together with the inevitable devaluation prescription. Zaire's currency is now weaker than ever before. Every first-year economic student knows that where the elasticity of demand for imports is minimum, devaluation--if it has to be made--must be on such a massive scale that it would set forth very unpleasant side-effects. And that is precisely the situation in the developing countries where the demand for imported goods does not change much, no matter the price.

Our foreign-trained economists should therefore discard their foreign textbook economics and learn from the practical results of what happens here on the ground. The immediate results of all our devaluations is that the black market price of the cedi jumps up in the same ratio, and that means all prices increase pro rata, including the prices of locally made goods.

The cause of the low value of the cedi during the Limann regime was corruption and indiscipline; thank God, the present revolution has set its face against these evils and when they are eliminated the economy would become strong and the cedi would pick up strength. It is only then that we can tell whether the cedi is over-valued or not. Until then, all talk of devaluation must cease.

CSO: 4700/823

PNDC WARNS SOLDIERS AGAINST OBSTRUCTING COURTS

AB270632 Accra Domestic Service in English 2000 GMT 27 Feb 82

[Text] It has come to the notice of the Provisional National Defense Council [PNDC] that some soldiers have been obstructing the courts in the performance of their duties and interfering with the administration of justice. Reports have it that they intimidate members of the bench and the bar and court staff, apprehend and ill treat people whose cases are before the courts and forcibly release prisoners or accused persons on remand.

A statement by the council condemned these acts and said every attempt is being made to check them. It warned that any soldier found guilty of any of these acts will be punished. The PNDC assures the public that it is not its policy either to abolish or interfere with the courts in the performance of their legal functions. That is why the courts, with all their powers, have been allowed by the PNDC proclamation to continue existing.

The council said it is aware that some of its members have criticized the working of the existing courts. They did so because they believe that the existing legal system needs to be reviewed to remove parts that cause obstruction and injustice to the poor. The council therefore invited judges, lawyers and lecturers to take a critical look at the system and make recommendations for a review which will help achieve the aims of the revolution, that is, justice to all, especially the poor.

In another statement, the PNDC said its attention has also been drawn to the fact that its pronouncements on the ejections of tenants is being misinterpreted by some members of the public to mean that tenants can repudiate the terms of their agreements and go scot-free. While it is the policy of the council to protect tenants from ill treatment by landlords, it is not intended that tenants should be encouraged to repudiate their tenancy agreements and still hold on to their rented premises. The council reminded the public that the rent act, (?1963) with its amendment, is still in force and it is expected that the courts will apply their term equitably to achieve justice, taking into consideration the rights, obligations and circumstances of the parties.

CSO: 4700/823

BRIEFS

MAJORITY SUPPORTS REVOLUTION--Two months after the launching of the 31 December revolution, a public opinion survey collected by the GBC [Ghana Broadcasting Corporation] shows that the overwhelming majority of Ghanaians are enthusiastically in favor of the revolution and have suggested ways to consolidate it. A civil servant at the Ministry of Science and Technology said the revolution is trying to systematically tackle the basic problems which have plagued the society, but he wants the tempo of the revolution to be faster. He added that increased food production should be one of the main goals of the revolution and there should be less emphasis on the so-called essential commodities. A second-cycle student said before the revolution students suffered a lot and did not have teachers and basic items like soap which many of them could not afford. School fees were also very high. She expected the PNDC [Provisional National Defense Council] to reduce school fees, to improve upon the food situation and ensure that schools have more teachers and teaching materials. [Text] [AB031849 Accra Domestic Service in English 1800 GMT 3 Mar 82]

OVERSTAFFING PROBLEM DISCUSSED--The Provisional National Defense Council [PNDC] has no intention of dismissing or declaring any worker at the castle redundant. At a meeting with workers at the castle today, a member of the council, Chris Atim, asked the entire staff, which includes workers from Peduase Lodge and the State House, to disregard an earlier statement asking them to proceed on an indefinite leave. He described the statement as a genuine mistake. He assured them that the revolution which was launched on behalf of the workers will not approve of any measures that are not in the interest of this group. Mr Atim said the problem of overstaffing is a real one which exists not only at the castle but in several organizations. In this respect, he charged the castle defense committee to convene a meeting and make recommendations for reorganizing the staff. Mt Atim said the period of overdependence on aged farmers is no more; and if a national crisis is to be averted, then all Ghanaians must work toward economic stability, so that there will be no need for the nation to go begging for aid. The people's defense committee chairman, Osei Ampomah, thanked Mr Atim for his assurance and said that programs are underway to involve all the workers in farming projects. He said so far, workers at the castle have taken part in cocoa evacuation and fertilizer rebagging. [Text] [AB041354 Accra Domestic Service in English 1300 GMT 4 Mar 82]

CSO: 4700/855

BRIEFS

ECONOMIC COUNCIL STABILIZATION MEETING--The Economic Council will soon meet to study problems connected with the future of public and joint firms and present a program aimed at the country's economic stabilization. This decision was reached Wednesday by the Council of Ministers at its regular weekly session, chaired by Brigade Commander Joao Bernardo Vieira, chairman of the Council of the Revolution. The proposal was presented at the cabinet meeting by Comrade Vasco Cabral, minister of economic coordination and planning, and points out the need for companies to review their wage scales which are often high, considering the company's productivity. This is contrary to the country's need to introduce a program of economic and financial stabilization which will permit the central government to take specific steps in its plan of action which will benefit the working people as a whole. In continuing its deliberations, the Council of Ministers approved a proposal made by the minister responsible for problems connected with internal administration on a plan calling for a 40-percent share of the total of the national reconstruction tax collected by the country, said share being allocated to the regions. Touching on the question of SEMAPESCA, a Guinea-Bissau-French joint fishing company, the Council of Ministers appointed a committee to study the future of the company. [Text] [Bissau NO PINTCHA in Portuguese 6 Feb 82 p 1] 8568

DPRK INTEREST IN AGRICULTURE--Day before yesterday, a delegation from the Ministry of Rural Development, headed by Minister Avito Jose da Silva, was in the Bissora and Mansoa areas for a briefing on problems relating to agricultural projects underway in the Oio area. The delegation was accompanied by the ambassador of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea to our country. According to a statement made by the minister of rural development to an ANG [Guinea News Agency] correspondent, this official visit will permit the establishment of a new project involving the construction of a dam with a water-pumping system to irrigate 1,000 hectares with the aid of the necessary irrigation ditches. [Excerpts] [Bissau NO PINTCHA in Portuguese 6 Feb 82 p 8] 8568

CSO: 4742/216

GOOD ECONOMIC PERFORMANCE DESPITE CRISIS REPORTED

Abidjan FRATERNITE-MATIN in French 30 Dec 81 p 23

[Article by Adama Diabate: "1981 Economy Examined"]

[Text] From notes on this sector given to us by the Chmmber of Commerce we will take stock of the economic situation of our country during the year which has just come to a close.

In the area of trade and exports, where it concerns the two largest export products, we must say that coffee sales underwent a major upset during the 1979-80 season because of the introduction of coffee beans and the creation of homogeneous purchasing zones.

Certain difficulties came to the fore here and there which were tied to the newness of the system, but solutions were found by the experts and the authorities which, this year, permitted the harvest to take place rapidly and harmoniously. The coffee harvest of the current season will reach a record. More than 350,000 tons will be produced.

This year, the cocoa harvest was also early and abundant, amounting to 370,000 tons. Quality this year is sharply up also. Unfortunately, the unfavorable exchange rates which brought about last year's excessive buildup of stocks have not been modified. A displacement between purchases and exports this year has again led the industry to warehouse large quantities of cocoa.

The industry has made a major effort in the area of transportation.

Tropical Timber

Since June 1980, the timber industry has seen a diminishing market, due essentially to economic factors which have affected all of Europe.

Current orders must be covered on a day to day basis and without a supply program being established in advance.

The desire to maintain inventory at the lowest level and the fear of losing business has brought about a lowering of prices, margins, and sales which are sometimes concluded at lower rates. The growers' expenses are higher and higher, the amount of high quality timber is less and less, and the extremely high prices for commercial petroleum products, which had breathed new life into the petroleum producers, are no longer in existence.

Today, production has been voluntarily reduced, and a large number of lumber installations are beginning to close their yards in order to limit the losses they have had to withstand. This situation, unfortunately, is equally true for the industry in the Ivory Coast.

Even taking into account their ever-rising expenses, it is certain that the cost of timber, rough or processed, can only go up and we can expect rises in prices as soon as the demand renews, especially if the lumberyards cannot face their problems in the coming months. But for the moment, consumption of tropical timber is still very low in Europe.

Other products

Thanks to the diversification of crops, the share in our exports of products other than coffee, cocoa, and timber continues to increase regularly.

For 1980, we registered a strong increase in sales of cooking oil, whether raw or refined, of feed for cattle, of unrefined rubber, cotton, and of processed fish. The development of a national sugar producing industry is going well too; for the first time, we have gone beyond 100,000 tons of sugar and we have had the first sugar exports from the Ivory Coast. On the other hand, banana exports have stabilized, as well as those of fresh pineapples, but only slightly. The situation of pineapple preserve factories has not improved either, thereby placing, in the future, a heavy burden on the industry which found these factories a source for their markets and sales.

The share held by manufactured products grows each year which brings about an important revalorization of our agricultural production. There are still great possibilities in this area. Nevertheless, this increase has been due principally to the stagnation of coffee and cocoa exports since progress in the value of exports of manufactured products was, in the final analysis, rather low in volume. This is primarily the result of the rise in prices.

Imports and Distribution

After a rather favorable 1979-80, the import and distribution areas have undergone, for several months, a rather strong decline at least in the sectors most severely effected by the crisis: equipment, heavy vehicles, tools and construction materials, and household appliances and furniture.

In these areas, the decrease in sales are frequently on the order of 30-50 percent, resulting in serious problems in earning capacity caused by the rise in distribution costs, too great an inventory, and serious financial problems.

This situation results from the current unfavorable economic climate, but also, it must be added, from elements such as the restriction of bank credits, the reduction in the life of customs credits, etc.

Other bothersome aspects are the growing problem of import fraud, misappropriations, robberies and house break-ins, assaults, a renewed outbreak of bad checks, etc.

Urgent measures have been imposed to bring more severity and discipline in all areas. They are all the more necessary since, as everyone knows, the Ivory Coast is destined to have a rosy future. We must therefore take advantage of this slight lag to recreate all the conditions of a healthy expansion with an active and significant participation by our citizens in commerce in general.

Banks

The worlwide progress of banking transactions moderated somewhat between 31 March 1980 and 31 March 1981: 11.43 percent.

This progress is due essentially: to the volume of larger seasonal credits than in the past, taking into account the record number of tons in coffee as well as in cocoa; to large medium-term credits resulting from the effective start-up of plans worked out previously (Ivorian Refining Company, Ivory Coast Electric Power Company, Postal and Telecommunications Office, etc.)

At the same time, we are seeing a large decrease in local clients as a market. This resource not only is no longer increasing, rather it is decreasing in absolute value from one year to the next: 12.4 billion, 2.93 percent.

A total correcting of the situation cannot be expected unless there is a renewal of local resources which would allow Ivory Coast banks, on the one hand, to reduce their dependence on foreign capital and, on the other hand, to assure the refinancing of new credits which are indispensable to economic development. This reestablishment of local resources is itself tied to a general reawakening of the national economy.

Highway Transportation

Highway transportation constitutes one of the essential cogs in the economy and its importance has done nothing but grow along with the diversification of activities and development of the country. In 1978, according to national figures, the added value of the highway transportation sector represents 102 billion of FCFA as opposed to 90 billion in 1977, an increase of 13 percent (61 billion for personal transportation and 41 billion for commercial).

Personal transportation tends to increase faster than commercial.

Highway equipment remains the number one priority of the budget for investment and equipment, for it has a direct effect on the opening of the numerous regions of the country and is a necessary part of regional development policy.

In a like manner, the number of cars has been growing regularly but for the 7 months of the survey 1980-81 a 3.2 percent decrease in sales has occurred since last year. The decrease is larger for vehicles over 10 tons (-30 percent) and for tractors (-60 percent).

Several concerns should be pointed out coming from the experts. First, there is an over-capacity in the means of transporting merchandise. In the area of personal transportation, the experts estimate that the accent should be placed in the future on the use of large capacity cars which should allow the users to benefit from better transportation conditions at cheaper prices.

9803
CSO: 4719/446

PRESIDENT RECEIVES UK'S CARRINGTON

EA031630 Nairobi Domestic Service in English 1400 GMT 3 Mar 82

[Text] His Excellency President Daniel Arap Moi today at State House, Nairobi, held bilateral talks with the visiting British foreign secretary, Lord Carrington. During the talks, President Moi reviewed areas where Britain and Kenya had common interests and also discussed continental and international issues, particularly efforts directed at the realization of independence for Namibia and the settlement of the Chadian and Sahelian [as received] conflict.

The president, who is also the current chairman of the OAU, expressed the hope that the western contact group on Namibia would expedite their settlement proposals to enable the warring parties in southern Africa to come to a compromise. The talks preceded a luncheon that was later hosted by President Moi for Lord Carrington.

From the Kenyan side the talks were attended by the minister for constitutional affairs, Mr Charles Njonjo; the minister for foreign affairs, Dr Robert Ouko; the minister for lands, settlement and physical planning, Mr G.G. Kariuki; the minister for regional development, science and technology, Mr Nicholas Biwott; the chief secretary, Mr Jeremiah Kiereini; the permanent secretary for development coordination and cabinet office, Mr Simon Nyachae; and several senior government officials.

Lord Carrington was accompanied by the under secretary in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in London, Sir Leonard Allinson; the head of the news department in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, Mr Fenn; and officials from the British High Commission.

CSO: 4700/842

BRIEFS

MOI CRITICIZES 'IDLE TALK'--His Excellency President Daniel Arap Moi said today that African leaders should not allow continental unity to be marred by trivial issues. Speaking to a mammoth crowd at the Kenya breweries when he made an extensive tour of the complex at Ruaraka this afternoon, President Moi said that one of the problems facing the African continent was idle talks on the part of some African leaders. President Moi, who is the current chairman of the OAU, called on leaders to concentrate on efforts to enhance continental unity instead of persistently talking about imperialism. He revealed that although he had appealed to all OAU member states for financial aid to help Chad, such aid has not been forthcoming. He said that the OAU must be a strong body to safeguard and promote the interests of the people in the continent as well as promote world peace. He added that the OAU must be strengthened so as to make its voice to be heard internationally. [Excerpt] [EA042054 Nairobi Domestic Service in English 1800 GMT 4 Mar 82]

CSO: 4700/842

MAURITANIAN MINISTER MEETS TRAORE; DISCUSSES SDAR

AB040938 Bamako Domestic Service in French 2015 GMT 3 Mar 82

[Text] Gen Moussa Traore, secretary general of the Malian People's Democratic Union [UDPM] and president of the Malian Republic, at 1430 this afternoon received in audience His Excellency Mohamed Ould Sidi Ali, Mauritanian deputy minister of foreign affairs and international cooperation. The Mauritanian minister brought a message from President Mohamed Khouna Ould Haydala to President Moussa Traore.

His Excellency Ould Sidi Ali offered the head of state warm congratulations and good wishes of success from his brother and friend, President Mohamed Khouna Ould Haydala on the occasion of his brilliant reelection to the post of the UDPM secretary general during the party's first ordinary congress. The main topics discussed at the audience--which was held in the presence of His Excellency Taki Ould Sidi, Mauritanian ambassador to Mali; Alioune Blondin Beye, Malian foreign affairs and international cooperation minister; His Excellency Mamadou Diarra, Malian ambassador to Senegal and Mauritania; and Tidiani Guisse, the head of state's diplomatic counsellor--were the holding of the forthcoming summit meeting of the Sahel countries at the end of March in Nouakchott, the burning problems of Western Sahara and Chad, the strengthening of cooperation between our two countries, and the fraternity and friendship between the Mauritania and Malian peoples.

President Moussa Traore asked the Mauritanian minister to transmit his fraternal greetings to President Mohamed Khouna Ould Haydala as well as those of the Malian people and their party and government to the Military Committee for National Salvation and the Mauritanian Government and people. At the end of the audience, the Mauritanian envoy made the following statement to Liriba Samake:

[Begin recording] I have just been received by His Excellency President Moussa Traore, to whom I delivered a message from President Mohamed Khouna Ould Haydala. This message concerns the bond of friendship between our two peoples, our two countries and our two heads of state. As you know, President Moussa Traore is the current chairman of the conference of the Sahel countries. I was asked, therefore, to seek his suggestions on the holding of the forthcoming meeting to be held in Nouakchott. [Words indistinct].

[Question] During the recent OAU Ministerial Council meeting, the SDAR was admitted as a full member of this organization. Unfortunately, this admission has now divided the African countries into two camps. On one side we have the supporters of the SDAR and on the other side its opponents. Mr Minister, what is your position as far as this admission is concerned?

[Answer] We supported this admission and we are of the opinion that the OAU has thus done justice to the SDAR.

[Question] Would it be correct now to talk of a crisis within the OAU? In other words, what do you think will be the outcome of this general disagreement concerning the SDAR?

[Answer] We think that thanks to the wisdom of the African leaders, we will not fail to restore to the OAU the necessary cohesion and harmony. [End recording]

CSO: 4719/625

MMM/PSM CANDIDATES ANNOUNCED FOR GENERAL ELECTIONS

Port Louis THE NATION in French 26 Jan 82 p 1

[Article: "Candidates for 16 Districts Already Decided"]

[Text] With a view to the coming general elections the leaders of the MMM/PSM [Mauritian Militant Movement/Mauritian Socialist Party] are presently completing the list of their candidates. According to information obtained, the choice of candidates has already been made for 16 electoral districts, while in the 4 others the discussions are still going on. A decision will also be made in Rodrigues (No 21).

The leader of the MMM, Paul Berenger, will remain in district No 18 (Belle Rose/Quatre Bornes), where the 2 others members of the list will be Kailash Ruhee and Devanand Rottoo. Aneerood Jugnauth, president of the party, will seek election in district No 7 (Piton/Riviere du Rempart).

The leader of the PSM, Harish Boodhoo, has again chosen district No 13 (Souillac/Riviere des Anguilles), where he was elected under the banner of the Labor Party in 1976. Those also on his list will be Vishnu Lutchmeenaraidoo and Dr Swaley Kasenally.

In the four districts of Port Louis nine former deputies have received party nomination. Among the new candidates we note: Mathieu Lacle (district No 1), Vijay Padaruth (district No 2), and Nundalallee (district No 4), The list of the candidates in the 20 district follows:

District 1: (GRNO/West Port Louis): Mathieu Lacle, Jerome Boulle, Rajen Dayalah
District 2: (Port Louis South/Port Louis Central): Kader Bhayat, Noel Lee Chong Lem, Vijay Padaruth
District 3: (Port Maritime/ Port Louis East): Bashir Khodabux, Cassam Uteem, Osman Gendoo
District 4: (Port Louis North/M Longue): Lollyd Baligadoo, S Nundalalee, S Michel
District 5: (Pamplemousses/Triolet): Prem Koonjoo, Dr Ramjuttun, (third candidate to be designated)
District 6: (Grand Baie/Poudre d'Or): D Fokeer, M Dulloo, A Pursooramen
Distrit 7: (Piton/Riviere du Rempart): A Jugnauth, M Utchanah, (third candidate to be designated).

District 8: (Moka/Quartier Militaire): Rama Poonoosamy, Rashid Soobadar, S Palodhi
District 9: (Flacq/Bon Accueil): D Gungah, Dr S Peerthum, (third candidate to be designated)
District 10: (M Blanche/GRSE): R Jaddoo, J Goburdhun, A Asgarally
District 11: (V Grand Port/Rose Belle): R Gungoosing, M Choolun, Raj Mobaye or M Haton
District 12: (Mahebourg/P Magnien): L Ramsewak, J Seenyen, S Poonith
District 13: (Souillac/Riviere des Anguilles): H Boodhoo, V Lutchmeenaraidoo, Dr S Kasenally
District 14: (Savanne/Riviere Noire): D Keerpalsing, Alan Ganoo, Miss Ariane Navarre
District 15: (La Caverne/Phoenix): Uttam Jawaheer, Dr Said Maudarbaccus, (third candidate to be designated)
District 16: (Vacoas/Floreal): Dr R Beedassy, F Canabady, R Seereekissoon
District 17: (Curepipe/Midlands): A Gayan, P Lafrance, K Offman
District 18: (Belle Rose/Quatre Bornes): P Berenger, K Ruhee, D Rottoo
District 19: (Rose Hill/Stanley): J C de l'Estrac, Mrs S Aumeeruddy-Cziffra, J Cutaree
District 20: (Beau Bassin/Petite Riviere): Finlay Salesse, R Finetts, Soobash Ramdahen

5170
CSO: 4719/571

VILLAGE COUNCILS CHANGED INTO COMMISSIONS

Replacement by Commissions

Port Louis L'EXPRESS in French 26 Jan 82 p 1

[Text] The 98 village councils in the country were abolished on 19 January under a decree signed by Minister of Local Government Kamil Ramoly. They were replaced by commissions.

From sources close to the Ministry of Local Government it has been learned that this decision was taken by the government in order to avoid the holding of village elections. Questioned by L'EXPRESS yesterday [25 January], Ramoly confirmed the abolition of the village councils.

We note that over the past 12 years the village residents have been called on to elect their representatives on the village councils on only 2 occasions, whereas the constitution provides for such elections every 3 years. The last two village elections took place on 12 September 1971 and 22 January 1979.

In 1979 the number of candidates registered in each of the 98 villages required an election to be held in 91 villages. In the seven other cases the nine village councillors were elected without opposition. In all, 65 percent of the registered voters actually voted. The term of the village councillors elected on 22 January 1979 expired on 20 January 1982.

It should be noted that the five municipalities and the three district councils in the country are presently led by administrative commissions appointed by the Ministry of Local Government. That was caused by the postponement of the municipal elections in 1979 and certain problems which arose at the level of the district councils.

Moreoever, we should emphasize that 3 weeks ago the prime minister, Sir Seewoosagur Ramgoolam, stated in his New Year's message that it was the Mauritius Labor Party which established a democratic society, based on universal suffrage and giving young people the right to vote. He said: "...It is this Mauritius Labor Party which established a democratic society based on adult suffrage and on the right of vote to all the youths of this country."

Composition of Commissions

Port Louis L'EXPRESS in French 27 Jan 82 p 6

[Text] In 94 of the 98 "Village Council Areas" the administrative commissions established by ministerial decree will be composed of those who were village councillors on 20 January. In the four other cases, that is, in Saint-Pierre, Dagotiere, Saint-Julien d'Hotman, and Petite Riviere, the Ministry of Local Government has appointed new members. The village councillors elected in January 1979, therefore remain in office in 94 of the 98 villages.

Sources close to the Ministry of Local Government emphasize that the appointment of new councillors in the four villages mentioned above was considered necessary due to the unavailability of certain members elected at the time of the last village elections. Each village council had 12 members, 9 of whom were elected and 3 appointed by the Ministry of Local Government.

The newly-appointed members are as follows: in Saint-Pierre: R Narayen (president), D Seegoolam (vice President), K Gungabeessoon, B Seereemuntoo, R Soomareeah, H Soorabally, W Madary, J Mahadowa, V Gujadhur, J R Labonne, P Luchmaya, and Miss B Labonne; in Dagotiere: K Bhunjun (president), R Ramchurn (vice president), Mohabirsingh, S Suhooba, P Simmandree, S Randhay, D S Towakel, J Hazareesingh, and G Sikkamlo; in Saint-Julien d'Hotman: B Luximon (president), S Pydatalli (vice president), J K Appah, N Mungur, P K Ramsohok, R Chiniah, S K Ramdewar, D Magun P Chinee, T Carpenen, M Tirvengadum, and D Surnaum; in Petite Riviere: I Ogram (president), G Anazor (vice President), R Thodojee, J Marden, L L Lilyman, D C Ortoo, O Ramsing, N Tahal, and Mrs M A Ignace.

The ministerial decree replacing the village councils was signed on Wednesday, 20 January, and took effect the same day.

5170
CSO: 4719/571

REBELO PROVIDES STATISTICS IN CONSUMER GOODS, OTHER FIELDS

Maputo NOTICIAS in Portuguese 1 Feb 82 p 1

[Excerpts] To solve the many problems Mozambicans face at all levels, the Party and the government have to make a choice. Either more food and other products will have to be imported, or some sacrifices will have to be made, people will have to consume less, and the foreign exchange that would have been spent on those imports will be used to invest in projects and factories, so that these problems be solved in a few years. The FRELIMO Party and the Mozambique Government have decided to "plant seeds for the future." This is the focal point of the meeting held in one of the theaters of the capital on Saturday, with all the party cells in Maputo and members of the people's democratic organizations attending. Maj Gen Jorge Rebelo, member of the Standing Political Committee and the Central Committee of the FRELIMO Party and Secretary of Ideological Work, presided over the meeting, along with Major General Hama Thai, a member of the Central Committee and secretary of the Maputo Party Committee, and Aranda da Silva, a FRELIMO Party member and Minister of Home Trade.

Speaking for nearly 90 minutes, Jorge Rebelo presented the party document entitled "The Current Situation in Our Country." The speech was accompanied by slides showing the illustrations, tables and graphs included in the document, which was distributed at the end to those present so that they could use it to inform the militants in the party cells and the public in general. Hama Thai and Aranda da Silva also spoke, adding their comments on certain parts of the speech.

The report read by Jorge Rebelo can be divided basically into three parts: the socioeconomic heritage from colonialism; an analysis of the current problems Mozambique is facing; and prospects for solving these problems.

The Secretary of Ideological Work began by referring to the forthcoming celebration of the seventh anniversary of independence and by giving a brief summary of progress made to date.

Current Problems

In referring to some of the "many problems in Mozambique that have yet to be resolved," the following were highlighted:

--The difficulty in finding soap, oil, sugar and salt in both the city and the countryside, and problems in acquiring rice, milk, eggs, meat, fish and poultry in sufficient quantities.

--The fact that water and electricity do not reach most Mozambique homes.

--The fact that medical stations and schools are located so far from people's homes and that the schools are not large enough to accommodate all the children.

--Difficulties in obtaining water.

--Shortage of medicine, although the amount used today is much greater.

--Lack of transportation.

--A lack of refrigerators, stoves, dishes and eating utensils in most Mozambican homes.

Food Consumption

Some of the most significant aspects mentioned by Jorge Rebelo are the following:

--In 1973, 85,000 tons of wheat flour were consumed in Mozambique, and in 1980, 87,500 tons were consumed. If all Mozambicans were to eat a 250-gram loaf of bread a day, 1.1 million tons would be needed today, or 13 times as much as currently consumed.

--For corn meal, 59,000 tons were consumed in 1973. In 1980, consumption went down to 40,000 tons. If all Mozambicans today were to eat 4 kg of corn meal a month, 15 times as much would be needed, or 588,000 tons.

--A little more margarine was produced in 1980 that in 1973 (it increased from 1,430 tons to 1,500 tons). For every Mozambican to have 250 grams of margarine a month, 24.5 times as much would have to be produced, i.e., 36,750 tons.

--In 1980, a little more meat was consumed (including beef, pork and poultry)--19,500 tons as opposed to 15,200 tons in 1973. For every Mozambican to be able to eat 3 kg of meat a month, 441,000 tons, or 23 times as much, would have to be produced today.

--Consumption of fish nearly tripled between 1973 and 1980, going from 15,700 tons to 40,500 tons. For every Mozambican to be able to eat 3 kg of fish a month today, 11 times as much would be needed, or 441,000 tons.

Impact of the World Crisis of Capitalism

A number of factors were then explained in detail as the reasons for the many problems Mozambique is facing today. Referring to the capitalist colonial system as a parasite and underdeveloped, the speaker emphasized that Mozambique was one of the poorest countries in the world at the time of independence. To this must be added the acts of economic sabotage during 1975 and 1976, including such things as the illegal transfer of thousands of contos of foreign exchange and the theft of trucks, tractors, airplanes, and livestock, and the fact that technicians whom Mozambique has been unable to replace left the country.

Slides depicting enemy aggression in our country were then shown, including pictures of bridges and trucks destroyed, medical centers and shops burned, and field workers and technicians murdered.

"We are still suffering from the acts committed by bandits organized, armed and paid by South Africa, who impeded our development by plundering and killing. Their goal is to make us increasingly poorer so that we are more and more dependent on South Africa and imperialism," said the Secretary of Ideological Work of the FRELIMO Party.

The world crisis of the imperialist system, a crisis of developed capitalist countries, was also pointed out as having an obvious impact on a country such as Mozambique that is still very economically dependent on that system. The machinery and equipment that the People's Republic of Mozambique has to import have become more expensive, at the same time as its exports have become cheaper. Referring specifically to the increase in oil prices and using a slide once again, he said that Mozambique spends 10 times as much money (foreign exchange) today to import the same quantity of oil as in 1973. Other important examples of the capitalist crisis and its effects on our country over the past 5 years are the following:

--To import one truck, Mozambique had to export 3.5 tons of cashew nuts or 5.3 tons of cotton in 1975. To import that same truck in 1980, it took 4.5 tons of cashew nuts or 12.9 tons of cotton exported.

--To import 1 ton of steel in 1975, Mozambique needed to export 1 ton of sugar. In 1980 it needed 1.6 tons to import a single ton of steel.

Some Economic Progress

Jorge Rebelo stressed, however, that despite its difficulties, the People's Republic of Mozambique had made some progress in controlling and organizing part of its economy. The production of many goods, which had been declining up to 1978, began to rise subsequently. "In many cases, we are now producing more than what was produced prior to independence," he pointed out.

Turning to the sectors of health and education, Rebelo then spoke of the rate of growth of the health budget in comparison to the general national budget, and of government efforts in the field of education, including reference to the numbers of students, teachers and schools at primary, secondary, general and technical levels. Following are some important data from this part of his talk:

--Health: The 1974 budget was 535,000 contos (3.3 percent of the general national budget) and the cost per capita was 52.50. The 1980 figures are 1,939,000 contos (10.6 percent of the national budget) and 157.50 meticals per capita.

--The government currently spends more than 136,797 meticals on each student. For university graduates, the government spends nearly 1,013,100 meticals.

--An expansion in the educational system between 1973 and 1980: the number of students in primary schools doubled (666,500 to 1,387,192) and there are considerably more schools (5,281 to 5,730) and teachers (11,000 to 17,030). In general secondary schools, the number of students (33,000) and schools (33) is nearly three times greater (90,941 and 104, respectively). The number of teachers also increased a great deal (from 1,800 to 2,067).

--Although the number of technical schools increased from 27 to 37 between 1973 and 1980, the number of students and teachers went down from 15,000 to 700 to 12,705 and 680, respectively.

Price Subsidies of 4 Million Contos

Jorge Rebelo went on to speak of limits on price increases for basic goods in Mozambique, a measure which is possible only with a democratic government of the people. For instance, the import price of rice is 14.60 meticals per kg and the selling price to the public is 13.50 meticals per kg. For wheat, the import prise is 9.90 meticals per kg and its selling price to the miller is 5 meticals per kg.

Overall, the Mozambique Government spends nearly 4 million contos a year to subsidize the prices of rice, fish, maize and corn meal, wheat and flour, potatoes, condensed milk, onions, meat, sugar, oil and soaps, and other manufactured products.

A price comparison was done with other countries, which showed that prices are substantially lower in Mozambique.

Prospects for Solving Problems

Moving on to the last part of his presentation, Jorge Rebelos focused on prospects for solving our problems and the decision made in that direction. The following examples were given:

--The Montepuez textile project, costing 1.7 million contos and scheduled to be completed in 1985. It should produce 21 million meters of cloth a year.

--The Mocuba textile plant, to be completed in 1984 at a cost of 2.66 million contos. It should produce 35 million meters of cloth a year.

--The Lioma farm complex, to be completed in 1990, at a cost of 770,000 contos. It should produce 100,000 tons of maize a year.

--The Manica forestry complex, to be completed in 1986 at a cost of 1.3 million contos. It should produce 35,000 tons of paper a year, plus about 1,000 prefabricated houses.

--Factories to manufacture tractors, trucks and buses.

--Construction of the Corromane and Pequenos Libombos dams, to be completed in 1986, to solve the water supply problem in Maputo. At a cost of 4 million contos, they will have a capacity of 168,000 cubic meters of treated water a day, or a level that will meet the estimated consumption needs of 130,000 cubic meters a day.

The party Secretary of Ideological Work said that in regard to the choice to be made that either more food would have to be imported and thus more foreign exchange spent or else investment efforts would have to be made to solve our problems in the future, the party and the government opted for the latter. They decided "to plant for the future." A summary of what this decision involves and of all the various activities can be found in the Prospective Indicative Plan.

In conclusion, Jorge Rebelo again stressed the need for the party to engage in activities of this sort--to explain the specific problems and difficulties to the people so as to mobilize them and encourage them to participate in solving them. He further said that this type of meeting would be held periodically in the future and would involve a general analysis of the country's socioeconomic situation or an analysis of specific sectors or problems.

9805
CSO: 4742/208

DESERVING PRIVATE RESTAURANTEURS RECEIVE NO ASSISTANCE

Maputo DOMINGO in Portuguese 31 Jan 82 p 3

[Article by Jorge Costa]

[Excerpts] What I want to say is that to deserve its reputation, a tourist center must experience some special notice, it must be the result of the sum total of small details, capable of making one overlook the day to day concerns.

Bilene is one of the most popular of our beaches in the south. There is no need to comment on its beauty and the pleasure a few days spent there affords.

Delighted, we have learned that Bilene is being restored for tourism. And so, every weekend there are now special automobiles which transport tourists there; there are excursion boats for cruising, the constant use of playing fields.

However, everything is not yet quite right. As a matter of fact, the Bilene beach is full of fragments of broken glass, for after drinking, it has become the habit to throw the bottle away. There is almost no weekend when the local medical station has not had to treat nasty looking cuts, almost all suffered by children.

For many years, there has also been in Bilene a small esplanade, the property of a couple who reside there and earn their living by selling sandwiches and drinks. The services they have rendered over the years is priceless. Even when Bilene was almost deserted, there was always something available to quench one's thirst or alleviate one's hunger, in addition to being very appealing.

For many years, the Tamar esplanade in Bilene was known as a busy place where one could go without fear of encountering an unruly environment. The couple always achieved the unusual feat of preventing any incident whatsoever.

Now, however, Tamar is entirely devoid of vitality despite its having been recently painted and its freezers are all working like new. What has happened is that the amount of beer and soft drinks which they receive is in smaller amounts than ever, the bread is in short supply and they seldom obtain any seasonings to make sandwiches. Nevertheless, beer and soft-drink trucks are constantly arriving at other restaurants, in some of which liquor is freely imbibed, leading to shameful scenes.

And today, whoever is on the beach can no longer get any cool drinks whatever, which, at least for me, sufficiently dampens the pleasure of spending a day on a beautiful beach.

8870
CSO: 4742/212

BRIEFS

ITALIAN COOPERATIVES' DELEGATION--A delegation from the Italian Cooperative League, which has been in our country on a working visit, left yesterday for the Central Maputo Intercooperatives Center and the Urbanization District Consumer Cooperative, where they were thoroughly informed on the operation of those establishments. In a brief extemporaneous comment, the delegation leader alluded to the beginnings of the cooperative movement in his country, saying that "after World War II, the cooperative movement in its embryonic stage experienced the very same situations our cooperatives are facing. Therefore, our objective is to be cognizant of the reality which one is experiencing, so that we can be well informed on the cooperative areas." [Excerpt] [Maputo NOTICIAS in Portuguese 13 Jan 82 p 2] 8870

NO INCREASED RICE, SUGAR QUOTA--Following yesterday's notification of the rice and sugar quotas allocated, it was again made clear that no increase is anticipated in the distribution of those two products as had been announced on 11 January. In fact, and according to the chart on supply prospects for 1982 published yesterday, the distribution quota of cereals for each member of a family group is roughly 4.5 kg. The individual sugar quota, as the chart makes clear, will be roughly 1.5 kg. However, the planned quantities will be available if production and imports of the products are completely fulfilled. Obviously, any production cutback or increase will affect supply. [Text] [Maputo NOTICIAS in Portuguese 13 Jan 82 p 2] 8870

CZECHOSLOVAK WOMEN'S DELEGATION--Salome Moiane, OMM [Organization of Mozambican Women] secretary general, and the Czechoslovak ambassador to Mozambique greeted the delegation at the Maputo Mavalane Airport. Talking with the Mozambican women, the chairman of the Union of Czechoslovak Women and members of the party from that country, spoke about the experiences and activities which that organization is developing in her country. In support of the OMM, the Czechoslovak delegation leader then announced that it was going to present our country with material for nursery centers and for dressmaking. Participating in the delegation are Marie Kabrhelova, chairman of the Union of Czechoslovak Women, Eva Mickova, head of the Department of Foreign Affairs, and Libusa Minacova and Andrea Hanzalkova. [Text] Maputo NOTICIAS in Portuguese 13 Jan 82 p 8] 8870

CSO: 4742/212

SOUTH AFRICAN PRIME MINISTER HOLDS WINDHOEK PRESS CONFERENCE

LD270408 Johannesburg International Service in English 2100 GMT 26 Feb 82

[Text] The South African prime minister, Mr P.W. Botha, says South Africa is to approach the international community to find out to what extent they could share the financial burden of South-West Africa/Namibia. He said at a news conference in Windhoek this afternoon that if the international community were interested in the development and prosperity of the region they had to be prepared to carry part of the financial burden South Africa was carrying alone at present. He announced earlier that the South African Government has made 1 billion rand, that is about the same in dollars, available in aid in the coming year.

Mr Botha said that the South African Government was determined and anxious to achieve a settlement on South-West Africa/Namibia. The government was also anxious that an election should take place to enable the territory to have a proper government and to bring peace and stability to the country.

Referring to a suggestion that the United Nations secretary general, Dr Perez de Cuellar, should visit South-West Africa/Namibia, Mr Botha said this was merely a suggestion made by someone. Some of the leaders he had spoken to during the past few days thought such a visit would be a good thing, and if there was a real desire for such a visit to take place, it could be arranged.

He said that he had asked all the leaders of the territory whether they were in favor of a South African withdrawal from South West Africa/Namibia, and all of them had said that they did not want South Africans to leave.

CSO: 4700/843

GOVERNMENT REPORTED INVESTIGATING ABORTED COUP

Businessman, Army Officers Arrested

Lagos DAILY TIMES in English 19 Feb 82 p 1

[Article by Yakubu Momodu]

[Text]

A PLOT to overthrow the Federal Government has been uncovered.

Officers of the Nigerian Security Organisation (NSO), nipped the plan in the bud while details of the operation are being worked out.

The coup plan was said to have been master-minded by a Borno businessman.

Meanwhile, the man has been arrested by the NSO and is being detained in Lagos.

Also arrested, is an army major and some junior officers of the Nigerian Army.

The junior officers consist mostly of NCOS.

Speculations were rife in Lagos and environs two weeks ago on the coup plot.

This was a few days to the visit to the country of Pope John Paul II.

None of the government security arms was willing to comment on the rumours at that time.

Central figure

Yesterday, however, tongues started wagging in Federal Government circles in Lagos. There were even inquiries outside Lagos by highly placed government officials on the rumour about the coup plan.

My investigations later revealed that the coup plot was in fact a reality.

According to my investigations, the businessman with his business headquarters in Lagos was the central figure in the entire plan.

During the military regime, I gathered, the man enjoyed a lot of military patronage. He was also very well known in the highest military circles as well as within the rank and file of the entire army.

With the advent of the civilian government, my investigations further revealed, the man joined one of the political parties.

My investigations also disclosed that two weeks ago, the man started soliciting the support of some army officers with a view to overthrowing the government.

As he was working on the plan with the army officers the NSO was alerted. Both the major and the junior officers who were in touch with him were rounded up and detained in Lagos. Thereafter, the businessman was arrested in Maiduguri from where he was brought to Lagos.

Interrogation

Dependable Federal Government sources disclosed to me yesterday that further investigations were still going on.

I gathered that contrary to rumours that the officer and the men concerned had been courtmarshalled and executed, the men were still being interrogated.

Further investigations continue.

Denial of Coup Arrests

Lagos DAILY TIMES in English 26 Feb 82 p 40

[Text] THE Federal Government has denied the report carried on the front page of the Sunday Punch of February 21 1982 alleging that 58 soldiers had so far been arrested in connection with the coup plan recently foiled by security agents.

The government also denied that two other military personnel believed to be officers of the Nigeria Airforce, who had been arrested in connection with the abortive plot, had slipped through police net.

The true position is that as of February 25 1982 only a total of nine military personnel had been arrested and interrogated.

No officer of the Nigeria Air Force is among the nine, the government claimed.

It said there was no truth whatsoever in the report regarding either the total number of military personnel arrested or the armed services to which they belong.

The government statement was signed by Mr. M. A. O. Pyelude, press secretary in the executive office of the president.

CSO: 4700/869

COMMENTARY ON U.S.-ANGOLA TALKS, CUBAN TROOPS

AB260942 Lagos Domestic Service in English 2100 GMT 25 Feb 82

[Commentary by Bimbo Oshifeso]

[Text] Indications are that the United States and Angola may establish diplomatic relations 6 years after Angola became independent. But that is if the talks between both countries succeed. The Americans had during the Angolan war of independence, provided moral and material support to the Angolan National Liberation Front, FNLA. It is even believed that the U.S. Government is behind Jonas Savimbi's rebellion against his country.

But last December President Jose Eduardo dos Santos of Angola made an appeal calling for direct talks with the Reagan administration to sort out the problems between the two countries. Encouraged by this gesture, Washington regarded it as an important and very positive statement to which it has responded in a similarly positive manner through diplomatic channels. (?In fact), to demonstrate its willingness to resume normal diplomatic relations with Angola, theReagan administration has now said it wants to link an agreement for Namibia with movement toward the withdrawal of Cuban troops in Angola.

But such a linkage is at best tantamount to committing suicide should the Angolan Government succumb without any concrete precondition. For one, the Cuban troops have helped tremendously in keeping the Angolan Government together. During the 1975 Angolan war of independence, for instance, they acted as a checkmate for America's covert military operations in Angola. For another, South Africa, obviously acting (?on authority of) the West, has not disguised its hatred for the leftist oriented MPLA government in Angola.

Last year alone racist South Africa carried out several incessant raids into neighboring Angola, killing and maiming her inhabitants and destroying villages. In one of these dastardly raids, South African troops went as far as 100 kilometers into Angolan territory and despite the South African Government's assertion to the contrary, its search and destroy missions into Angola do not appear to be over.

The purpose of such raids, moreover, is undeniably to complicate issues in the United Nations over the terms of achieving Namibia's independence. Another is South Africa's intent on occupying a buffer zone in southern Angola.

Although the OAU has been quick enough in condemning South Africa's aggression and in calling for sanctions against South Africa, the organization doesn't seem to be in a position to provide some sort of military defense for Angola. Indeed Angola has so far been able to preserve its independence and sovereignty through the resolve of her people and the help of the Cubans stationed there.

Perhaps more importantly is the suspicion hanging over the sincerity of the South African Government's renewed acceptance of the basic UN framework for Namibia's independence. And since the plan was released last September, South Africa has not given any serious impression that it is willing to follow through with the agreement. It has indeed shifted its position on the issue several times. The view now is that South Africa is reluctant to agree to ending its control over Namibia so long as the Cubans remain in Angola.

For South Africa to maintain such a position is at best unrealistic. The presence of the Cubans in Angola has nothing to do with the question of granting independence to a territory South Africa now illegally occupies anyway. A former trustee territory, the United Nations formally terminated South Africa's continued occupation of Namibia in 1962. But after 56 years of illegal occupation, South Africa is still unwilling to quit Namibia, let alone allow for free elections there.

Although the United States and Angola have been in contact in their efforts to bring about a Namibian settlement, South African raids into Angola have dampened Namibia's belief in the virtues of diplomatic maneuvers whose architect is still South Africa. But the door which now remains open for the United States to further its talks with Angola may after all not be that wide as long as the differences between them remain unresolved. Angola, no doubt, is crucial to the Namibian negotiations, because it borders on that territory. But unless some sort of agreements are reached to protect Angola's territory from South African raids and ensure Namibia's independence soon, the ongoing dialogue between the United States and Angola may not amount to much.

CSO: 4700/838

SWISS COMPANY'S BRIBE OF LEGISLATORS REPORTED

DCM's Report

Lagos DAILY TIMES in English 23 Feb 82 p 1

[Article by Aliu Zubair and Remi Olayiwola]

[Text]

THE palms of members of the House of Representatives Finance Committee were greased with N80,000, termed "pocket money" by the Society General de Survellance (SGS) at Geneva Airport, Switzerland during their overseas tour there, last July.

The committee members had gone to evaluate the SGS operations in some overseas countries.

The SGS is a foreign firm charged with the supervision of certain imports into the country.

Confirming the bribe story in Lagos yesterday, the Deputy Chief of Missions to the Nigerian Embassy in Switzerland, Mr. Ernest Fred Allison, told the panel investigating the bribe allegation against members of the committee that the money (120,000 American dollars) which was contained in a sealed envelop was given to him by the second vice-president of the SGS, Mr. Dassonville for the members.

According to Mr. Allison, the SGS official gave him two unsealed envelops that contained telex and flight tickets and another sealed one.

Mr. Allison explained that he immediately dashed to a toilet where he opened the sealed envelope and counted the money inside, for record purpose.

He further told the panel that the money was in response to a request earlier made to SGS by the chairman of the finance committee, Mr. Ralph Obioha to "show gesture" to the members.

He had earlier also told the panel that when he asked the SGS officials what the money was meant for, the official said it was "pocket money" for members and that the company always gave such money to any of its visitors.

Mr. Allison, however, added that the envelops were later collected back from him by the same official since they were delivered into the "wrong hands", saying they were supposed to have been delivered to the secretary to the committee.

On the allegation that the members received Mercedes Benz cars from SGS, Mr. Allison said he knew nothing about it.

Ambassador Denies Knowledge

Lagos DAILY TIMES in English 25 Feb 82 p 40

[Article by Aliu Zubair and Remi Olayiwola]

[Text] THE Nigerian Ambassador to Switzerland, Alhaji Yahaya Kwande, yesterday denied knowledge of the 120,000 dollars alleged to have been given to members of the House of Representatives Finance Committee by the SGS.

Alhaji Kwande, a principal witness to the bribery charge against the committee members, told the panel now investigating the scandal that he was not aware of any offer of any nature to the members, but explained that he only read in recent newspaper publications of the alleged deal.

According to him, there was no discussion about money said to have been given to the members between him and his deputy, Mr. Ernest Allison, who had earlier confirmed that SGS gave the members 120,000 dollars

Alhaji Kwande had told the panel that he rejected the report because Mr Allison could not substantiate the grievous allegations and could not also tell his source.

Answering another question, Alhaji Kwande pointed out that his deputy (Allison) had told lies against him (Ambassador) because he had refused to grant approval of more than N34,000 Swiss franc to furnish his (Allison) residence.

Meanwhile, the panel has thrown out the application by the chairman of the House Finance Committee, Mr. Ralph Obioha for legal representation in the panel.

CSO: 4700/869

VARIOUS PLANNING MEETINGS CONSIDER STATE CREATION

Vice-President Chairs Panel

Lagos DAILY TIMES in English 24 Feb 82 p 48

[Text]

A 17-MAN committee under the chairmanship of the Vice-President, Dr. Alex Ekwueme, has been set up to consider the issue of creation of more states in greater detail.

The committee will comprise two representatives of each of the five parties, two representatives of the Federal Executive; two representatives of the Senate and two representatives of the House of Representatives.

This was contained in a Press statement issued in Lagos yesterday at the end of a meeting of party leaders with President Shehu Shagari.

The statement was signed by the national chairman of the National Party of Nigeria (NPN), Chief Adisa Akinloye, the Peoples Redemption Party (PRP) leader, Malam Aminu Kano, GNPP leader, Alhaji Ibrahim Waziri and secretary to the government, Alhaji Shehu Musa, who acted as conference secretary.

The committee is to submit its report not later than March 31, 1982, after which an all-party conference would re-convene on April 6, 1982, to consider the report.

The following are the terms of reference of the committee:

★To consider all papers, memoranda and suggestions made at the meeting of February 23, 1982 between the President and the party leaders.

★To consider the views of all parties, their respective memoranda to the President.

★To examine section 8 of the Constitution critically with a view to defining the procedural parametres of the terms "referendum", "request" and "proposals," and other expressions contained in that section.

★To examine the issues relating to terms of offices of office holders, "executive and legislative" as they affect areas from which new states are to be created.

★To suggest principles, procedures, mechanics, modalities and times schedule for the creation of states in accordance with the provisions for the constitution and their relation to the aforementioned terms of references.

★To consider and make recommendations on any other matter relevant to the exercise of creation of new states.

According to the statement, the party leaders present congratulated the President on the commendable steps he had so far taken to evolve a political consensus on the burning issue.

Shagari Meets Party Leaders

Lagos DAILY TIMES in English 24 Feb 82 p 48

[Text] SO far, 33 applications have been received for the creation of new states, President Shagari announced yesterday.

He was addressing a meeting of party leaders at State House, Ribadu Road, Ikoyi.

Alhaji Shagari explained that more requests could not be ruled out.

He said that, if the number of requests so far received was anything to go by, "then I can say that a large proportion of the population of this country is eagerly awaiting the outcome of this meeting, looking up to the executive, the legislature and the political parties working together, each one playing his part so that the people can rightfully exercise their right to self determination within the provisions of the Constitution."

The President said he believed the path to the creation of more states would be smoothened, if all parties could agree on some general guiding principles that could be seen to be fair, just and democratic.

Only two parties, the NPN and the Aminu Kano led PRP attended the meeting.

NPN national chairman, Chief Adisa Akinloye led the NPN team, which comprised Mr. Lulu Briggs, Shettima Ali Monguno, both national deputy chairman, and the national secretary, Alhaji Suleman Takuma, Dr. K. O. Mbadiwe, and Senator D. O. Dafinone.

For the Aminu's PRP were Alhaji Aminu Kano, the national secretary, Mr. S. G. Ikoku and Senator Barkin Zuwo.

Also in attendance at the meeting were Vice-President, Dr. Alex Ekwueme, the political adviser to the President, Dr. Chuba Okadigbo, the secretary to the government, Alhaji Shehu Musa, the Justice Minister, Chief R. O. A. Akinjide; Presidential Adviser on Information, Chief Olu Adebanjo and other top government officials.

Also present were the President of the Senate, Dr. Joseph Wayas and the Speaker of the House of Representatives, Chief Edwin Ume-Ezeoke.

Parties Send Boycott Letter

Lagos DAILY TIMES in English 24 Feb 82 pp 1, 5

[Text] THREE parties have in a four-letter to President Shehu Shagari declined to attend the meeting of political leaders yesterday to discuss the creation of more states.

The parties are the UPN, GNPP and NPP.

The meeting was summoned by President Shagari and held at the State House, Ribadu Road.

The President did not invite Senator Mahmud Waziri's faction of GNPP and Chief Michael Imoudu PRP.

In a three-page statement signed by Chief Obafemi Awolowo, Chief Adesiran Oguneseye and Alhaji Waziri Ibrahim, the three party leaders said they were not attending the meeting mainly because the President failed to invite the People's Redemption Party, led by Dr. Michael Imoudu.

This party controls the governments of Kano and Kaduna states and, in the view of the political parties, the exclusion of this party is not justifiable," their letter said.

The three party leaders argued that Kano and Kaduna were two of the states in which the demand for new states had been made and it was only right and fair that the party governing them should be represented at any meeting, where decisions on new states were to be taken.

They said it was unfair to exclude the two PRP governments, stressing that the UPN, the NPP and the GNPP could not be party to what they described as "such blatant injustice."

Secondly, the three party leaders said, the demand for more states was a legitimate exercise of fundamental human rights by the various groups concerned explaining that the exercise was fully recognised by the constitution of the country.

The party leaders referred to the relevant section-section section 8 (1) of the constitution which they said laid down conditions for creation of new states and said those provisions of the constitution were very clear, specific and unambigous.

The leaders alleged that the meeting called by President Shagari was required by him to shortlist the number of new states to be created.

"To shortlist the number of states is to reject out of hand some of the demands which have been submitted to the National Assembly and a meeting of political parties called by the President cannot prevent the decisions of the National Assembly and State Houses of Assembly who alone have the power to create states," the leaders said.

CSO: 4700/869

CIVIL SERVICE TECHNICAL WORKERS END STRIKE

Government-Union Agreement

AB031730 Lagos NAN in English 1719 GMT 3 Mar 82

[Text] Lagos, 3 Mar (NAN)--The Civil Service Technical Workers' Union today in Lagos announced the suspension of its nation-wide strike which began on Monday.

Addressing a news converence, the general secretary of the union, Mr Sylvester Ejiofor, said that the suspension followed an agreement reached between the union and the federal government.

According to the agreement, a negotiating panel is to be set up to look into the implementation of the 1980 income policy guidelines in the public services of the federation.

The panel is expected to start work on 31 March, and submit its report within two weeks.

It was also agreed that the decision of the National Council on Establishment to increase by 300 naira per year salaries of public officers from Grade Level 01 to 17 be tabled before the next meeting of the National Economic Council not later than 23 March.

Mr Ejiofor expressed the hope that state governments would give their consent to the recommendation of the National Council of Establishment. He commended the minister of employment, labor and productivity, Mr Emmanuel Osammor, and the minister in charge of labor and establishment matters, Chief Olu Awotesu, for their concern and efforts in ensuring that a mutual agreement was reached.

Work-to-Rule in Effect

AB041539 Lagos Domestic Service in English 1500 GMT 4 Mar 82

[Text] Normal flight services of the Nigeria Airways on both the international and domestic routes have resumed. This followed the decision of the Civil Service Technical Workers Union to call for its industrial action.

Meanwhile, pilots and engineers of the Nigeria Airways today began a work-to-rule action. The president of the association of pilots and engineers, Cpt Tunde Ashaba, said the decision was in support of a call for the reinstatement of its suspended members. A meeting between the association and the management yesterday ended in a deadlock.

CSO: 4700/850

REPORTAGE ON ELECTRICITY WORKERS STRIKE

House Requests Work Resumption

AB012135 Lagos NAN in English 1745 GMT 1 Mar 82

[Text] Lagos, 1 Mar (NAN)--The House of Representatives today passed a motion appealing to the striking NEPA [Nigeria Electric Power Authority] workers to return to work immediately. The motion was sponsored by the Speaker Chief Edwin Ume Ezeoke.

Contributing to the debate on the motion Chief Tom Egbuwoku, UPN Bendel, said that it was illegal for NEPA workers to go on strike because they performed essential services. He blamed the Ministry of Mines and Power for failing to monitor the activities of NEPA officials before the strike.

Alhaji Seriki Adamu, PRP-Kano, suggested that NEPA should be removed from the civil service structure and be made to run on commercial lines to eliminate some of the problems confronting the organisation. He said that the ministry should have met the demand of the workers before they embarked on strike.

Alhaji Jimoh Demisa, NPN-Kwara, was of the view that NEPA officials did not deserve any Christmas bonus because the authority had not been able to provide steady power supply over the years.

The house had to suspend Order 19 to enable members to discuss matters of urgent national importance and directed its Committee on Labour to investigate the problems confronting NEPA and find lasting solution to them.

At today's sitting some legislators pulled off their jackets while others walked out because of heat. Other members used newspapers and loose sheets of papers to fan themselves. This is because the giant electricity plant meant to serve as an alternative source of power could not serve the central airconditioning system at the National Assembly. The order paper which lists the daily proceedings of the house could not be produced because of power failure.

Officials of the authority had embarked on a strike since last Friday to back up their demands which include the payment of the 1981 Christmas bonus.

Government Threatens Dismissal

AB020654 Lagos Domestic Service in English 0600 GMT 2 Mar 82

[Special federal government announcement]

[Text] The federal government views with great concern the ongoing industrial action by some staff of the National Electric Power Authority [NEPA]. As the minister of mines and power informed the nation earlier, the action is illegal on two counts, namely the normal procedure for settlement of disputes between the management and staff of the authority was not followed. Secondly, NEPA being an essential service establishment, its staff is prohibited from embarking on such industrial action under the law.

It is clear that the motive behind the illegal action is not so much to obtain better conditions of service but to spread disaffection and destabilize the country. The damage done to the economy and to the society in general is incalculabe. Overnight the nation was deprived of light, water and other necessities of life.

All NEPA employees are hereby directed to return to work immediately. Those who fail to do so by 1300 today will be regarded as being absent from duty and therefore stand summarily dismissed. In the meantime, the public is hereby assured that every step is being taken to restore electricity supply throughout the country. Once again, all workers who report for duty are fully assure of police protection. It should be emphasized that the presence of the police in their work locations is for their own protection and security.

AFP Report

AB021558 Paris AFP in English 1549 GMT 2 Mar 82

[Excerpts] Lagos, 2 Mar (AFP)--The Nigerian Government seemed set today for a trial of strength with striking electricity workers as their action, which has paralyzed the country, went into its fifth day.

All electrical power installations are under federal police guard, amid clear signs today of hardening positions by both the authorities and the National Union of Electricity and Gas Workers, which wants pay improvements.

The lack of electricity has caused a severe water shortage and hit essential services such as hospitals where, according to press reports, people have died as a result. The strike has left major towns without water, because of the failure of electric-powered pumps, prompting doctors to warn of the danger of epidemics. Supplies were being sold at 50 kobos (about 32 U.S. cents) for a jerrycan of non-drinking water, and one naira (about 65 cents) for a jerrycan of drinking water.

The electricity black-out has also sent the price of fuel oils soaring. Paraffin for lamps and diesel for the large number of commercial and residential generators has become practically impossible to find.

This morning the black market price of diesel was three times more than normal. Petrol (gasoline) was also in short supply because service station pumps could not operate.

The strikers for their part say they will not go back to work until the government honours a promise to pay an end-of-year bonus for 1981 and grants an all round pay increase of about 20 percent.

Strikes were at the same time getting under way in other sectors of the economy, including air traffic controllers at the Murtala Muhammed International Airport here and the doctors of Lagos University Teaching Hospital.

Power To Be Restored

AB021755 Lagos NAN in English 1737 GMT 2 Mar 82

[Text] Lagos, 2 Mar (NAN)--Electricity power may be restored throughout the country tomorrow morning folliwng a decision in Lagos today by officials of the National Electric Power Authority (NEPA) to call off their 5-day-old national strikes.

Officials of the NEPA which said that they were calling off the strike because of the high regard they had for President Shehu Shagari and the mounting pressure and appeals from other well-meaning Nigerians. The official expressed the hope that the government would reciprocate their gesture by not carrying out the threat of dismissal issued to the striking workers yesterday.

An official of the workers told the News Agency of Nigeria (NAN) that members of the public could expect the restoration of electricity supply between 10 am and mid-day tomorrow.

In a communique issued by the Labour Committee of the House of Representatives after a 4-hour meeting with leaders of the NEPA workers, the minister of labour, Mr Emmanuel Osammor, and the minister of mines and power, Alhaji Muhammad Hassan, the NEPA workers were directed to call off their strike and resume work immediately.

According to the communique, the minister of labour was directed to set in motion machinery for the resolution of all outstanding issues in the workers demands. The communique further directed that reports and findings of the labour minister's efforts to resolve the issues should be submitted to the Labour Committee of the House of Representatives within 1 month.

At the meeting, the house committee heard that the demands for Christmas bonus was not the only grievance. According to the union officials other grievances included the non-application of the incomes policy guideline of 1980/81, the Onosode report which did not remove NEPA from the civil service system and the non-payment of overtime allowances to workers on levels 7-10. The union leaders said that all the problems encountered were mostly caused by the establishment department of the civil service. They told the committee that the strike was spontaneous and not organised.

The minister of mines and power told the committee that the NEPA action was organised and sustained by some of the workers based in Lagos, adding that most of the state branches were not aware of the plan to embark on a national strike. The minister said that the recommendations to pay the 3.7 million naira as Christmas bonus was made by the board and the management of NEPA, without discussing it with him.

The minister described the strike as a shock, adding that there was not verbal information of an intention to go on strike.

The minister of labour, Mr Emmanuel Osammor, described the strike as illegal, adding that the union had every opportunity to discuss their problems with him before embarking on the strike. He said that he was disappointed that the union did not give him the new dimension to their demands.

A NAN correspondent at the meeting reports that the hall was crowded by officials from NEPA and labour unions, legislators and members of the public, who had come to know the outcome of the meeting.

Efforts to Restore Power

AB022141 Lagos Domestic Service in English 2100 GMT 2 Mar 82

[Text] The federal government has again given an assurance that it is doing everything possible to restore normal power in the country. In a statement today, the government explained that as a part of its efforts it has this morning mobilized and despatched teams of engineers and technicians to Nigeria Electric Power Authority [NEPA] generating stations and substations to reactivate the various power stations. The government said its action was without prejudice to any decision by the striking workers to call off their action.

A delegation of the workers this afternoon met members of the House of Representatives Committee on Labor.

CSO: 4700/835

REPORTAGE ON NEPA STRIKE, ELECTRICITY OUTAGE

Workers Return to Work

AB031604 Lagos NAN in English 1540 GMT 3 Mar 82

[Text] Lagos, 2 Mar (NAN)--NEPA [Nigeria Electric Power Authority] workers and officials in Lagos and its environs came back to work today, and had begun to re-activate the nation's power plants and distribution network.

The minister of mines and power, Alhaji Muhammed Ibrahim Hassan, went round some of the NEPA installations in Lagos this afternoon to reassure himself that yesterday's undertaking by NEPA workers to resume work immediately, was kept.

Senior NEPA officials, including union leaders, told the minister, almost in a chorus: "you can see, we are all back to work, all hands are on deck."

They assured the minister that many of the power plants had been re-activated, and that the rest were in the process of being examined to ensure their safety before switching them on.

Top NEPA officials who were on site to supervise the re-activation gave an assurance that from about 3 p.m. today electricity supply in some parts of Lagos State would be restored. Other parts of Lagos and the country in general would be restored gradually, they assured.

Some Electricity Restored

AB031605 Lagos Domestic Service in English 1500 GMT 3 Mar 82

[Text] The restoration of electric power supplies has begun. Latest reports said that parts of the Lagos metropolis now have power supply. This followed the decision of striking Nigeria Electric Power Authority workers to resume work.

Yesterday representatives of the workers met members of the House of Representatives committee on labor on their industrial action.

The minister of mines and power, Alhaj Muhammad Hassan, has today been inspecting some power installations in Lagos. One of the places he visited was the Ijora power station. He will tomorrow undertake an inspection tour of the Sapele, Ughelli and Afam power stations.

Management Board Scored

AB041143 Lagos NAN in English 1118 GMT 4 Mar 82

[Text] Lagos, 4 Mar (NAN)--President Shehu Shagari has been urged to dissolve the board of management of the National Electric Power Authority (NEPA) for mishandling the strike by its employees. This was contained in the recommendations presented to the House of Representatives yesterday by its committee on labor.

According to the report, NEPA management should be reprimanded for granting a Christmas bonus to its employees in view of the apparent failure and inefficiency of the NEPA to offer adequate service to the nation.

The committee recommended the payment of Christmas bonus to employees of other federal governmental parastatals to avert a possible strike in reaction to the bonus granted to NEPA officials. It further called for the exclusion of workers performing essential services in the public sector from being members of trade unions for security reasons.

The report said that the house committee on mines and power should be directed to initiate a legislation to amend the law establishing NEPA with a view to breaking its monopoly in the generation and supply of electricity. It explained that the proposed law would limit NEPA to the generation of power while another company could take over the supply of electricity.

The labor committee also called for a re-organization of the industrial relations division of the Ministry of Employment, Labor and Productivity and "redeploy all the dead wood immediately."

Minister To Inspect Stations

AB041155 Lagos NAN in English 1125 GMT 4 Mar 82

[Text] Lagos, 4 Mar (NAN)--The minister of mines and power, Alhaji Mohammed Ibrahim Hassan, will today visit National Electric Power Authority (NEPA) at Kainji, Sapele, Afam and Ughelli.

The visit, according to the minister, is to enable him to assess progress on the reactivation of power supply by NEPA officials.

Yesterday, Alhaji Mohammed visited NEPA installations in Lagos to find out whether the undertaking by NEPA workers to resume work was kept. At the Ijora power station, he was told by union officials that they were all back to work and that they would soon resume power supply and distribution. At the Akangba substation in Surulere the production engineer told him that they had put the diesel turbine to work to provide power for essential services.

At the Ikeja west gransmitting station, the minister was told that there was no damage to any of the equipment as a result of the strike. "All we are waiting is enough energy to be supplied to the station from Kainji for onward redistribution," an official added.

Alhaji Mohammed told the NEWS AGENCY OF NIGERIA (NAN) later that he received information from Kaimji that their equipment was damaged as a result of the strike, otherwise electricity could have been fully restored by now.

CSO: 4700/853

BRIEFS

POLICE DISMISSAL STATISTICS--Mr Sunday Adewusi said that more than 1,000 members of the police forces were dismissed between June and December 1981 for not carrying out their duties. [Text] [Paris AFRIQUE DEFENSE in French No 47, Feb 82 p 15]

NEW PARTIES REGISTRATION--Lagos, 2 Mar (NAN)--The Federal Electoral Commission (FEDECO) has invited interested political associations wishing to apply for registration as political parties to do so between now and 24 March 1982. In a statement issued today, the executive secretary of the commission, Alhaji Saidu Barda, said that application should be made on Form PP1 in the schedule to the political parties amendment regulations of 1978. He said that the forms were available in his office. The secretary added that completed forms, which must be submitted together with 10 copies of the associations constitution and programme, must reach FEDECO not later than Monday, 21 March. [Text] [AB021839 Lagos NAN in English 1725 GMT 2 Mar 82]

COMMITMENT TO SDAR--The Nigerian external affairs minister, Prof Ishaya Audu, says Nigeria is committed to resolving the situation in Western Sahara. Professor Audu appeared before the House of Representatives Committee on External Affairs today to brief it on his ministry's activities. He said that Nigeria was interested in results in the region and stressed that this interest might be jeopardized if one of the parties to the conflict in the region was recognized. The minister added that this was why the country decided not to recognize the SDAR. Professor Audu, however, explained that Nigeria would continue to support and recognize all liberation movements in Africa. [Text] [AB251716 Lagos International Service in English 1630 GMT 25 Feb 82]

NO TRAFFIC CONTROLLERS STRIKE--Ikeja, 2 Mar (NAN)--The Air Traffic Controllers Association of Nigeria today denied that it was responsible for yesterday's disruption of flights in some parts of the country. In a statement, the association's general secretary, Mr Femi Oyediran, said that the air traffic controllers were not on strike. The statement explained that the disruption of flights was initially caused by some employees of the Signals Department of the Ministry of Aviation, who tampered with radio communication between controllers and aircrafts. The Signal Department of the Ministry of Aviation, which is a member of the Civil Service Technical Workers Union, now on strike, is responsible for the maintenance of radio equipment used by air traffic controllers, the statement said. [Text] [AB021926 Lagos NAN in English 1750 GMT 2 Mar 82]

CSO: 4700/834

BRIEFS

EXCHANGE OF EXPERIENCES WITH SEYCHELLES--A three-member military delegation from Sao Tome and Principe arrived yesterday morning in the Seychelles Islands. The delegation, which is led by Raul Wagner Braganca da Conceicao Neto, chief of staff of the armed forces, is carrying a message from President Manuel Pinto da Costa to the head of state. It will exchange experiences with the Seychelles in matters of security, notably following last November's failed aggression against this country by South African-based mercenaries. The delegation will remain here for a few days. The Sao Tome and Principe archipelago shares many of the geographic characteristics of the Seychelles. [Excerpt] [Victoria NATION in French 22 Feb 82 p 2]

CSO: 4719/653

FRENCH-SENEGALESE MANEUVERS HELD AT CAMP DODJI, LINGUERE

Dakar LE SOLEIL in French 8 Feb 82 p 6

[Text] Last Thursday [4 February] Maj Gen Idrissa Fall went to Camp Dodji, together with senior officers from his staff and a certain number of military attaches assigned to Dakar. The purpose of this visit was to attend the final phase of the Franco-Senegalese maneuvers called "Amity 9" and to inspect the general reserve troops which have been there since 23 January 1982. Major General Fall was met, as he descended from the plane, by the prefect of Linguere, the mayor of the town, and the president of the veterans' organization. On the military side he was met by the commander of the French Forces at Cap Vert and Colonal Konte, commanding the ground forces. The "Amity 9" maneuver included 800 troops, 135 vehicles and armored units, and aircraft, supported by substantial logistical resources. The theme of the maneuvers was the attack and the defense of a city, in this case Linguere. The city, occupied by country "Red," was to be retaken by country "Blue," to which it belongs.

The army chief of staff and his party were able to attend the final assault on Linguere by the "Blue" forces, which committed motorized troops with land and air support. Previously, a parachute company was dropped to reinforce the "Red" side which was defending Linguere. Subsequently, General Fall visited the different command posts where the leaders of the units concerned brought him up to date regarding their activities.

At Camp Dodji, which he visited in a Allouette helicopter, the army chief of staff was interested in the living and working conditions of his troops. It should be noted that for the past 20 years units from the general reserve have been spending time at Camp Dodji, which is 26 km from Linguere, or 328 km from Dakar. The camp commander, Capt Alioune Diop, told us that Camp Dodji makes it possible for artillery and armored units to operate on a "full-scale basis" and to engage in real firing exercises. The people of the area await with some impatience the arrival of the troops, who obtain their supplies, particularly meat, from the town, as this is a region engaged in forestry and pastoral activities. The army also provides the people with medical care. A quantity of medicine is always reserved for the needs of the farmers and livestock herders who travel on foot or on horseback from 50 to 100 km round trip to be treated.

After the luncheon offered by Capt Alioune Diop the army chief of staff spent the afternoon attending a demonstration of heavy weapons firing. Thus, by 7:00 pm he had seen firing demonstrations by Jaguar aircraft, by 105 mm HM2 howitzers from the artillery battalion, by 81 mm mortars, and by AML 60 tanks from the tank battalion.

The army chief of staff spent 4 February 1982 in the field with the troops. He said he was very satisfied with the different activities which were presented for his inspection and in which the special platoon of reserve officers participated. These high-ranking officials from the civil service and from private industry were recruited 1 and 2 years after performing military service in order to improve the reserve officer corps of the army and thus achieve the unification of the national armed forces in a better way.

5170
CSO: 4719/604

BRIEFS

ELECTORAL SYSTEM CHANGED--Dakar, 3 Mar (AFP)--According to a bill presented by the Senegalese Government, during the forthcoming legislative elections scheduled for 1983 the 120 deputies of the Senegalese Parliament will be elected partly through election by absolute majority on the departmental level and partly through proportional elections on the national list. The bill, which will be submitted to the National Assembly, modified the electoral code stipulating the election of all the deputies at the poll through proportional elections on the national list. According to the next text, "the purpose of the departmental elections is to lessen all tendencies of abruptness in the election through absolute majority at the departmental level." According to Information Minister Djibo Ka, the introduction of this combined election is meant to take into account the integral multiparty system introduced into Senegal where, presently, one can count 12 political parties as compared with only 4 at the time of the elaboration of the electoral code in 1977. It will be recalled that a law has already been voted calling on the Supreme Court to ensure regularity and the smooth running of the legislative and presidential elections. [Text] [AB031746 Paris AFP in French 1425 GMT 3 Mar 82]

CSP: 4719/638

REPORTS CONFIRMING SOUTH AFRICAN INVOLVEMENT IN NOVEMBER ATTACK CITED

Victoria NATION in English 26 Feb 82 p 10

[Article: "Can South Africa Still Claim It Was Not Involved?"]

[Text] TWO newspaper cuttings that have just reached the Nation office bring out new facts as additional confirmation of the involvement of the South African government in the attack by mercenaries on Seychelles on November 25 last year.

The two papers are the Washington Post and the Durban Daily News and their reports appearing within a week of each other in January show that the connivance was at the highest level.

Says the Washington Post in a full-page article:

"Among the indicators of suspected South African foreknowledge is the matter of the guns. Where did Hoare get the Soviet-designed Kalashnikov assault rifles that were concealed in the raiding party's false-bottomed leather suitcases, and how was it possible for Dalgleish to test them on a Durban beach before the attack without detection, as claimed by one of the captured mercenaries ?...

"A South African journalist who interviewed families of two mercenaries said he was told by two relatives separately that the men were sent a message of encouragement on the eve of their departure to the Seychelles from Prime Minister Pieter Botha. They did not disclose how the message was conveyed, the journalist said..."

One of the men now held in Seychelles charged with treason, Martin Dolinchek, is the subject of a Durban Daily News report in which his wife claimed he was doing the dirty work of the South African National Intelligence Service (NIS).

After an exclusive interview with Ina Dolinchek, the paper wrote on page 1 of its January 26 issue:

"South African intelligence agent Martin Dolinchek was still working for the National Intelligence Services when he was captured in the Seychelles, his wife Ina claimed today.

"In an exclusive interview with the Daily News, Ina Dolinchek broke her silence from her hiding place, and bitterly attacked her Durban husband's employers and friends who had turned their backs on him.

"He was doing all their dirty work for them and now they are doing the dirty on him," she said.

"Meanwhile the Daily News Africa Service man in the Seychelles, Brendan Nicholson, writes that Martin Dolinchek may go on trial in the Seychelles without benefit of legal representation as he is still insisting that the South African Government must look after his legal requirements as a serving member of NIS . . .

"An NIS official, Mr. F. N. Fouche, has confirmed that Dolinchek was a member of his staff but the official said he had resigned just before the abortive Seychelles coup attempts. . .

"Mrs. Dolinchek said today it was ridiculous and hurtful that NIS officials should claim her husband was no longer in their employ . . .

"I spoke to Mr. Fouche today and asked him why he was telling so many lies. He denied he had told the press Martin was no longer working for them," she said.

"She had not received any official notice to the contrary and even if she did, she could not accept it on behalf of Martin.

"If they have now decided they no longer wish to employ him, they must notify him themselves. The only correspondence I have had with his employers is a medal they sent to Martin in Decem- last year for his general service,' she said.

"She said she had tried everything to put pressure on NIS and the South African government to acknowledge their responsibility to her husband.

"I have contacted his bosses and they fob me off, coming back to me with wishy-washy answers three days later. Like his friends, they don't want to get involved. It is a bit late now', she said . . .

"Asked if she knew he was going to the Seychelles, Mrs. Dolinchek said her husband had informed her before leaving.

"Of course I was worried, but it is his job. He has been all over Africa', she said . . ."

CSO: 4700/881

NWU WELCOMES EXCHANGE OF LABOR EXPERIENCES

Victoria NATION in English 21 Feb 82 p 10

[Text]

THE National Workers Union hopes to benefit from a recent first-hand view of Cuba's hard-won socialist triumphs and success, National Secretary France Bonte said yesterday.

Mr. Bonte returned this weekend from the Tenth World Trade Union Congress held in the Cuban capital, Havana.

"My visit to the Republic of Cuba can be described as most fruitful and beneficial for I have learnt a number of things which can help the National Workers Union of Seychelles," he said.

Expressing deep admiration at the spirit in which Cuban workers tackled their jobs, Mr. Bonte said that the Cubans were conscious of only one thing — doing their utmost for the development of their country.

"This spirit," Mr. Bonte continued, "is unfortunately still lacking in some Seychellois who consider office jobs better than manual work as in agriculture." Such attitudes had to be rooted out and all workers had to do their best to develop their country, Mr. Bonte added.

The Congress, held from February 10 to 15, adopted 15 resolutions, covering, among other things, solidarity with those workers and peoples still struggling for national independence, democracy, trade union rights and social progress.

In his speech to the Congress, Mr. Bonte called for world peace if the goals of the trade union movement were to be realised.

An important part of this struggle, the NWU National Secretary said, was taking place in the Indian Ocean where superpower rivalry was threatening the security of the region's peace-loving peoples.

Mr. Bonte said Seychelles were calling for the dismantling of the Diego Garcia military base and the return of the islands to the rightful owners, the "Ilwa".

Turning to the subject of last November's mercenary attack against this Republic, Mr. Bonte said that Seychelles was ever determined to defend its socialist revolution.

"We are certain that socialism is the ultimate solution to the problems of this already very sick world," Mr. Bonte said.

While in Cuba, the National Secretary also developed contacts wih a number of progressive trade unions.

CSO: 4700/881

JAPANESE FRIENDSHIP ASSOCIATION LAUNCHED

Victoria NATION in English 25 Feb 82 p 10

[Article by Bernard Barker and Ronnie Jumeau]

[Text] NORTH-SOUTH co-operation should be seen in the terms of the duties of the rich and the rights of the poor and not as charity, Minister Maxime Ferrari said while launching the Seychelles-Japan Friendship Association.

Speaking on Tuesday as patron of the organisation at a commemorative dinner at the Northolme Hotel, the Minister of Planning and Development told the guests, including a delegation from the Japanese branch of the association, that co-operation with the Third World benefited the industrialised nations as much as the developing ones. This resulted in an economic interdependence that meant much more than just a one-way flow.

Laying out guidelines for future co-operation between Seychelles and Japan that could arise out of the association's activities, Dr. Ferrari said: "When we talk of the relationship between the rich, developed countries and the poor Third World countries, we must always remember that helping the Third World develop is a necessity for the developed countries if they are to survive.

"That is why, when we talk of economic assistance, we talk of a right on one side and a duty on the other and justice rather than charity."

Dr. Ferrari called for such a relationship in future relations between Seychelles and Japan and for a healthy and fraternal atmosphere between the Seychelles-Japan Association here and its sister Japan-Seychelles Association already formed in Japan.

Present at the event were members of the two bodies. They were led by Secretary-General Robert Grandcourt (Principal Secretary for Planning and Development) and Professor Takesato Watanabe of Kyoto Sangyo University, who said his branch looked forward to a visit by the Seychellois to Japan in the near future.

CSO: 4700/881

SOVIET BOOK EXHIBITION SAID TO MARK FRIENDSHIP TIES

Victoria NATION in English 26 Feb 82 p 2

[Text] BOOKS introduce peoples to one another, encourage harmonious relations and allow readers to gain entry to a world of knowledge and beauty.

With this message, Soviet Ambassador Mr. Michail Orlov Georgievich opened a week-long book exhibition yesterday to mark the 60th anniversary of the foundation of the world's first and largest socialist state — the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

The exhibition, at the National Bookshop on Albert Street, would help Seychellois to get to know the Soviet Union more intimately, Mr. Orlov said, through reading about the history, politics, culture and life of this vast, multinational country.

The Ambassador said he hoped the exhibition would help further strengthen the already friendly relations between the Soviet and Seychellois peoples.

It was deeply satisfying, Mr. Orlov noted, that an evaluation of current world events showed the views of these two socialist nations concurring to a large extent.

"What is worth noticing is that this closeness of views is based on the common attachment of our states to the very same ideals," Ambassador Orlov said.

The books, which are also on sale, are mostly French publications of the Soviet company Mezhdunarodnaya Kniga (MK).

They cover such varied subjects as ecology, physiochemistry, mathematics, sociology, the histories of France, India and the Soviet Revolution, and politics.

For students of socialism there are classics by Karl Marx, Friedrich Engels and V.I. Lenin.

Present at the ceremony were senior education and culture officials and M. A. Aliev, MK representative for Madagascar and Seychelles.

The USSR is made up of 15 Soviet republics — Russia, Ukraine, Belorussia, Uzbekistan, Kazakhstan, Georgia, Azerbaidjan, Lithuania, Moldavia, Latvia, Kirghizia, Tadjikistan, Armenia, Turkmenistan and Estonia. These cover a total area of over 22 million square kilometres.

CSO: 4700/881

SAO TOME AND PRINCIPE MILITARY DELEGATION VISITS

Meet with COS

Victoria NATION in English 23 Feb 82 p 1

[Text]

The three-man military delegation from the West African island state of Sao Tome and Principe yesterday held talks with the Chief of Staff of the Seychelles People's Defence Forces, Mr. James Michel. The three-man team is led by Armed Forces Chief of Staff, Mr. Raul da Conceigao Neto, and is hoping to benefit from Seychelles' successful military experience in last November's mercenary invasion. They will be delivering a personal message from President Manuel Pinto da Costa to President René later this week.

Impressed by Economic Gains

Victoria NATION in English 24 Feb 82 p 2

[Text] THE successes of the Seychelles People's Defence Forces in feeding themselves and in constructing their own installations, as much as possible, impressed yesterday the high ranking military delegation from Sao Tome and Principe.

Led by Armed Forces Chief of Staff Raul da Conceigao Neto, the three-man team, accompanied by senior SPDF staff, visited the Seychelles People's Liberation Army camps of Union Vale and Pointe Larue and inspected the flagship of the People's Navy the Topaz.

At the military installations, an SPDF spokesman said yesterday afternoon, the visitors talked to officers and rank and file alike, comparing Seychelles' military experiences with those of the West African island republic.

The Sao Tome and Principe officers were particularly interested in the SPLA's neat gardens and efforts at food self-sufficiency and the army's policy of building its installations itself.

The Democratic Republic of Sao Tome and Principe is Africa's smallest independent country, with the exception of Seychelles. Its islands cover a total of 964 square kilometres and have a population of around 85,000. Because of this it is expected that they experience more or less, similar security problems as Seychelles.

The military delegation will be calling on Seychelles' Head of State and Commander-in-Chief, President Albert René, for whom they have a message from the Sao Tome and Principe President and Commander-in-Chief, Manuel Pinto da Costa.

The delegation will also have discussions with Colonel Ogilvy Berlouis, Minister for Defence and Chief of Defence Forces.

President's Solidarity Message

Victoria NATION in English 25 Feb 82 pp 1, 2

[Text] A solidarity message from President Manuel Pinto da Costa of Sao Tome and Principe was delivered to President Albert René at State House yesterday by the visiting military delegation from the Atlantic island republic.

In the message, the people and Government of the Democratic Republic of Sao Tome and Principe expressed their solidarity with the people and Government of Seychelles following last November 25th's abortive mercenary invasion of these islands.

President Pinto da Costa said that his country believed that greater cooperation and exchanges of experiences were needed between sister states to combat attempts at destabilisation.

Thanking the people and Government of Sao Tome and Principe for their solidarity message, Mr. René told the delegation that the attack by the 50-odd mercenaries was only part of a bigger operation by imperialist forces to destabilise progressive African countries.

The defeat of the mercenaries last November was a victory not only for Seychelles but for Africa in general and progressive Africa in particular, President René said.

He also agreed that more co-operation and exchange of experience were needed if the people of Africa were to defend their countries not only against military aggression but also against other means used by imperialism to destabilise progressive African states.

The Pesident said all progressive countries had now to consider security as their great priority. It was only by ensuring this that they would be able to defend the gains of their revolutions in their struggle to build a new society and secure a better life for their people.

The visitors, led by their Armed Forces Chief of Staff Raul da Conceigao Neto, then called on Youth and Defence Minister, Ogilvy Berlouis, who is also Chief of Defence Forces.

With him they continued talks on the two island states' military experiences, defence problems and strategies and Seychelles' successful repulse of a mercenary invasion last November.

The delegation was accompanied on both visits by the Chief of Staff of the Seychelles People's Defence Forces, Mr. James Michel.

CSO: 4700/881

AIR SEYCHELLES REVISES PRASLIN SERVICE

Victoria NATION in English 25 Feb 82 p 10

[Article by Lovett Legaie and Ronnie Jumeau]

[Text]

WITH more and more Seychellois using the plane for a quick trip to Praslin, Air Seychelles has revised its flight schedule to provide a better service for more passengers.

From March 1, the national air carrier will operate at least 16 regular daily flights to and from Praslin with an extra two on Tuesdays, a spokesman said. But the new timetable, which may be changed later this year anyway, is variable depending on demand, especially during the peak tourist season.

With two Norman-Britten Trislanders taking off at 10 minute intervals, the first flight from Mahé will leave at 7.30 a.m. and the last at 5.55 p.m. Before, the first flight started a little later.

As usual the planes turn around on the Amitié airstrip; the first flight from Praslin will leave for Mahé at 7.55 a.m. and the last at 5.55 p.m., a few minutes later than before.

On Tuesdays there will be a special midday flight leaving Mahé at 12 o'clock and Praslin at 12.30.

Check-in times have been reduced from 30 minutes to 15 minutes before departure. Air fares will, for the time being, remain the same.

Air Seychelles also flies to Ile aux Vaches twice a day and to Denis by charter. The air transport parastatal hopes to fly to other islands in the future, the company spokesman said.

Air Seychelles also hopes to start a freighter service to Praslin and other islands in the not-too-distant future, he said.

Regular services to Praslin and Ile aux Vaches rely heavily on residents, the airline official said, and the number travelling by plane has increased. Now that there will be more flights, it will be easier to book places than before, he said.

Further improvements are expected when another Trislander comes out of routine maintenance sometime in September.

CSO: 4700/881

NEW NYS VILLAGE OPENS AT CAP TERNAY TOMORROW

Victoria NATION in English 20 Feb 82 pp 1, 2

[Article by Cecile Hoareau, Lovett Legaie and Ronnie Jumeau]

[Text]

ONCE more the month of February will see the opening of a new National Youth Service village with the first group of some 300 students expected at Cap Ternay tomorrow.

Meanwhile, as part of the preparations, 44 new animateurs graduated before the NYS Executive Board and staff on Thursday and swore an oath of loyalty to the Service.

Addressing the new animateurs, 24 men and 20 women aged between 19 and 28 who will all work in the new village, the Chief Co-ordinator of the NYS, Mrs. Florence Benstrong, talked of the spirit with which they would have to undertake their tasks.

DEFEND THE REVOLUTION

"A militant must have great love for the masses, represented in the National Youth Service by their children. A militant must be ready to sacrifice for the benefit of the masses. He needs extra courage because his life is never easy. He must not be afraid of problems and must always be ready to defend his revolution in deed and in word".

The Chief Co-ordinator stressed that the future of the young of Seychelles would, for the next two years, rest in the hands of the animateurs. "It is one of our aims to prepare Seychellois citizens for a new life of new attitudes", she said.

Referring to the changes in the young men and women standing at ease before her after two months of disciplined training, Mrs. Benstrong said that the result was a maturity that allowed the animateurs to express themselves freely while willingly remaining part of a determined and closely-knit group.

VALUE OF DISCIPLINE

Speaking for his comrades

earlier, Emmanuel Toussaint explained that the first six weeks of training, that started last December, had been done at the Coetivy Training Centre.

"Although many of us were not too keen to go to Coetivy where we knew strict discipline awaited us, a month later we had come to understand and appreciate the value of it," Emmanuel said. His words were supported by several of his comrades after the ceremony.

On Coetivy Island the animateurs developed their personality, knowledge and attitudes so as to be able to work successfully as true militants in a large and young village population. The animateurs learned to organise and discipline their daily lives to allow each one "to play a responsible role in contributing to the development of his society".

The course included agricultural work, drills and leadership training.

Back at Cap Ternay, the training included the organisation or social activities for adolescents and how best to respond to the psychology and expectations of Seychellois youth.

A team from the NYS and the French Centre d'Entrainement aux Méthodes d'Etudes Actives (CEMEA) helped in the training both on Coetivy and and at Cap Ternay.

1,200 STUDENTS

Between February 21 and 28, four groups of about 300 students each will enter the new village. The first group of boys and girls tomorrow will be P 9 students of Takamaka, Baie Lazare, Anse Boileau, La Misère, Praslin and La Digue schools. Also included are students from Praslin and La Digue who attended Seychelles College and Ste. Claire School last year.

Mahé students will be picked up by NYS buses at their district schools at 1 p.m. Boats will collect students of Praslin and La Digue. The other groups of students will be notified of their entry dates at a later date, but students have been asked to prepare themselves for the 24th, 26th and 28th February.

IMPROVEMENTS

Based on experiences gained last year with the Port Launay Village, there have been some improvements in the way an NYS village is organised.

Last year for example, the educational programme of the Port Launay village consisted of seven blocks, with four weeks for each block. This was found to be too short by both students and teachers. So this year the Port Launay Village will follow the same revised educational programme as at Cap Ternay. This consists of nine weeks allocated to each of four blocks.

Thirty more teachers from Britain and ten from Mauritius have arrived to help work at the NYS.

CSO: 4700/801

BRIEFS

DEMONSTRATIONS IN NORTHWEST--More demonstrations have erupted in the town of Ber, only 18 km east of Burao, the regional capital of Togdher Region, and in Odweina, a town in the same region. These follow earlier demonstrations and confrontations between the general masses opposed to the terror regime of Mogadishu and its repressive organs in which many people were killed. The Radio Kulmis reporter in Togdher Region reports that the terror regime has dispatched units of its repressive forces to some areas of Togdher Region. The Radio Kulmis reporter, reporting from the areas where the confrontations are taking place between the general masses and the dying regime, says that recently the terror regime sent several of its senior puppets there. These puppets are led by Ahmad Suleiman Abdulle (Dafleh) and are on a mission to try and defuse the tension facing the terror regime from the northern regions. The reports add that the puppets of the terror regime on arriving in the northern areas disagreed among themselves and murderer (Gani) flew to Mogadishu to take fresh orders from the dictator Mohamed Siad Barre. The Radio Kulmis reporter in Gedo Region says the forces of the terror regime stationed in the region dispersed after becoming aware of the struggle of the Somali masses against the terror regime. The reporter adds that the forces are supporting the confrontations of the Somali people against the dictatorial regime of Mogadishu. [Text] [EA252038 (Clandestine) Radio Kulmis in Somali to Somalia 1800 GMT 25 Feb 82]

DEFENSE OFFICIALS VISIT NORTHWEST--The vice-chairman of the Supreme Revolutionary Councils [SRC] Defense and Security Committee, Challe Brig Gen Ahmed Suleiman Abdulle, together with his delegation currently visiting northwest region, met the district council officials and the elders of Hargeisa and Hargeisa Town. Challe Ahmed Suleiman Abdulle, accompanied by the vice-chairman of the SRC Economic, Commerce and Finance Committee, Challe Col Ahmed Mahmud Farah, briefed the officials and elders on the various stages of development of the country, the need to respect the nation's laws and the careful implementation of projects which benefit the people and the country. The SRC officials urged the officials and the elders of the town to be united and cooperative in the planning of the country in order to achieve the goals set by the people. Sonna reporters reporting from the northwest region add that Minister of Education Challe Adan Mohamed Ali, and a delegation which includes the commander of the police force, Maj Gen Adn (Abdi Dualeh), today made an inspection tour of the capital of the northwest region, Hargeisa. [Text] [EA251908 Mogadishu Domestic Service in Somali 1700 GMT 25 Feb 82]

CSO: 4797/8

FURTHER REPORTAGE ON NATIONALIST SPLIT

Details on Treurnicht's Followers

Johannesburg RAND DAILY MAIL in English 25 Feb 82 p 11

[Reports by Chris Freimond, Lin Menge, Jo Shallis, Stan Maher: "The Kruithoring Rebellion; 22 and the Man in the Middle"]

[Text] Dr Ferdi Hartzenberg, the Minister of Education and Training and MP for Lichtenberg, is regarded as one of the arch-verkramptes in the Cabinet.

He was born in the Lichtenberg district where he still owns farms. He was MPC for Lichtenberg from 1965 to 1970 when he was elected MP for the constituency.

In 1976 he was appointed Deputy Minister of Bantu Development and was appointed to his present portfolio in 1979, much to the surprise of many observers who expected a verligte to get the highly controversial and sensitive portfolio.

Dr Hartzenberg's position in Lichtenberg has been threatened for months by Right-wing troubles.

First indications of a crisis came in last year's General Election when Mr Johan Boonzaaier of the Herstigte Nasionale Party polled 3 389 votes to Dr Hartzenberg's 6 198--a relatively slim majority, only 2 809, for a Cabinet Minister. In 1977 Dr Hartzenberg was unopposed.

The Nats in Lichtenberg were rocked again last September when 39 members resigned, most of whom were expected to join the HNP. Dr Hartzenberg rushed back from Parliament to salvage what he could of the crumbling local NP executive.

In August, the chairman of the NP Lichtenberg divisional executive, Mr Piet Steinman, and a member of the executive, Mr Andries Beyers--a former Nat MPC--resigned their posts and left the party. Both later joined the HNP.

Dissatisfaction in the constituency has centred around the NP's "intergrationist policies," according to Mr Beyers.

Mr Frank Le Roux, MP for Brakpan, is Deputy Speaker and Chairman of Committees. Since first being elected to Parliament in 1972, he rose quickly to become a party whip and chief spokesman on police matters. He was a member of the Schlebusch commission of inquiry into the constitution.

In last year's General Election his majority was 8 840, one of the biggest in the country. Brakpan, a traditional UP seat, first fell to the Nats in 1953 by only 47 votes.

A lawyer, Mr Le Roux joined the National Party in 1952 and served as a party organiser.

Dr Boy Geldenhuys had one of the narrowest Nat wins in last year's General Election when he beat former Cabinet Minister, Dr Connie Mulder, in Randfontein.

Dr Geldenhuys polled 5 356 votes to Dr Mulder's 4 434--a majority of only 922.

In the by-election in Randfontein which followed Dr Mulder's resignation from Parliament in 1979 in the wake of the Info scandal, Dr Geldenhuys won with a majority of 3 463 against the HNP, the NRP and the PFP.

But the widespread Rightwing support in the area--particularly from white miners--was clearly shown by the 2 428 votes won by the HNP in the by-election.

Dr Geldenhuys is a former leader of the Afrikaanse Studentebond--a conservative organisation set up by Afrikaans-speaking campuses as an alternative to Nusas.

Mr S P Barnard was elected to Parliament as MP for Langlaagte in the 1974 General Election. Before that he was the MPC for the constituency for eight years.

He also represented the Booyens/Robertsham area on the Johannesburg City Council for 12 years from 1962.

He was born in George in the Cape--the Prime Minister's constituency--and educated in Knysna before moving to Johannesburg where he qualified as a teacher at the Johannesburg College of Education.

In the last General Election Mr Barnard polled 6 473 votes to the 1 042 of Mr Hannes Nel of the New Republic Party and the 956 of Mr James Landman of the Progressive Federal Party. The Nat majority was 5 431. In the 1977 General Election Mr Barnard was returned unopposed.

Bessie Scholtz, MP for Germiston District, is the first woman Nationalist to be elected to Parliament. An MPC since 1974, she was elected unopposed to Parliament in 1979.

Mother of 11, Mrs Scholtz believes it is the duty of white women to have children "otherwise the white race in South Africa will eventually die out".

In Parliament she has been interested particularly in education and family matters--she is a former teacher and married to a school principal--but not in women's rights.

Mrs Scholtz cherished a high regard for Dr Connie Mulder, and was relieved when he decided not to oppose her with his National Conservative Party. She firmly believes that "everybody should have their own identity, culture and things on their own".

Dr Willie Snyman, MP for Pietersburg, has been involved in the past in a verkrampte controversy over his sympathies for the HNP.

In 1975, Dr Snyman was accused of owning shares in the HNP newspaper, DIE AFRIKANER. He denied the charge, but DIE AFRIKANER revealed details of the shareholding.

His candidacy for the National Party was challenged because apart from the shares allegation, he had donated money to the HNP in 1970 and had spoken at an HNP meeting addressed by the party leader, Mr Jaap Marais, in 1973.

During the 1975 election, Dr Synman was labelled a verkrampte "Trojan horse" likely to join those resisting Mr Vorster's reform policies.

During the 1981 election, Dr Snyman came under extreme pressure from the HNP, which claimed his sympathies lay with them and that he was following Mr P W Botha against his conscience.

Mr Tom Langley, MP for Waterkloof, is one of the most controversial of the conservative Nat MPs.

Je is also one of Dr Treurnicht's closest allies and is chairman of the powerful Pretoria National Party Council and deputy chairman of committees in Parliament.

Last November verligtes in Pretoria were dealt a crushing blow by Mr Langley when he was re-elected for the third time by 18 votes to the 15 of current NP leader in the Provincial Council, Mr Fanie Schoeman.

The move was an effort by verligtes to oust Dr Treurnicht's supporters from the powerful Council.

In the last General Election Mr Langley won with 6 726 votes to the 4 886 of Professor W A Joubert of the PFP and the 1 228 of Mr J C Maree of the NRP--a majority of 1 840.

In the 1977 General Election Mr Langley won from the PFP and the HNP with a majority of 3 668.

It is clear that if the situation arises in which Mr Langley is opposed by the Nats and the PFP in a future election, the PFP would have an excellent chance of winning the constituency on a split vote.

J H ("Koos") Van Der Merwe, MP for Jeppe, is a former heavyweight boxer and Alberton lawyer. He won the marginal seat of Jeppe in 1977, not long after a provincial sequestration order against him had been set aside. He was re-elected on a 43 percent poll last year.

Mr Van der Merwe has pressed for coloureds to be moved out of his constituency but he has been sympathetic to Portuguese residents who, he said, should be allowed to hold parties until 1 am on Sunday mornings.

An outspoken Treurnicht supporter, he had to apologise to Prime Minister Botha for statements he made at the height of the Craven Week row in 1980.

Asked to tell the voters last year whether he was a Treurnicht or a P W Botha man, he said: "Don't worry about old Koos, he's simply a loyal and patriotic South African and Nationalist."

Mr Casper Uys, National Party MP for Barberton, was chairman of the parliamentary select committee appointed to evaluate evidence given to the Erasmus Commission during the Information scandal.

He said at the time--in May 1980--that there had been differences of opinion on which evidence should be made public and which threatened the security of the State, but all decisions had been taken in the interests of the country.

"South Africa is tired of the whole Information affairs," he said.

Jan J Van Zyl, MP for Sunnyside, is an extreme Rightwinger who was expected to join the breakaway from the National Party to form the Herstigte Nasionale Party 13 years ago. He was named by HNP leader Jaap Marais as one of the 13 MPs who held discussions with the then Prime Minister, Mr Vorster, because of their doubts about his 1967 declaration on sport.

He remained in the party, and after giving assurances that he supported verligte Nationalist initiatives, obtained the NP nomination in the 1970 election. He also figures prominently in an unsuccessful verkrampte bid in 1969 to gain control of the Pretoria general council of the NP.

En route to Parliament in 1970, he said that he had been active in the NP since 1945. "As I then saw and carried out the policy (of the NP) so I will carry it out in the future," he said.

Mr Van Zyl has been strongly opposed to Sunday newspaper "immorality", Nusas, working women and streaking.

Mr Ben Wilkens, MP for Ventersdorp, has been in Parliament since 1978 and has kept a low profile, although he is known to have been a staunch supporter of Dr Treurnicht. His maiden speech was on the capital needs of farmers. His last speech, during the last session, was on the use of co-operatives for efficient marketing.

Mr Hannes Visagie, MP for Nigel, attacked the Theron Commission of Inquiry into the future of coloured people in South Africa at a meeting in Nigel in April last year, accusing professors Esterhuizen and Erica Theron of constantly attacking their own people.

"Never in this country's history was there such a small nation which did so much for all its people with so little thanks, as we did.

"When our forefathers landed on these shores they did not kill off the people like the Americans with the Red Indians, or the Australians with the Aborigines."

Mr Visagie first hit the headlines when, as a Nationalist MPC in 1963, he accused Rand majors of "junketing around the countryside dressed like Father Christmases".

He also objected to mayors attending Sunday church services in their regalia, as it could easily happen that "mayors would receive the spotlight that should be thrown on God".

In 1976, Mr Visagie, as chairman of Nigel's management committee, said that the Transvaal Municipal Employer's Association could become a "destructive Frankenstein Monster".

This association would financially strangle the city councils and ignore ratepayers struggling to maintain themselves above the breadline, he said.

He also said that an economic collapse in South Africa, because of its various race groups, would lead to bloodshed and revolution.

H "Daan" K Van Der Merwe, MP for Rissik since 1966, went unreprimanded last year for calling Mr P W Botha the "JR" of the National Party.

Verkrampte Mr Van der Merwe is a staunch Treurnicht supporter. In 1977 he launched a public witchhunt against Afrikaner liberals inside the National Party who advocated "power sharing". He also attacked fellow-MPs, including Mr Louis le Grange, by implication although not by name. His remarks reflected verkrampte doubts about the Vorster Government's new constitutional proposals.

Last year he caused a furore by reportedly telling an NP meeting on the eve of the party's Transvaal congress, that Dr Treurnicht and his supporters had had enough of "assassins" in political, academic and journalistic circles and of "unprincipled leaders". He later admitted he was referring to certain fellow-parliamentarians. The episode was interpreted as a "declaration of war" on NP verligtes.

Mr H M J Van Rensburg, MP for Rosettenville, said in a speech in the Senate in March 1973 that newspapers should be compelled to tell the Government how many readers they had in each race group.

Speaking in the debate on the second reading of the Part Appropriation Bill, Mr Van Rensburg said newspapers that printed "special editions" for Africans should send on these special editions to the Minister of the Interior.

"If the SUNDAY TIMES prints special editions for Bantu in Soweto, the Government should take note of this.

"This influence being built up by the Press in this regard should be taken note of by the Government."

Mr Van Rensburg also said that Afrikaans speakers did their duty to the Press in South Africa by reading newspapers in both language groups, whereas the English-speaking South Africans did not.

Mr Willie Van Der Merwe has always been regarded as one of the most verkrampte MPs in the National Party and one of Dr Andries Treurnicht's strongest supporters.

Mr Van Der Merwe used to be the Nationalist Party MP for Heidelberg but changed his constituency to Meyerton in 1974.

In 1979, when he was Government Whip, he appealed for the South African flag to be retained in its present form.

In August last year, Mr Van Der Merwe quoted the Prime Minister to support his claim that the Government would not deviate from apartheid.

Mr Louis Theunissen, a nominated MP, spoke during the last parliamentary session in September about the occupation of farms in designated areas bordering Mozambique, Botswana, Zimbabwe and Zambia.

He said farmers in these areas were demanding greater protection in the light of terrorist attacks. There were also growing demands for the Minister to take steps to ensure that all farms in the area were occupied and controlled. Unoccupied farms provided shelter to terrorists.

Dr Franz Van Staden, MP for Koedoespoort, said in Parliament late last year: "There is no art in adopting a critically negative attitude when judging any situation, but there is an art in being positively constructive and trying to make a contribution by means of which the difficulty can be relieved."

He was speaking in a debate on the rationalisation of the Public Service.

Speaking on the use of the identity document, "which already serves as a birth certificate, as proof of identity to gain access to places where right of entry is reserved or barred, as proof of identity at elections, as proof of marital status and it contains the motor vehicle driver's licence as well as the firearm licence", Dr Van Staden said.

"With our manpower shortage and for the best utilisation of our time, money and manpower, can we afford the luxury of everyone demanding a birth certificate, and then filing it and forgetting about it?"

Mr Karel Swanepoel, the Nationalist Party's candidate in Gezina, Pretoria, said at an election meeting in 1975 that he could see no reason why parks in the area should "not" be closed to blacks.

Mr Swanepoel reasoned that if employees let their black servants go home after 5pm during weekdays and at weekends, then the blacks would not need to use the public parks for recreation.

Giving blacks sufficient time off to spend at their homes would compensate for the closing of the parks, he said.

In 1980, Mr Swanepoel, now MP for Gezina, appealed to blacks to make use of facilities provided for them by the city council during lunch hours as Church Square had become a place where people, particularly black people, were "lying about like rock rabbits in the sun".

Mr Willem Lemmer, 26-year-old MP for Schweizer-Reneke, is a farmer who believes in applying farming wisdom to the nation's political issues.

In an interview in March last year, he described his philosophy in terms of his own farm, which he said had different types of soil--flat, clayey and hilly.

"On the flat soil we plant mealies, on the clay soil sunflowers and on the hilly soil kaffircorn," said Mr Lemmer. "Each group is worked and harvested differently. The result is a beautiful harvest from all over the farm.

"If we planted mealies all over the farm, the harvest would be less good.

"This is also the case in South Africa, because if one group forces its will on another, the whole thing will be a bad harvest."

The remaining rebel MPs are Mr Jan Hoon (Kuruman) and Mr Jan Poggenpoel (Beaufort West).

Rightwinger Andries Treurnicht is the man in the middle of yet another projected Nationalist split. Every time there has been a crunch issue--caused by the uncompromising Verwoerdian apartheid line he and his backers have adopted against reform--he has stepped back to preserve uneasy party unity almost at the point of no return. Can he do so again? Eugene Hugo examines the man and his special brand of politics.

Quote: "Mixed sport is the thin edge of the wedge."--Dr No (1975).

Quote: "They are citizens of another country and there is absolutely no question of political rights or power sharing in the white area."--Dr No on Urban Blacks.

Quite: "I rejected the possibility of a breakaway from the National Party. I fought against it. When it came to the 1970 election, I actually fought the HNP in Hoofstad."--Dr No on the HNP.

Quote: "The creed of no discrimination could be a very dangerous one...It would mean the complete breakdown of the policy of separate development."--Dr No on erradication of discrimination against urban blacks.

Super-Afrikaner Andries Treurnicht is today once again at the crossroads of a stormy nationalist political career--this time the issue is white power sharing with coloureds and Indians.

Within seven days he and his 21 overt followers in the Nationalist caucus who snubbed a vote of confidence in Prime Minister P W Botha yesterday will have to decide on their future in the National Party.

Dr Treurnicht is clearly the man in the middle of this new Nationalist crisis with the ability to finally self-destruct Afrikaner unity--that precious quality successive Prime Ministers have been so scared to lose.

And the question being asked in political circles and most certainly in the ranks of his wider potential support is: will he lead a split this time?

But the man regarded as the spiritual leader of the Rightwing has long indulged in a peculiar game of brinkmanship--always drawing back from the point of no return to blithely espress solidarity with his leadership.

As the Nationalist-supporting Rapport Sunday newspaper pointed out at the weekend: people had drawn final lines before, only to change at the moment of decision.

In a clear reference to Dr Treurnicht, the newspaper added that people who had made a stand against open sport and hotels were not only still in politics, but still in the NP.

To some this has been seen as a sign of muddled verkramptheid but others have ssen it as an indication of Dr Treurnicht's patience in waiting for the right issue and the right moment.

He has in fact conducted a finely-calculated campaign for control of the National Party--or at least its ideological and policy direction.

This campaign came to a critical phase in 1978 when he was elected Transvaal leader of the National Party.

He succeeded fellow Rightwinger Dr Connie Mulder to gain a new and powerful platform from which to consolidate his image as a man of iron principle, crusader for the Calvinist cause and the bearer of the Verwoerdian mantle.

Dr Treurnicht, or Dr No as he became known because of his resistance to reform, had been neutralised by former Prime Minister John Vorster and left in a state of suspension as a Deputy Minister in 1970.

Mr Botha also failed to draw Dr Treurnicht into the Cabinet when he took over the reins of power in 1978 amid the Info scandal.

More recently his appointment as Minister of State Administration and Statistics was also seen as a "neutralising" move because it left him without a seat on the influential State Security Council.

But through all this the undaunted Dr Treurnicht set about consolidating his considerable popular appeal among rural and other conservative Afrikaners by remaining the ideological thorn in the pragmatic flesh of the government.

And most of his undoubted success has been attributed to his unadulterated rectitude--which not even the now celebrated "bols" joke could alter to the distress of the verligte Louis Nel who sought to make political capital from it.

He had all the right credentials--an early career as a dominee, then editorship of the NGK magazine, Die Kerkbode, followed by four years as editor of the Pretoria daily, HOOFSTAD and finally by his entry to parliamentary politics and two years as chairman of the Broederbond.

Former doyen of Nationalist political commentators, Schalk Pienaar, once went so far as to dismiss Andries Treurnicht as a failed clergyman, a failed journalist and a failed politician.

But the late Mr Pienaar's acid commentary has been negated by events over the years as Dr Treurnicht built his ability to throw the National Party into turmoil with the backing of his conservative Afrikaner constituency.

Sixty-two-year-old Dr Andries Treurnicht, although he failed to breakaway with the Hertzogites in 1969 sat tight with each successive internal crisis, is nevertheless still seen as the spiritual leader of the Rightwing. Today he is the most controversial politician in the National Party and seen in verkrampte circles as the future "Lion of the North."

Dr Treurnicht's methods have been so subtle that verligtes have often been beside themselves with frustration to pin him down as he takes every tactical opportunity to voice careful but clear reservations about policy changes.

The essense of Dr Treurnicht's political thinking is that grand apartheid can't exist without "small" or "petty" apartheid.

As he said in his book, "Credo van 'n Afrikaner": "If small apartheid is completely eliminated, big apartheid becomes superflous, stupid and unnecessary."

Yet, despite his image as the uncompromising idealogue, his "Credo" is often muddled.

As an oponent of the removal of "petty" apartheid, he also says "borders" between races must not be without gates that can be opened.

At the same time he opposes mixing at recreational, residential, social and political levels.

And then he asserts that "colour or race to not determine a person's worth as a human being."

But nowhere does he say how far the gates can be opened.

Clearly they cannot be opened enough to allow coloureds and Indians to join whites in one government.

A Nat Showdown Was on the Cards

[Article by Chris Freimond]

[Text] Yesterday's dramatic developments in the National Party caucus centre on the controversial concept of power sharing as set out in the latest issue of the NP information sheet, Nat 80s.

The party's chief information officer, Dr Jan Grobler--with the approval of the chairman of the NP's federal information service, Dr Piet Koornhof--wrote an article which stated that whites, coloureds and Indians shared the same geographical area in South African and it was illogical for there to be more than one Government for that area--in essence he advocated power sharing.

The report was deeply resented in some Nat circles--in particular by the verkrampte Transvaal leader, Dr Andries Treurnicht--but was not repudiated by Prime Minister.

The matter moved towards a showdown on Monday when Mr Harry Schwarz (PFP Yeoville) asked during the mini-budget debate if Mr Botha agreed with the statement that there could only be one government in a country.

The Prime Minister replied: "Naturally. I said it also during the no confidence debate."

In a statement issued later on Tuesday in response to Dr Treurnicht's demand that the situation be clarified, Mr Botha said the NP believed the concept of "deliberation and co-responsibility" was "a form of healthy power sharing."

His full statement read: "During the no-confidence debate I have again expressed myself against a system of one-man-one-vote under the Westminister system.

"I pointed out that it was not possible to institute separate instruments for whites and coloureds in the same country without joint deliberation on the first, second and third levels of government.

"I also stated that the self-determination of the Whites remained the Government's standpoint.

"But at the same time I said that self-determination was a relative term and not an absolute one.

"To my mind too many spooks are being chased up regarding the term 'power-sharing'.

"The Progressive Federal Party and we do not think in the same terms regarding the word 'power-sharing'.

"They are aiming for a unitary state and we are not. But in our view the term deliberation/consultation and co-responsibility is indeed a healthy form of power-sharing, without violating the principle of self-determination.

"Therefore we prefer the term co-responsibility.

"I have pointed out that joint services would have to be rendered to the white and coloured population groups which would necessitate joint deliberation and decisions.

"Consequently I have declared that a sovereign parliament could not be created for coloureds.

"There can only be one central power of government in a country although there could be several governmental instruments.

"This principle was also laid down in the 1977 proposals of the National Party. For this reason there was at the time already clarity regarding one executive State President and a joint council of Cabinets chaired by the State President.

"From this it naturally follows that the Treasury and financial control should eventually be vested in a central power.

"Regarding the controversial article of the NP's chief information officer, I want to point out that the article should be read in the light of my explanation in Parliament. The chief Information officer consults me regularly.

"We are waiting for the President's Council's proposals regarding a future constitutional system.

"When those proposals have been made the Government and the NP will deliberate on them meaningfully.

"I intend to lead the discussions regarding such proposals myself at each of the provincial congresses.

"I have already indicated that a referendum or referendums regarding the matter is a strong possibility."

From then on it was clear that the Prime Minister and the Transvaal leader were heading for a showdown at yesterday's caucus meeting.

Botha's Last Chance

Johannesburg RAND DAILY MAIL in English 25 Feb 82 pp 1, 10

[Editorial]

[Text] The inevitable finally happened yesterday--the National Party, rotten at roots, split at the top. Afrikanerdom has been divided as it hasn't been divided since 1936. The fear that has haunted, and hamstrung, every Prime Minister since 1948 has become a fact and the consequences for South Africa are incalculable.

Politically, nothing can ever be the same again. The Prime Minister has given an ultimatum to the rebels to reconsider their position before next Wednesday. That must be simply a curious formality. Any rebel MP who turns tail now, having declared his lack of confidence in the Prime Minister, would have to return in shame to oblivion.

The revolt has been too visible, too fundamental, to be dismissed as disagreement. An apparent reconciliation--an event so unlikely as to be hardly worth considering--would in any case fool no one.

The conclusion is irresistible that the verkrampte right has gained an overnight foothold in Parliament, stronghold of white power. It is much too early to talk about possible alignments with other rightist groups, but the dissidents must be regarded as having potential support from the growing number of voters who supported the HNP at the last election and the unknown number of others within the National Party who silently share their prejudices.

The split seemed to come with dramatic suddenness. Actually it merely rubber-stamped deep differences that have been there for years. Significantly, the issue that precipitated it was shrouded in double-speak and euphemisms: "healthy power-sharing" is not a concept that, unexplained, can hold out a great deal of promise (or threat) to anyone outside the superheated ranks of the party.

And this is the key to understanding the unhappy situation that the split leaves Mr P W Botha in now.

He has got the worst of both worlds, and it is his own fault. Presiding over a looming split in his own party, he failed to position himself as a focal point for the forces of reform. His commitment to change up to now has been too timid to attract real reformists, just not timid enough to placate the right. He risks ending up as a Prime Minister in no-man's-land.

Mr Botha must be bitterly regretting that he threw away three years talking about reform rather than implementing it.

Now he is in a spot. Does he try to prevent further erosion by being even more cautious? The fact that he did, in the end, knowingly precipitate this crisis suggests that he does not consider that to be an option. He has found the courage to confront the verkramptes.

Does he simply sit tight, moving neither right nor left? The middle ground, as the old United Party discovered to its cost, is no place to be in a political battle.

This leaves only one choice. He must strike out boldly along the path to reform.

All South Africans will be watching very closely to see how he reacts in what are bound to be tumultuous days ahead. Mr Botha can still turn predicament into golden opportunity. Suddenly he is freed of the need to pander to verkramptheid. The PFP has always promised him support for any positive move he makes towards creating a more just society. Millions of others will back real change too.

Late yesterday the Prime Minister appealed to the country to stand behind him. We go further: he could find his wish granted beyond his furthest hope if only he can summon the will now to pioneer a new South Africa--not just for whites, not just for Indians and coloureds, but for all its peoples.

For him, there may never be another opportunity like it.

Treurnicht's Role

Dr Andries Treurnicht's wrecking role has never been more nakedly evident than it is now. In the National Party, in the National Party caucus, inside the Government, and in South Africa, he has become the symbol of those who want to impede any semblance of progress towards a sane and just nation.

There is nothing contrived about the nickname which the Press has conferred on him: Dr No. He has fully merited it as a result of what he has done: rooted in a racial philosophy which embarrasses even many of today's Nationalists, he has sought to block and to frustrate even the limited actions of this Government in getting away from the dangerous sterility of outdated Verwoerdism.

Over the years Dr Treurnicht's mere presence has retarded meaningful change because of the constant threat he has posed of leading a major breakaway from the National Party's ranks. Exactly to what extent he is a real leader is, however, unclear for certainly his repeated backing-off whenever a crunch situation arises has earned him the scorn of many on the extreme right who would otherwise be his natural allies.

Despite this, Dr Treurnicht has thus far manoeuvred his way through one crisis after the other, and has managed to retain his position as the focal point of resistance to change inside the recesses of the Government.

Now, again, he is in the midst of a monumental crisis. His statement yesterday in response to it is a mixture of defiance--a standing by what he calls his principles--and an attempt at conciliation.

How he felt able to issue the statement after the events of earlier yesterday when (according to his own claim) he voted against the motion of confidence in Mr P W Botha is explicable only in terms of his past pattern of behaviour: of climbing rapidly to sit atop the fence whenever the fire--ignited by his resistance--grows too hot.

But it is clear that the fire this time round is too hot, and that Dr Treurnicht is going to have to decide on which side to jump. Indeed, unless he firmly commits himself it is difficult to see how even the most ardent of his supporters can continue to view him in any leadership role. Still more, it is impossible to see how he can now return to the Nationalist fold--short of an abject capitulation to him by Mr Botha--and still retain a shred of political integrity.

We need hardly say that in expressing our views we are not motivated by any regard for the National Party. But the NP does constitute the Government and it is the controlling force in our country. Hence anything that occurs inside it has vital bearing, for good or ill, on what happens to South Africa and on the fortunes of all of us.

It is because of this that we say to Dr Treurnicht what Oliver Cromwell said to England's Rump Parliament 329 years ago:

"In the name of God, go!"

Cartoon View

Johannesburg RAND DAILY MAIL in English 24 Feb 82 p 10

[Text]

CSO: 4700/862

COMMENTARY ON MP SPLIT OVER POWER SHARING

Johannesburg SOWETAN in English 25 Feb 82 p 8

[Editorial: "Well Now Mr Botha, What Next?"]

[Text] South Africa was plunged into an unprecedented political crisis yesterday with the walkout of Transvaal National Party Leader, Dr Andries Treurnicht, and a vote against a motion of confidence in the Prime Minister, Mr P W Botha, by 22 others.

While a split within the Nats ranks was predictable, almost inevitable, the suddenness of it all shook this country's political ground.

The implications of this split are wide-ranging. However, the most significant is that clear lines will have to be drawn in this whole ideological battle, which the verkramptes have been winning in the caucus over the years.

It is against this background that this country now is looking up at Mr Botha to show the strength and determination he has often been said to have. Never before has any Nat Premier been faced with such a crisis, and how Mr Botha will handle this may well be the turning point in the history of South Africa.

Mr Botha could have spared himself all this misery if he had not tried to paper the cracks in the Nat wall over the years. He allowed the verkramptes to put the brakes on progressive thinking and pragmatism in the light of the present political situation which demands the Government must face the realities of the situation in the name of Afrikaner unity.

We do not believe it is too late for him to try and get this country back on course. Indeed, a better opportunity could not have been found for this. Mr Botha must have known that his attempts at papering the cracks had failed, and that the Nat wall would inevitably collapse. We hope that, in view of this, he has already mapped out a road which would lead this country out of its present political quagmire.

This government has, over the years, been brought to a screeching halt by verkrampte elements within the party--people who could quite easily find a home in the HNP. The electorate has, so far, refused to send any HNP to Parliament. Yet, these Nats in HNP coats have been allowed to drag this country backwards to the ossewa.

Mr Botha might not have been sure of his own position and strength in the Transvaal. So he waited for Dr No and his followers to take the first step. A cat-and-mouse game developed, and was being played all the time while this country was deteriorating to what is probably its worst state in years. We believe this split is the best thing to have happened in this country. The situation demands action which will separate the men from the boys, the statesmen from the ordinary politicians. The choice is Mr Botha's.

CSO: 4700/861

GOVERNMENT URGED TO RETAIN NUCLEAR-THRESHOLD TRUMP CARD

Johannesburg DIE TRANSVALER in Afrikaans 19 Feb 82 p 8

[Editorial: "Our Nuclear Capability"]

[Text] Signing of the international Nuclear Non-proliferation Treaty by South Africa recently came up for debate again in Parliament. It is an extremely sensitive subject. So it is understandable that Pik Botha reacted very cautiously on the issue.

It is not a simple matter for South Africa given the definitely threatening situation it has internationally and particularly given the fickleness of different U.S. administrations.

We are considered a so-called nuclear-threshold power quite easily capable of joining the "nuclear club."

On the one hand this brings special pressure to bear on the country, as exemplified by the Carter administration's refusal to deliver nuclear fuel to South Africa as agreed unless the treaty was signed.

On the other hand it puts a very strong diplomatic card in South Africa's hand.

Even the Carter administration realized that it must not completely alienate South Africa in this context, since such a high priority is given to the limitation of nuclear weapons.

If South Africa should go into producing nuclear weapons, it would lose that displomatic trump card in exchange for a military striking-power trump card, which, as is generally known, could not be so easily played.

Taking everything into consideration it is probably more to South Africa's advantage to remain a threshold power so long as possible.

CSO: 4701/36

BAN ON RAMOKGOPA LIFTED

Johannesburg SOWETAN in English 24 Feb 82 p 1

[Article by Sello Rabothata]

[Text] MR SEDUPE "Rams" Ramokgopa, one of the founders of the Soweto Committee of Ten and branch executive member of the banned Black Community Programme, has had his three-year-old banning order lifted - but this, he says, makes no difference.

Mr Ramokgopa (43), whose banning orders were lifted 22 months before expiry, was yesterday "not excited".

He was banned on November 17, 1978, only six days after he was released from detention under Section Ten of the Internal Security Act, and restricted to the magisterial district of Johannesburg. His banning orders were to expire on December 31, 1983.

Speaking from his place of employment yesterday he told The SOWETAN: "It makes no difference that the banning order has expired. I am going to continue as usual and at present have no definite plans for the future."

Mr Ramokgopa, a Master of Science graduate with the University of South Africa, was among the black consciousness leaders detained on October 19, 1977, when 16 organisations and two publications, The World and Weekend World, were banned. He was held at Modder Bee prison under Section 10 of the Internal Security Act for more than 13 months and released on November 11, 1978.

He was also a member of the Black People's Convention (BPC) which was also banned on October 19, 1977. In the Black Community Programme (BCP) he was branch executive of the Transvaal region, having joined the organisation in July 1977. He became one of the influential members of the BCP and started to organise self-help projects.

When the Committee of Ten was formed in July 1977, after the collapse of the Urban Bantu Council, he was one of the people elected to the committee. He helped it prepare a blueprint detailing the needs of Soweto residents. But the committee was refused a hearing by the Government.

He said yesterday he had been "brutally ushered into politics" in his first year at Orlando High, when the Bantu Education Department dismissed Mr Zeph Mothopeng — who is serving a jail sentence after the Bethal trial — Mr Ezekiel Mphahlele and Mr Ike Mathlare, former Attorney-General of Botswana.

"To me politics was then a plaything, not a tool that shapes the mind and moulds the affairs of man."

Another black consciousness leader, Mr Michael Ngobeni of Uppington, has also had his banning order lifted 19 months before expiry. Mr Ngobeni was banned in 1978 and placed under house arrest.

CSO: 4700/861

RABIE COMMISSION'S CONCLUSIONS ON ANC STRENGTH EVALUATED

Johannesburg RAND DAILY MAIL in English 12 Feb 82 p 10

[Article by Patrick Laurence]

[Text] THE Rabie Commission's acceptance of evidence that support for the outlawed African National Congress is confined to a "very small minority" of blacks may be comforting to whites, but the evidence referred to conflicts with some of the commission's own observations.

In its earlier attempt to assess the extent of popular sympathy for ANC insurgents, the commission, which investigated security legislation, concedes frankly that it does not really know how much support the ANC enjoys among blacks.

After describing the mass funerals in Soweto of the three ANC gunmen who were killed at the Silverton siege of January 1980, the commission refers to news reports that the men were given a heroes' burial and regarded as "freedom fighters".

Sechaba

It cautions that not all people who attended the funeral can be assumed to be ANC supporters, but then goes on to say: "These events appear nevertheless to indicate that ANC actions, even violent perpetrations, are seen by many people in a sympathetic light." (Italics added).

In a later reference to the funeral in Soweto in June 1980 of the veteran ANC leader, Mrs Lilian Ngoyi, the commission quotes an article on the funeral in Sechaba, the ANC journal, noting that Mrs Ngoyi's coffin was drapped in ANC colours and ANC "freedom songs" were sung.

After quoting Sechaba's statement that the funeral "re-affirmed" that the ANC is "rooted in the masses," the commission then makes what appears to be a frank admission.

"Occasions like the funeral just referred to show that the ANC enjoys support in the black community, but how much, or how general that support is — and what grounds there are for the ANC view just quoted — is a question to which the commission, on the information before it, has no clear answer."

Some 10 pages later, however, the commission seems to come to a different conclusion. It says:

"It was said in evidence before us that those in the black community that have pro-ANC sentiments, and particularly those who approve of ANC acts of violence, form a very small minority of the community, and that their influence must not be over-estimated. (Italics added).

"The commission is prepared to accept the evidence that those who harbour such sentiments form a very small minority in the black community, but at the same time there is considerable evidence that they are not so small that they can be ignored in any way when the situation is judged from the security point of view?" (Italics added).

While appearing to be neat and final, the commission's conclusion poses a major, if unanswerable, question: What is a very small minority which is not so small?

The commission does not identify the persons whose evidence it refers to in the above paragraphs.

But, judging from the list of people and institutions who gave evidence to the commission, they almost certainly came from those members of the Security Police, the Defence Force and the Department of National Intelligence who testified before the commission, as well as from conservative blacks serving on the community councils, including Mr David Thebehali, of the Soweto Council.

To what extent would the evidence have been altered if the commission heard evidence from, say, Dr Nthato Motlana, of the Soweto Committee of 10, Bishop Desmond Tutu, of the South African Council of Churches and Professor Lawrence Schlemmer, of the University of Natal, who has made several in-depth studies of black opinion.

Mr Tom Lodge, senior lecturer in political studies at the University of the Witwatersrand and author of a new study on "black resistance politics," is unimpressed by the commission's acceptance of evidence that the ANC has support from only a small minority of blacks.

Mr Lodge says: "The Rabie Commission asserts that support for the ANC is limited to a small minority, apparently on the basis of police estimates. But the police were wrong in 1976 and they could be wrong again." He then refers to the findings of the Cillie Commission of Inquiry into the unrest of 1976-1977.

Mr Justice Cillie implicitly but unmistakably criticises the police for their "lack of knowledge" of what black scholars were planning in Soweto in the days immediately before the outbreak of unrest and for their "unpreparedness" on how to deal with it.

The judge notes in an earlier comment: "Clear signs of brewing unrest during the last few weeks before the eruption were ignored ... the police did not realise the significance of all these portents."

Mr Lodge concludes in his own study: "In the five years which have elapsed since the Soweto uprising, the ANC has re-emerged as the political group with probably the greatest popular support within the townships."

He backs his assessment, in part, with the findings of a survey commissioned by The Star, which found that the ANC would draw most support from urban blacks if it were free to participate in a parliamentary election. The survey found the ANC would capture 40 percent of the black votes against 20 percent for its nearest rival, Inkatha.

In 1977 the authoritative Bergstraesser Institute survey, on which Professor Schlemmer worked, found that ANC leaders attracted 21,7 percent of black support and that 43,8 percent went to Chief Gatsha Buthelezi, of Inkatha.

Follow up surveys, published in a postscript to the English translation of the Bergstraesser study, show that ANC support stood firmly at about 20 percent and that it rose relative to Chief Buthelezi's (except among the Zulu) and that it seemed to be more deeply rooted than either Dr Motlana's or Bishop Tutu's.

The increased support for the ANC tallies with the findings of independent research, including that of Professor Schlemmer for the Buthelezi Commission.

In a recent address Prof Schlemmer notes: "Nearly 50 percent of black people in Natal, rural and urban, were of the opinion that many or most people would co-operate with or shelter ANC insurgents if asked to do so discreetly."

The Buthelezi Commission's findings are understood to point to an increase in ANC support, particularly in the Transvaal but not so markedly in Natal and KwaZulu, where Inkatha still enjoys majority support.

Professor Schlemmer declines to comment on these findings, as he is still examining their implications for the Buthelezi Commission (which is scheduled for release to the public soon).

Justify

However, he warns against attaching too much importance to trends in Soweto. While not denying the strong upsurge of ANC support in the densely populated Witwatersrand region, he cautions: "Soweto is the northern suburbs of black South Africa."

But, even after taking due cognisance of Professor Schlemmer's warning, the empirical evidence does not justify the acceptance by the Rabie Commission that ANC support is limited to a very small minority — particularly in the light of evidence that black impatience and anger is rising and, with it, an inclination to applaud acts of violence against the "established system."

Professor Schlemmer's findings point to a steady increase in the proportion of black men in the Witwatersrand who described themselves as "impatient" or angry: 39 percent in 1977, 44 percent in 1979 and 56 percent in 1981.

He comments: "The basic question may over-estimate or under-estimate political anger. What is significant, however, are the trends over time, using a strictly comparable approach with field work conducted by an independent commercial organisation. Discontent is increasing."

Professor Schlemmer's view should be seen against research conducted by Mr Piet Human, of the University of South Africa. His work on black attitudes in Soweto shows that the biggest single category of Sowetans favour revolution as the most efficient means of improving their lot.

CSO: 4700/862

FORMER ANC LEADER, MORAKA, INTERVIEWED

Johannesburg RAND DAILY MAIL in English 22 Feb 82 p 9

[Article by Patrick Laurence: "Where an Old Man of the ANC Can Still Dream"]

[Text] Patrick Laurence talks to Dr James Moroka, a former president-general of the ANC and probably the oldest living black nationalist in South Africa...

THE old man came to the door of the farmhouse in Thaba Nchu, his body bent and frail but his voice deep and strong. "Gentlemen," he said, "I am an old man now but do come in."

Dr James Moroka, 93-year-old great grandson of Chief Moroka, the Batswana chief who helped the Voortrekkers after their clash with the Matabele at Vegkop nearly 150 years ago, sat down on the couch and patted the place beside him.

"Come and sit next to me so I hear you," he said.

Thirty years ago, on the eve of the Defiance Campaign, he was president-general of the then still legal African National Congress. He had been elected president as the nominee of the ANC Youth League, whose members included Nelson Mandela.

Explaining why he had agreed to be interviewed, he said: "It can't do me any harm. It can't do you any harm. It can only do us good ... well, what do you want to know?"

There were so many questions that it was difficult to know where to begin. But the Defiance of "Unjust Laws" Campaign of 1952-53 seemed a good place to start.

"It didn't do anyone any harm," Dr Moroka said.

"Africans are better treated today. Education has improved considerably. We don't have to send all our boys overseas for higher education. On the salary side, Africans are getting paid more. It is the same in education. You even have principals who are Africans."

It was a conservative reply which may have even delighted Pretoria's propagandists. Before the interview was over, nowever, Dr Moroka was to offer opinions of a different order.

ON THE policy of corralling blacks into separate ethnic groups, he said: "It was made purposefully and maliciously to prevent African unity. They came to Bophuthatswana and said, 'You Tswanas must stick together. You must drive out the Xhosas and the Zulus ...'"

The conversation turned to men like President Lucas Mangope who have worked with the parameters of the government policy with the objective of using it to improve the lot of blacks.

Dr Moroka, who served on the old Native Representative Council set up by General Hertzog in 1936, said: "You can't blame them altogether. But they are still under Government control. Occasionally they come out and say something critical, but ..."

One of the young men who campaigned for the election of Dr Moroka as ANC president in 1949 was Nelson Mandela, then a co-author of the 1949 Programme of Action and now a convicted saboteur and a prisoner for life on Robben Island.

Describing the imprisoned ANC leader as a "fine fellow", Dr Moroka said: "Mandela used to come and stay with me in Thaba Nchu. He was gifted with the quality of knowing how to speak his mind. I wonder how long they will keep him there on Robben Island. What did he do that is so bad? He wanted freedom for his people."

The interview focused briefly on Chief Albert Luthuli, who succeeded Dr Moroka as president, and Dr X B Xuma, who preceded him.

Chief Luthuli was elected ANC president after the Defiance Campaign largely because of Dr Moroka's controversial decision not to accept the joint team of lawyers chosen to defend ANC leaders against charges under the Suppression of Communism Act.

Dr Moroka objected to the inclusion of communists or suspected communists in the legal team. He hired his own lawyers, thereby dissociating himself from his fellow ANC leaders, and gave evidence in his own defence in contravention of a decision by the leadership not to do so.

At the time, Dr Moroka accepted the election of Chief Luthuli as the new ANC leader with good grace. Wishing Luthuli well, he said: "Nothing shapes a man better than the ANC. I became a new man after I became a member."

After 30 years there was still no trace of bitterness: "Luthuli was a good man. I knew him well, but not so well. I don't think he came to the Free State like Mandela."

His eyes lit up at the mention of Dr Xuma. Relishing the click sound made in the pronunciation of "Xuma", Dr Moroka said: "Oh yes, I remember him well. He used to come and stay with me here".

The theme shifted to the alliance between the ANC and the Communist Party and the contention by the Security Police that the ANC is controlled by the CP.

"Africans don't believe in communism," Dr Moroka, who owns four farms, said emphatically.

"Some of those fellows in Johannesburg and Pretoria may, but here in the reserves? Aikhona. If you tell an African that he must not personally own cattle and sheep, he will think you're mad.

"That's a weakness in the African. He will do anything to own animals. If you tell him he must surrender them to collective ownership? Aikhona ... You will have an enemy there and then."

But, while most blacks are hostile to communism as an economic system, they do not, Dr Moroka said, see the ANC as a tool of the communists but as a force working for the unity of blacks.

"I was elected as president of the ANC in Pretoria. It brought Africans together. You can talk to Africans today and if you say you don't like the ANC, they will look at you and think to themselves: You are one of the oppressors."

HE DID not, however, see much hope of success for the ANC's campaign of armed struggle.

"Defeat the South African Army? Aikhona. How will they get arms across the border? Where will they get money to buy arms like those used in the South African Army?

"Some people talk of South Africa as a poor country which can be defeated easily. Aikhona. It is a rich country, one of the richest in the world."

Despite the strength of the army, however, he had no doubt that the future would see continued improvements in the position of blacks.

"They can try to oppress us as much as they want, but we will come up. The African is not prepared to give up. Most Europeans see that things can't last forever. You can't keep another man down forever and forever.

"We don't want to oppress the white man. We want to live with him man to man. Do you catch me?"

Dr Moroka, who practised medicine for 45 years, went on to talk warmly of Oubaas Piet Steytler, an Afrikaans farmer who gave him R4 000 to study medicine in Edinburgh, Scotland.

"But today you don't have to go to Edinburgh to study medicine. I still maintain things have improved."

A man who was influenced by the missionaries — as were his people, the Baralong who settled at Thaba Nchu under his great grandfather, Chief Moroka — Dr Moroka had an old-worldly respect for ministers of religion.

Recalling their contribution to the education of the Baralong, he said: "To this day when I see ministers I take my hat off and say, 'Good day'."

On a lighter note, Dr Moroka confessed to an ambition to live to 100: "I am 93 now. I have not smoked a single cigarette in my life. Nor have I drunk a drop of alchohol."

A sparkle in his eye, he added: "God, man, I have a fine wife here. She has given me 10 children, six boys and four girls. I'm not joking ... I'm a bull."

CSO: 4700/862

FATE OF RELEASED DETAINEE UNKNOWN

Johannesburg SOWETAN in English 24 Feb 82 p 6

[Article by Sam Mabe]

[Text] THE FAMILY of one of the three ANC men captured during the Maputo raid in Mozambique last year and allegedly released from detention have still not heard anything concerning his whereabouts.

Mrs Betty Ntshekang (78), grandmother of Mr Mothibi Ntshekang, of Central Western Jabavu in Soweto, told The SOWETAN yesterday that she was amazed to learn that her grandson had been released from detention after his capture in Maputo.

Mr Ntshekang was captured together with Mr Selby Mavuso and Mr David Ntombela during a raid in which 13 people died.

Lawyers who acted for the three men said that in March last year they got confirmation from the police that the men were being held under Section Six of the Terrorism Act.

The lawyers said one of the three men was used as a witness in the Sasol trial last year without the lawyers having been informed. During the trial, names of State witnesses were not used in the Press. The lawyers said inquiries about the matter to the Attorney-General were not replied to.

It was only last week that the police informed them that Mr Ntshekang and Mr Mavuso had been released from detention, although no further particulars about their release were given.

Police have confirmed that the third man, Mr David Ntombela, is still held under Section Six of the Terror Act.

Mrs Ntshekang said she gave up hope that her grandson could still be alive, long before last year's raid in Maputo. This was after she was called to John Vorster Square Police Station where she was shown his photograph shortly after he skipped the country in 1977.

"When I learnt that he was captured in Maputo last year, I felt relieved because that gave me hope that he was still alive. But afterwards, there was another news blackout and by now I had again lost hope that he is alive.

"But the news that he has been released is more than heartbreaking because I would have expected to see him walking in my house here as a free man. What has happened to him?

"Can't the police just tell us where and when he was released — perhaps that could give us an idea of what happened to him after the alleged release?" Mrs Ntshekang asked.

Lawyers acting for the ANC men said they have written to the Attorney General requesting more details concerning Mr Ntshekang and Mr Mavuso's alleged release.

CSO: 4700/861

ANC DETAINEES STAGE HUNGER STRIKE

On Death Row

Johannesburg SOWETAN in English 19 Feb 82 p 1

[Article by Willie Bokala]

[Text] THREE MEMBERS of the African National Congress (ANC) sentenced to death for treason at the end of the marathon Sasol-Booysens trial last year have been refusing to eat prison food since February 6.

Officials of the Prisons Department in Pretoria confirmed yesterday that Anthony Bobby Tsotsobe, Johannes Shabangu and David Moise, have refused to take food provided by the prison.

All three men are on the death row and an appeal is being considered against their death sentences.

The spokesman refuted suggestions that the men were on hunger strike and said that although they had not been taking food made available by the prison, they had been allowed to "purchase additional foodstuff and edibles".

"They are therefore not on hunger strike. Medical services are available at all times and they are regularly seen by a medical officer. They do not require any treatment at this stage," he said.

However, lawyers representing the three men had told The SOWETAN that when they visited them this week they learned that the men had been on hunger strike since February 6. The strike was also confirmed to them by Commanding Officer Lieutenant-Colonel van Niekerk of the Maximum Security Section, Central Prison, Pretoria, they said.

The lawyers have now sent a telegram to the Commissioner of Prisons requesting permission to see the three men about their conditions since the food boycott started.

Tsotsobe, Shabangu and Moise were found guilty of high treason in the Pretoria Supreme Court, by Mr Justice T Theron, and two assessors on August 18 last year.

Their charges were a sequel to the bombing of Sasol Two, Dube Railway Station, West Rand Board Offices in Diepkloof, the Booysens Police Station and the gutting of Uncle Tom's Hall in Soweto. These also included the bombing of a house belonging to Constable Mayeza Mahaule.

Lawyers said yesterday that they were still waiting for a reply from the Commissioner to allow them to see the men.

They also revealed that a date for the appeal against the death sentences of the men had not been set.

Lawyers Cannot See Them

Johannesburg SOWETAN in English 24 Feb 82 p 3

[Article by Willie Bokala]

[Text] CONCERN for the three members of the African National Congress refusing to eat prison food on death row grew this week when lawyers were refused permission to see them.

The men — Anthony Bobby Tsotsobe, Jojannes Shabangu and David Moise — were sentenced to death for treason at the end of the Sasol-Booysens trial last year.

A spokesman for Matjila - Mokgoatleng, a firm of attorneys representing the men, said they have been refused permission by the Commissioner of Prisons to see them. The lawyers sent a telegram to the Commissioner after hearing about the boycott last week.

The food boycott by the three men enters its 18th day today and lawyers say they are concerned about the men's condition "which may deteriorate if something is not done quickly" to determine what the reasons are.

The spokesman said his firm would continue to try and get the authorities to grant permission for them to see the three.

The boycott started on February 6, but officials of the Prisons Department in Pretoria — although confirming the boycott — have said that it should not be regarded as a hunger strike because the men had been given permission to "purchase additional foodstuff and edibles".

"They are using this source and are therefore not on hunger strike. Medical services are available at all times and they are regularly seen by a medical officer. They do not require any treatment at this stage," officials said.

Tsotsobe, Shabangu and Moise were found guilty of high treason in the Pretoria Supreme Court by Mr Justice T Theron and two assessors on August 18 last year.

Their charges were a sequel to the bombing of Sasol Two, Dube Railway Station, West Rand Administration Board offices in Diepkloof, Booysens Police Station, the gutting of Uncle Tom's Hall in Soweto and bombing of a house belonging to Constable Mayeza Mahaule.

CSO: 4700/861

SECURITY POLICE DENY HOLDING JOYCE MASINGA

Johannesburg SOWETAN in English 24 Feb 82 p 7

[Article by Willie Bokala]

[Text] THE South African Security Police have refuted reports that they are holding former SowetoStudents Representative Council member, Mrs Joyce Masinga.

Major, J du Plessis, of the public relations division of the SAP, told The SOWETAN on Monday that the police "want to make it clear that they have not detained Miss Depale (Mrs Masinga)".

He said it was a misunderstanding and that his telex message to The SOWETAN on Friday last week, referred to Mr Peter Lengene and not to Miss Dipale. "We were answering to questions about Mr Lengene but, our message was misunderstood," he said.

However, we had sent the following telex to the police:

"Following our telex — dated 17/2/82 at 11h00 — inquiring whether the South African Police were holding Mr Peter Lengene, allegedly kidnapped from Botswana, which you in return replied negatively to, may we inquire now whether the Security Police are holding Miss Joyce Dipale, of Dube, Soweto, an exile who is also alleged to have been kidnapped from Botswana.

"Our information is that two people, a man, Mr Lengene, and a woman, possibly Miss Dipale, have been kidnapped from Botswana."

The police reply read:

1. "We refer you to the statements made by the Honourable Minister of Justice in this regard.
2. No person with the name furnished is at present being detained in terms of security legislation in South Africa.
3. A person with a similar name is however assisting the police in the investigation of alleged offences and persons have already been arrested and offensive weapons discovered."

Botswana police also said they had no knowledge of the kidnapping and said that the last they heard about Miss Dipale was when she was taken to Europe for medical treatment last November.

The medical treatment on Miss Dipale followed an attempt on her life in November.

Referring to the kidnapping of Mr Peter Lengene, Botswana's Commissioner of Police, Mr Simon Hirschfeld said he had not been officially notified by the South African Government that he could go and interview Mr Lengene and find out what his position was about returning to Botswana.

"We made an official approach to the SA Government about the kidnapping and as far as we are concerned we have not had a reply from them. We have only read from news papers and heard from the radio that they want us to speak to Mr Lengene to find out his feelings, but they have not told this to us," he said.

CSO: 4700/861

DAVID NTOMBELA REMAINS IN DETENTION

Johannesburg SOWETAN in English 22 Feb 82 p 4

[Article by Sam Mabe]

[Text] ONE OF the three ANC men who were captured during the SADF's raid of ANC bases in Mozambique early last year is still in detention and is held under Section Six of the Terrorism Act.

His name is Mr David Ntombela, whose detention was confirmed by the Public Relations Division of the South African Police in Pretoria last week.

Lawyers acting for Mr Ntombela, said yesterday that they were informed by police that the other two men, Mr Mothibi Ntshekang and Mr Selby Mavuso, were released from detention.

But The SOWETAN'S inquiries about Mr Ntshekang and Mr Mavuso could not be replied, in terms of the Defence Act, which prohibits the publication of activities of the army and the police while combating terrorism.

Mr Ntombela's lawyers said they wrote to the Attorney General requesting further details relating to the alleged release of Mr Ntshekang and Mr Mavuso.

The three men were captured late in January last year when the SADF men penetrated Mozambique's industrial area and raided houses used by ANC men where several shots were fired resulting in the death of 13 ANC men.

In a statement released by the chief of the Defence Force, General Constand Viljoen, the attack followed "irrefutable information" that Maputo was used as a springboard for terror against South Africa.

He said there was "unshakable" evidence that the attack on Sasol, the Silverton incident and the attacks on police stations during 1980 had been planned by people in Maputo with the aid of the Palestine Liberation Organisation and East German advisers.

The suburb of Matola in Maputo, is situated about 100 kilometres from the South African border and the raided ANC houses were two kilometres from President Samora Machel's home.

Mozambique officials said of the 13 people dead, 11 were nationalists, one a South African soldier and another, a Portuguese technician. The radio also said South Africans could have carried six of their men, killed or seriously injured during the two-hour pre-dawn raid.

The names of the ANC men killed during the raid include among others, Mr Jeffrey Radebe, Mr Talaza Sithole and Mr William Khanyile of KwaMashu Durban.

Also killed were Mr Mgadeni Sikweyiya of Middeldrift in the Cape, Mr Levison Manakaza, of Soweto and two others whose surnames were reported to be Masuku and Mohwepe.

CSO: 4700/861

COMMUNISTS CLAIM RESPONSIBILITY FOR LEAFLET BOMBS IN AGGETT CASE

Capetown DIE BURGER in Afrikaans 13 Feb 82 p 9

[Text] Johannesburg--Yesterday between 5 and 6 pm three leaflet bombs exploded at several places in Johannesburg. In all three incidents leaflets were scattered which dealt with the death of trade union leader Dr Neil Aggett who was found hanged in his prison cell last week.

The leaflet bombs exploded at the Johannesburg station, at the Witwatersrand University Campus and next to the building of the group of South African Associated Newspapers located in the center of Johannesburg. One man was slightly injured in the explosion at the station.

He is W. J. Marais of the Middelvlei 103 residential block of Randfontein. A spokesman of the railroads said that the man was treated for the wounds and released.

Comrade

In Johannesburg BEELD, a sister newspaper of DIE BURGER, yesterday received an anonymous telephone call from someone who said: "Listen to me, I will say this just once. I am from the South African Communist Party and this evening we will explode three bombs in Johannesburg in memory of comrade Aggett." He then hung up.

Mr E. du Plessis, a communication official of the railroad said that the leaflet bomb at the station was planted in a parking lot on the west side near the Rissikstraat Bridge.

The police have been put on alert and roadblocks have been set up everywhere in an attempt to apprehend the guilty parties. A full investigation has been started.

7964
CSO: 4701/29

SURVEY FINDS ONE-THIRD FAVOR MIXED RESIDENTIAL AREAS

Johannesburg SUNDAY TIMES in English 21 Feb 82 p 2

[Article by Norman Chandler]

[Text] ONE out of every three white South Africans is in favour of racially mixed residential areas.

A poll conducted by Intercontinental Marketing Services Africa (IMS) — and released exclusively to the Sunday Times — shows that 55,6 percent of whites are opposed to the idea, but 31,2 percent say they would be in favour with a further 11,5 percent undecided.

Individual cities, however, are clearly divided on the issue — the least resistance to the idea of mixed suburbs exists in Johannesburg, East London, Port Elizabeth, Bloemfontein and Welkom.

A spokesman for the survey company said that the poll had been undertaken following the referendum on the same issue in the Constantia area of the Cape by the Progressive Federal Party.

That poll showed that a majority of Constantia residents was not opposed to their plush suburb being mixed.

"We decided to test attitudes on a wider scale," the IMS spokesman said.

"The question asked was: 'Would you be in favour of or opposed to people of all groups who could afford it, acquiring property in the normal way in your suburb?'

"One-thousand people were interviewed face to face and we feel that, overall, the poll was very representative of the way South African whites feel about the issue.

□ □ □

"Some of the most interesting statistics are those relating to age groups — for instance, nearly 37 percent of whites aged between 16 and 24 were in favour of mixed suburbs. However, people over 35 were not too keen on the idea and this is reflected in the returns."

The only city to clearly signal its attitude is Johannesburg — with a definite 50 percent "yes" and another 12,5 percent undecided — while a significant number of people living in Bloemfontein and Welkom say they would be in favour.

Two cities — Port Elizabeth and East London — are marginally not in favour of mixed suburbs . . . by just one percent.

□ □ □

Cape Town indicated that 48,8 percent were not in favour with 37,6 percent saying "yes" and another 12,8 percent undecided.

Pretoria voted an overwhelming "no".

Natal's main urban centres Durban and Maritzburg — are not in favour; the combined poll showed that only 31,4 percent were in favour with 50,5 percent totally opposed to the idea.

City-by-city figures are ('yes' and 'no'): Johannesburg 50 and 33,6; Pretoria 14 and 74; Durban/Maritzburg 31,4 and 50,5; Cape Town 37,6 and 48,8; Port Elizabeth/East London 39,7 and 41,3; Bloemfontein/Welkom 41,9 and 53,2.

Reef and platteland townspeople are also opposed, with Transvaal and Cape towns leading the opposition. More than 74 percent of people polled in Transvaal towns with more than 5 000 white inhabitants said "no" and in the Cape that figure was 68,3 percent. Free State towns were not polled.

The category "Afrikaans-/both" (which included English-speakers) indicated a 68,3 percent opposition to the idea while the group "English/other" (including immigrants) were in favour by a narrow majority.

People who fear mixed suburbs the most are aged between 35 and 49; the survey recorded 59,3 percent being opposed with only 26,5 percent in favour.

Other age group statistics are: 16 to 24: 36,9 percent yes and 46,9 percent no; 25 to 34: 30 percent yes and 58,4 percent no; 50 years and over: 31,5 percent yes and 57,5 percent no.

Men are marginally more opposed than women.

CSO: 4700/863

CONSTELLATION OF STATES IDEA LANDS IN DIFFICULTIES

Johannesburg SUNDAY TIMES in English 21 Feb 82 p 2

[Article by Ivor Wilkins]

[Text] A DESIRE by "certain elements" in the Cabinet for the South African Government to retain direct control over the proposed Development Bank of Southern Africa, has landed the Prime Minister's constellation of states idea in difficulties.

The Development Bank, a central element in the constellation and the financial arm of the proposed confederation of states, will eventually comprise representatives of all the participating countries.

Problems facing the bank came to light this week following questions about its progress in the House of Assembly by Mr Harry Schwarz, the Opposition's chief finance spokesman.

The Prime Minister, Mr P W Botha, replied that it was a whole new concept and it should not be approached hastily, and that preparatory steps should be completed thoroughly.

Observers were surprised when Mr Botha announced that a special committee had been appointed to take the matter further — but excluded from the committee was Professor Jan Lombard, the prominent Pretoria economist who had been one of the main architects of the planned bank.

Prof Lombard refused to discuss the events surrounding the bank and his break from its affairs this week.

But, informed sources spoke of his growing disenchantment and frustration at the Government's responses to the bank last year, and a fear that his continued association with the project was costing him credibility, particularly among black leaders with whom he had developed a close relationship.

Prof Lombard, who was vice-chairman of the Prime Minister's Central Constellation Committee under Dr Gerhard de Kock, Governor of the Reserve Bank, was responsible for much of the negotiation with black leaders, whose participation in the constellation was being sought.

It is reliably understood that the project began to run into difficulties last year when Dr de Kock's committee completed a major document in July outlining in detail how the Development Bank should function, and laying out a blueprint of exactly how it should be established.

Fundamental to the whole idea of the constellation and the Development Bank was that the Government should play only a co-ordinating role, and that economic power and decision making should devolve to a number of economic regions.

But, according to informed sources, the entire concept ran into serious difficulties at Cabinet level because of an insistence by "certain elements" that control of the bank should remain firmly in South Africa's hands.

At the start of the short session of Parliament in August last year, the Prime Minister announced that phase one of the constellation project had been completed.

He read to Parliament a letter of resignation from Dr de Kock, who said that phase one having been completed, there was no sense in the Governor of the Reserve Bank, or any other senior economic adviser or executive official, to act as co-ordinator of constellation affairs.

Shortly afterwards, hints of a switch in emphasis on the devolution concept emerged publicly in a speech by Mr Chris Heunis, the Minister of Internal Affairs.

Instead of a high degree of regional autonomy, Mr Heunis introduced a new element in which he said the regions would establish their priorities and needs, but that the actual decisions would be taken by central government.

CSO: 4700/863

INDEPENDENCE OF 'SOWETAN' DEFENDED

Johannesburg SOWETAN in English 15 Feb 82 p 6

[Article by Aggrey Klaaste in his "On the Line" column: "Taking the Back Seat as Usual..."]

[Text] NOT THAT he minded, but we think it was somewhat unfortunate, particularly in view of the concerns of the day, that the Editor of this newspaper was not invited with editors from white newspapers to address the Steyn Report on television.

We think the consensus was after the programme that this country needs papers as diverse as The SOWETAN, the Citizen and the Beeld for example. One thing we have to take issue with is the view, surprisingly widely held that The SOWETAN is not an (independent) black newspaper.

We are placing independent in parenthesis for a reason. People who raise this view sometimes do not define what they mean by an "independent black newspaper".

On the basis of pure physical mechanics it can be said the Star and the Pretoria News are not "independent" in the sense that they both belong to the Argus company. The SOWETAN belongs to this conglomerate and if the argument is because of that it is not independent, we beg to differ somewhat strenuously.

Special case

There is no way that the Argus Company is going to dictate editorial content in any of its newspapers. Speaking for ourselves, and we believe we are a special case, this is not what happens.

We are special for various reasons. We after all belong to the line of black newspapers, from The World to Post that were owned by the Argus company and because of their vitality, were banned. You would think the Argus company would then sit on our Editor's neck to make sure that this, their third black newspaper does not get banned too. It's simply not good for business. Yet this hardly ever happens.

You would think we as reporters on this paper would be especially worried so that we do not lose our jobs or worse, be responsible for this black voice which we believe serves a vast number of black readers, to be closed.

This question about an "independent" black newspaper is intriguing on a number of points. First the interpretation from the Right is we are not "independent" because we are too radical. This is for us the height of misinformation.

We are not even hiding that we are owned by a white conglomerate called the Argus Company. To suggest, that the Argus Company has any control on our editorial content is an insult to the mother body and to us as journalists.

This question of "independence" (thanks God we are not associated with that term which is redolent with dark and sinister nuances) is intriguing. Interpretations of rightwingers about an "independent" black newspaper differ dramatically from other interpretations. According to the drafters of the Steyn Report we are an "embarrasment", we are radical and so on and so forth. In other words we are not independent and by some mystic way, we become radical.

If the assumption is that there is control from Sauer Street, then that's farcical. Some of us believe some of the papers in the Argus Company are embarrassingly conservative.

Then there is the radical white and black view that says we are not independent, ipso facto, we are censored by the Company or whoever, therefore we are moderate. You have to try and work within such a crazy situation to savour the ridiculous nature of your situation.

Not only that, some of our readers say almost daily that we are frightened to report the truth as blacks see it. Some say we are simply cowardly because we fear arrest or whatever.

Many readers, including the most literate among them, do not have the slightest notion of how a newspaper is produced, just as much as I don't know what happens in a jam or shoe factory. The most literate blacks have a vaguish notion of the myriad and one laws that we have to tripse across to escape the wrath of those in power. They do not have the slightest notion about the troubles we have trying to interpret this vague thing called racial incitement in a country so obsessed by race.

There are vociferous black political voices that demand their pound of flesh everyday of the week. There is a whole brace of factions amongst blacks that demand their views be given prominence. Some of these people, from politicians to sportsmen to showbiz people, read the paper only with the view of seeing their points put across.

I sometimes feel it is a miracle that this paper comes out everyday. It should in fact be a pleasure to work for something like the Citizen or some Afrikaans paper which acts with clear minds about their objectives without any hassles.

A problem

The Citizen's market is clear as daylight. They serve up the conservative jazz which is gobbled up by a lot of whites who do not read something like the Rand Daily Mail, for one. The Afrikaans press, we suspect has something of a problem because they have quite rigid factions amongst themselves — verkrampte-verlig and so forth. But both these media do not have the Government to contend with like we do.

Talking about an "independent" black voice is not as simple as it sounds. The conservative view is specious and we have dealt with that. The radical view is out also because they do not know what forces we have to operate under. The purists view that we should operate "factually" is perhaps the worst for there is no such thing in newspapers. There is even less of such a thing in a diverse situation as South Africa.

The Editor of this paper has been in an irascible mood these days, worse luck for me. It could be the Steyn or even the Rabie Reports but he does seem to have a cavalier view of commissions, so maybe that's not true.

It is perhaps a good thing he was not called to represent us on that panel of editors for we fear, in his present mood, he would really have laid it on the line.

CSO: 4700/861

ECONOMIC REALITIES NECESSITATE PERMANENCE OF URBAN BLACKS

Capetown DIE BURGER in Afrikaans 13 Feb 82 p 8

[Article by Dawie from his "Out of My Political Pen" column: "Ideas Must Always be tested Against Reality"]

[Text] Lately one thing or another has been happening reminding us how transient ideas can be and how necessary it is to take into view the inexorable reality; But most of all this is something which must be done in a timely manner.

No Turning Back

Thus last month we witnessed the announcement of the government's great plan for housing the black people of South Africa...much the greater, because for such a long time too little has been done in this respect. For example in Soweto only 7,700 housing units have been built in the past 7 years and today there is a shortage of 35,000 housing units and this shortage is increasing at the rate of 4,000 units every year.

The housing plan is a further confirmation of the view, which has grown gradually, that black people living outside the black national states are there to stay. For many people this appears to be most obvious; however, not so many years ago people were going on the supposition that the blacks were not and would not become a permanent part of white South Africa.

The basic thinking for this was that the influx of black people from the homelands to the white cities could be stopped and even turned back and that more and more black people from the white areas would be moving to the homelands so as to find a better way of life there. This returning back was to have happened in 1978.

That year came and went, but there was no turning back. To be sure the population of some of the homelands increased, but this did not go hand in hand with a reduction in the number of blacks in the white areas. It was just the opposite.

Two Factors

Two factors were mostly responsible for this. One of these is that it is impossible to create enough job opportunities in the homelands; the other is that the fast developing South African economy has necessitated a constantly larger number of black people in constantly increasing capacities...not only as handymen as before, but also to do work which was previously performed only by whites. There simply are not enough white people for this anymore. Thus in the case of black people who are performing these jobs permanent housing is unavoidable.

This is an inexorable reality. This reality has existed for sometime, but in spite of this there is a trend, especially at a bureaucratic level, to insist on the view that blacks may stay in white areas only temporarily and that "permanency," as it is called, ought to be discouraged. As a matter of fact it is openly being said that things should not become too pleasant for blacks in the white areas, because [otherwise] they would then be less inclined to establish themselves in the homelands.

Fuller Life

This view stems from those days when it was thought that the influx of blacks could actually be turned back...to the advantage of everybody, even to the advantage of blacks who would be able to live a fuller life in their own areas than they would in the white areas. But even long ago it became clear that South Africa will have to adjust to the permanent presence of an increasing number of blacks in white areas and this to the advantage of everybody.

But old concepts are hard to abandon, just as it is hard to suddenly bring to a halt a heavily laden ship, and precious time has been lost allowing situations to develop which are of no profit to anybody.

The above is demonstrated in the lack of jobs in the homelands, a factor which has contributed to the flow of blacks into white cities. This brings us to still another instance where an idea must yield to the demands of reality.

Originally the idea was that whites must not be allowed to establish industries in the homelands. In theory there was a lot to be said for this idea. The intention was to prevent the capital rich whites from dominating these regions economically and as a result deprive the inhabitants of these regions of development possibilities.

Unfortunately, however, the blacks themselves did not appear to be capable of undertaking the required development despite massive help by investment corporations which were set up to help them...and so the jobs never materialized.

No Talk of Domination

Years went by before doors were opened to white investors. Jobs were created, but not yet enough by far. Today there is no talk about the homelands being economically dominated by whites. There is still a shortage of white enterprises which can provide jobs and in the meantime an increasing number of homelands inhabitants are seeking jobs in the white cities.

The lesson is obvious: Ideas, no matter how great they may be, must be at all times tested by the demands of reality.

7964
CSO: 4701/29

STEADY GROWTH OF BLACK SPENDING POWER EXAMINED

Johannesburg RAND DAILY MAIL in English 18 Feb 82 p 9

[Article by Vita Palestrant: "Black--and in the Black"]

[Text] JOHN ORR'S recently closed its Eloff Street doors, blaming the changed customer pattern of the central city for the move. But does an increase in black custom necessarily spell death to "white" business? According to Johannesburg's Central Business District Association chairman, Mr Nigel Mandy, by 1985 black spending power will exceed that of whites. VITA PALESTRANT reports.

ONCE there was John Orr's, Stuttafords, Ansteys and Garlicks — great department stores which attracted suburban and even country shoppers to central Johannesburg.

Ansteys has closed, Stuttafords has moved to the suburbs, John Orr's is about to follow, Greatermans may do so. Only Garlicks thrives in the CBD.

According to John Orr chairman, Dr Nic Labuschagne, his store was no longer attracting the kind of customers it wanted.

"The racial mix of the city centre has changed. John Orr's policy is designed to meet the needs of suburban customers," he said.

And it is true that in the past decade the Johannesburg CBD has had to compete with suburban shopping complexes, losing a major portion of its market in the process.

Fed up with traffic jams, lack of parking and crowded pavements, the white suburban housewife has retreated to more exclusive centres.

But there more than 250 000 workers in the CBD which, together with Braamfontein, holds half the office space in South Africa.

This represents a substantial market of its own, and one that is evolving an interesting mix of white city workers and a new generation of sophisticated blacks.

And it is precisely from the new CBD mix that other stores have prospered under the motto "adapt or die".

Mr H Regenbaum, managing director of Levisons Outfitters, said: "It's been good for Levisons".

His shop offers up-market, fashionable imported men's clothing and at least half his customers are black.

"Like most cities Johannesburg has been losing its customers to suburban shopping centres, but we haven't felt it because the gap has been filled by the growing black market."

Other specialist stores, such as Derber's, the furriers, still attract their old customers.

The managing director, Mr R Fritz, said: "It's a highly specialised business. Our customers are regulars and they come in to see our designer."

But Derber's have also had an increase in black customers and they do well out of the tourist trade. His highly trained, intergrated staff speak a wide a variety of languages, including African languages.

A D Spitz, a quality shoe chain, has experienced the same trends as Levisons.

Marketing director, Mr John Hallowes, said 70 percent of their city customers were black: "The black trade is either ultra quality conscious or price conscious — stores that have fallen between the two have been badly hit.

"Department stores have tended to go for top quality in limited areas and have generally lacked discernible brands and quality profiles. This has made them vulnerable in the CBD."

His theory is supported by both the success of the O K

Bazaars and Woolworths.

OK Bazaars director, Allan Fabig, attributes their success to mass marketing and competitive prices. "Some of our customers used to pop their goods in a John Orr's packet when no-one was looking," he said. "The important thing is they shopped here."

For some time now OK have been aiming at the younger set and they have gone out of their way to emphasise things such as pop music — they hold 20 percent of the music market in the country. Their store is almost entirely black.

(One department store — now closed — also made a belated attempt to attract a new younger market by bringing in live performances by pop groups. This merely alarmed their regular middle aged and elderly customers.)

"Our black customers are particularly fussy when it comes to clothes and meat — they are willing to spend more if they know the quality is good," said a spokeswoman for Woolworths, a store which is predominantly black at two of its CBD branches.

Edgars is another success story thriving in the CBD's new mix. They moved from a small dull shop in Eloff Street to a major, departmental clothing store in Market Street — almost twice the size of Garlicks.

They cater for the fashionable working woman — both black and white.

Specialist music store, Recordia, have increased their jazz and reggae sections to meet their black customers' demands. They also have large industrial accounts. Managing director, Mr H S van der Veen, said: "You have to adapt or die."

Generally, the business community have not rejoiced in the decline of department stores. But their opinions vary.

- Worldwide the department store is the sick man of retailing;
- Bad management — they look like Petticoat Lane;
- They couldn't adjust in time because they are more cumbersome and less flexible than specialist stores;
- They were mostly family businesses and that's dicey;
- They're still the most exciting kind of retailing.

There is talk in the city that Greatermans may move out. Certainly, their general manager, Mr D J Darlington, admitted the store had been caught between a downturn in the economy and parking problems.

His store had not changed its merchandising policy over the years and his customers were 80 percent white during the week and 60 percent white at weekends. He would not say whether he saw a continued place for department stores in the CBD.

But at least one department store, Garlicks, is proving it can thrive in the CBD.

Situated in the Carlton Centre it has has ample parking and a bouyant tourist trade.

A spokesman said: "Our customers are still predominantly white. Since our restaurants turned multiracial a few years ago we have attracted more blacks. This will increase as earnings go up."

Their Rosebank branch 15km away has made no dent in their existing market.

"Every store is run autonomously. One has to take into account different shopping trends. The city centre caters for the working person while the suburban store caters for the housewife. If you have the right merchandise you will attract customers."

He said blacks were particularly quality conscious — selecting the best in goods such as silverware and paying in cash.

He has no doubt that department stores can do well in the CBD and gives Macy's in New York as an example.

"After Macy's had been revamped, its interior tastefully decorated and its merchandise changed, it became a leader in the States," he said.

A recent survey on shopping trends conducted by the Johannesburg Central Business District Association showed some areas were entirely black, particularly those closest to stations, like Hoek Street — while others, like the Carlton Centre, were predominanly white. Eloff street was split down the middle.

"The traditional, separate white markets are blurring," he says. "An increasingly non-racial middleclass market is is emerging."

The present working population of the CBD — its service community of stockbrokers, lawyers, accountants and doctors and their staff — present a large market because their services also bring suburbanites into the city.

The CBD still has the highest concentration and selection of specialist stores — whether they deal in furniture, furs, jewellery or motor cars.

"A lot is said about decaying city centres. This only applies to cities which have lost their function. Johannesburg is the financial and commercial centre of the sub-continent and it is still growing," Mr Mandy says.

But there are problems to be tackled: better city transport by way of mini buses or taxis, more conference centres and exhibition halls.

"Specialist stores in the centre have been able to adjust to the new market because they are relatively small and personalised. Department stores are more cumbersome and complex — they couldn't adjust quickly enough. Also, their customers are often 40-plus and less able to adapt to a changing society."

But he believes department stores have a place and he points to other major cities where they flourish.

Another positive factor he expects to see is the trend of homeowners to move closer to the central city. He predicts the ring of suburbs within 5km of the CBD will increase in affluence.

"Younger people want to be closer to the city. The city has a cosmopolitan excitement. It knows how to welcome strangers and this is an advantage in our racially mixed society," Mr Mandy said.

CSO: 4700/862

MARITZ: SOWETO SURVEY 'NOT SECRET'

Johannesburg RAND DAILY MAIL in English 15 Feb 82 p 3

[Text] THE findings of a sociological survey on the quality of life in Soweto, undertaken by a leading South African company, would be released "in due course", according to the man who headed the survey.

Prof F A Maritz, head of the department of sociology at the University of South Africa, was reacting to a Sunday report that the sponsors of the survey, Everite, had prevented Unisa from publishing the findings of the survey.

"The impression the newspaper is giving to the public is that we are keeping secret about the report. That is not so. The report is at present in the hands of the sponsors and I am sure it will be released in due course."

Prof Maritz was non-committal about how soon the report would be released but was emphatic that "the right procedure will be followed".

Confirmed

Though the professor did not want to jump the gun by disclosing the findings, he has confirmed that 23% of people in Soweto believed that violence was the only way for them to obtain meaningful changes in their way of life — which was one of the findings.

"But all in all, there is nothing strange about the survey report." The professor would not say anything further.

Attempts to establish from Everite's managing director, Mr Martin Mealin, whether or not copies of the reports had been handed to the Minister of Co-operation and Development Dr Piet Koornhof, drew a blank.

The head of the West Rand Administration Board, Mr John Knoetze, who has a copy of the survey report, said it was "beyond my decision to release the findings"

CSO: 4700/862

'TOTAL ONSLAUGHT,' 'TOTAL STRATEGY' DISCUSSED

Countering Attacks

Johannesburg RAND DAILY MAIL in English 17 Feb 82 p 11

[Article by Hermann Giliomee: "Total Strategy--What Total Strategy?"]

[Text] The Government continues to tell South Africans about the "total onslaught" facing them, but what's happened to the "total strategy" it devised to counter the attacks, asks Hermann Giliomee...

THERE has been a striking omission in the Government's handling of the Steyn and Rabie commission reports which tells us much about the way in which our politics has changed over the last two years.

In the No-Confidence Debate in Parliament speaker after speaker from the Government side concentrated on the total onslaught which South Africa was facing. But, curiously enough, little or nothing was heard about the total strategy with which this total onslaught is supposed to be countered.

In 1977, when the twin concepts total onslaught and total strategy became current, they were used with equal force and frequency.

To defend South Africa against a total onslaught, a total strategy was needed, which, according to a Defence White Paper, was a "comprehensive plan to utilize all the means available to the state according to an integrated pattern to achieve the national aims".

Machinery

In several speeches between 1977 and 1979 Mr P W Botha and General Magnus Malan explained that the total strategy should encompass the State, the private sector, diplomacy, comproblems of South Africa. In fact, Gen Viljoen went on, Mr Botha had created the machinery to do this: the President's Council.

How a political settlement can emanate from a body from which black Africans are excluded and which has no brief to discuss their participation in the political system is far from clear.

Lastly the drop in Afrikaner support for the National Party from 85 percent in the 1977 election to just over 60 percent in 1981 has made it impossible for Mr Botha, using a unified NP as a base, to embark on the modifications of the political system the total strategists had in mind, whether they be reform or greater control. Mr Botha has succeeded in getting control over his party caucus but not over the Afrikaner nationalist movement as a whole (compare the simmering feud between Perskor and Nasionale Pers).

Mr Botha set in train or stepped up certain processes that will in the long run transform SA profoundly. However, in some other remerce, industry and organizations like Armscor, the Council for Scientific and Industrial Research and the Human Sciences Research Council. "None could plan and go its own way independently," Gen Malan said. "There must be co-ordination."

One of the major developments of the last two years is the gradual dissolving of this co-ordination up to a point where it makes little sense to speak of a total strategy any more. In fact, the word was not used at all during the No-Confidence Debate in Parliament.

The total strategy as propounded by Mr Botha and Gen Malan could not succeed without three requirements being met.

- It needed an alliance between Government and business to meet the aspirations of the most advanced section of the urban blacks and to deal with the problems of underdevelopment in the rural areas.
- It depended on credible structures being created by Government through which a new labour and constitutional dispensation could take shape.
- It demanded that Mr Botha get control over the Afrikaner nationalist movement — not only the Party but also the Church and the Press — to forestall a revolt against the total strategy, whether it be from the Rightwing resisting the reforms the strategy required or from the moderates objecting to dictatorial tendencies.

It was in the case of the first requirement that Mr Botha came nearest to a breakthrough. At the Carlton conference of 1979 big business stood ready to be enlisted on behalf of the total strategy. However, a true partnership never took shape except in limited fields like public relations: big business would sing the praises of Government abroad and Government would laud the private sector at home.

Support

However, in the eyes of business the Botha Government has failed to deliver in many vital areas. In the meantime the number of blacks "angry" about the situation have increased from 39 percent in 1977 to 56 percent in 1981, according to studies by Lawrence Schlemmer. Another study by the same scholar shows that nearly 50 percent of urban and rural blacks in Natal think that many or most blacks would give secret support to the ANC operating in South Africa.

Business still needs a political ally in Goverment but it has become urgently important for private sector leaders to forge other alliances across colour lines with black politicians and labour representatives, if they wish to ensure the long-term survival of capitalism. This will greatly strain their relationship with Government and further erode the total strategy as conceived in 1977.

In the second requirement, that of creating credible structures for the evolution of a new labour and constitutional order, the Botha cabinet has had mixed success. The labour reforms piloted through by Mr Fanie Botha have been a remarkable achievement in the context of our political system. But the strength of the independent unions and the bargaining going on outside the industrial councils and in defiance of procedures laid down by Government fly in the face of the original strategy to establish co-ordinated control of black labour organizations. Mr Fanie Botha's department seems to be doing the sensible thing here by increasingly stepping back and allowing business and labour to find their own way of living together.

The total strategy approach also needed viable structures for political reform to be credible. Gen Malan said in 1979: "We must take into account the aspirations of our different population groups. We must gain and keep their trust." Two and a half years later, in January 1982, Gen Viljoen, head of the Defence Force, acknowledged that apart from the Russians and their proxies black nationalism was the main threat to the security of the State. He was, however, confident that Mr Botha would solve the political spects he has been checked, especially in the field of modifications of the pass laws, regional development or coloured representation in one House of Parliament.

Apart from the reformist aspects of the total strategy, Mr Botha and his total strategists may also have wanted to impose a greater measure of control. The resistance from the Afrikaans and English Press has sunk for the time being the preposterous proposals of the Steyn Commission. Perhaps the most remarkable action in the whole affair was that Government did not produce a white paper on the Steyn report. It is difficult to decide what the most likely explanation is — whether the Government never had any strategy behind appointing the Steyn Commission, or whether it realized in January 1982 that it was no longer possible to bring the Press to heel under a total strategy. Certainly it cannot depend on big business in the same measure as in 1979 for joint action against the Press.

There has been a crucial development in white politics. In 1979 many observers (myself included) thought there was a good chance that Mr Botha would proceed to create a middle class party and government. This he could do by ridding the NP of dissident elements, aligning himself with big business, drawing in growing numbers of the English middle class, attracting credible coloured and urban black leaders as collaborators, and espousing free enterprise and an ecumenical Christianity rather than separate development as ideology.

Ethnic

For various reasons Mr Botha did not do these things. SA is still ruled by an Afrikaner government geared above all towards maintaining ethnic interets and party unity. Business leaders are disillusioned, no credible non-white leaders have been attracted to a broad middle-class alliance, and separate development is still the dominant practice and ideology.

People outside the NP now suspect that the Government's warnings about a total onslaught are not aimed primarily at preparing the country for a total war but at keeping the NP together. In these circumstances it is simply untenable still to talk about a total strategy.

During the No-Confidence Debate the nearest Mr P W Botha could come to mentioning a total strategy was a reference to the 12-point plan as a recipe for friendship, prosperity and security for all. Perhaps the only thing Dr Van Zyl Slabbert and Rightwing Nationalists agree about is that the 12-point plan is a reformulation of the policy of separate development which leaves us exactly where we are.

Poverty

Mussolini once said: "It's not difficult to govern the Italians; it's useless." With our surging society by-passing the structures set up by Government, those at the helm may well deem it useless to pursue any total strategy. Yet given our daunting problems with a sullen urban proletariat and staggering rural poverty we may well go down without a genuine total strategy. What is now quite clear is that such a total strategy cannot be launched from the basis of exclusive NP rule and apartheid.

Only undiluted authoritarian rule (suspension of Parliament, elections and the free Press) or a coalition could take the implementation of a total strategy further. A dictatorship, even if it is putatively verlig, will in the end only compound our problems. All that remains is a coalition — but where are its strategists?

'STAR's' Cartoon View

Johannesburg THE STAR in English 18 Feb 82 p 22

[Text]

Cartoon View

Johannesburg RAND DAILY MAIL in English 19 Feb 82 p 10

[Text]

CSO: 4700/862

MAWU STRIKE ENDS MANAGEMENT PROMISES TO MEET DEMANDS

Johannesburg SOWETAN in English 19 Feb 82 p 2

[Article by Joshua Raboroko]

[Text] MORE than 300 workers - all members of the powerful Fosatu affiliated Metal and Allied Workers' Union who went on strike at two factories demanding pay increases, yesterday went back to work.

The workers all decided to go back in view of the temporary recognition agreement signed by the Mawu executive and mangements and also that nobody should be victimised when they resumed duties, according to union sources yesterday.

The two strikes were the latest in a series of strikes by black metal workers centring on demands for wage bargaining at plant rather than Industrial Council level.

At Dresser South Africa about 300 workers who had demanded a R1 increase per hour, decided to work after management agreed to meet their demands.

Mawu's Transvaal secretary, Mr Rodney Nwambda, said that the stoppage of work started on Monday and the union was forced to go into the matter following complaints from its members.

He said the management agreed to "temporarily" recognise the union by asking them to select a five-man committee from the workers' committee that would represent the interests of workers in the future.

Mawu's Natal Branch

organiser, Mr John Makhathini, said that at McKinnon Chain in Maritzburg about 90 union members were cleared from the factory on Monday.

They had demanded a wage increase and the management had insisted that wage bargaining took place only at Industrial Council level. After a deadlock was reached between management and the union, the union decided to contact the firm's American headquarters.

But, he said, the management yesterday decided to meet the demands of the workers and to pay them their full salaries regardless of the days they had been out on strike.

A spokesman for Fosatu said that union members earlier involved in strikes this week had all gone back to work.

It was vital to note that in all these strikes union recognition was in the pipeline.

CSO: 4700/861

EAST RAND DISTILLERS WORKERS STAGE STRIKE

Johannesburg SOWETAN in English 24 Feb 82 p 3

[Article by Charles Mogale]

[Text] ABOUT 600 WORKERS at Distillers Corporation in the East Rand yesterday went on strike, almost bringing production and distribution at the company to a standstill.

Tension hung over the company premises in Wadeville when, shortly after midday, the large throng of strikers filed out of the gates singing the African National Anthem and showing black power salutes. A note from management had asked them to go home "peacefully" and resume work this morning.

The workers downed tools in protest against the dismissal of three of their colleagues. When The SOWETAN visited the company yesterday, a spokesman for the workers said management was adamant in the "unfair" decision to fire the three. They said management had reached an agreement which required shop stewards to be consulted in the event of disputes with employees. The agreement, they said, had been ignored when the three were dismissed.

The spokesman said the three had been victimised for their trade union activities. "We had a meeting with management this morning and they told us head office in the Cape endorsed the decision to fire the three. It is regrettable that the head office should take this delicate decision without the other side of the story."

The company's administratative manager, Mr J J Vorster, said management was trying to find a solution to the problem. "We can't deny there is a dispute. We are busy trying to negotiate with the workers and hope to reach an agreement soon. Unfortunately I can't comment further," he said.

CSO: 4700/861

CARTOON PROTESTS RISE IN SALES TAX

Johannesburg SOWETAN in English 15 Feb 82 p 6

[Text]

CSO: 4700/861

CARTOON VIEW

Johannesburg DIE TRANSVALER in Afrikaans 24 Feb 82 p 8

[Text]

LOOK! IT FITS IN!

CSO: 4701/37

REPORTAGE ON SOWETO MAYOR'S EUROPEAN TRIP

Asks for Aid

Johannesburg SOWETAN in English 19 Feb 82 p 2

[Text] STRASBOURG (France) — David Thebehali, "mayor" of Soweto, called on the European Parliament here on Wednesday to support aid — not a boycott — of South Africa.

"A direct European contribution, but not the suspension of economic relations, can lead to change in South Africa — peaceful change without guns," said Mr Thebehali, who was invited here by four centre-right parliamentary groups.

The Soweto "mayor", who described himself as a partisan of dialogue and non-violence and a committed anti-Marxist, said it was necessary to prevent "a seizure of power by negative revolutionary forces."

"The situation in South Africa," he added, "compared to other Third World countries, is not bad." — AFP

Opposes Sanctions

Johannesburg SOWETAN in English 22 Feb 82 p 2

[Text] PARIS — Blacks will be the first to suffer if sanctions are imposed on South Africa, Soweto's "mayor" David Thebehali has told people here.

"Those who call for sanctions are helping white people," he said, warning that sanctions would mean black people losing their jobs and being unable to feed their families.

"Why do they want us to suffer first?" Mr Thebehali asked at a Press conference during his first trip to Paris. He said he was in Paris as part of a European tour aimed at educating people about the situation in South Africa.

"Sanctions are a topical issue in Europe to the extent that people believe that that is what the people there want. But boycotts will not bring about changes in South Africa. The opposite is true." He said economic expansion would bring changes in the country.

"If the economy expands then it will be able to include everyone regardless of the colour of their skin," he said. "Four million white people cannot supply all the skills needed to develop the South African economy," he commented.

Mr Thebehali also refuted suggestions that his township was a slum.

"We have no slums," he said. "I have travelled in some African countries. I know what slums are. We don't have people living in tins." He outlined the development of Soweto, with its schools and what he called the "largest hospital" in the southern hemisphere. He dismissed suggestions that Sowetans wanted political change as a top priority.

"The black person in Soweto wants a house, a job, education for his children and a better environment in which to live. And right down the line he will talk of political changes," he said. Those who called for sanctions "were completely out of line with the needs of South Africa now," he added.

While in France Mr Thebehali has met members of the European parliament in Strasbourg and French senators, and visited the Paris town hall to see Deputy Mayor Pierre Lepine.

Today he is to travel to Brussels and then The Netherlands.

The tour was organised by the European Union of Friends of South Africa. — Own Correspondent.

CSO: 4700/861

FRENCH POLICY TOWARD SOUTH AFRICA: BUSINESS AS USUAL

Capetown DIE BURGER in Afrikaans 9 Feb 82 p 11

[Text] Paris--Relations between France and South Africa have been ambiguous since socialist leader Francois Mitterrand became president in May of last year; however, it seems that "relations as usual" are being maintained.

France has made it clear that it wants to increase its coal imports from South Africa which now amounts to 9 million tons annually. These imports could be increased to 12 million tons since coal from Poland is no longer available.

President Mitterrand has demonstrated great courage in the thorny matter of collaboration with South Africa in the area of nuclear power.

Under the regime of President Valery Giscard d'Estaing France had already delivered one of the two nuclear power turbines for use in the Koeberg Power Plant in South Africa. However, at one point it had seemed as though the second turbine would not be delivered.

Despite threats by an anti-apartheid movement to stop the shipment of the turbine to South Africa the turbine was shipped through French channels. The movement was astonished over President Mitterrand's refusal to give ear to its demands...especailly after its ravings against the South African Government.

Arms Embargo

Thereafter, in an eight-point plan, the anti-apartheid movement addressed a serious appeal to Premier Pierre Mauroy for him to take a series of measures against the South African Government such as set down in the electoral campaign of the ruling Socialist Party.

The demands included an arms embargo, breaking all trade relations with South-West Africa (especially the purchase of uranium), the termination of the Koeberg contract, the suspension of French bank loans and investments in South Africa and the breaking of all sport ties with South Africa. There was also the demand that all the sanctions against South Africa be supported at international conferences.

Mauroy gave no reply to the appeal; however, after receiving a copy of the letter, four departments wrote back saying that they would "continue to do business with South Africa as usual." These were: the Department of Foreign Affairs, the Department of Foreign Trade, the Department of Defense and that of Youth and Sport.

Rubgy Ties

The Department of Foreign Trade emphasized the following: "We do not intend to close the French Trade Mission in Johannesburg."

Although the Department of Youth and Sport made it clear that it was opposing rugby ties with South Africa, France did allow South African golf and tennis players to take part in tournaments in France.

One week after the socialist-communist alliance attained an overwhelming majority in the elections for the National Assembly, Mr Philippe Decraene, a prominent French commentator on Africa, predicted that "France was going to increase its pressure on the South African Government." According to him Mitterrand would presumably deal "firmly" with South Africa in the course of talks with its government.

A Speaking Partner

Thus far there have been few outward signs of this increased pressure and, to be sure, on 12 December of last year President Mitterrand gave a hearty reception to the new French Ambassador to France, Mr Robert de Plooy.

President Mitterrand stated: "I am undertaking to be a sincere and honest speaking partner of South Africa. South Africa is a special country. It has enormous potential, sources and advantages. South Africa has a great role to play in Africa."

According to Mr Du Plooy he is not experiencing any problems in getting in touch with the Elysee President Palace and he added: "I am optimistic about our relations.

Three years ago old President Giscard suspended all discussions between his government officials and the South African Embassy in Paris by forcing the officials to refuse invitations to receptions or trips to South Africa. This restriction was suspended 9 months later and there are no signs that Mitterrand's government will switch over to such measures.

To the contrary Minister of Foreign Trade Michel Jobert has on various occasions told French business men and financiers: "I am in favor of negotiations with South Africa as in the past."

Bared Its Fangs

French companies have invested about 2.8 million rand in South Africa and next to the United States, West Germany, Britain and Japan have an average share of 5 percent of South African imports.

But this is not the true state of affairs. For political and diplomatic reasons France has bared its fangs to the South African Government be it to a small extent.

Mitterrand has allowed SWAPO and the ANC to open offices in Paris and according to reports both of these offices are being subsidized by the French Socialist Party. However, these offices are being controlled and it appears that these do not have access to France's television and radio networks.

Minister of Foreign Affairs Claude Cheysson, who has a way of letting his tongue run away with him, has branded South Africa as a country with "an entirely unbearable totalitarian government."

Cheysson addressed these words to the president several months before President Mitterrand's meeting with Ambassador Du Lpooy. It is therefore clear that the French leader does not share Cheysson's opinion of South Africa.

In general it appears that there are optimistic indications that relations between South Africa and France are improving.

Advantage

The French Communist Party, which is feared to be ready to support SWAPO and the ANC, suffered a disastrous defeat last year in the presidential and parliamentary elections when it lost 1 million votes (a fourth of its previous strength). The party's daily newspaper HUMANITE is having financial troubles and there is no money for independence movements in Africa.

The revolting chaotic events which took place last year in Black Africa were to the advantage of the stability in South Africa. Gradually attention is being given to South African Prime Minister P. W. Botha's continuous emphasis of the fact that South Africa is a bastion against Russian agression and this attention follows the recent events in Afghanistan and Poland.

7964
CSO: 4701/23

BRAZILIAN FACT FINDING MISSION VISITS SOUTH AFRICA

Capetown DIE BURGER in Afrikaans 13 Feb 82 pp 1-2

[Text] A Chinese proverb says that it is better to see something once than to read about it one hundred times. This is the reason why a group of Brazilian members of parliament are visiting South Africa for the first time.

This is how the leader of the group, Mr Angelino Rosa, expressed it yesterday in parliament at Capetown.

They are hoping that the visit and the true facts about South Africa, which they will be taking back with them to Brazil, will strengthen the friendship and economic ties between the two countries so that Brazil and South Africa can help each other. This is what Mr Rosa said.

Mr Rosa and his group of parliament members, who are on a 2-week visit in South Africa, are the guests of Mr Hannes du Toit, the speaker of parliament.

Gold Coin

On this occasion the group, consisting of representatives of the ruling PDS-Party and two Brazilian opposition leaders, was given honorary membership of parliament through a gift to each of its members of a necktie which may be worn only by members of parliament.

In turn Mr Du Toit received a special gift from Mr Rosa, a member of the PDS Party. This is a gold coin minted on the occasion of Brazil's 150th independence anniversary celebration. Through an interpreter Mr Rosa said that the visiting members of parliament were aware of South Africa's resolve to find a solution to its problems and of its continuing struggle against communism. They realize the desire of the government and of the country's inhabitants for bringing about the necessary internal changes.

However, evolution must take place "step by step" in order to forestall disillusionment among the inhabitants of the country.

International media is telling a lot of stories about South Africa in Brazil. For this reason the group of parlamentarians decided to make history and upon invitation came to South Africa as the first fact finding mission of its kind. Mr Rosa said that they want to form their own opinion on the country's actual situations.

They will be talking to all groups in order to ascertain the road of change which South Africa has chosen.

Mr Rosa went on to say that when they are back in Brazil they will relay the facts as they saw them in South Africa.

According to informed spokesmen the Brazilian delegation is especially interested in South Africa's coal industry and most of all in the SASOL [South African Coal, Oil and Gas Corporation] which it will be visiting.

Besides South Africa, Brazil has also felt the oil crisis quite seriously and is continuously looking for alternative sources of energy.

7964
CSO: 4701/29

PRETORIA'S INTERESTS IN KANGWANE ISSUE EXAMINED

Johannesburg RAND DAILY MAIL in English 15 Feb 82 p 9

[Article by Patrick Laurence: "Pretoria's Gambit To Capture the King"]

[Text] The Minister of Co-operation and Development meets KaNgwane leaders in Cape Town today for talks on the contentious issue of whether KaNgwane should be incorporated into Swaziland. PATRICK LAURENCE analyses the background...

KANGWANE, the strategically situated "homeland" of South Africa's 750 000 Swazis, occupies a unique position in the constellation of South Africa's black homelands. It is the only "homeland" to be denied self-government under Pretoria's ideology of separate development.

Even KwaNdebele, the geographically smaller homeland of the less numerous Ndebele, has been granted self-government, or, to be more precise, chapter two rights under the Homelands Constitution Act of 1971.

In April 1 last year, KwaNdebele was granted chapter two rights, which empower homeland governments to make laws in specified areas — education is a key example — instead of merely administering Pretoria's decisions.

But on April 3 a similar request for these rights from KaNgwane on behalf of South African-born Swazis was turned down.

Today, in spite of further negotiations and a resolution from the KaNgwane Legislative Assembly formally asking for self-government, KaNgwane is still without chapter two rights.

The reason is that Pretoria hopes to persuade KaNgwane's leaders to abandon their quest for self-government and to accept the incorporation of KaNgwane into the neighbouring Kingdom of Swaziland.

King Sobhuza, of Swaziland, has long laid claim to South African territory in his bid to restore the boundaries of the 19th century kingdom over which Swazi kings of old ruled.

But, in contrast to its rejection of land claims from Lesotho and Botswana, Pretoria has responded sympathetically to King Sobhuza's aim of restoring the ancient fiefdom of Swazi kings.

In a letter to Mr E J Mabuza, KaNgwane's Chief Executive Councillor last November, an explanation for this anomaly was offered by Dr Piet Koornhof, the Minister of Co-operation and Development.

"Prior to securing the sovereignty of his country, His Majesty King Sobhuza II formally notified the South Africa Government that representations for certain border adjustments with (South Africa) would be submitted following independence of Swaziland," Dr Koornhof wrote.

"In making representations, His Majesty was guided by aspirations of Swazi unity and a pursuit of the interests of a unified Swazi people.

"The South African Government could not but respond positively to these objectives and a commitment has since developed to seek a realistic resolution of the border issue.

"In this spirit, Mr Chief Councillor, I urge you to view the South African Government's inability to accede to your request for self-government."

From earlier exchanges between Pretoria and KaNgwane, there is no doubt that

"realistic resolution" of the frontier dispute is code language for the incorporation of KaNgwane into Swaziland.

According to an account given by Dr Koornhof to the KaNgwane Executive Council in June last year, the SA Government is "positively disposed towards the unification of KaNgwane and Swaziland" and gives it preference above the granting of self-government to KaNgwane.

Dr Koornhof's expositions, however, beg the question: While making clear Pretoria's preference for incorporation, they do not explain why Pretoria did not press for the incorporation of the Basotho "homeland" of Qwaqwa into Lesotho or the Batswana "homeland" of Bophuthatswana into Botswana.

Qwaqwa acquired chapter two rights in 1974. Bophuthatswana acquired them in 1974 and went to become an "independent homeland" in December 1977.

Perhaps Pretoria did not have the same aims for, or leverage over, Qwaqwa and Lesotho in 1974, and Bophuthatswana and Botswana in 1972, which it now has in regard to KaNgwane and Swaziland.

Pretoria has not spelled out its objectives in favouring "unification" between KaNgwane and Swaziland, but they can be deduced to some degree from the two leitmotifs of the P W Botha administration: The proposed "Constellation of Southern African States" and the evolving "Total Strategy" against the total onslaught.

When the Foreign Minister, Mr Pik Botha, first talked of the constellation in March 1979, he envisaged a constellation embracing up to 10 states south of the Zambesi. The inclusion of the BLS states — Botswana, Lesotho and Swaziland — was assumed.

Since then, however, all of South Africa's internationally recognised neighbouring states have made clear their opposition to the constellation as long as South Africa remains under white rule. South Africa wants to become the "kingpin of us all," declared President Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia.

But hopes dies hard. With Swaziland anxious to extend its boundaries and KaNgwane not yet in possession of chapter two rights, an opportunity presented itself to lure Swaziland into the constellation as a de facto member.

According to the Rand Daily Mail's information, Mr Botha is a strong proponent of "unification," which makes sense because his portfolio is entrusted with responsibility for establishing the constellation. He has held meetings with the "independent homelands" of Transkei, Bophuthatswana and Venda to that end.

Apart from drawing Swaziland into the constellation, Pretoria could insist that it accept all or most South African-born Swazi as its nationals as the price for gaining KaNgwane. Incorporation would have the same result as the granting of sovereignty to South Africa's independent homelands — loss of South African nationality for the blacks concerned.

As Mr Mabuza said in a recent speech: "Should we agree to be incorporated into Swaziland, 750 000 Swazis will become statutory foreigners in South Africa and liable to expatriation to the unified Swaziland at any time."

For him, there is no difference between incorporation and separate development-style independence

At the level of total strategy, KaNgwane could be used to bring Swaziland closer to South Africa and thereby to neutralise Swaziland as a conduit for African National Congress insurgents passing between Mozambique and South Africa.

The policy might be bringing rewards already. In the past few months there have been definite signs of a hardening attitude by Swaziland's rulers toward the ANC.

Relations between the two parties cooled to the extent that the ANC man in Swaziland, Mr Stanley Mazibela, was summoned to Lusaka for consultations with ANC leaders last December. Top ANC men were said to have made representations to the Swaziland Prime Minister, Prince Mabandla Dlamini, on the issue.

Success in luring Swaziland into the Pretoria-centred constellation and thereby neutering the ANC they could provide a groundplan for similar action in regard to, say, Qwaqwa and Lesotho. (Is South Africa's alleged support for the Lesotho Liberation Army an attempt to make Prime Minister Leabua Jonathan amenable to this aim or to replace him with a more malleable man?)

Meanwhile, however, tensions are rising in and over KaNgwane.

One clear sign was the resignation of Mr George Botha as Commissioner-General in protest over the incorporation policy. A former MP for Emerlo, Mr Botha also resigned from the National Party (NP).

His decision to quit is seen by knowledgable observers as but a straw in the wind of rising resistance in the NP, evidence that its platteland followers see plans to cede KaNgwane as evidence of surrender or oorgee rather than total strategy.

Mr Mabuza, who has an orator's silver tongue, is campaigning vigorously against incorporation. In hard-hitting speeches, he has accused South Africa of acting in concert with Swaziland politicians in a bid to give greater impetus to pro-unification forces among South Africa's Swazi's people.

Identifying the Swaziland politicians as Mr Mdedeni Tshabalala and Prince Msamfansibili, he has charged: "These politicians have not only made highly damaging and inflammatory Press statements ... they have fuelled the flames of suspicion and hate."

Among South Africa's Swazi, Mr Mabuza is opposed by his former lieutenant and Councillor for Community Affairs, Mr David Lukhele, who was once an adamant opponent of incorporation. He has since changed sides and champions his new cause with all the passion of an apostate.

In the background is the figure of 82-year-old King Sobhuza, who enjoys immense respect among Swazi on both sides of the border because he is the living symbol of the nation. Throughout his long life, his greatest ambition has been to win the restoration of lost Swazi lands.

As long as he is alive, the forces of unification, whatever their motives, can evoke his almost mystical name. His advanced age gives an explosive urgency to the dispute, as men try to use or abuse his name before death claims him.

CSO: 4700/862

STOCK EXCHANGE MILLIONAIRES LISTED

Johannesburg SUNDAY TIMES-BUSINESS TIMES in English 7 Feb 82 p 8

[Article by John Spira]

[Text] THE recent Business Times feature on South Africa's stock-exchange millionaires (January 24) evoked some astonishing responses.

Potential heirs requested telephone numbers with a view to staking claims to the estates of the millionaires listed, while one reader threatened legal action because, as a stock-exchange millionaire, he was not made mention of in the Business Times listing.

Most of the controversy stemmed from the fact that readers did not bother to cast their eye over the caveats spelt out in the article.

A weekly financial publication, no less, actually commented: "Harry Oppenheimer, Morrie Lubner, Basil Hersov, Clive Menell, Donny Gordon, Len Shawzin, Albert Wessels, Graham Beck and Natie Kirsh don't even rate."

The feature clearly stated that the Oppenheimers and other super-millionaires had not been included.

Many shareholders falling into this category (as well as those who do not) make a fetish of hiding their share-register identities via obscure nominee companies.

In the many cases where shareholders could not be identified, it was obviously impossible to include these people in the listing.

Thus, while it is well known that Donny Gordon, for example, has a large stake in the Liberty group, it was not possible to identify his shareholding from the share register.

Accordingly, the millionaires list (see table) contains only the values of the shareholdings of identifiable millionaires — millionaires identifiable from share registers.

It is also important to note (as Business Times did two weeks ago) that the value of the listed shares probably represents only a portion of the wealth of the shareholders in question.

Their other assets could add greatly to their overall "worth" — or only a little.

And the same applies to men like Morrie Lubner (Placor).

A further qualification is the possibility that an individual may hold shares in the same company in one or more different guises.

Thus, for example, while the Albert Wessels Trust holds a stake in Wesco — currently valued at slightly more than R1-million — it would not be unreasonable to assume that he holds rather more shares in Wesco through a nominee company.

The accompanying list of stock-exchange millionaires was compiled from the second edition of Robin McGregor's Who Owns Whom, which identifies shareholders of companies listed on the Johannesburg Stock Exchange down to a 1% holding of the issued ordinary share capital.

Who Owns Whom extracted its information at various times throughout 1981. Certain shareholdings are therefore out of date.

SHAREHOLDER	SHAREHOLDINGS	VALUE
		(R-m)
Bilven (Pty) (Bill Venter)	Altech	70,6
Sun Holdings (Pty) (Sol Kerzner)	S Sun	53,0
Rembrandt Trust (Pty) (Rupert Family)	TIB	43,0
Anton Rupert Trust
LLG Groep Beleggings (Louis Luyt)	Lancharn
LLG Landboubelange	Triomf	42,3
B Slome	Ellerines
B Slome (B Slome)	Tedelex	38,1
Slofam Holdings	Tedelex
Beare Family Holdings	Beares	28,7
A J Goldin	Clicks	25,8
Goldin Family Trust	Clicks
Ellerine Bros	Sinclair
Ellerine Bros	Fralex
Ellerine Bros	Lucem
Ellerine Bros	Barbican
Ellerine Bros	Simmer & Jack
Ellerine Bros	Samstel	16,8
Ellerine Bros	Buffcor
Ellerine Bros	Trumcor
Ellerine Bros	A & F
Eric Ellerine Trust	Ellerines
Sydney Ellerine Trust	Ellerines
Hepburn SA Inv Trust	HLH
R E J Hepburn	HLH	13,9
R M Hepburn	HLH
Hepburn Trust & R E J & R M Hepburn	Ind Inv
I Jacobson Holdings
Jacobson Cons Invs	T & I	13,8
H Jacobson Family Holdings
M Mann	Claude Neon
M Mann	Tweefontein	12,0
M Mann	Duiker
M Mann	Gallo
M Mann	Gubings
Colin Crookes Investments	Crookes
M F Crookes	Crookes	11,2
V J S Crookes	Crookes
P J M Crookes	Crookes
J A J Pickard	Picbel	10,1
Jan Pickard Ondernemings	Picbel
Raymond Ackerman (Pty)	Pick 'n Pay	10,1
C J Saunders	Tongaat
Est. late E G A Saunders	Tongaat	7,8
C J Saunders, Geedts & D W Strachan	Tongaat
L C Pouroulis	Modder	7,7
A Pouroulis	S Roodepoort

SHAREHOLDER	SHAREHOLDINGS	VALUE (R-m)
Carleo Enterprises	Putco	7,7
Joseph Jowell Holdings	Mobile	7,3
A Searll Inv Holdings	Seardel	6,7
A Searll	Seardel
Harold Kramer Holdings	Kanhym	6,5
R Weber	Omnia	5,9
D A Lurie	Lucem	5,7
William Joubert Snr Beleggings	Generec	4,8
A Jaffe Ind Holdings	Curfin	4,7
A Jaffe	Curfin
U M R Winkler	Omnia	4,6
Philip Silberman Holdings	Afcol	4,6
David Silberman Holdings	Afcol
C R Daly	Fralex	4,4
D H Daly	Fralex
Z Feitelson	Common Fund	4,3
Berzack Family	Berzack	4,1
Berzack Family	Bivec
R I F Investments (Rudi Frankel?)	Tiger Oats	3,6
Pearlman Finance Trust	Natven	3,4
B E McClevland	Sentrust	3,3
C M Harrison	Sentrust	3,2
P J Greenway	Sentrust	3,2
Simon Lakofski Trust	Pioneer Prop Fund	3,2
A Levi	Sentrust	3,1
K T Patel	Sentrust	3,1
R F Jenning	Sentrust	3,0
David Rapp	Libhold	3,0
R A Mia	Sentrust	2,9
L Katz	Metcash	2,8
L Katz	Consura
L Katz	Kimet
L Jaffee	Hesperus	2,6
C Kawalsky	Pioneer Prop Fund	2,5
L I Topol	Tedelex	2,4
P A L Barnett	Sterns	2,3
J L Barnett	Sterns
S F S Barnett	Sterns
S H Illman	Berzack	2,2
S H Illman	Bivec
D M Weston	HLH	2,2
D M Weston	Ind Inv
I Ellis	Grinaker	2,2
H Drusinky	Libhold	2,2
A Drusinky	Libhold
E M Groves	Sentrust	2,2
I Lurie	Pioneer Prop Fund	2,2
W T Marais	Omnia	1,9
Israel Lubner Holdings	Afcol	1,9
W A Bothwell	Toyota	1,8
Max Tucker & Son	Yorkor	1,8
D R Susman	Wooltru	1,8
N M Shaw	HLH

N M Shaw	Ind Inv	1,7
W & I Brittan Invs	Boumat	1,7
Morris Lubner Family Holdings	Placor	1,6
A Marney	Wooltru	1,6
S Green	Afgate	1,6
Mrs F Green	Afgate
H Press	Hesperus
H Press	Copi	1,5
H Press	Mobile
E Roche	Common Fund	1,5
T Bester	Bester	1,5
C W Reunert	R & Lenz	1,4
C H Boerstra	Fedfood	1,4
C B Perry	HLH	1,4
S J Wilson	E L Bateman	1,3
Morris Gillman	E T Cons	1,3
Richard Lake Gswith	T W Beckett	1,3
O C Buchel	Boumat	1,3
Louis Handler Trust	Quincor	1,3
H Back Family Holdings	B & S	1,3
Albert Wessells Trust	Wesco	1,3
Lilian Mason Holdings	Cullinan	1,2
Countess Manon Lovelace	Frasers	1,1
H A J Richter	Theron	1,1
H A McNeil	Simmer & Jack	1,1
H A McNeil	Samstel
I Kaye	SA Druggists	1,1
D Glenton	Cullinan	1,1
Ivan Finger Family Inv	Danperk	1,1
Dan Perkins Inv	Danperk	1,1
Rudick Family Holdings	Hepworths	1,1
J L Leech	Foschini	1,0
R Swindler	Wooltru	1,0
H Rose	Wooltru	1,0
A G Isabelle	Lucern	1,0
A R Jamieson	Group 5	1,0
M A Lewis	Hosken	1,0
J A Schlesinger	Nedequity	1,0
M C Scott	R & Lenz	1,0

CSO: 4700/863

POSSIBILITY OF GOLD PACT WITH SOVIETS EXPLORED

Johannesburg SUNDAY TIMES-BUSINESS TIMES in English 7 Feb 82 p 1

[Article by Stephen Orpen: "New Evidence Supports Once 'Unthinkable' Scenario"]

[Text] RUSSIA is said to have entered a secret agreement to sell gold to South Africa.

Previously largely speculation, this is the message of a new report in one of the world's most respected private-circulation letters on international affairs.

Pretoria denied the agreement on Friday — advancing cogent arguments to support its case.

But the possibility remains that there may at least be a new "understanding" between the world's two greatest gold producers, both faced with a pressing need to raise money to balance their books.

The sales are said to be part of a "desperate" effort by Moscow to raise enough money to pay for imports of grain, largely from the US, to offset the largest-ever shortfall in the USSR's own grain crop.

The report says top-ranking Western businessmen who have been visiting Moscow estimate the total sales to South Africa so far could be worth as much as $2 000-million (about the same in rands).

Moscow has also been selling through Zurich, London, Tokyo, and even through direct deals with Middle East oil-producing countries and the Italian jewellery industry, which dominates the jewellery fabrication business, says the report.

South Africa, likewise, has adopted a "broader-based" marketing policy to reduce the growing drain on the trade account (including gold) on its balance of payments.

Shattered by the misbehaving gold price and sharp downward arc in the export-import equation, the trade balance has already swung by an awesome R16 000-million since 1980 from a glittering surplus of some R5 000-million to a deficit of more than R4 000-million last year, with worse expected this year.

South African Government sources explain: "Our December returns showed about R3 000-million in gold and some R500-million in foreign exchange and other assets.

"Faced with a widening deficit on the balance of payments, would it not be extraordinary for us to be effectively swelling imports and greatly increasing our deficit by buying gold from the Russians, even if we were able to deal with them?"

That makes sense.

Equally plausible, however, are the comments of London, Zurich and South African gold experts questioned by Business Times.

They stress that "necessity is the mother of invention", and that both SA and Russia face similar disaster should the bottom drop out of the gold market just when a much higher price for the metal is most needed.

In Zurich, the idea of a simplistic agreement for SA to buy Russian gold is considered out of the question.

But as two gold analysts there explain: "That does not mean there is not an understandable collusion arranged, of course, through third and fourth parties.

"It would be highly surprising if, through such parties, there was not a new set of fluid arrangements under which the two major gold producers are avoiding any action which they can devise which might further depress the metal's price."

A London source comments: "It would clearly be the height of foolishness for Russia to be offering large parcels of gold in the same markets as South Africa at the same time.

"In diamonds, we have seen how De Beers, through its world selling force and market stabiliser, the Central Selling Organisation, has been able to secure co-operation from the Russians, overriding any question of conflicting ideologies, or affections, and whatever is said about it publicly.

"There is no reason why the same cannot apply in the gold business when pressing mutual, yet also exclusive, national economic interests are at stake.

"Geopolitically, it also makes sense in terms of world stability."

CSO: 4700/863

SOUTH AFRICA APPREHENSIVE OVER ROMANIAN MAIZE BARTER

Capetown DIE BURGER in Afrikaans 11 Feb 82 pp 1-2

[Text] The possibility of exporting a portion of South Africa's maize surplus to Romania is causing a stir in agricultural and political circles.

This is being described as an extremely thorny situation which could have far-reaching consequences for South African agriculture.

NAMPO, the maize producers organization, had stipulated the transaction in an effort to move several million tons of surplus maize. However, Romania does not have the hard cash to pay for this.

In the meantime a new contract has been concluded with the Republic of China for the export there of 1.8 million tons of maize over the following 3 years.

Romania, one of the countries behind the iron curtain, wishes to even out the account with fertilizer and agricultural implements.

The price at which the fertilizer could be delivered to South Africa is believed to compare very favorably with the local fertilizer prices.

Although maize industry circles are indicating that this is an advantageous transaction, in agricultural and other circles there is serious concern, because of the far-reaching effects that this could have in South Africa.

Apprehension

There is apprehension that the local fertilizer industry could be hurt through the importation of so-called inexpensive fertilizer and the consequences that such an action would have on the long run. This could cause South Africa to become dependent on a very dubious and possibly unreliable supplier of a necessary commodity for agriculture.

Moreover, objections had been raised earlier as this might mean that the maize industry would be expected to subsidize the fertilizer industry through higher fertilizer prices, while fertilizer could be imported cheaper from abroad.

The maize industry, as is the fertilizer industry, is subject to controls.

It is expected that the government will be working with this matter with great caution in considering a permit for the importation of fertilizer in the event that there is agreement in favor of the transaction.

At best, a permit would be issued under conditions in which the quantity of fertilizer coming into the country, as well as its contents, are stipulated.

As early as this week a large group of representatives of the maize industry had discussions with Minister of Industry, Trade and Tourism Dawie de Villiers and with Minister of Agriculture Piet du Plessis. A decision is awaited before the end of the week.

Dr De Villiers did not wish to make any comments on the intended transaction, but he said that it is not the government which conducts trade, but the private sector.

It is the government's policy to enable the private sector as much as possible to conduct trade which will be to the advantage of South Africa. There are trade agreements with many countries.

However, with respect to any transaction the government has a responsibility to see to it that agriculture's supplying ability is not endangered in the long run.

7964
CSO: 4701/22

OBJECTIVITY IN REPORTING EXAMINED

Johannesburg RAND DAILY MAIL in English 22 Feb 82 p 9

[Article by James McClurg: "Are Newspapers in SA Objective?"]

[Text] AS so often happens in SABC-TV programmes of this kind, the Midweek discussion on the Steyn Report ended with all the main issues hanging in the air. One I would particularly like to have seen brought down to earth was the question of objectivity.

Can South African newspapers claim that their reporting is objective? Yes, said one or two of the editors of English-language newspapers. No, said Die Vaderland's Harald Pakendorf, because the people who work for them see things from different points of view according to their convictions and outlook.

Mr Pakendorf has my vote.

It would, of course, be difficult for the editor of an Afrikaans newspaper to give any other answer. All these newspapers, on their own avowal, support the National Party. Some, in fact, are official organs of the party. For them to claim that they are objective would be a contradiction in terms and a logical absurdity.

But are such claims much more valid when they come from newspapers that are consistently anti-Government and, in effect, pro-PFP?

I do not dispute the editors' statement that their reporters' training includes repeated injunctions to check their facts, be fair and, in particular, "get the other side of the story". But to be objective in the dictionary sense of "free from personal prejudices or feelings" verges on the impossible.

Which facts a reporter sees as primary and which as secondary — "the other side of the story" — will in the first place be determined by his temperament, education and social background. Beyond that, he will inevitably be influenced by his working environment and, in the long run, by the policies of the newspaper he serves.

This does not mean that he will be indoctrinated in those policies. I can confirm that on SAAN newspapers a reporter's personal political views are regarded as his own business provided he does his job properly.

But the policies will certainly seep into his consciousness and help to condition the way he approaches any assignment in which facts need to be assessed and evaluated.

If, for instance, a reporter's newspaper supports the Government, he will tend to accept statements from official quarters, such as the police, on their face value — after which he may well seek out the "other side".

But if his newspaper is anti-Government, he will view such statements with caution, if not scepticism. Sometimes he will look elsewhere for information that could form the main thrust of his story. A perfectly honest procedure, but is it objective?

Anyone who doubts all this need only compare the reports and headlines in the main Afrikaans and English-language newspapers at the height of the Aggett affair or during one of the recurrent clashes between squatters and police.

To many observers, this dichotomy in the Press damages its credibility. True, Press partisanship is often excessive — especially in the news columns, where readers search for facts rather than opinions.

It is regrettable, too, that the main cleavage runs along the dividing line between the two languages in which the newspapers are published.

Yet if public opinion is to mean anything at all in our society, it is essential that newspapers should reflect contrasting points of view — and reflect them vigorously.

The British Press Council, I believe, went to the heart of the matter when it declared that "the freedom of the Press includes the freedom to be partisan" and that "a newspaper is entitled to make itself an instrument of propaganda provided it does not misrepresent the facts and does not, by omission to report, distort the truth of that which is reported."

Is this a licence for what has come to be called "committed journalism" — the doctrine that all journalists are propagandists anyway and it is their duty to present everything in terms of their political convictions? By no means.

To recognise that objectivity in the absolute sense is unattainable is not to discard accuracy, truthfulness, fairness and balance. These remain the primary rules of the craft. Journalism that ignores them is bad journalism, whoever practises it.

□□□

THE SABC's handling of the projected maize-for-fertiliser barter deal between South Africa and Rumania is an interesting example of the "not in front of the children" approach to news.

The deal itself has been fully enough reported and even briefly debated on TV. But the name of the country involved was as rigorously suppressed as if it had been an obscenity.

The closest an SABC-TV commentator could bring himself to naming it was to call it "a certain country behind the Iron Curtain". Meanwhile, of course, Rumania was being freely named in the Press.

The iron hand of the Department of Foreign Affairs?

CSO: 4700/862

BRIEFS

INVITED TO ITALY--Mrs Winnie Mandela, wife of the imprisoned ANC leader, Nelson Mandela, has been invited to a conference in Rome, Italy, this week by the Italian National Committee of Solidarity with the People of Southern Africa. There appears to be little hope that she will be allowed to go. [Text] [Johannesburg SOWETAN in English 24 Feb 82 p 6]

SECOND REFUGEE 'SEIZED'--Another South African refugee is believed to have been kidnapped from Botswana in the past few weeks and brought to South Africa. The refugee, Miss Joyce Dipale, who is now married to another refugee, Mr Rolla Masinga, skipped the country in 1979 after being released from more than 16 months of detention under Section Six of the Terrorism Act. The South African Police, although not directly confirming the kidnap, told THE SOWETAN that Miss Dipale was not being held in terms of security legislation in South Africa. But, the police said, "a person with a similar name is, however, assisting the police in the investigation of alleged offences, and offensive weapons have already been discovered". The police said the matter was sub judice and that they could not disclose the quantity of the "offensive" weapons discovered nor say when and where the weapons had been discovered. [Excerpt] [Willie Bokala] [Johannesburg SOWETAN in English 22 Feb 82 p 1]

BANNING ORDERS LIFTED--The Department of Justice yesterday released a list of the names of the 12 people whose banning orders were relazed by the Government earlier this month. They are A A Aderem, Observatory, Cape Town whose order was to have expired on March 31, 1982 (banning expiry dates are given after the names); M M Mpumlwana, East London, December 31, 1983; N S Mpumlwana, East London, April 30, 1982; M M Dyani, East London, December 31, 1983; P Tshume, Port Elizabeth, January 31, 1983; D D Queque, New Brighton, January 31, 1983; E Malgas, New Brighton, April 30, 1982; M Ngubeni, Upington, September 30, 1982; H Phungula, Umlazi, March 31, 1984; J E Mathews, Johannesburg, December 31, 1982. The other two are: Mr David Adler, of Parktown North, Johannesburg, whose banning order was due to expire on February 29 next year, and Mr Sedupe "Rams" Ramokgopa, of Orlando West, Johannesburg, whose order was due to expire on December 31 next year. [Text] [Johannesburg SOWETAN in English 25 Feb 82 p 3]

STEYN COMMISSION'S 'PLAGIARISM'--Dr Hermann Giliomee, co-author of the book "The rise and crisis of Afrikaner power", has no intention of taking action against the Steyn Commission, which has been accused in Parliament of plagiarism and possible contravention of copyright law. Dr Dave Dalling, PFP spokesman on media matters, said during the Steyn report debate the sections from the book--dealing with the role of the Afrikaans press as Nationalist supporters and their failure to report adequately on black aspirations--had been taken directly from the book without acknowledgement to the authors or mention of the book in the report's bibliography. He added that, apart from an apparent infringement of the Copyright Act, the commission's action reflected on its credibility. "I do not intend taking any action. I don't know copyright law very well, but I have not suffered any loss. Instead, I hope the Steyn report will help to sell more copies of the book." [Text] [Johannesburg RAND DAILY MAIL in English 17 Feb 82 p 1]

PARITY FOR TRANSPORT WORKERS--The South African minister of transport affairs, Mr Hendrick Schoeman, says parity between black and white workers in the transport services will be reached within 2-3 years. At a news conference in Capetown before the delivery of his budget speech in Parliament, he said equal pay for equal work could not be realized in one step. It was an expensive business. Agreement had been reached with the unions concerned that white workers would receive a 15-percent salary increase, while the wages of blacks would go up by 17.5 percent this year. He said this was part of the department's program to end the wage gap between black and white workers. [Excerpt] [LD031134 Johannesburg International Service in English 1100 GMT 3 Mar 82]

CSO: 4700/845

BRIEFS

HIJACKED AIRCRAFT RETURNED--Seventy-one hostages and five crew members of Air Tanzania Boeing-737, hijacked last Friday arrived in Dar es Salaam this morning from London to a heroic welcome from city residents. On arrival the ex-hostages were welcomed by the prime minister, Ndugu Cleopa Msuya, the foreign minister, Ndugu Salim Ahmad Salim, the minister for transport and communication and Ndugu John Malecela. [as heard] Others were the mayor of Dar es Salaam, Ndugu Ramadhani Nyamka and various high-ranking party and government officials, including thousands of Dar es Salaam residents. Welcoming the hostages, the prime minister, Ndugu Msuya, hailed Tanzanians for their calmness during the whole hostage drama and once again congratulated the British Government for its effort to rescue the hijacked plane. Ndugu Msuya said that stern measures will be taken against the five hijackers. The leader of the freed hostages, Ndugu (Hatib Hasan Hatib), read a message of thanks to the Tanzania and British governments for their efforts to rescue [as heard] the release of the hostages and the plane by the hijackers. The message condemned the bandits' action and said that it was aimed at violating the country's political ideology. They asked the Air Tanzania Corporation to increase security measures at airports in order to avoid the recurrence of such actions. [Text] [EA041422 Dar es Salaam in English to East Africa 1000 GMT 4 Mar 82]

PRESIDENT ON HIJACKING, OIL RESERVES--President Nyerere has said that the recent discovery of arms caches in Zimbabwe was not the most critical crisis that country has gone through since it got independance in 1980. Mwalimu said the most dangerous period was when there were three armies belonging to ZANU, ZAPU and Ian Smith soon after independence. Mwalimu, who was speaking in a question and answer session with Pemba, and north and south regional leaders, said the danger is past and now Zimbabwe has a united army and there are no signs of its disintegration. Answering a question on whether the hijackers of an Air Tanzania plane last Friday would be extracted [as heard] by Britain, Mwalimu said the hijackers would be tried according to the British law which forbids hijacking. He said these hijackers would be brought back home only after consulting with the British Government and local lawyers. Aked whether Tanzania has any proven oil reserve, Mwalimu said research conducted so far had revealed rock formations which normally have oil. He however said, so far only gas had been discovered at Songo Songo near Kilwa on the mainland and that research was continuing. [Excerpts] [EA031312 Dar es Salaam in English to East Central and Southern Africa 0400 GMT 3 Mar 82]

CSO: 4700/856

CHINESE EXPERTS AID RICE FARM NEAR LIRA

Kampala UGANDA TIMES in English 22 Feb 82 p 1

[Article by Perez Owori]

[Text] Olweny Swamp in Lira District has been selected as site for fully mechanised rice scheme with 600 to 700 hectares of cultivated land.

When construction work is completed, this will become Uganda's third largest farm, after Kibimba in Iganga and Doho in Tororo Districts.

The site was selected by the Ministry of Agriculture and Forestry in consultation with the Chinese expert group responsible for the feasibility study of the project.

The project was jointly formulated by the Uganda government and the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), as one of the major plans under this country's rice development programme.

The swamp is located adjacent to Lake Kwania, with a total area of 10,000 acres of arable land, of which 8,000 acres can be developed into irrigated rice production.

Uganda is the execution agency of this UNDP financed project whose purpose is to help her make better use of rich water and land resources.

In an exclusive interview in Kampala over the weekend, the leader of the Chinese experts, Mr Yang Jin Hui, told "Uganda Times:" "We will leave for Lira soon to carry out a detailed survey of the swamp. The final report of the feasibility study will be submitted within six months, as stipulated in the project document."

He said the government of the People's Republic of China was participating in the project with the objective of promoting technical cooperation among developing countries.

The Chinese team, organised by China National Complete Plant Export Corporation, includes four senior engineers, one economist, one architect and a sociologist.

Mr Yang explained that his team had during pre-selection site visits, toured six districts, in Eastern, Northern and Western Uganda.

"Since Olweny Swamp is close to Lake Kwania, there is also potential for the development of fisheries," he noted.

Communication for the swamp is good. There are roads crossing both the northern and southern parts of it, waterway transport is possible at Kachung and a railway line is nearby.

These favourable conditions have made Olweny Swamp a promising place of the development of a new diversified economic region with rice production as its main activity.

It is estimated that when in full operation, the total production of the scheme would be 3,000 tonnes while the potential of rice production of the whole swamp would be 14,000 tonnes per annum.

CSO: 4700/871

FURTHER REPORTAGE ON ISSUANCE OF NEW BANK NOTES

Kampala UGANDA TIMES in English 17 Feb 82 p 1

[Article by Paul Nsereko]

[Text] The Bank of Uganda, under powers vested in it by Sections 14 and 16 of the Bank of Uganda Act 1966, will issue new currency notes from March 1, 1982.

A Statutory Instrument to the effect of the new issue of currency notes, in the denominations of 5/-, 10/-, 20/, 50/- and 100/- has been issued by the Bank, prescribing that the new notes will circulate alongside the present issue in circulation, and that the two types of currency notes will be exchangeable at their face value.

The acting General Manager of the Bank, Mr B. M. Kume, said the public should note that the introduction of the new currency notes did not mean currency exchange or conversion.

"The two types of currency notes--the old and new--will be exchangeable at their face values; and will be considered by the Bank of Uganda as legal tender at their face value," Mr Kume said.

Individual denominations shall easily be identified by size, dominant colours and vignettes appearing on the back; 5/- will be of D/green colour and vignette subject is "harvesting coffee beans" 10/- will be purple with an "animal against the background of Murchison Falls" 20/- will be red brown and the vignette subject is the Bank of Uganda Building;" 50/- will be dark brown and the vignette subject will be "Owen Falls Dam;" and, 100/- will have a maroon colour with "Lake Bunyonyi in Western Uganda."

The other common features to all five denominations shall remain, viz: Fronts; the dominant features is Uganda's national Coat of Arms superimposed on the country's outline and located on the left side of the notes. The Coat of Arms of the Bank of Uganda is to be seen in the bottom right corner of each note.

The value of the note in words is to be found on every note in English and Swahili together with the title "Bank of Uganda", the statement that the note is legal tender for the amount in question, and the signatures of the Bank's governor and Secretary who have signed the notes for the Bank of Uganda.

Numerals indicating the notes value appear in all four corners of the design with the exception of the 10/-.

The background to the design includes a rainbow--like arc-forming frame to the central vignette, flanked by the distinctive shields found on the front design.

Mr Kume explained that all district commissioners should collect posters depicting designs of the new currency from the nearest Currency Offices for distribution to counties and sub-counties in the respective areas.

CSO: 4700/871

BRIEFS

POLICE DENY ARRESTING STUDENTS--Kampala, February 25--Makerere University authorities today denied reports that Government troops yesterday raided the university campus here and took away more than 30 students. University Vice-Chancellor Professor Asavia Wandira said that police, not soldiers, went to the University yesterday and "interviewed" about 20 students. The students were taken away by police but were all returned to the University "within just a matter of hours", the Vice-Chancellor said. "None of them is in custody. They all slept at the University in their respective halls of residence", Professor Wandira added. The Ugandan authorities have given no explanation for the incident, which went unreported in the local media. [Text]

CSO: 4700/868

TIENTARABOUM DEPLORES MANNER OF SDAR ADMISSION

AB281045 Paris AFP in French 1358 GMT 27 Feb 82

[Text] Ouagadougou, 27 Feb (AFP)--Upper Volta "deplores the way in which the SDAR [Saharan Democratic Arab Republic] was admitted to the meeting of the OAU Council of Ministers in Addis Ababa" because that meeting is "a budgetary meeting and does not have the right to act on the SDAR issue, which is a political one," said Lt Col Felix Tientaraboum, the Upper Voltan minister of foreign affairs, on Friday.

The Upper Voltan foreign minister, who was due to leave Ouagadougou on Saturday for Addis Ababa to join the Upper Voltan delegation at the 38th session of the OAU Council of Ministers meeting, recalled that out of 50 countries, only 15 were represented by their foreign ministers.

On the other hand "in 1981 the problem was placed in the hands of a commission charged with the organization and implementation of the recommendations of the heads of state on a referendum in Western Sahara," he went on to say, adding "we have not been informed of the dissolution of the commission," meaning that the procedure has not been completed and it is up to the heads of state to decide upon the admission of the SDAR.

"In addition, we contest the presence at the meeting of the SDAR," Lieutenant Colonel Tientaraboum repeated. "My delegation left for Addis Ababa to deal with a precise agenda. It will participate in the examination of the proposed agenda but it will not participate in the examination of any other issue."

Colonel Tientaraboum added that he did not understand what led the OAU secretary general to make such a decision. He could have made it in Freetown in February 1981 when a majority of 26 countries agreed to admit the SDAR, he said.

"The unity of the OAU is threatened, but our political leaders are wise enough to preserve this unity which I sincerely hope for," the minister concluded.

CSO: 4719/600

BRIEFS

ELECTIONS 5 SEPTEMBER--Legislative elections for Zaire have been scheduled for 5 September according to the ordinance-law signed by the president of the Zairian Republic and made public on 25 February. [Excerpt] [Paris LE MONDE in French 2 Mar 82 p 5]

BELGIAN AID--Belgium has given Zaire 75 million Belgian francs to develop an automatic telephone network in the country. [Excerpt] [AB030720 Kinshasa Domestic Service in French 0600 GMT 3 Mar 82]

LEGISLATIVE ELECTIONS 5 SEPTEMBER--Kinshasa, 26 Feb (AFP)--Under the terms of an ordinance signed by the president of the Republic of Zaire and published on Thursday, legislative elections have been fixed for 5 September. Candidature for members of Parliament, which will be submitted from 17 May to 6 June, will be examined by the Central Committee of the MPR (the sole ruling party) from 12 July to 9 August first after passing through the Zonal People's Committee and the MPR Subregional Committee. According to the provisions of the law, the people's commissioners (parliamentarians) as well as members of the urban zonal councils and those of the community councils will be elected by secret ballot, by a majority of votes. The president signed two additional ordinances on Thursday, one on the political and administrative organization in Zaire, and the other defining the statutes of the city of Kinshasa, the capital. At the level of the composition of the Regional Committee of the MPR, the law introduces an innovation: The assistants to the regional chariman of the MPR and regional governor (governor of the city in the case of Kinshasa) are deputy governors (one for the region and two for the capital) and no longer regional or urban commissioners. [Text] [AB261306 Paris AFP in French 1110 GMT 26 Feb 82]

RELATIONS WITH CAR IMPROVING--Kinshasa, 25 Feb (AZAP)--Relations between the CAR and Zaire are becoming stronger everyday as evidenced by the warm message of friendship and brotherhood from President Andre Kolingba to his Zairian counterpart, Citizen Mobutu Sese Seko. This message was transmitted to the leader on Thursday at the Tshatshi camp by the secretary of state for sports and youth of the CAR Government, Capt Gaston Goumbor. After the audience, Mr Goumbor noted that frequent contacts between Generals Mobutu and Kolingba help to strengthen cooperation relations between their peoples. In reply to a question on CAR domestic policy, the secretary of state indicated that Ange Patasse is free to return to his country in accordance with the wish he expressed in Paris where he lives. The CAR official, however, indicated that Mr Patasse would have to comply with the laws in force in his country which include, in particular, the suspension of political activities in the CAR. [Text] [AB261456 Kinshasa AZAP in French 1250 GMT 26 Feb 82]

DEBT REPAYMENT SAID DOUBTFUL--The Banque du Zaire has announced that the country's ability to meet IMF debt repayment schedules is "in doubt". The country is already about $90m. in arrears. The IMF are currently managing their second largest African programme in Zaire, for 912m. Special Drawing Rights (£560m.) over two years starting last June. Zaire's external debt (which was rescheduled last summer by the Paris Club of creditors) stood in mid-1981 at £2,400m. The country has already drawn 175m. SDRs of the 912m. extended by the IMF under its extended fund facility. The Banque du Zaire said the difficulties were because of low prices for copper and cobalt, which together account for nearly 70 per cent of export earnings. The forecast for 1981 export receipts was $1,900m., but in fact only reached an officially estimated $1,500m. Debt service payments amounted last year to about 27 per cent of export revenue. [Text] [London WEST AFRICA in English No 3368, 22 Feb 82 p 540]

CSO: 4700/868

BRIEFS

ZAMBIA, ZAIRE BORDER DISPUTE--Lusaka, 3 Mar (AFP)--The Zambia-Zaire Regional Permanent Commission is to meet in the Kitwe on the copperbelt tomorrow in an attempt to quell border skirmishes which have strained relations between the two neighbouring states. The meeting will be between Zaire's Shaba Province governor, Mandungu Bula Nyati, and the member for the copperbelt on the Central Committee of Zambia's ruling United National Independence Party, Alex Shapi. On Monday Zambian and Zairean troops exchanged fire at the border post of Sakania, a Zambian bus and its passengers and crew was hijacked to Zaire and seven Zambian nationals were abducted. It was learnt today that the bus was abandoned by the Zairean soldiers and has been retrieved by Zambian authorities. The situation at Sakania has returned to normal, reports said. Zairean Ambassador to Zambia Colonel Efomi Aonga said here today that the border problems arose from the new stiff visa regulations introduced by Zambia against non-Commonwealth visitors to the country. The regulations were enacted in order to counter emerald smuggling. [Text] [AB031340 Paris AFP in English 1300 GMT 3 Mar 82]

CSO: 4700/856 END

JPRS 80360

19 March 1982

Sub-Saharan Africa Report

No. 2591

FBIS FOREIGN BROADCAST INFORMATION SERVICE

NOTE

JPRS publications contain information primarily from foreign newspapers, periodicals and books, but also from news agency transmissions and broadcasts. Materials from foreign-language sources are translated; those from English-language sources are transcribed or reprinted, with the original phrasing and other characteristics retained.

Headlines, editorial reports, and material enclosed in brackets [] are supplied by JPRS. Processing indicators such as [Text] or [Excerpt] in the first line of each item, or following the last line of a brief, indicate how the original information was processed. Where no processing indicator is given, the information was summarized or extracted.

Unfamiliar names rendered phonetically or transliterated are enclosed in parentheses. Words or names preceded by a question mark and enclosed in parentheses were not clear in the original but have been supplied as appropriate in context. Other unattributed parenthetical notes within the body of an item originate with the source. Times within items are as given by source.

The contents of this publication in no way represent the policies, views or attitudes of the U.S. Government.

PROCUREMENT OF PUBLICATIONS

JPRS publications may be ordered from the National Technical Information Service, Springfield, Virginia 22161. In ordering, it is recommended that the JPRS number, title, date and author, if applicable, of publication be cited.

Current JPRS publications are announced in Government Reports Announcements issued semi-monthly by the National Technical Information Service, and are listed in the Monthly Catalog of U.S. Government Publications issued by the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402.

Correspondence pertaining to matters other than procurement may be addressed to Joint Publications Research Service, 1000 North Glebe Road, Arlington, Virginia 22201.

JPRS 80360

19 March 1982

SUB-SAHARAN AFRICA REPORT

No. 2591

CONTENTS

ANGOLA

Critical Situation Seen in Benguela Textile Plant
(JORNAL DE ANGOLA, 13 Feb 82) 1

New Boeing 737 Purchased by TAAG
(JORNAL DE ANGOLA, 14 Feb 82) 2

Briefs
International Socialist Delegation 4
Status of Grantees Defined 4
Construction Official to Cuba 4

CENTRAL AFRICAN REPUBLIC

Briefs
Budget Shows Deficit 5
Penne Discusses French Aid 5

ETHIOPIA

Secret Document Outlines Plan To Eradicate Religion
(HEEGAN, 12 Feb 82) 6

GABON

French IGN Undertaking Mapping Project
(Neltoh; L'UNION, 9 Feb 82) 9

IVORY COAST

Growth of Palm Oil Industry Described
(FRATERNITE MATIN, 16 Feb 82) 11

New Plan Inaugurated
Meeting Fat Requirements
Industry Generates Jobs

MAURITIUS

Comments on Government Move To Restrict Libyan Influence
(THE NATION, 2, 3 Feb 82) 13

Support by MMM
CAM on Government Attitude

Government Acts To Curtail Libyan Activities
(L'EXPRESS, various dates) 15

Harsh Warning to Libya
Peeroo Condemns Anti-Libyan Bulletin

Article Notes Disagreement on Libya, 'Comoran-Libyan Relations'
(LE NOUVEAU MILITANT, 23 Jan 82) 18

Opposition Leader Would Allow Free Press, Accommodate Private Sector
(Aneerood Jugnauth Interview; LE MAURICIEN, 1 Feb 82) ... 19

PSM Hits Postponement of Village Elections
(LE NOUVEAU MILITANT, 1 Feb 82) 26

De L'Estrac Reports on Success of 'Diplomatic' Trip
(LE MAURICIEN, 1 Feb 82) 28

Japan Awaits Election Results Before Granting Aid
(L'EXPRESS, various dates) 30

Fishing Port To Be Exception
Japan To Finance Fishing Port

Briefs
PSM Dissidents Join PIM 32
Central Islamic Organization Established 32
Seychellois Fish Deal 32

MOZAMBIQUE

Reportage on NRM Attack on Cheringoma in Sofala
(NOTICIAS, 12 Feb 82) 33

Italian Assistance in Agricultural Studies Planned
(NOTICIAS, 12 Feb 82) 35

Cultural, Artistic Activities Suggested for Free Time
(NOTICIAS, 8 Feb 82) 36

Briefs
Maputo Blackout 38
OJM Admission Reorganized 38

NIGER

Results of Meeting of Command Cadres Noted
(LE SAHEL, 13 Jan 82) 39

REUNION

Paper Reports on Upcoming Elections
(Editorial; TEMOIGNAGES, 27 Jan 82) 41

FJAR Issues Communique on Development, Elections
(TEMOIGNAGES, 27 Jan 82) 43

SENEGAMBIA

New PDS Deputy Resigns From Party
(Moustapha Mbodj; LE SOLEIL, 18 Jan 82) 44

SEYCHELLES

Cooperation Agreement With Cuba Signed
(NATION, 12 Feb 82) 46

SOMALIA

President Siad Speaks on Justice Day
(HEEGAN, 19 Feb 82) 47

President Siad Receives French Envoy
(HEEGAN, 12 Feb 82) 49

Information Minister Leaves for Kuwait
(HEEGAN, 19 Feb 82) 51

Minister Returns From Pan-Arab Meeting
(HEEGAN, 19 Feb 82) 52

Defense Ministry Denounces Soviet, Ethiopian Propaganda
(HEEGAN, 19 Feb 82) 53

Arab League Chief Concludes Visit to Somalia
(HEEGAN, 12 Feb 82) 54

Navy Celebrates Anniversary of Founding
(HEEGAN, 12 Feb 82) 55

Energy, Environmental Management Seminar Closes
(HEEGAN, 19 Feb 82) 56

Call for Expansion of Mass Media
(Mohamed RoblehNoor; HEEGAN, 12 Feb 82) 59

Reuters Is Upbraided for Swallowing Ethiopian Propaganda
(Editorial; HEEGAN, 19 Feb 82) 61

SOUTH AFRICA

Malan Discusses Increase in Terrorist Activity
(DIE BURGER, 23 Feb 82) 63

NP Controversy on Role of Coloreds
(DIE BURGER, various dates) 65

Treurnicht Objects to NP Standpoint
Botah Defends NP Standpoint

Briefs
First Indian Police Officer 69

ZAIRE

Kinshasa-Kisangani Boat Trip Described
(Francois Misser; AFRICA, Feb 82) 70

CRITICAL SITUATION SEEN IN BENGUELA TEXTILE PLANT

Luanda JORNAL DE ANGOLA in Portuguese 13 Feb 82 p 9

[Excerpts] Benguela--The huge Africa Textil industrial complex, based in Benguela, is experiencing serious problems due to bottlenecks in its weaving division--the heart of the factory--due to the lack of glueing products; this threatens the routine operation of the production unit and the fulfillment of the plans, as ANGOP [ANGOLAN PRESS AGENCY] learned from the management of that textile center.

Due to the lack of this product, which is imported, the unit was partly paralyzed last December, a situation which was corrected partly thanks to the "good understanding" of foreign suppliers who, in spite of the trouble the country's exchange system is experiencing, sent some products before the opening of credits through the National Bank of Angola, the same source added.

"The news we have at this moment," we were told, "is that the products involved are already on the way to the country. Nevertheless, we are still worried about the assumption that the transport vessel might arrive in Luanda and have to wait for unloading for a long time because, if that additional material is not delivered to us by the end of February, it will be practically inevitable to close the factory down," a high official at the Benguela textile enterprise said.

The belated reception of additional raw materials causes an interruption in the organization of the factory sector which is reflected in the behavior of the workers, especially an increase in labor discipline violations and absenteeism. It must also be reported that some units in the country's ready-made clothing industry depend on the operation of this production unit.

In connection with this, the Africa Textil complex is expecting soon to carry out a major and rather ambitious project which will involve the construction of a residential development for its workers. The enterprise already has authorization from the Ministry of Construction and at this time is waiting for the ruling from the Ministry of Finance and a guarantee of construction material supply through the enterprises in that branch.

5058
CSO: 4742/219

NEW BOEING 737 PURCHASED BY TAAG

Luanda JORNAL DE ANGOLA in Portuguese 14 Feb 82 p 13

[Text] The first of the two Boeing 737 aircraft procured by TAAG [Air Transportation of Angola], the Angolan air transport company, is scheduled to arrive in the Angolan capital next May, according to what Germano Gomes, general manager of that company, told ANGOP [ANGOLAN PRESS AGENCY] on Thursday.

The second aircraft will arrive in Luanda this coming December. Both of these aircraft were purchased by TAAG from Boeing.

According to statements by Germano Gomes, both aircraft will replace two other aircraft which were leased from GPA (an Irish enterprise, with the lease due to run out in March and May).

The TAAG general manager arrived in Luanda on Thursday, coming from Lisbon where he had been in contact with GPA representatives concerning the removal of the lease. "We suggested a reduction in the cost of the lease but the other party (GPA) wanted to increase it," he said.

According to that same source, Angola did not accept the GPA proposal and that company's representatives had to return to Ireland in order later on to send a response to the Angolan proposal. If that response is not received by next week, TAAG will have to seek another solution to the problem.

The company has also raised some questions which, according to Germano Gomes, have to do with the maintenance of its aircraft, cleaning, disinfection, and treatment of fuel tanks and engine inspection. Everything was cleared up through our maintenance manager and the various tests and treatment procedures revealed nothing negative. There is no reason to assume that the fuel tank had corroded. It was also demonstrated that the enterprise was in a position to demand conditions which the factory does not advise. Angola then agreed to station a technician in that enterprise in Luanda, he added.

With the purchase of another two aircraft, the TAAG will increase the number of Boeing 737 aircraft to five since, out of the five currently in service with the Angolan airline company, only three will be the property of the Angolan government. The other two are rented from GPA. TAAG only wants to remove the contract on the aircraft whose lease is to expire in March since the other one, which will run out in May, will no longer be necessary due to the arrival of the first of the two aircraft already purchased.

Concerning long-range aircraft, Germano Gomes revealed that the "purchase of a Boeing 747 will depend on many factors (traffic, runs, etc.)." The Luanda--Lisbon run is the only one that could benefit from an aircraft of that type. On that line, there are so-called "slack periods" when there are no more than 40 passengers per day and the aircraft return almost empty.

In the meantime the assumption has been advanced regarding the purchase of more aircraft of the Fokker-Friendship type which are considered quite economical and better suited for Angola's domestic airlines, primarily going to areas where there are no runways that could handle the Boeing 737 aircraft and where the traffic volume does not justify the use of that type of aircraft. Nevertheless, all of that depends on statistics and more precise data, the TAAG general manager revealed further.

5058
CSO: 4742/219

BRIEFS

INTERNATIONAL SOCIALIST DELEGATION--A delegation from the Socialist International has been in Luanda since last night. The delegation, consisting of Jean Bernard Curial, member, French Socialist Party, and Joseph Ki Zerbo, member, Socialist Progressive Party of Upper Volta, are on an "exploratory mission" aimed at finding out from the Frontline Countries the role which the Socialist International can play in solving the problem of Namibia and of South African aggression. In statements made on arrival, Jean Bernard Curial said that the delegation which he directs will confer with Angolan authorities on the development of the situation in southern Africa and the difficulties which the RPA [People's Republic of Angola] is facing as a result of South African aggression. The delegation was received at the 4 de Fevereiro International Airport by Ambrosio Lukoki and Ilidio Machado, both from the secretariat of the MPLA-Labor Party Central Committee. [Text] [Luanda JORNAL DE ANGOLA in Portuguese 11 Feb 82 p 1] 5058

STATUS OF GRANTEES DEFINED--In a decree published in the official gazette, the cabinet approved the regulation on Angolan scholarship students abroad whose applications may be submitted by the MPLA-Labor Party, JMPLA [Youth Movement of the Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola]-Party Youth, central government agencies, mass and social organizations, government, mixed, or private enterprises, or by the individual concerned. The decree notes on the other hand that "a scholarship student abroad" is any citizen who goes to a foreign country to acquire scientific, technical, or practical knowledge for a period of time in excess of 6 months and at the expense of the Angolan state or agencies existing in it or at the expense of the host country or the organization existing there. The document also indicates that, regarding courses of a political and labor union nature, "the prerogative for submitting applications rests exclusively with the MPLA-Labor Party, JMPLA-Party Youth, and UNTA (National Union of Workers of Angola)." [Text] [Luanda JORNAL DE ANGOLA in Portuguese 13 Feb 82 p 2] 5058

CONSTRUCTION OFFICIAL TO CUBA--Augusto Mateus Lopes Rosa, general manager of the TECNOGIRON mixed civilian construction enterprise, yesterday left the country's capital heading for Havana, capital of the Republic of Cuba, to discuss study projects concerning the adoption of the Giron Schools plan with Cuban authorities connected with this branch. According to what he told ANGOP [ANGOLAN PRESS AGENCY], moments before leaving Luanda, Augusto Mateus Lopes Rosa will stay in the Cuban capital about 15 days. [Text] [Luanda JORNAL DE ANGOLA in Portuguese 13 Feb 82 p 2] 5058

CSO: 4742/219

BRIEFS

BUDGET SHOWS DEFICIT--The 1982 budget for the Central African Republic calls for Fr CFA 29,995,000,000 in government receipts and Fr CFA 38,203,000,000 in expenditures, for a budget deficit of 8,408,000,000. No new taxes were imposed, in order not to push taxes any higher than the already high level of last year. On the other hand, the state's tax collection agencies (customs, taxes, treasury, bureau of mines) were urged to take "merciless action" against fraud, tax evasion and speculation. In order to strengthen "national independence" and reduce dependence on foreign financing, a special "contribution to national recovery" has been instituted. It will be assessed at a variable rate depending on the means of the individual citizen, but will average 10 percent of earned income. It will be deducted from the wages of government officials and employees, as well as employees in public and quasi-public enterprises, local governments and public offices. This year the "big effort" to hold down spending will focus on salaries and wages. In fact, personnel costs currently account for more than 93 percent of budget spending. The Military Committee for National Recovery (CMRN) has decided to implement a series of strong measures to "reform" public finances. These involve reducing the number of employees in the public sector by retiring employees who have reached the age limit and forceful "disciplinary" steps to remove "corrupt" and "lazy" public employees. [Text] [Niamey LE SAHEL in French 29 Jan 82 p 4] 9516

PENNE DISCUSSES FRENCH AID--The future of French aid was virtually the only subject discussed during a visit to Bangui by Mr Guy Penne, President Mitterrand's advisor on African and Malagasy affairs. Since the military took power in Bangui in September 1981, Central African authorities have had the impression that the French Government "had some reservations" about the new regime. Mr Penne himself noted that French aid had almost tripled since the fall of Emperor Bokassa. In 1981 Paris provided the Central African Republic far more aid than did any other donor--FR CFA 17 billion (FR 340 million) a sum which is equal to about 63 percent of the Central African budget. [Text] [Paris LE MONDE in French 11 Feb 82 p 3] 9516

CSO: 4719/567

SECRET DOCUMENT OUTLINES PLAN TO ERADICATE RELIGION

Mogadishu HEEGAN in English 12 Feb 82 p 4

[Text]

We reproduce herebelow an article which appeared on the «Voice of The Arab World» of February 1982 issue No. 107 on the attack on both Moslems and Christians by the colonial regime in Addis Ababa. — Editor.

AN ATTACK on both Moslems and Christians as well as any religious denomination as a «dangerous cancer» has been made by the Ethiopian government in a document which has been handed to the writer.

The secret document outlining a plan «to uproot and destroy completely the anti-revolutionary situation that is prevalent in religious practices «has been drawn up by the Ministry of Information and National Guidence in Addis Ababa and has been «leaked» by a reliable government source to a British visitor.

The document states:- «We would be committing a revolutionary mistake if we were to ignore the anti-revolutionary character of religion».

It continues: — The obstacles left behind by the old feudal order are the most difficult to disentangle. They are at times easy and at other times difficult to destroy. The obstacles that we find in the churches and the mosque are of course the most difficult to tackle.

«Today when the Ethiopian revolution is giving hope it is evident that the places of worship have become tools to frustrate the workers' movement. Since the victory of the masses on land tenure and the eventual redistribution of churuch property, it was assumed that religious movements would run short of funds and the religious workers would gradually disperse, resulting in the elimination of one source of oppression.

«We realise today that two things are happening simultaneously. First, church funds have not dried up. The pay for church and mosque workers remains the same and they seem to work with renewed vigour and spirit.

«Secondly, not only are there funds for the places of worship, but the number of the believers in both churches and mosques is on the increase.

«It is evident that the expenditure for all this comes from donations from the believers. If the revolution is to attain its final goal, it is of the utmost importance to conduct a campaign against religion and to eliminate once and for all this dangerous anti-revolutionary cancer».

The document gives a good example of how religion can act as a rallying force. It refers to Afghanistan where «the anti-people have been able to rally together because of their religious fanaticism». It is pointed out that the use of petrodollors provided by the Arab countries has helped put Islam in the ascendant.

The document goes on:-

«Such countries as Saudi Arabia, that are the foot-stools of the imperialist, aid Moslems morally and financially, not purely on religious grounds but because they are opposed to Marxism Leninism and because they are opposed abandoning their position of privilege over the oppressed masses. This is their way of blocking the Soviet Union's voice from reaching the oppressed».

Although the Ethiopian Government appears confident in carrying out its suppression of religion, it finds this much more difficult when dealing with the Moslems. The document explains: «It is important that great care should be taken not to antagonise the progressive Arab countries, nor to give them any grounds to blame the Soveit Union».

«Nevertheless, we emphasise that all religions must be uprooted and destroyed».

So far as Christianity is concerned: The great monasteries, such as at Aksum. Debra Damo, Lalibela, Debra Libonos, together with church buildings in Addis Ababa, Gojjan, Gondar, Wallo and other places should all be converted into Art museums, so that the masses will view (Lit, use) them as historic slogans» (sic).

In a section dealing with the need to build conflict beween Christians and Moslems the document states: «Thanks to Arab petro-dollars, Islam is today experiencing a revival and is being listened to more.»

«Even though Muslims in Ethiopia number slightly less than the rest of the oppressed masses, they have suffered equally, along with Christians, the burden of the fuedo-bourgeois order. In the compaign to uproot and destroy religion throughout Ethiopia, at this juncture in time when our revolution is cornered by the conspiracies of the imperialist camp, it is necessary to employ new methods and tactics to destroy the Muslims. This agitation should constitute the second round. Even so, taking into consideration the age-old animosity beween Christians and Muslims it will be beneficial to exploit and foment conflict between these two reactionary camps».

The document, which so far has been circulated to administrative officials only, concludes:

«We must use the mass media to teach the masses to realize that this is a world of work and not of spiritualism and morals and that the teaching of religion is against their own freedom. Furthermore, we should agitate and organise youth who might otherwise join the service of religious groups».

From the «Voice of the Arab World» Feb. 1982.

CSO: 4700/886

FRENCH IGN UNDERTAKING MAPPING PROJECT

Libreville L'UNION in French 9 Feb 82 p 4

[Article by Neltoh: "Gabon in 400 Maps"]

[Text] "Cartography provides a documentary basis for national development," said the state secretary for public lands, land survey, city planning and housing, Mr Gaston-Felicien Olouna, in a visit Saturday to Leon Mba Airport, where he went aboard the French National Geographic Institute (IGN) aircraft.

The institute, whose central African headquarters is in Libreville, will take aerial photographs of Gabon for a 2-month period as part of a cartography program. Some 400 maps will be produced, with widely differing purposes for various agencies, such as Public Lands, Public Works, Civil Aviation, Territorial Administration, Agriculture, Waters and Forests and National Defense.

It is really a question of bringing old maps up to date, while taking into account the special environmental program that requires Gabon's central provinces to be given larger scale coverage.

To this end, the institute has taken shots of Libreville, Ntoum, Kango, Ndjole, Lambarene, Franceville, Koulamoutou, Tchibanga and Oyem. This year cities such as Mouila, Booue, Lastourville, Fougamou, Ndende, Moanda and Cocobeach, which have not yet been photographed because of poor weather, will be covered.

These photos will also be useful in city planning, said Mr Olouna, with the preparation of maps on a scale of 1:100,000 and 1:20,000, which will facilitate the preparation of a preliminary town planning model in conjunction with the Economic and Social Studies Development Company (SEDES).

That company is preparing a national land use plan for the Land Registration Ministry. Indeed, all this mapping creates the basic documents needed for studies of city planning and land development.

How are the photos used to prepare the maps? Mr Lamy, the regional IGN representative, said that geographic maps are prepared in six stages.

First, the aerial photography itself; second, development of the photographs on the ground; third, identification by a work team of points whose coordinates and altitude are known; fourth, the plotting of the aerial photographs on ultra-precise instruments using two shots simultaneously (this enable the technician to follow all the contours of the terrain, both with respect to roads and also to dwellings, rivers, vegetation boundaries and relief); fifth, tabularizing the names of the various localities in association with the local population and officials.

The final stage will be to draw and print the maps in a four-color process, at a scale of 1:50,000, the scale selected for Gabon's cartographic plan.

9516
CSO: 4719/567

GROWTH OF PALM OIL INDUSTRY DESCRIBED

New Plan Inaugurated

Abidjan FRATERNITE MATIN in French 16 Feb 82 p 1

[Excerpts] A processing factory, 6,496 hectares of oil palm, 6,736 hectares of coconut trees, a work force of 2,500 officials, office employees, and laborers, costing 21 billion CFA [African Financial Community] francs. In brief, this is the picture of the agroindustrial effort undertaken by the Palmindustrie Company in the southwestern part of the country and specifically in a region called Bas-Cavally, near Tabou.

This is the 12th agroindustrial center to be established for the palm oil company. Last Friday [12 February] it was officially turned over to the company for operation by Minister of Agriculture Bra Kanon who, on this occasion, was accompanied by Minister of Plan and Industry Maurice Seri Gnoleba and by Minister of Commerce Amoakon Edjampan Thiemele.

When it is fully operating, the agroindustrial center of Bas-Cavally, according to the director general of the palm industry, Kone Dossongui, will have a business turnover outside the factory for all of its products of more than 5 billion CFA francs at today's rate of exchange (27,000 tons of palm oil, 26,000 tons of copra, 4,300 tons of palm oil seeds).

Meeting Fat Requirements

Abidjan FRATERNITE MATIN in French 16 Feb 82 p 8

[Text] Traditional domestic resources for edible fats are essentially as follows: palm oil fruit and oil produced by the people in the forested areas; smallholder production of peanuts in the grasslands area.

The policy of agricultural diversification undertaken in 1960 set in motion important development programs for the raising of palm oil trees along the coast and cotton in the north of the country.

The marketing of refined oil from these programs in the Ivory Coast market has grown very rapidly: the Blohorn Company in 1970 purchased nearly 9,500 tons of unrefined palm oil from SODEPALM [Company for the Development and Exploitation of to Palm Oil] to refine it and sell it essentially on the local market. Exports accounted for 54 percent of total production under the palm oil plan. In 1981 Blohorn bought 85,000 tons of unrefined oil. It marketed 49,450 tons of refined oil and margarine locally, while exports of unrefined oil under the palm oil plan did not amount to more than 31 percent of total production: the Trituraf Company began to produce refined cottonseed oil in 1975 (previously, the seeds were exported), and in 1980 its sales amounted to nearly 13,000 tons, all of it on the domestic market.

It appears that the consumption of edible fats produced by small businesses has considerably decreased. Nevertheless, agricultural statistics continue to mention the following: nearly 7,000 tons of small business produced palm oil out of 200,000 tons of fruit harvested (this is a figure which the village plantings of palm fruit in enclosed areas have difficulty in meeting: 1979 - 135,000 tons; 1980 - 214,000 tons; 1981 - 183,000 tons).

Industry Generates Jobs

Abidjan FRATERNITE MATIN in French 16 Feb 82 p 9

[Text] Out of 32,000 jobs provided by the Palmindustrie Company, SODESUCRE [Company for the Development of Sugarcane and the Industrialization and Marketing of Sugar], SOGB [Grand Bereby Rubber Company], and SAPH [African Hevea Plantations Company] and which make it possible to pay 14 billion CFA francs per year in salaries, only 16,000 jobs are held by citizens of Ivory Coast. Moreover, the shortage in nonspecialized labor is now 6,000 jobs. That is how Minister of Agriculture Bra Kanon depicted the situation which exists today in the agricultural sector.

That is the inexplicable paradox in which some of our unemployed compatriots live and which lead people to believe that it is not really true that they cannot find a job. They are very numerous. They are to be found everywhere, without exception, in the streets and outside the offices of OMOCI [Ivory Coast Employment Office]. They continue to wait, refusing the numerous jobs offered them in the agricultural sector, through the companies mentioned above. These jobs, in addition to a salary, also provide a number of social benefits, including schooling, medical dispensaries, housing, and running water and electricity provided free of charge to village distribution systems.

Those of the jobless who are considering going to work on the land are waiting for a program of "Aid to the Farmers." They think that this is a collection of magic, a catalogue of projects which will begin to be implemented at any moment. "Aid to the farmer," Bra Kanon has said, "includes all these daily rural activities, all these prospects for development which emerge every day in all parts of the country. Today it is the Iboke agroindustrial project, a real program for development."

Bra Kanon continued, saying that agriculture is a noble activity which never lets you down. On the contrary, all those who have agreed to work in this field, whether it involves cocoa, coffee, rubber, or palm oil fruit, are for us witnesses to this statement. May their example inspire many citizens of the Ivory Coast to agree to sign up for increased work on the land.

5170
CSO: 4719/605

COMMENTS ON GOVERNMENT MOVE TO RESTRICT LIBYAN INFLUENCE

Support by MMM

Port Louis THE NATION in French 2 Feb 82 p 4

[Text] There have been strong reactions by the MMM [Mauritius Militant Movement] against the decision by the government to remind the Libyan Arab People's Bureau of the need to respect certain principles, particularly that of noninterference in Mauritian internal affairs. In this connection we noted yesterday [1 February] the sharp comments in the weekly publication, HORIZONS NOUVEAUX, a weekly which reflects the opinion of groups rather close to the leadership of the MMM, but which are more extremist on the subject of the "new social consensus" in particular.

Yesterday [1 February] LE NOUVEAU MILITANT tried to strike an even balance, recalling the Libyan achievements, the contributions of that country in the struggle of the Third World "against Western imperialism and its consequences." However, the newspaper admits there have been some excesses. It notes: "However, the truth is also that some things have gone beyond the strict diplomatic framework which all Libyan representatives in Mauritius should have respected, in the interests of the young Mauritian nation and the relations between our two countries."

The newspaper goes on to say: "On that subject the leaders of the MMM have discussed it with those concerned on several occasions." We note that, when Boodhoo denounced Libyan interference, the MMM reacted against his statement. Quite recently, the statement by Deerpaising concerning the coup d'etat in Ghana angered the MMM.

The MMM hastens to state that once it is in power it will ensure that there is no foreign interference. However, it attacks the government, which it accuses of trampling on "the friendship between countries when it employs these crudely electoral and profoundly dangerous maneuvers." It is this last phrase which we should keep in mind above all: "Together with its membership, the MMM believes that the government is trampling on the friendship between Libya and Mauritius."

Welded to its membership, the MMM couldn't have said it better!

CAM on Government Attitude

Port Louis THE NATION in French 3 Feb 82 p 1

[Text] The Muslim Action Committee [CAM] yesterday [2 February] afternoon published the following communique after the decision by the government to restrain the activities of the Libyan People's Bureau in Mauritius:

"The Executive Council of the Muslim Action Committee, at an urgently called meeting on Monday, 1 February, in Port Louis, has analyzed the recent communique issued by the office of the prime minister on Mauritian-Libyan relations.

(a) It does not approve the communique as drawn up;

(b) It condemns unreservedly the way in which the said communique was broadcast by the Mauritius Broadcasting Corporation;

(c) It regrets that the prime minister did not consider it appropriate to consult the Cabinet on so fundamental and so serious a question;

(d) It has decided to organize meetings throughout the country to denounce the intrigues carried on by certain parties having the evident purpose of denigrating a friendly country and of damaging good relations between Libya and Mauritius;

(e) It calls on the Muslim community to keep calm and to remain vigilant in the face of the campaign of intimidation carried on in certain quarters; and

(f) It expresses its deep disquiet at the attack made on the religious liberty of the Islamic faith. Signed A. R. Peeroo, president; A. R. Bundhun, secretary."

5170
CSO: 4719/572

GOVERNMENT ACTS TO CURTAIL LIBYAN ACTIVITIES

Harsh Warning to Libya

Port Louis L'EXPRESS in French 31 Jan 82 p 1

[Text] The Mauritian Government has finally decided to rein in Libyan diplomats in Mauritius. In a bulletin issued by the Prime Minister's Office yesterday, the government states that it is no longer willing to tolerate certain conduct on the part of diplomats serving in our country and expects that a number of principles be respected.

There are certain principles which the Mauritian Government expects foreign diplomats serving in Mauritius to respect in their relations with individuals and organizations and in general, these principles have been respected in the past. However, it has become obvious that certain diplomats, particularly those with the Libyan mission, tend to ignore them.

The Mauritian Government has therefore called the attention of Libyan diplomats to a number of provisions that apply equally to other diplomatic missions accredited in Mauritius and expects them to be scrupulously respected. It was also stated that failure to do so could have unfortunate consequences for relations between Libya and the island of Mauritius.

The Mauritian Government has therefore asked that there be an immediate halt in all direct financing from Libya or Libyan organizations to Mauritian individuals or organizations. Any gift which Libya wishes to grant should be channeled through the Office of the Prime Minister, stating the recipient and the reason for the gift and it will be up to the government to make a ruling. Libya and Libyan organizations must also cease granting any financial or other contribution to Mauritian political parties because it represents clear and inadmissible meddling in the country's internal affairs. Libyans must also abstain from asking Mauritian citizens to visit Libya. Such invitations must be made known to the government beforehand and previous authorization received before the invitations may be issued.

Libya was also asked to stop financing any newspaper, periodical or other propaganda publication in Mauritius considered by the government to constitute interference in Mauritian affairs.

The following is the complete text of the bulletin [in English]:

For some time past, the Government of Mauritius has felt concerned about certain activities in the country on the part of foreign powers which it considers to be inconsistent with the proper relationships that should exist.

2. There are certain guidelines which the Government of Mauritius expects foreign diplomatic missions to observe in their relations with individuals or organizations in the country and these have, generally speaking, been adhered to in the past. However, more recently, it has become clear that there has been a tendency not to respect these guidelines and, particularly, by the representatives in Mauritius of the Libyan People's Arab Jamahiriya.

3. The Government of Mauritius has therefore, through the proper diplomatic channels, drawn the attention of the representatives of Libya in Mauritius to the following guidelines, which apply with equal force to any other diplomatic missions in Mauritius, and indicated that it expects them to be adhered to scrupulously in [the] future. It has also been brought to the notice of the representatives of Libya that failure to respect these guidelines could have adverse consequences for relations between Libya and Mauritius.

4. The Libyan Government has therefore been asked, from now on:

(a) there is to be no further direct funding from the Government of Libya or private organizations in that country to individuals or organizations in Mauritius. All donations that Libya may wish to offer should be channelled to the Prime Minister's Office with an indication in every case as to the intended recipient and the purpose and the Government of Mauritius will make an appropriate decision thereon;

(b) public and private organizations in Libya are to refrain from making financial or any other sort of contribution to political parties in Mauritius since to do so is a clear and totally unacceptable interference in the internal affairs of the country;

(c) the practice, on the part of the Government and private organizations in Libya, of inviting Mauritian citizens to visit Libya for various purposes will not be persisted in. Instead Libya will indicate to the Government of Mauritius when it proposes to offer such facilities and will obtain the approval of the Government of Mauritius before issuing the invitation to the person or organization concerned.

(d) Libya will, in future, refrain from maintaining or supporting any newspaper, periodical or other propaganda publication in Mauritius since this also is regarded by the Government of Mauritius as totally unacceptable interference in the internal affairs of this country.

Prime Minister's Office
Port Louis
30 January 1982

The bulletin, read both in French and Creole on MBC [Mauritius Broadcasting Corporation] information bulletins, states that: Pas mette nene dans zaffaire nou pays [Don't stick your nose in our country's business].

Peeroo Condemns Anti-Libyan Bulletin

Port Louis L'EXPRESS in French 3 Feb 82 p 1

[Text] While the Libyan ambassador to Mauritius, on whom restrictions have been placed, awaits instructions from Tripoli, there have been ripples in at least one political party.

The CAM [Moslem Action Committee], whose president is A. R. Peeroo, minister of labor, sent a note to the press yesterday, a note also signed by Secretary R. Bundhun, former minister, condemning the measures taken by the government "with respect to a friendly country, measures that could harm good relations between Libya and the island of Mauritius."

Peeroo, minister in the current coalition government, separated himself from the action taken by the government and supports his position by advancing the following two points: He believes that the measures taken with respect to Libya should have been discussed by the Cabinet, since the current government is a coalition government that exists thanks to an understanding between three partners (the Labor Party, the PMSD [Mauritian Social Democratic Party] and the CAM). He adds that he does not believe that he is failing in his collective responsibility by signing the note because he believes that the bulletin comes only from the prime minister, which is equivalent to saying that the decision to apply the measures in question and to issue the bulletin does not come from the government as such but only from the prime minister, who is only the acting prime minister to boot.

The bulletin was issued following a meeting of the Executive Committee of the CAM held Monday evening, following an analysis of the government's communique on measures taken with respect to the Libyan Embassy in Mauritius. The CAM, which does not approve of the communique, condemns the way it was published and makes an appeal for calm and vigilance. It expresses its regret that the prime minister did not see fit to consult with the Cabinet on such a "fundamental and serious" matter.

Sir Veerasamy Ringadoo, acting prime minsiter, was questioned by L'EXPRESS yesterday on the two points put forth by the minister of labor, according to which he reportedly acted alone in deciding the measures contained in the government communique dated 30 January. Ringadoo, in a moderate tone, said: "I believe that Peeroo is mistaken. I believe that Peeroo should know his work. I do not want to make any comment on Peeroo's statements or on the terms of the bulletin he signed, but if he is not satisfied in the government, he knows very well what he can do."

As for Libya's official reactions, the prime minister said that there had not yet been any official reaction.

11,464
CSO: 4719/557

ARTICLE NOTES DISAGREEMENT ON LIBYA, 'COMORAN-LIBYAN RELATIONS'

Port Louis LE NOUVEAU MILITANT in French 23 Jan 82 p 4

[Article: "MMM and PSM not on the Same Wavelength"]

[Text] No Proof of Libyan Involvement
Surprise in Comoran-Libyan Relations
The leaders of the MMM [Mauritian Militant Movement] and the PSM [Mauritian Socialist Party] exchanged views Thursday evening on a variety of subjects including recent statements by K. Deerpalsingh, president of the PSM, to the effect that recently Libya "reportedly helped Rowlings overthrow President Limann" in Ghana.

After having heard K. Deerpalsingh, the MMM leaders remain of the opinion that, on the basis of all available information at this time there is no proof or concrete indication that Libya took any effective part in the preparations or execution of the recent coup in Ghana.

The MMM notes that with regard to that coup not even the U.S. State Department brought any accusation against Libya.

Comoran-Libyan Relations

On the other hand, the MMM professes to be surprised that the president of the Comoros, Mr Ahmed Abdallah, was invited to make an official visit to Libya early this month and that a reconciliation between the Abdallah regime and Libya appears to be underway at a time when the [Comoran] regime is bogged down in generalized deterioration and repression, and even though in recent weeks it seems to have been established that it was at the port of Moroni, in the Comoros, that the aircraft which transported the mostly South African mercenaries who attempted to carry off a coup in the Seychelles last November picked up the commando team's weapons, disguised as gifts to invalid children.

The weekly LA LETTRE DE L'OCEAN INDIEN even said on 12 December that the arms delivery had been organized by Bob Denard, who arrived in the Comoros of 19 November from South Africa.

The MMM is concerned about the effects of this Comoran-Libyan rapprochement on relations between Libya and the Seychelles and Madagascar.
9516
CSO: 4719/587

OPPOSITION LEADER WOULD ALLOW FREE PRESS, ACCOMMODATE PRIVATE SECTOR

Port Louis LE MAURICIEN in French 1 Feb 82 pp 5-6

[Interview with Aneerood Jugnauth, Queen's counsel, by Sydney Selvon on 28 Jan 82, place not given]

[Text] In a few months, Aneerood Jugnauth, QC and leader of the opposition, will go before the Mauritian voters to ask them to cast their ballots for a new government headed by him. However, there are still many questions that he must answer in order to enlighten the electorate about what Mauritius would be like under a team of leaders he would head.

LE MAURICIEN put some of these questions to him, first of all, concerning how he would handle the written press and the MBC/TV [Mauritius Broadcasting Corporation] if he should come to power. Jugnauth asserted his commitment to the continuation of a free press and for allowing the MBC/TV to finally become accessible to opposition parties, even rightist parties, if they are represented in Parliament or, if not, if they are sufficiently representative of public opinion.

The prime minister designate in the alternative MMM/PSM [Mauritian Socialist Party] government maintains his attachment to the cause of the Third World with respect to the two superpowers, with respect to foreign relations. Concerning Libya, he refuses to make a "casual" judgment because, he said, of "the Libyan Government's achievements in many areas in Libya, particularly housing and the distribution of the national patrimony." But he states that any country, including Libya, would encounter the intransigence of an MMM/PSM government if there were any attempt to meddle in the internal affairs of the island of Mauritius. Jugnauth also told us during the interview, which took place on Thursday (before the Mauritian note limiting Libyan activities in Mauritius and published on Saturday -- see below), that in this case, it is up to the Mauritian Government to take the necessary steps if it believes there is interference by Libya.

Answering the questions we put to him concerning the private sector, Jugnauth noted "little change" from 1976 to 1982 in the attitude of the MMM vis-a-vis the sector, but agreed that there had been a change in that party's approach to relations with management. "The private sector will remain forever," he said. He later stated that there would always be domains reserved for the private sector, "no matter how long a socialist government lasts."

With respect to the economy, he preaches "realism" and emphasizes priorities such as the creation of jobs, revival of the industrial zones and the need to find a correlation between wages and prices. He accepts the relationship between wages and the creation of jobs.

[Question] I would like here to act as the interpreter of journalists in general in asking you a question that constantly comes up among us: Under an MMM/PSM government, what would happen to information in Mauritius? Let us be specific: First of all, what would the status of the written press be?

[Answer] An MMM/PSM government would ensure, just as we so stated in our Joint Government Program, that the press would be free and that it would enjoy all facilities for doing its work, within the framework of the country's laws and constitution, naturally.

[Question] Would rightist parties and groups, groups and parties in opposition to the MMM/PSM government, be free to found newspapers?

[Answer] Referring once again to our Joint Government Program, I would remind you that we express there our belief in democracy and in the principle of party pluralism. Naturally, we would also agree for these parties to have the means to make themselves heard and to have newspapers.

[Question] What relations would you wish to establish between the government, if you come to power, naturally, and the Mauritian corps of newsmen?

[Answer] We want to do our best to make them the best possible relations because we are anxious to see the press play its role effectively in order to educate and inform the public about what the government is doing, educate and give objective information on everything happening here and elsewhere. There would also be criticisms here and there, if necessary.

[Question] Will MBC/TV reporters be free to cover the activities of the political opposition to your government? Would that opposition have the right to be on television and the radio, even if there are no general elections coming up?

[Answer] In the opposition, we have been fighting with the government and the MBC/TV for a long time so that our voice might be heard through the MBC/TV. To date, we have been unsuccessful. After a takeover by the MMM/PSM, we intend to make a fundamental change in the MBC/TV so that not only the important activities of the opposition (not just any activities, naturally) would be covered, but also so that from time to time, the representatives of the opposition might have an opportunity to come to the MBC/TV to express their views on important, fundamental questions facing the country and the nation.

[Question] Whether these members of the opposition be on the left, the right, or in the center?

[Answer] Any member of the opposition. Naturally, the opposition represented in the Assembly, whether on the left, right or elsewhere.

[Question] But what about political parties not in Parliament?

[Answer] That becomes a little difficult. We can have hundreds of parties, growing like mushrooms after the rain, and we would not know what to do. There have to be limits because after all, one cannot turn the MBC/TV into some kind of bazaar.

[Question] The MMM itself was a party outside of Parliament.

[Answer] Yes, but it was in a given context, in which there was truly no opposition to Parliament. In a similar situation, we have to see which is the real parliamentary opposition that truly represents public opinion, to a certain extent at least. One cannot open the doors of radio and television to the first group that comes along and says it is an opposition party. That would end up being outrageous. The MBC/TV would have to have some discretionary power with respect to parties not in Parliament.

[Question] From 1976 to 1982, something seems to have changed in the perception of the MMM of the Mauritian private sector. What is the nature of that change, if, indeed, there was one? What brought it about?

[Answer] From 1976 to 1982, I would not say that there was any great change. Actually, how does the MMM view the role of the private sector in the country under an MMM/PSM government? That role has never been emphasized in the past by the MMM. What we have done over these past 5 years was to emphasize the role that the private sector would play in an economy of transition to socialism. And perhaps that is what makes people believe there has been a change in the MMM's attitude toward the private sector. As we have always said, the private sector will continue to exist and play its role. On the contrary, in the MMM, we believe that all possibilities must exist so that the private sector may fully play its role, especially with respect to the creation of jobs. Finally, the private sector will be here forever. Except in the nationalized sector, its role will gradually decrease.

[Question] Is it possible that following a takeover, there might be an about-face of the MMM and that the number of nationalizations would be suddenly increased, while the attitude of the MMM grows more radical in general with respect to the private sector?

[Answer] I would say no, because....

[Question] You are categorical?

[Answer] Yes, I am categorical because one has to be realistic. And even if one wanted to change attitudes, that would be impossible, given our economic situation. There is a fair number of limitations with respect to our economic situation. I repeat that which I personally say everywhere in the meetings and elsewhere, that we come before the voters for a term of 5 years wit a precise program. For us, it is a contract between the MMM and the PSM, on the one hand, and the people, on the other. And when I say the people, I also mean the private sector. It is a contract that we intend to honor. And I give my guarantee that we are going to proceed as we have said, phase by phase. We do not want to abruptly overturn all the existing structures.

[Question] The MMM has always warned the private sector against possible support for the opposition in order to boycott it if it should come to power. Do you believe that this risk of a boycott on the part of the private sector still exists?

[Answer] We are speaking here about a rightist opposition, supported by the private sector. That possibility still exists. We can observe that there are at the present time different factions within the private sector. For example, one faction wants to evolve and accepts dialog and even the participation of cadres and workers in different sectors of the enterprises. One can easily see this in what is said by persons such as Francis Rey and Rawaf [text unclear], among others. There is definitely a certain evolution among certain Mauritian and even foreign manufacturers. They realize that we are living in modern times, that we are moving in the direction of change in Mauritius and that it will be necessary to adapt to that change. On the other hand, there are others, who are much more orthodox, much more conservative, who want to maintain a situation that belongs to the past. We fear that this category of owners will try to boycott socialist changes that an MMM-PSM government will try to bring about. Naturally, we warn them because one cannot go against the will of the people and because one has to respect the verdict -- if there is one -- for change. We hope that in the end, all owners will understand that.

[Question] What do you reply to those who, on your left, in the MMM and elsewhere, accuse your party of having deviated, of having arrived at compromises with the private sector?

[Answer] I would say that those people are wrong to make such accusations because the MMM has not deviated in any way from its determination to bring about change, to set up structures in order to finally create a socialist society in Mauritius. What has changed is only the means chosen to achieve this, the way to proceed in order to achieve our objective. Do they speak of compromises? I wonder. Where? All that we have done is to face reality and, as I have just emphasized, the private sector is not going to disappear overnight. A socialist government will have to work along with the private sector, with respect to the economy, because that sector will also have its role to play. But naturally, as we have always emphasized, the driving force of the national economy must emanate from and be guided by socialist principles.

[Question] When you say that the private sector will not disappear overnight, this naturally implies that it should, in your view, disappear in the long run. But you just said that it will exist forever.

[Answer] I just repeated what some have already said. There are persons who think that with the advent of a socialist government, the private sector will disappear. I say that that is not correct. And we know that the private sector is not going to disappear, no matter how long a socialist government lasts, because there will always be sectors in which it will exist.

[Question] On the left and on the right, few Mauritians [text illegible] of the MMM with respect to foreign policy. The return of the cold war, which has made nonalignment very difficult, and the role of the superpowers in San Salvador [sic] and Afghanistan, to take but two examples, complicates things even further. As president of the MMM and prime minister in the MMM/PSM shadow cabinet, how do you view the state of the world today and what foreign policy would you derive from it for an MMM/PSM government?

[Answer] I do not believe that it is any more difficult today to follow a Third Worldist, nonaligned policy. On the contrary, we believe that the greater the conflict between the two superpowers, the greater the risk, not only of a cold war, but of a real war. There must be a policy of neutral countries, a European policy, a policy of the OAU, of the Third World, in order to achieve a balance, counter tension and prevent it from leading to real war. With respect to our relations with OAU and nonaligned countries, it is naturally understood that we shall be much closer to those countries in order to emphasize even more our independence vis-a-vis the two superpowers, the United States and the USSR. The same is true of the Arab countries. Regarding Europe, we are part of the Common Market and we are going to continue to be part of it under an MMM-PSM government. And naturally, we shall gain by furthering our relations with Europe, particularly France. With respect to the Third World, our relations should be expanded, I emphasize once again, with India in particular.

[Question] What disagreements are there between the MMM and the PSM regarding foreign policy?

[Answer] There truly are none except with respect to the role played by Libya on the international scene and in Mauritius. We have already examined the question. We retain our view, but that in no way brings our Third Worldist and nonaligned policy into question.

[Question] And what is your evaluation of what is happening in Poland?

[Answer] I am truly sorry about what is happening in Poland. It is a tragedy that that country should have reached such a situation. The responsibility is certainly shared. We hope that the situation will return to normal as soon as possible. In the MMM, we have endured repression. We understand, more than anyone else in Mauritius, what the current situation means to the Polish people.

[Question] It is said that some "minimize" the role of the USSR in what is happening in Poland.

[Answer] We have nothing to minimize. It is clear that there are two superpowers today, each one exercising its influence over a bloc of countries. We see America, on the one hand, trying to keep under its influence certain countries that have pro-American regimes, while on the other hand, the USSR is doing the same with other countries with a pro-Soviet regime. If each one believed in the independence and sovereignty of the other countries, those countries would be left to do what it wants at home. When there was a revolution in America, when the Americans were fighting the colonial power that oppressed them, they would never have tolerated foreign intervention against their revolution, just as the Soviets, when they made their revolution, had the same attitude. I believe that some powers should remember their own history and respect the freedom of others.

[Question] If you come to power, you could find yourself wedged, in your economic policy, between urgent demands for wage increases, wage compensation and reforms in the plants, on the one hand, and the urgent need to create new jobs in order to absorb unemployment and maintain the profitability of enterprises in order to prevent layoffs, on the other hand. What would your priorities be in such a situation?

[Answer] We shall clearly inherit a catastrophic situation and I repeat: The Mauritian people must not believe that all of our problems will be resolved after a change in government. We must do everything possible to get our economic back on its feet. This requires sacrifices and the example here must come from above. Everyone must work hard and with discipline in order to increase productivity and increase our national "pie." Naturally, our priorities will include the fight against unemployment. We must do everything possible to create productive jobs for the unemployed. We must restore order in the public services, where there are persons with more than one job and who will have to see if they should not be content with a single one and make room for others. There is also the case of the retired who are rehired under contracts, which must be reviewed. We must make room for the young. Naturally, agriculture must be diversified and enterprises in our industrial zones revived. We shall have to do everything to improve the fate of those at the bottom of the ladder and guarantee a decent living for the entire population. We shall have to pay a great deal of attention to the problem of water, not only for domestic needs, but also for agriculture and industry. We shall have to do everything to prevent layoffs.

[Question] Do you not agree that moderation is needed with respect to wage demands?

[Answer] Naturally, there must be an overall price/wage policy in order not to upset the entire economy.

[Question] A wage policy that does not prevent the creation of jobs, a, let us say, wage/job-creation policy?

[Answer] Yes. We shall indeed need a price/wage policy going hand in hand with a wage/job policy in order to prevent any worsening of the unemployment situation. Only after 2 or 3 years of efforts will we note the fruits of the efforts made by an MMM/PSM government.

[Question] You nevertheless foresee some friction between your government, if you win the elections, naturally, and the trade unions?

[Answer] With respect to unions in the GWF [General Workers Federation], we are in the process of a project aimed at making them aware of the real problems which a socialist government must face. At the same time, we are going to do everything so that federation will retain its independence vis-a-vis the government and work to improve the fate of workers. We foresee no difficulties with the GWF. There might be some with other trade unions, but there, the government will have to do a great deal of educating so that the people will understand in what situation a new government will have to work and so that they realize that they must give the government a reasonable amount of time in order to improve the people's purchasing power.

[Question] Every time there is a crisis in Mauritius, many people want to emigrate. That is the case now. Do you advise people who can to emigrate? What will your policy on emigration be if you come to power?

[Answer] It is true that every time we are in a critical situation, when unemployment is high, the young people are desperate and emigration is very tempting. Under an MMM/PSM government, we are not going to prevent people from emigrating if they wish to do so. On the contrary, there must be planned emigration. But at the same time, we are asking upper-level management personnel, intellectuals and people with trades who can be useful to the country not to leave, in order to prevent our having to appeal to foreigners. I firmly believe, moreover, in family planning because I believe that our resources are very limited and the country is very small, which means that we cannot have uncontrolled population growth.

[Question] With respect to foreign policy, your adversaries have made a great deal of Libya's activities in the country and this has brought you into opposition with the PSM. What is your position on the subject?

[Answer] Regarding Libya, we have always maintained good relations with it. We have even called it a brother country because it is a socialist country. It is one of the few Arab nations where they have actually created a society which, from total underdevelopment, has evolved into a society with a modern standard of living where each family has its own house, a decent house, and a guaranteed minimum living wage. In fact, they have attained objectives at which we are still aiming. That is why we have a great deal of sympathy and a great deal of friendship for the Libyan people. We do not wish to make casual remarks that might harm it.

[Question] But there has been talk, mainly in the PSM, of Libyan meddling in the country's domestic affairs.

[Answer] They have spoken of Libyan intervention in Chad, for example. We know that Libya was asked for help by the regime in power in Chad. Finally, Libya did withdraw and even after the arrival of the OAU forces, we have seen what is happening in Chad today. In contrast, there are certain countries which intervene elsewhere without being called on to do so. We must not forget that. Even in Ghana today, for example, it was in response to Rawlings' request that Libya went into that country. In Mauritius, they also speak about intervention. Actually, they have exaggerated greatly. They speak of a newspaper financed by Libya, which attacks certain political parties and tries to influence others. In fact, embassies in certain other countries even have newspapers to get their views across and to spread their policies in countries where they have penetrated. It is a matter of evaluation. But out policy is clear: We do not accept any intervention by anyone, any foreign country, in our domestic affairs. If any country, including Libya, should try to do something similar, we would put it in its place. In Mauritius, the government is in charge and if there is interference, then it is up to the government to take the necessary measures.

11,464
CSO: 4719/555

PSM HITS POSTPONEMENT OF VILLAGE ELECTIONS

Port Louis LE NOUVEAU MILITANT in French 1 Feb 82 pp 1, 4

[Text] A stroke of the pen was enough to make a joke of democracy, with respect to the village councils, which last week were turned into administrative boards by a ministerial decree, even though the Constitution guarantees the citizens the democratic right to elect their representatives to the regional administration. It was in these terms that the PSM [Mauritian Socia Socialist Party], through its secretary general, A. Parsooramen, raised its voice against the government's decision to postone the village elections indefinitely.

In the opinion of the PSM secretary general, this action confirms the fact that the PT/PMSD/CAM/Transfuges [Labor Party/Mauritian Social Democratic Party/Moslem Action Committee/Transfuges] coalition is antidemocratic. The very same people pose as the great defenders of democracy when in fact they are the gravediggers and assassins of democracy. The regime in power has made use of its parliamentary majority on numerous occasions to make a farce of democracy. For years both rural and municipal elections have been postponed by decree to insure the political survival of the regime and to protect its notorious stooges.

A. Parsooramen has pointed out that from 1969 to 1981 there should have been four elections, but there were only two--12 September 1971 and 22 January 1979. Even the general elections scheduled for 1972 were postponed to 1976.

With respect to the upcoming legislative elections, the PT/PMSD/Transfuges coalition would not for one moment hesitate to postpone them for several years more, especially since it knows it will be swept out of power by the wave of change.

In addition, the PSM spokesman said that the slanderous campaign to the effect that any possible MMM/PSM government would repress democracy and freedom arises simply from intellectual dishonesty and unforgivable scurrilousness. An MMM/PSM government--as stated in its governmental program--would guarantee the populace that it would facilitate the flourishing of democracy by reestablishing the partial elections, and by respecting the rights of all Mauritians to go to the polls every 5 years. In the same breath Parsooramen hailed the courage of the MMM for stepping down from the regional administrations when their terms expired in December 1979. This was concrete proof that the MMM and its ally, the PSM, do not intend to thwart democracy in the smallest degree. The same principle inspired the PSM secretary general to submit his resignation as a member of the village council of Petit Raffray, though he was asked to sit as a commissioner on the administrative board of the same village.

9516
CSO: 4719/587

DE L'ESTRAC REPORTS ON SUCCESS OF 'DIPLOMATIC' TRIP

Port Louis LE MAURICIEN in French 1 Feb 82 p 4

[Text] Jean-Claude de l'Estrac, minister in the kitchen cabinet of the MMM, and Cassam Uteem, head of relations with political parties, returned home yesterday following a trip that took them to Paris and Algiers. "The visit enabled us to enjoy a triple success on the diplomatic level and to see the interest which many governments have in the possible advent of an MMM/PSM [Malagasy Socialist Party] government in Mauritius," De l'Estrac said.

The two members of the MMM first of all went to Algiers, in response to an invitation from the Algerian National Liberation Front, which is in power in that country. The delegation was received in a very official fashion. Greeted at the Algiers airport by Lazhari Cheriet, head of the department of relations with parties, and Sadek Zouaten, head of liberation movements, as well as by officials from the Department of Protocol, the MMM delegation was received that same day at Zighout Youcef Palace in Algiers, where Mohamed Cherif Mesaadia, the second-ranking man in the Algerian regime, resides. "This visit enabled us to enrich ourselves with Algeria's experiment in practical nonalignment, which causes that country to enjoy considerable prestige in Africa, the Arab world, Europe and even in the United States," De l'Estrac said.

The MMM delegation took advantage of the opportunity to lay the foundations for economic and commercial cooperation that could offer very interesting prospects to Mauritian exporters and importers. In the course of discussions with Algerian officials, "the MMM was happy to note broad agreement between itself and the FLN, particularly with respect to the role of the OAU and the Movement of Nonaligned Nations and in particular, on our common analysis of the role of the superpowers in the Indian Ocean."

After Algiers, De l'Estrac and Uteem went to Paris, where they were received at the Elysee Palace by Guy Penne, adviser to President Mitterrand for African and Malagasy affairs. De l'Estrac said that the meeting resulted in a review of the world political scene, particularly the situation in the Indian Ocean. "We have excellent reasons to think that future relations between the French socialist government and a possible MMM/PSM government would promote the economic development of Mauritius and should not suffer from any controversies," he said.

In Paris, the MMM delegation had the opportunity to meet Majaraj Krishan Rascotra, who will soon be appointed foreign secretary of the government of India. Consequently, for the two members of the MMM, it was an opportunity to establish contact with the person who will be responsible for all foreign matters, particularly future Indo-Mauritian relations. "Furthermore, I found him very well-informed on the domestic situation in Mauritius and on our diplomacy, which greatly facilitated our task," De l'Estrac concluded.

11,464
CSO: 4719/556

JAPAN AWAITS ELECTION RESULTS BEFORE GRANTING AID

Fishing Port To Be Exception

Port Louis L'EXPRESS in French 20 Jan 82 pp 1, 6

[Text] Japan has decided to review its economic cooperation with Mauritius. The immediate effect of the decision will be a freeze on the processing of all Mauritian development projects submitted to the Japanese Government.

This is what emerges from a bulletin issued by a high Japanese official. However, it is stated that the Japanese Government's decision will not concern projects now being carried out (Albion Research Center, for example) or projects being negotiated with the private sector. With respect to the latter, these are mainly financing or investment agreements.

The reasons motivating the Japanese decision are not known. Nevertheless, it is said that, following the example of many international financing institutions or even of certain countries, Japan prefers to await the results of the general elections before embarking upon an aid program for Mauritius.

In government circles, it is said that nothing is officially known about the Japanese decision, but it is agreed that negotiations concerning the financing of various projects involving the infrastructure, technical assistance or direct aid in its diverse forms, are not moving along as the government would have wished.

One of the main projects involved in the Japanese decision, one very dear to the government, concerns the construction of a fishing port in the port region. It was originally planned that the fishing port was to be built in the vicinity of Roche-Bois and dredging had even begun. The work was subsequently interrupted, following the sinking of the dredger.

The project remained up in the air for several months and the government, while retaining its initial project -- that is, a fishing port completely detached from other port activities -- studied several versions of the project. Finally, according to our information, it was the reorganization of Pier C, the one now used, among other things, for the shipping of goods to Rodrigues, that was chosen.

Construction of a fishing port at Pier C would be more economical and would present other practical advantages.

Cost of the project is an estimated 50 million rupees. When approached to finance the project, the Japanese Government reportedly showed a great deal of interest in the completion of such a facility and reportedly suggested the opening of negotiations that allegedly led to the signing of a wide-ranging agreement to work the marine resources of the Mauritian economic zone.

According to information reaching L'EXPRESS, the Japanese Government reportedly agreed, not only to finance the proposed construction of a fishing port at Pier C, but also to take over completion of the project completely.

In circles close to the project, it is said that the only one exempted from the Japanese Government's decision to temporarily freeze aid to Mauritius would be the Pier C fishing port.

It should be emphasized that in recent years, relations between the Mauritian and Japanese governments have grown considerably closer and that Japan was becoming one of Mauritius' main suppliers of aid.

Japan To Finance Fishing Port

Port Louis L'EXPRESS in French 24 Jan 82 p 4

[Text] The project to develop a deepwater pier at Trou Fanfaron for the construction of a fishing port has been approved by the government, which is awaiting the first action of the Japanese Government. The project, whose cost is an estimated 50 million rupees, will reportedly be completely financed by the Japanese Government.

The project was discussed at the time of the visit by Minister of Fishing Seetaram to that country. He talked with the Japanese Government about the latest terms for the Albion Research Center, which will be officially opened by acting Prime Minister Veerasamy Ringadoo on Wednesday, 27 January.

The project consists of the development of a deepwater port, with facilities for the shipping and unloading of fish, as well as cold storage chambers and distribution facilities. Construction and development of the port will be entirely up to Japanese technicians, who will soon complete a detailed study of the project. The government hopes, after the project, to set up a national fishing company in order to close the 5-year master plan which the Ministry of Fishing drew up in 1976. Government circles talk of a grant from the Japanese Government, which is interested in this type of projects.

The choice of Trou Fanfaron will be submitted to the team of Japanese technicians who will visit the country in April. Mauritius' dossier, transmitted through the Japanese ambassador, also includes an application for assistance for several fishing projects. Seetaram has already outlined these projects for Japanese authorities.

11,464
CSO: 4719/554

BRIEFS

PSM DISSIDENTS JOIN PIM--The Mauritian Islamic Party (PIM) has two new members, Yusuf Limbada and Siddick Naudeer. The latter have just resigned from the Mauritian Socialist Party (PSM). Yousouf Mohamed, leader of PIM, has said he is very happy to welcome the two new members into his party. Interviewed by THE NATION, Mohamed stated: "The door is open to all those who desire to work alongside PIM, to safeguard liberty and democracy. We welcome people of good will, in order to carry on a campaign against dictatorship." We recall that Limbada and Naudeer had accused the leadership of the PSM of having deviated from its fundamental principles. [Text] [Port Louis THE NATION in French 15 Jan 82 p 1] 5170

CENTRAL ISLAMIC ORGANIZATION ESTABLISHED--Islam was the dominant theme at an important meeting of Mauritian Muslims yesterday [31 January] at the Green Field Garden to establish a central organization to defend the interests of Muslims and to be their spokesman with the authorities. It was on this basis that about 5,000 people heard various religious leaders of the Islamic world, as well as a number of leaders of religious or social organizations. Many banners calling for brotherhood, unity, and the mercy of Allah were displayed around the garden. The principal speaker at the meeting, Sheikh Mustapha Beeharry, imam of Noor-E-Islam Mosque, emphasized that the establishment of such an organism would make it possible for the Muslim community to make its voice heard. The objective would be the well-being of the Muslim community in the country, he said. The imam declared that no community can live in isolation. He said that we have to live in a state of interdependence, in order to preserve the multiracial character of the country. Sheikh Beeharry also declared that attempts to establish unity in the past failed and that this time the initiators of this effort do not want to associate themselves in any way with politics. Many resolutions bearing on the defense of Islamic rights were adopted by the people attending, including among other things that segas, where Muslim names have been used, should be prohibited. [Excerpt] [Port Louis LE MAURICIEN in French 1 Feb 82 p 4] 5170

SEYCHELLOIS FISH DEAL--The Mauritian Government has finally decided not to grant the request of the newly formed export-import company, INTRACORP, one of whose directors is none other than the secretary of the MMM, Paul Berenger. The company had expressed the wish to import 13.8 tons of fish into Mauritius from the Seychelles. One of the reasons given by Mauritian authorities for the refusal is that Mauritius now has a stock of 300 tons of fish on hand. [Text] [Port Louis L'EXPRESS in French 23 Jan 82 p 7] 11,464

CSO: 4719/556

REPORTAGE ON NRM ATTACK ON CHERINGOMA IN SOFALA

Maputo NOTICIAS in Portuguese 12 Feb 82 p 1

[Text] Units of the Armed Forces of Mozambique (FPLM), in a joint action with the Defense and Security Forces and the residents of Cheringoma, in Sofala, are continuing their search-and-destroy mission against the armed bands from South Africa that are operating under the cover of the "RNM" [Mozambican National Resistance].

According to the RM-Jornal broadcast of 1910 hours yesterday, in a report from the Radio Mozambique bureau in Beira, the military units are on the trail of the armed bands that attacked and looted the town of Inhaminga on 30 January.

Meanwhile, the Defense and Security Forces and the local population have recovered the goods and foodstuffs that the bandits stole in their attack on Inhaminga and then left behind at the scene in their headlong flight.

RM-Jornal said that large quantities of products, mainly foodstuffs, have been recovered and are now in storage at Inhaminga.

These actions are a response by the people of Cheringoma District to the watchword uttered at the mass meeting held on 3 February, the Day of the Mozambican Heroes, at Inhaminga under the sponsorship of the director of support and control of Sofala Province.

Some Statements

The newspersons of the Radio Mozambique bureau in Beira interviewed a number of Inhaminga residents, who told of the acts of vandalism and atrocities committed by the agents of the racist Pretoria regime.

The district commander of the People's Police of Mozambique declared that the attack by the armed bands of the so-called "RNM" began at about 0820 hours on 30 January. The commander was participating in the combat preparation of the militia forces of Inhaminga, in an area 4 kilometers from the town, when the first shots were heard from the attack.

He and the militiamen at once set out for Vila, via an area known as Dimba, where the population told the militia forces that bandits were lying in ambush awaiting their return. The militia forces thereupon changed the direction of their march.

The district commander of the PPM [People's Police of Mozambique] said that as they were crossing the CETA highway, currently under construction, he first observed smoke coming from the center of the town, indicating that the bandits had already captured all of the positions and were in the process of looting homes and commercial establishments of goods and food.

One local resident told RM that when he heard the first shots he thought it was the militia in a training exercise. When the gunfire continued, however, he left his house and then saw that it was not the militia but bandits of the self-appointed "RNM."

He tried to take refuge in the house but was immediately overtaken by some of the bandits. One of them then demanded his wrist watch and all the money he had on his person. This citizen said they robbed him of a total of 3,750 meticals, a wrist watch and an alarm clock, in addition to other goods and foodstuffs.

Continuing his story, the citizen declared that he fled at the first opportunity, taking with him two young sons ages 6 and 5 years.

There were other stories of cases of genuine savagery perpetrated by the South African bandits, including beatings, rapes, and the destruction of motor vehicles, locomotives and railroad cars. Public buildings were burned, and the civilian population was subjected to a genuine reign of terror.

10992
CSO: 4742/214

ITALIAN ASSISTANCE IN AGRICULTURAL STUDIES PLANNED

Maputo NOTICIAS in Portuguese 12 Feb 82 p 8

[Text] Representatives of the Italian company Bonifica yesterday delivered to the secretary of state for the Limpopo-Incomati Region the plan for the agricultural, livestock and agro-industrial development of the region that lies between the Sabie, Medio Incomati and Massintonto rivers.

The plan--which was authorized by the Third Congress of the FRELIMO Party and classified as high-priority and urgent by the Mozambican Government--provides for the construction of major social and economic infrastructures including the dam at Corumane on the Sabie River.

The consortium "CO.BO.CO."--consisting of the state enterprises Condotte d'Acqua and Bonifica and of CONACO Construzioni, a national construction consortium of the Cooperatives League of Italy--was in charge of drafting the plan.

Condotte d'Acqua and Bonifica are companies of the IRI-ITALSTAT [Industrial Reconstruction Institute-ITALSTAT], which groups together major industrial enterprises of the Italian state sector. They have vast experience in their field, as is attested to by numerous undertakings in many countries.

The consortium CO.BO.CO., which groups together the three nonprivate planning, construction, and financial participation companies, proposes to collaborate in our national development through the medium of integrated programs in sectors that are considered to be high-priority.

CO.BO.CO. is beginning its activity in Mozambique with the plan for agricultural, livestock and agro-industrial development in the region that lies between the Sabie, Medio Incomati and Massintonto rivers. This plan was recently completed and was delivered yesterday to SERLI by high-level officials of the Bonifica company.

These studies and projects are being carried out for the Secretariat of State for the Limpopo-Incomati Region and provide for a series of initiatives in the economic-production sectors and in the sociocultural area that will be mutually integrated.

The planning and implementation of this work constitute still another joint undertaking by the Mozambican state and by the state and cooperative sectors of Italy, whose collaboration has been steadily intensified.

10992
CSO: 4742/214

CULTURAL, ARTISTIC ACTIVITIES SUGGESTED FOR FREE TIME

Maputo NOTICIAS in Portuguese 8 Feb 82 p 1

[Text] A Mozambican citizen has at his disposal an average of 37 hours per week of free time.

A revolution is not sad, is not drab, is not boring. A revolution is lively, is joyous, is dynamic. This is why the subject of free time should be taken up and discussed at various levels. There is agreement (although far from universal) to the effect that there are few places, and little to do, to fill one's hours of recreation, diversion and leisure.

An expert on this subject (a friend of mine, incidentally) told me of his concern over this matter of free time. He said it is essential to avoid at all cost the attitude--which some people have--that "free time can take a man away from the social strife, the contradictions of the class struggle, his own everyday problems, and his struggle for a better future."

Free time cannot serve as an instrument for alienation, much less as a means for suppressing the creative activities of the workers and thereby channeling "their energies toward the satisfaction of their needs--principally of a material nature--and pursuing objectives that are purely recreational," as this expert put it.

Today, in our country, the exercise of free time is limited to a series of very well-defined activities. Sports--headed by soccer--polarize everyone's attention and are the principal activity of free time. It is, however, sports viewed not as an exercise but as a pastime, although the conditions exist for sports in which everyone could participate but which are neither encouraged nor publicized, largely because of the media's neglect.

There is the cinema, but with the repetitive showing of films which remain month after month on billboard and marquee. There are the variety shows, but in rather limited number and of only passable quality. There are the dances and recreational events, also few in number. And there are the night clubs, where prices are very high and which are beyond the means of a large percentage of the population--and which, to tell the truth, are of little or no value as recreation.

But what does one expect? One cannot sit idly, complaining that there is nothing to do with one's free time and waiting for someone (in this case the state, perhaps) to solve our problems.

At the neighborhood level, it will be necessary to arouse the creative initiative of individual citizens. There are such things as a theater for adults, a children's theater, puppet shows, bazaars, dances, poetry readings, songfests and music festivals. There is an endless variety of ways of filling our free time, provided we exercise our initiative.

Free time is one of the most important factors in the education of the new man.

This is true because, he said, "the influence of a given occupation upon the development of one's personality depends above all else on the content of that occupation and only secondarily on the amount of time spent on it."

The truth is that free time "is more fruitful when it is not simply utilized for entertainment but rather in cultural activities and in scientific, artistic and technological creation."

10992
CSO: 4742/214

BRIEFS

MAPUTO BLACKOUT--The city of Maputo was without electric power for approximately 4 hours yesterday beginning in mid-afternoon. According to an authorized source, the lack of electric power was caused by an interruption in the power supply from South Africa. According to information received from that country, serious damage occurred in the electric power supply system, resulting in a cutoff in supply to the Mozambican capital. As soon as the interruption was reported, technicians from the Mozambique Electric Power Company went to work to get the thermal electric power plant in operation. The lack of electric power during the period of several hours caused various difficulties in the normal life of the city, but this did not adversely affect the economic sectors. Problems were reported in connection with the city's automobile traffic, especially at the intersections, where the absence of traffic patrolmen during the afternoon rush hour was quite obvious. [Text] [Maputo NOTICIAS in Portuguese 11 Feb 82 p 2] 10992

OJM ADMISSION REORGANIZED--The membership admission brigades of the OJM [Mozambican Youth Organization] in Maputo Province were dissolved at the most recent provincial seminar for readjustment of procedures--which was held last month in Namaacha--according to a report issued by the organization. The report stated that this action was taken because of the poor performance of the brigades, which--among other shortcomings--had been unable to determine who "can be a member of the OJM, in accordance with the nature of our organization." The same source added that in replacement of the brigades a section for the specific purpose of admitting new members was created under the Organizational Department of the OJM in Maputo Province; it is to be headed by the respective official in charge. The seminar also studied the question of how youth should be occupied not only in specific tasks but also in their free time. The participants in the seminar concluded--with respect to the latter aspect--that dances, singing, band concerts, and excursions to places of historical, economic and touristic interest should--among other initiatives--be set forth on a list of priority activities to be drawn up by the OJM secretariats at all levels. [Excerpt] [Maputo NOTICIAS in Portuguese 12 Feb 82 p 3] 10992

CSO: 4742/214

RESULTS OF MEETING OF COMMAND CADRES NOTED

Niamey LE SAHEL in French 13 Jan 82 p 3

[Excerpt] Command cadres met in a conference in Tahoua on 11-12 January 1982 under the chairmanship of Col Seyni Kountche, president of the Supreme Military Council and chief of state.

Following the important opening speech by the chief of state, the conference heard the reports of prefects on the political, economic and social status of their respective departments, and speeches by the secretary of state for the interior and the principal directors of the Ministry of the Interior.

At the close of the ensuing discussions, 4 operating commissions were established: the Security Commission, Development Company Commission, Administration Commission and Social Commission.

The reports of the various commissions made the following conclusions and recommendations:

Only duly authorized government agents, departmental prefects and district subprefects shall exclusively handle the general supervision of government agents' activities in their respective districts. In this regard, command cadres, regardless of their status or function, are directly subordinate to regional or local administrative authorities.

Prefects and subprefects shall participate in planning, implementing, monitoring and evaluating regional and local development programs.

The budgets of regional organizations shall be managed more strictly and resources shall be used better to increase funds allocated for the investment program to meet the real needs of the population.

The people and cadres shall be better informed and made more aware of the goals of the Development Company, with a view to their conscious and effective participation.

A national debate on the Nigerien school system shall be opened in an effort to obtain solutions which will make it possible for the system to be socially integrated and economically attainable.

The conference praises the efforts made to complete sanitary infrastructures, while hoping that human and material resources will be increased to assure their proper operation.

The conference recommends that greater attention be given to planning, implementing and monitoring hydrological infrastructures programs.

The conference hopes for the timely provision of food for the population and additional livestock feed in areas with shortages.

The conference recommends the effective supervision of marketed grain no later than 28 February 1982.

11915
CSO: 4719/516

PAPER REPORTS ON UPCOMING ELECTIONS

Saint Denis TEMOIGNAGES in French 27 Jan 82 p 1

[Editorial: "Capturing Voters From the Right"]

[Text] Elections will be held 14 and 21 March in 18 of the island's districts. These elections, which will be totally useless and which were called for by the Right, will, nevertheless, be a test of public opinion as a whole. It will not be a test in terms of who gets elected (there is no question of overturning the Right's current majority at this juncture) but of voting shifts between the Left and the Right.

As we have said before, these elections offer the Left a good opportunity to inflict a defeat on the Right. What can also be said even at this point is that the Right is not going to be launching into this battle with a feeling of confidence. It struck a mortal blow to the Right when the president of the republic reaffirmed that Point 58 of the presidential program will indeed be implemented next year. The Right now knows that next year the elections to the unicameral assembly will be held on the basis of proportional representation.

Yesterday's JIR [JOURNAL DE L'LLE DE LA REUNION] informed us that for Debre, Virapoulle, Repiquet and Fontaine "the disappointment was real." One can see this also in the fact that so many candidates of the Right are running as "independents" (like Armand Nativel, for example). Right now they are afraid of running on the RPR [Rally for the Republic Party] or UDF [Union for the Defense of the Republic] ticket, because they know they are going to lose votes, and by this means they hope to fool the workers into believing they are "independents."

So the Right will not be marching into battle in high spirits.

This is why conditions are more than opportune for all the forces of the Left, and particularly for the PCR [Communist Party of Reunion], to capture votes from the Right.

Today we have the ammunition with which to convince the workers who have been tricked by the Right. There is the record of increases in social service by the government 6 months ago; there is the beginning of pluralism in the media on FR3 [France Region 3]; again, there is the reaffirmation by the president of the republic that there "will be no personnel reductions"; and, finally, there is the growing perception that the future of Reunion belongs to the Left, with the PCR.

The task of the Left, then, in this electoral campaign, is not to convince the workers who already support the Left, who already vote communist or socialist. It is rather a question of making contact with every worker who was fooled by the Right. We must contact those who are still subject to pressure, to blackmail.... We must go see them, give them the necessary explanations, and convince them that the future of Reunion belongs to the Left and its most stalwart defender: the Communist Party of Reunion.

Capturing votes from the Right will create the conditions for its total defeat next year. It is essential that the district elections result in even greater confidence among the workers, the farmers, the unemployed, women and the young people of our country that in 1983 the Right will be beaten and the Left come to power.

9516
CSO: 4719/581

FJAR ISSUES COMMUNIQUE ON DEVELOPMENT, ELECTIONS

Saint Denis TEMOIGNAGES in French 27 Jan 82 p 12

[Communique by the Political Bureau of the FJAR [Autonomist Youth Front of Reunion]]

[Text] The difficult predicament in which Reunionese youths finds itself today is the result of the colonial policy pursued by the government in our country for more than 20 years. Those who have been in power and are still in power have led our country's economy to disaster. The unemployment which has afflicted the country in the past has once again spread to the great majority of young people, who are having problems of every kind day after day.

Today it is necessary to have done with this situation. We must expand all the productive activities in our country in order to resolve this crucial problem: unemployment. It is up to the Left to take charge of this country's destiny in order to complete the task of development, for in 20 years of power the Right showed us its total incompetence and total irresponsibility.

So we should fight the Right in the upcoming elections. To do that, the leftist forces in the country must united. All progressive forces should unite to fight against the forces of reaction.

We should have this unity in time for the upcoming district elections. And the only way to achieve this unity is by a clear and unambiguous commitment to automatic, reciprocal and supportive withdrawal in favor of whichever leftist candidate has the most votes in the first round.

At this time, only the Communist Party of Reunion [PCR] has made its position known. The Autonomist Youth Front of Reunion declares its support for unity, and our position fully endorses that of the PCR.

All the forces of the Left must unite to inflict a defeat on the Right. In the current situation, they have an immense responsibility, for the development of the country and the future of the workers, the growers, the women and the youth depends entirely on unity.

9516
CSO: 4719/581

NEW PDS DEPUTY RESIGNS FROM PARTY

Dakar LE SOLEIL in French 18 Jan 82 p 3

[Article by Moustapha Mbodj]

[Excerpt] The Senegalese Democratic Party's [PDS] intention to adopt a tougher policy, recently announced by Mr Abdoulaye Wade, is still causing a stir within the party, since such a toughening of policy, in conjunction with recent events, could perhaps result in Mr Wade's extended absence. Thus following the expulsion last week of two National Assembly deputies, the so-called "puritanical" Mr Amadou Fall and Mrs Fatou Kane for "collusion with the enemy and divisive maneuvers," which was followed shortly afterwards by the resignation of Mr Doudou Ndoye, the national secretary for relations with internal organs, it is a Casamance deputy, Mr Famara Mane, who has just resigned, challenging the "arbitrary and antidemocratic measures" taken against national leaders who demanded explanations concerning the delegation of party members sent to Libya and the "personal actions of the PDS general secretary, Mr Abdoulaye Wade."

Whatever the case, the resignation of Deputy Mane, perhaps more than the others, is a significant loss for this party 1 year away from parliamentary and presidential elections.

It may be recalled that in 1978 he won a clear victory in his electoral district and was very influential in establishing the principal legal opposition party at that time in the south. Thus prior to his resignation, Mr Famara Mane was a member of the PDS National Secretariat and general secretary of the PDS Regional Assembly in Casamance. Mr Mane, who speaks of the "circumstantial leadership of the PDS" in his letter, definitely had a different concept of the internal democracy which should govern the life of a democratic party: "In solidarity with all sincere party members who care about Senegal's higher interests, I have decided to terminate all our political activities within this party, which has become a financial enterprise." However, Mr Mane stated in his press release: "I consider myself committed to those patriots who have resolved to defend just causes and appeal to all party members to bar the way for deception and demagoguery."

Mr Famara Mane is thus the second deputy to resign from the political body led by Mr Abdoulaye Wade within the space of approximately 10 days and the seventh to do so since the 1978 parliamentary elections, following which the PDS held 18 seats in the National Assembly. His resignation reduces the number of PDS deputies in the National Assembly to nine. How many PDS deputies will remain by the end of this legislature? This is a matter which Senegalese political circles are following with interest. As for the adoption of a tougher policy, which Mr Wade recommends, according to the PS [Socialist Party] general secretary this could mean that his party may not submit any candidates in the upcoming elections, even though this may be necessary. "We no longer wish to be the party brought out to endorse Senegalese democracy."

11915
CSO: 4719/516

COOPERATION AGREEMENT WITH CUBA SIGNED

Victoria NATION in French 12 Feb 82 pp 1, 2

[Text] An agreement on cooperation between the Seychelles and Cuba was signed yesterday [11 February] at National House by Maxime Ferrari, minister of planning and development, and Roberto Valdes Munoz, Cuban ambassador.

The agreement was signed in the presence of the principal secretaries from the Ministries of Foreign Affairs, Agriculture, Labor, Social Security, from the central administration of the government, and in the presence of the deputy secretary general for education, as well as before high officials of the Ministers of Foreign Affairs and of Planning and Development.

It covers cooperative relations between the two countries in the area of public health, agriculture, planning, education, sports, labor, and social security, as well as economic and commercial relations between the two republics.

Cooperative Will

Speaking at the close of the signature ceremony Minister Ferrari congratulated both countries on the fortunate outcome of the consultations between the Cuban delegation and the representatives of most of the ministerial departments. This agreement demonstrates, he noted, the cooperative will, fraternity, and friendship between our two peoples and constitutes a new advance over what was achieved in the past. Underlining the "volume of things to do together," the minister of planning and development, at the end of his short speech, expressed a wish for the full success "of the implementation of this will to work together in a revolutionary spirit so that our two countries can advance with more justice, more brotherhood, and more friendship."

For a Better Life

Speaking in turn, the Cuban ambassador to the Seychelles noted great satisfication with the conclusions which the two delegations had reached, symbolizing the desire of two countries to work together for a better life. He underlined the frank, sincere, brotherly, and open character of cooperation between the Cuban people and those of Seychelles. This agreement, he declared, expresses in the first place an initial step in the development of bilateral cooperation in different areas. Conseuqently, in the future we think that we can deepen this collaboration even further, Ambassador Valdes said at the end of his speech.

Having arrived in the Seychelles last Sunday [7 February], the Cuban delegation, led by Ricardo Guerrera Blanco, chief of the African Department in the Cuban State Commission for Cooperation, is to leave the Seychelles today [12 February].

5170
CSO: 4719/605

PRESIDENT SIAD SPEAKS ON JUSTICE DAY

Mogadishu HEEGAN in English 19 Feb 82 p 1

[Text] Mogadishu, Thursday — The General Secretary of the SRSP, President of the SDR Jaalle Mohamed Siad Barre has earlier this week attended a ceremony marking Somalia's Justice Day.

Speaking to the staff and employees of the Justice and Religous Affairs Ministry and security courts, the President said that the proper administration of Justice can only be assured when the public are awakened to its benefits.

«Justice can always take its right course when proper investigations begin right from the start with the honest assistance of the public», he said.

The President pointed out that Justice is rooted in and interpreted in accordance with Somali traditions and way of life and cannot be based on imported judicial systems.

Speaking on international justice, Jaalle Siad said that it was full of well-formulated but not properly practised laws.

The President commended the Supreme Court and the Ministry of Justice and Religious Affairs in General for efficiently executing justice in the country and urged them to redouble their efforts towards that end.

Earlier, the Minister of Justice and Religious Affairs, Jaalle Ahmed Shire Mohamoud, recounted the steps of Judicial development in the country.

The ceremony, which was held at the premises of the Supreme Court here, was also attended by the Second Vice President Major General Hussein Kulmie Afrah, members from the SRSP's Central Committee and the people's Assembly as well as other party and government officials.

New Court President

Meanwhile, the General Secretary of the SRSP, President of the SDR, Jaalle Mohamed Siad Barre, received at his office here Colonel Osman Male Ma'allim who was sworn in there for the post of President of the Armed Forces' High Court.

Speaking at the occasion, Jaalle Siad clearly outlined the great importance of the proper execution of Justice for the enhancement of national prestige and social development.

President Siad expressed his best wishes for the success of the new court President in the fulfilment of his weighty duties.

CSO: 4700/886

PRESIDENT SIAD RECEIVES FRENCH ENVOY

Mogadishu HEEGAN in English 12 Feb 82 p 1

[Text]

MOGADISHU, Thursday — The General Secretary of the SRSP, President of the SDR, Jaalle Mohamed Siad Barre on Tuesday night received at his residence here the French Presidential Councellor on African Affairs, Mr. Guy Penne, who arrived here last Monday night on an official visit to Somalia.

During their meeting, Jaalle Siad and the French official discussed bilateral relations and mutual cooperation as well as international issues of common interests to both countries.

Mr. Penne also conveyed to Persident Siad a personal message from President Francois Mitterrand.

Jaalle Siad requested Mr. Penne to convey his greetings and best wishes to President Mitterand, the government and people of France.

Earlier on the day, Mr. Penne met with Somali Minister for Foreign Affairs, Jaalle Abdurahman Jama Barre, with whom he reviewed bilateral relations and current major international issues, including the problem of the Horn of Africa.

Also, the French official had separate meetings with Somali Ministers of Information, and Planning, Jaalle Mohamed Aden Sheikh and Jaalle Ahmed Habib Hamed.

Their discussions focused on Franco-Somali relations and cooperation.

Mr. Guy Penne expressed the hope that his visit to Somalia would contribute to the promotion of bilateral relations.

Meanwhile, on Wednesday the Chairman of the National Commission for Refugees, Jaalle Abdi Mohamed Tarrah, received 13 GLR-160 Reneult trucks presented by the French government to alleviate the transport problem in the refugee camps.

The trucks were handed over to Jaalle Trrah by Mr. Guy Penne.

Speaking at the handing-over ceremony, Mr. Penne said the French people were deeply moved by the images of distress in the refugee camps in Somalia and expressed his confidence that the trucks would contribute to the alleviation of this distress.

«France's concern for the refugees in the camps in Somalia has expressed itself, beyond her action in the EEC, through food-aid, medicine-supplies, air-transports (at the time of the floods in May 1981) and teams of medical volunteers or agricultural volunteers,» he said.

Mr. Penne assured Jaalle Tarrah that he would transmit to French President, Francois Mitterand, what he called «the strong impressions» he felt when seeing Somalia confronted with this drastic situation.

Mr. Penne stated that the French Minister for Planning and Co-operation will visit Somalia in the near future to continue the talks that he had with the Somali government.

Speaking to reporters just before departure he added that his discussions with Somali government officials revolved round the theme of co-operation between France and Somalia.

Mr. Penne disclosed that he conveyed to the Somali President a message from President Francois Mitterrand along with an invitation for President Siad to visit France.

Finally, Mr. Penne who concluded a 3-day visit to Somalia expressed his thanks to the government and people of Somalia for the warm welcome accorded him.

CSO: 4700/886

INFORMATION MINISTER LEAVES FOR KUWAIT

Mogadishu HEEGAN in English 19 Feb 82 p 2

[Excerpt]

Mogadishu, Thrusday — A delegation led by Minister of Information and National Guidance, Jaalle Mohamed Adam Sheikh, left here Tuesday for Kuwait to attend the meeting of the Gulf countries' ministers of Information and Culture which is due to begin there next week.

In an interview given to reporters before his departure from the airport here, Jaalle Mohamed said that the meeting will centre on the increasing of television services and the co-ordination of T. V. programmes in the Gulf countries.

The Minister added that during his stay in Kuwait, he intends to discuss with the officials of the Arab Broadcasting and T. V. Union the enhancement of the co-operation relations and the exchange of ideas and experiences that exist between the information institutions of Kuwait and Somalia.

The delegation was seen off at the airport by the Chairman of the SRSP Bureau for party Central Committee Affairs, Jaalle Abdulkadir Mao Omer, the Minister of Industry, Jaalle Ali Khalif Galaydh, the assistant Ministers of Health and Information and other senior government and Party officials.

CSO: 4700/886

MINISTER RETURNS FROM PAN-ARAB MEETING

Mogadishu HEEGAN in English 19 Feb 82 p 2

[Excerpts] Mogadishu, Thursday — The First Vice-Chairman of the People's Assembly Jaalle Omer Arteh Ghalib and members of his delegation returned here on Monday after attending the Pan-Arab parliamentary Union meeting held recently in Kuwait.

Jaalle Arteh told SONNA at the airport that the annual meeting discussed ways of promoting Arab Unity and cooperation as well as other topics related to Arab causes.

It also discussed ways of forging closer links among Arab Parliaments and safequarding Arab interests, he said, adding that mutual understanding was reached on these matters.

After Kuwait meeting, Jaalle Arteh visited Qater and the united Arab Emirates where he discussed bilateral relations and cooperation. In both countries Jaalle Arteh also had meetings with Somali communities.

Welcoming the delegation at the airport were: Jaalle colonel Ahmed Hassan Musa, a member of the SRC's economic financial and trade committee, Jaalle Jama Mohamed Ghalib, Minister of Local Governments and Rural Development, Jaalle Mohamed Burale Ismail, second Vice-Chairman of the People's Assembly, and other government and parliamentry officials.

CSO: 4700/886

DEFENSE MINISTRY DENOUNCES SOVIET, ETHOPIAN PROPAGANDA

Mogadishu HEEGAN in English 19 Feb 82 p 1

[Text]

Mogadishu, Thursday — A spokesman for the Ministry of Defence has earlier this week categorically denied as baseless lies reports put out from Addis Ababa and Moscow radios alleging that fighting was going within the Somali National Army.

«These unfounded reports were also picked up by an irresponsible Reuters correspondent based in Nairobi who quoted Radio Addis Ababa which is notorious for its fabrications rooted in colonialism», the spokesman said.

The spokesman emphatically stated that there has never been any fighting within the Somali army but that, on the contrary, the valiant Somali armed forces and people are united more than ever in their preparedness for the defence of their sovereignty and independence.

«The purpose of this conspiratorial propaganda dessiminated by the Russians and the Abyssinians is to mislead world public opinion and subvert the stability of the Somali Democratic Republic».

«The Addis Ababa and Moscow Radios have become well-known for their mendacious broadcasts aimed at promoting the goals of colonialism and hegemonism», the spokesman noted.

CSO: 4700/886

ARAB LEAGUE CHIEF CONCLUDES VISIT TO SOMALIA

Mogadishu HEEGAN in English 12 Feb 82 p 2

[Text]

Mogadishu, Thursday — The Director General of the Arab League Educational Scientific and Cultural Organization (ALESCO), Dr. Muhieddin Saber, left here last Sunday after winding up an official visit to Somalia during which he discussed with concerned Somali officials ways and means of strengthening the on-going Arabization Programme in Somalia.

Speaking to SONNA before his departure, Dr. Saber expressed satisfaction at his visit which, he said, has produced fruitful results.

The ALESCO chief said his visit to Somalia was aimed at assessing ways and means by which the Arab League and its affiliated agencies could assist Somalia in its campaign of Arabization and the revival of Arabic Culture and language.

Earlier, the ALESCO agreed with the Somali Government to set up an urgent strategy pertaining to the intensification of Arabic in Somalia as well as preparing places and equipments for learning the Arabic language and culture.

CSO: 4700/886

NAVY CELEBRATES ANNIVERSARY OF FOUNDING

Mogadishu HEEGAN in English 12 Feb 82 p 2

[Text]

Mogadishu, Thursday — A ceremony marking the 17th anniversary of the founding of the Somali Marine Force was held on Tuesday night at the Navy's headquarters here.

In a speech at the ceremony which was attended by members from the SRC, the Party's Central Committee, and the People's National Assembly, as wel as senior Army officers and other distinguished guests, the SDR Assistant Minister of Defence, Major General Omar Haji Mohamed, congratulated the officers, the non-commissioned officers and sailors as well as their families on this occasion, expressing his best wishes for their progress and prosperity.

Jaalle Omer underlined the heavy duties awaiting the marine force to fullfil and accomplish its role towards the national development in political, economic, social and defence and security fields. He called on the Somali army members to carry out their obligations with honesty and to sacrifice their precious lives for the defence of tehe motherland.

«Since our coastline is very long and is rich with marine resources which are to be defended against any hostile forces, tehe Ministry of Defence intends to increase the power of the navy in terms of equipment and professional knowledge,» the Assistant Minister declared.

Earlier, the Commandant of the Somali Marine Force, Admiral Mohamed Omer Osman, delivered a report during which he outlined the history of the Somali Navy and its role in the national development efforts.

The commandant touched on the numerous problems the navy encountered under the corrupt regimes and the plans set up by the Revolution to speed up its development both in administration and knowledge to defend the country's 3000-km-long coast.

Jaalle Mohamed Omer declared that the Somali Navy is capable of detecting any sea manoeuvres, adding that he had full confidence in the Marine force which, he said, possesses both the technology and equipment to repulse any hostile force infringing upon the sovereignty and independence of the nation.

CSO: 4700/886

ENERGY, ENVIRONMENTAL MANAGEMENT SEMINAR CLOSES

Mogadishu HEEGAN in English 19 Feb 82 pp 1, 6

[Text] Mogadishu, Thursday — The Minister for Livestock Forestry and Range, Jaalle Mohamed Ali Nur closed on Wednesday a seminar on Energy and Environmental Management Needs in Somalia.

The three-day seminar has been discussing energy and environmental needs and considering ways and means of finding appropriate solutions that are adaptable to local conditions in the country.

The meeting which was broken up into separate research and discussion groups had come up with numerous final recommendations aimed at finding a practical solution for environmental and energy problems.

In his closing speech, Jaalle Nur highlighted the importance of the seminar which, he said, would set a good basis for tackling energy crisis, soil erosion and desertificaton.

The Minister who pointed out the numerous energy problems facing Somalia and almost all developing countries, said that the government has set up a national level committee to study ways of defusing these problems or at least deminishing their acuteness. He said that earlier experiments made to that effect have produced encouraging results.

Noting that energy could not be separated from other factors such as the raw materials, technical know-how and finance, Jaalle Nur stressed the need to accelerate the mutual understanding and exchange between developed and developing nations in utilization of new energy sources including that of the sun, wind, dung and water.

«We in Somalia, like many others in the developing world, wish to solve these problems by pursuing a policy of national self reliance through the framework of global cooperation and exchanges based on fairness and equity,» he declared.

The seminar is jointly sponsored by the faculty of Engineering of the Somali University, Ministry of Higher Ecucation and Culture in collaboration with the Program for International Development, Clark University and Volunteers in Technical Assistance. Supporting organizations have included the Somali Research Unit or Emergencies and Rural Development, Ministry of Local Government and Rural Development, the Ministry of Livestock, Forestry and Range, the Ministry of Planning, the Ministry of Water and Mineral Resources, the Somali Studies International Association, the United States Agency for International Development and its Program for Environmental Training and Management in Africa (ETMA).

PRESENTATIONS

Dr. R. Ford, Clark University, Dr. S. Waldron, Cortland State University compared price rises in wood and charcoal and noted that, over the last ten years, the increase in woodfuel has been greater than the rise in the price of petroleum. They also reported that women in refugee camps two years ago spent 1 hour a day gathering fuelwood. In 1982 some spent up to 9 hours a day.

Mr. Awallah, Director of the Northern Rangelands Projects, NRA, discussed the role of nomads in the energy/environment inerface. Defending nomadic lifestyles, he argued that nomads do not cut trees or destroy rangelands. Instead they protect them as they are the basic resources to carry out their pastoral livelihoods. The Government is now working with nomads to improve the range and waterpoints, in order to increase livestock production while conserving the environment.

Dr. M. A. Deria (Mineral Resources and Water Development) and A. Raghe (SRUERD) Presented findings of their research on household energy consumption in Mogadishu. In recent years, prices have jumped from 15 shillings in 1975 to 45 shillings per 100 kilo bag and the distances of transportation increased to about 300 km from Mogadishu.

Presentation on individual renewable energy technologies followed. S. Hirsch (VITA), H. Cauley (VITA) and P. Hassrich (UNICEF) described experiences with improving the efficiency of cooking stoves. Through more effective designs, efficiency can be increased from 10% to 50% Better efficiency can reduce wood and charcoal consumption by half.

Prof. L. Sugier (UNHCR) explained how use of solar cookers could reduce fuelwood costs to zero. Describing experiments in Beled Weyn, he told how women were cooking rice, meat, and vegetables with sun's rays. Further, hospitals and clinics were now able to sterilise water using only the sun's rays.

Oxfam representative Rob Fraser discussed their success with solar powered water pumps in refugee camps in the Hargeisa region. Though the pumps cost 4 times as much as diesel pumps, they consume no petroleum so the long run operating cost is less than a diesel pump. He estimated that in two years, the solar pump would pay for itself through reduced operating costs.

A.B.H. (National University), Peter Hayes (Energy Development Incorporated), and Western Fisher (USAID) reviewed the national energy situation and found that the largest single energy use in the country is household cooking.

CSO: 4700/886

CALL FOR EXPANSION OF MASS MEDIA

Mogadishu HEEGAN in English 12 Feb 82 p 5

[Article by Mohamed Robleh Noor in column "Friday Notebook": "Digesting the Mass Media"]

[Text]

The Somali Mass Media personnel along with the whole nation clebrated recently the nineth revolutionary anniversary of the Somali Mass Media Day. And as we experienced that important occasion, we felt the need to review the role of the Somali mass media as well as the setbacks that hinder its activities.

«The Information department should be provided with the necessary manpower and equipment to enable it to properly serve the interest of the nation», was one of the resolutions issued by the recent SRSP Committee Fourth Ordinary Session.

Visits of inspection to the headquarters of the Ministry of Information and National Guidance as well as its autonomous agencies have been carried out by the President and other SRC members. There is no doubt that the aim of such visits is in line with the fact that lack of effective communication media substantial development cannot be attained in economic, political, and social affairs.

The main objectives behind our communication media is to create social consciousness among the masses in order to make them aware of the importance of work; it is to utilize manpower for national development and progress. It is the information men who are to assess and evaluate people's participation in social construction, and to create competition among those enagaged in production so as to promote output.

On the double effects of the mass-media, an Egyptian writer and lecturer on mass media an information, Ahmed Taher, once told a group of African Journalists that the -mass-media as they come to the emerging Third World countries, are regarded by some to be «the great hope for democracy,» while others consider the press, radio and television to be «insidious devices that would capture and enslave helpless masses.» However, it is for the sake of the former of these two opposing view-points that makes incumbent upon us all the time to formulate a new and ambitious plan for improving and expanding our business of journalism.

We have to bring great upswing in this field, for communication is a basic element in the process of change and progress. The improvement of technical facilities should be given priorty inorder to ensure a wider and more efficient service.

CSO: 4700/886

REUTERS IS UPBRAIDED FOR SWALLOWING ETHIOPIAN PROPAGANDA

Mogadishu HEEGAN in English 19 Feb 82 p 2

[Editorial: "Lies Are Lies"]

[Text]

This week has again seen a typical example of interference in the internal affairs of one country by another when both Radio Moscow and Radio Addis Abeba broadcast false news about the SDR, alleging that its armed forces had clashed. What they wanted to imply in so many words is that it was on the verge of ruin However, no one was alarmed here or outside, and they were disappointed.

Propaganda from these two Radio stations are not something for any serious student who has been familiar with developments here in the Horn of Africa, particularly in the arena of politics; it is a region that has attracted much attention from everywhere by virtue of its being troub le-spot of unprecedented magnitude. But while such propaganda has been mainly in the form of «Commentaries» by «experts» in the past, at present it has been treated as «news». This may make no difference to the casual observer, but to those who are familiar with the art of propaganda this shift is significant. It means that having failed in their «commentaries», Russia and Abyssinia are trying another avenue to achieve their goal.

What we want to say to these terrible lies has already been said in the statement issued by the Ministry of Defence of this country. What we want to point out here, however, is that it is a pity that Reuters fell for the trap and spread the «news». This is understandable for newsmen are always in a hurry to get ahead of their rivals and this is the essence of news. But a good journalist should always keep in mind the bacground of the news he is handling-and therefore the sources.

In this instance how far can Abyssinia and Russia be reliable, for axample? Shouldn't Reuters learn from its fiasco?

CSO: 4700/886

MALAN DISCUSSES INCREASE IN TERRORIST ACTIVITY

Capetown DIE BURGER in Afrikaans 23 Feb 82 p 8

[Report: "Attacks Against South Africa Have Increased 200 Percent."]

> [Text] Johannesburg--Incidents of terrorism in South Africa increased by almost 200 percent in the first half of last year compared to the previous 6 months according to General Magnus Malan, Minister of Defense, in Alberton yesterday when he opened the 15th national congress of the South African National Institute for Emergency Services.

General Malan said that the government last year "approached its goal to a considerable degree" with its political, economic and social initiatives.

"Unfortunately it is one of the big contradictions of the world and time we live in that the greater the successes we achieve, the more we are attacked. The stability we create runs counter to the ambitions of Soviet imperialism and expansionism in Southern Africa.

"Thus the onslaught on South Africa will worsen through the use of instruments such as terrorism, other substitute forces, and a sustained campaign of psychological warfare. The reality of this renewed onslaught is on our doorstep," said General Malan.

Economy

"This evil threat to our country demands a carefully planned counter strategy and the generation of new military initiatives. Just as in the economy, where we use our mineral resources and reserves for the promotion of the nation's progress, it is also important in the military context to utilize our labor force to the greatest advantage."

General Malan said that the security and standard of living of South Africa which Afrikaners hold so dear require a greater degree of sacrifice and a greater devotion of all its citizens to insure that the burden of defense is shared fairly by everyone.

Lengthen

"Unfortunately, existing legislation and voluntary commitments have not created the necessary counter balance to insure our survival. Thus it is up to our legislators to establish new measures to expand the military service and place a more balanced burden on all citizens.

"At this point in time, however, it would not be fair to increase the period of initial military service, but instead to make an appeal to the citizen militia, the commandos and the reservists to make a greater contribution to our national effort," General Malan said. (SAPA)

8700
CSO: 4701/33

NP CONTROVERSY ON ROLE OF COLOREDS

Treurnicht Objects to NP Standpoint

Capetown DIE BURGER in Afrikaans 22 Feb 82 pp 1-2

[Political Report: Treurnicht Wants Clarification of NP (National Party) Policy."]

[Text] Dr Andries Treurnicht, Transvaal leader of the National Party, yesterday once again urged a stricter qualification of the government's policy on a new constitutional dispensation for whites, coloreds and Asians.

This follows newspaper reports about a threatening argument in the inner circle of the National Party after Dr Treurnicht recently objected to a view expressed in NAT 80's, the official informative publication of the National Party.

In an editorial, NAT 80's referred to the new constitutional dispensation being planned and said it is only logical that no more than one government can exist in one country.

When asked about it, Dr Treurnicht said yesterday: "The wording of NAT 80's touches one of the most sensitive nerves in our policy and such a standpoint will have to be very strictly qualified." Dr Treurnicht did not want to go into the matter any further.

Other NP spokesmen said that they were surprised about Dr Treurnicht's objection to the standpoint in NAT 80's, since the matter had been dealt with long ago in the NP inner circle.

DIE BURGER learned that the editorial had been approved for publication by a senior minister, Dr Piet Koornhof [Minister of Cooperation and Development] in his capacity as chairman of the NP's Federal Information Service.

The editorial was written by Dr Jan Grobler, member of parliament from Brits and chief information official of the NP. In it, he mentioned a series of realities which this current generation will have to accept in order to be able to survive. Among them are:

--that whites, Coloreds and Indians should inhabit a geographical area in South Africa within which individual living areas are provided for;

--that it is only logical that no more than one government can exist in the same country;

--that it is essential for population groups which inhabit the same country to participate in the decisionmaking processes of that country.

The editorial also said: "The carrying out of the aforementioned aspects is based on the cooperation and friendly disposition of every citizen in and around South Africa. The process is consultation on an equal basis."

It has been learned that Dr Treurnicht raised objections about 10 days ago to that position on government. According to him this could have far-reaching implications. He is also said to have feared that this could possibly be read to mean there would be only a mixed government in the future.

The matter initiated considerable discussion among NP members of parliament. Last week there were strong rumors that one of Dr Treurnicht's supporters wanted to bring up the question at the weekly NP caucus meeting, but apparently that did not come about.

In NP circles it is pointed out that the editorial was written after the Prime Minister, Mr P.W. Botha, had taken a strong position in the No-confidence debate on Coloreds. He committed himself to peace between Coloreds and whites, and he said that a separate sovereign government for Coloreds could not be created. He added that he was not pleading for a unitary state, but that he was expanding on the charge to the presidential council to find a co-existence for Coloreds and Asians.

Botha Defends NP Standpoint

Capetown DIE BURGER in Afrikaans 23 Feb 82 pp 1-2

[Political Report: "Treurnicht Objection; Prime Minister Takes Stand."]

> [Text] The Prime Minister, Mr P.W. Botha, yesterday took a firm stand with respect to the disturbances in connection with the constitutional policy of the National Party in which the Transvaal leader of the party, Dr Andries Treurnicht, and the chief information official of that party, Dr Jan Grobler, are involved.

From a statement in which he once again spelled out the policy of the National Party on that matter, and from an interjection in the Small Budget Debate in the House of Assembly, it appears that the prime minister has put Dr Grobler in the right on that question.

The dispute revolves around a view which Dr Grobler had expressed in an editorial in NAT 80's in his capacity as editor of that publication. Amongst other things, he wrote that it is only logical that in one country there can be only one government. Dr Treurnicht objected to that position and said that this requires "careful qualification" since it touches one of the most sensitive nerves in our policy."

In an interesting statement to DIE BURGER, the prime minister yesterday said, amongst other things, that there can be only one central government authority in a country, although there can be various government instruments. He also took a clear stand on sharing of power and said that for the NP the concept of consultation and shared responsibility is a form of healthy sharing of power.

Treurnicht

He also made it known that he himself will give guidance on the constitutional proposals of the Presidential Council to every provincial congress of the National Party. If the recommendations of the Presidential Council are received in good time, it could be done this year already.

In the Small Budget debate in the House of Assembly, Mr Harry Schwarz, chief spokesman on the finances of the PFP [Progressive Federal Party] asked the prime minister if he agreed with the editorial in NAT 80's.

Mr Botha answered: "Of course. I clearly stated that in the no-confidence debate."

Dr Treurnicht, who yesterday was involved in deep conversations with quite a number of colleagues, told DIE BURGER, when asked, that he did not have any comment on the prime minister's statement.

Earlier in the day Dr Grobler from Brits, where he is involved in matters of his electoral department, told DIE BURGER he didn't think it was good practice to enter into a public debate with a minister when there are differences of emphasis on policy. He thinks such a matter can be settled amicably.

"As far as I am concerned, the editorial is entirely within party policy, and I stand by it," he said. He added that the editorial has been approved for publication by senior colleagues to whom he is responsible.

In political circles one expects the prime minister's statement to elicit profound discussion. Several senior NP members told DIE BURGER that they hope the air is cleared now, after the statement of the chief leader.

Mr Botha's statement reads as follows: "During the no-confidence debate, I once again positively spoke against a system of one man, one vote under the Westminster system. I also pointed out that it is not possible to establish separate instruments for whites and Coloreds in the country without there being joint consultation on the first, second and third levels of government.

"I also stated that self-determination of the whites continues to be the point of departure for the government, but at the same time I said that self-determination is a relative term, not an absolute one.

"In my view too many phantoms are being evoked on the concept of 'sharing power.' The Progressive Federal Party and we don't think in the same terms on the term 'sharing power.' The members of that party strive for a unitary state and we don't."

"But for us the concept of consultation and shared responsibility is indeed a healthy form of sharing power, without abusing the concept of self-determination. Thus we prefer the term shared responsibility."

Only One

"I pointed out that joint services will have to be provided for white and Colored population groups, which will require joint consultation and decisionmaking.

"Further I stated that a separate sovereign parliament for Coloreds can not be created. There can be only one central government authority in the country, although there can be various government instruments. This concept was also embedded in the 1977 proposals of the National Party. Therefore, there was clarity already then on an executive State President and a joint Council of Cabinets under the State President's chairmanship.

"It must be obvious that treasury control and financial control ultimately can rest upon only one central authority.

"With respect to the much-discussed article of the chief information officer of the NP, I should like to point out that it must be read in the spirit of my exposition in parliament. The chief information officer consults with me regularly.

"We are awaiting the proposals of the Presidential Council on a future constitutional dispensation. When those proposals are made, the government and the NP will have a meaningful consultation on that.

"In connection with those proposals, I am planning to take the leadership myself at each congress of our party in various provinces. I have already indicated that a referendum on that is also a strong possibility," reads the statement.

Responding to a question, Mr Botha said that it is possible that the constitutional proposals will be submitted to the NP congresses already this year.

8700
CSO: 4701/33

BRIEFS

FIRST INDIAN POLICE OFFICER--Durban--A Durban resident became the first Indian to receive the rank of officer in the reserves of the South African Police.
Mr Dhanapalan Munien (40), an inspector in the city engineering office of Durban was informed this past weekend that he had been promoted to the rank of lieutenant. Mr Munien said he had been a police reservist for the past 19 years. "In 1968 I was promoted to sergeant and in 1976 to adjutant." He said he was very happy that he was the first Indian police reservist to receive the rank of officer. Mr Munien works mainly in Chatsworth, where he lives. (SAPA) [Text] [Capetown DIE BURGER in Afrikaans 23 Feb 8 p 4] 8700

CSO: 4701/33

KINSHASA-KISANGANI BOAT TRIP DESCRIBED

Dakar AFRICA in French No 138, Feb 82 pp 42-44

[Article by Francois Misser: "Zaire: A Cruise on the River of Paradoxes"]

[Text] In mid-October 1981, the Rivers of Africa expedition boarded the Kingabwa, an imposing craft which pushes a convoy of ONATRA [National Transportation Office] barges up the river from Kinshasa to Kisangani.

As far as Kwamouth--which lies at the mouth of the Kasai--we traveled on the river part of the "national route." From Shaba to the port of Ilebo on the Kasai, valuable copper, cobalt and cassiterite are moved along this route by rail to the rivers. They travel by river to Kinshasa; from there they must be moved again by rail to the port of Matadi, downstream from the cataracts, which is accessible to freight ships that transport them on the high seas.

We are on the Pool about 40 kilometers from Kinshasa: an inland sea 36 kilometers long formed by the Congo. A storm is brewing over the river.

But it is not the storm that has kept us immobile for 2 hours off the N'Sele model farm, whose tower sports the torch of the revolution and the emblem of the MPR [Popular Movement of the Revolution], Zaire's only party. Traffic has come to a halt on the river for another reason.

On the bridge of the Kingabwa the commanding supervisor--a Belgian whom--like many of his peers--the IMF requires the Government of Zaire to hire in an attempt to control the constant fraud plaguing the country--is no more reassuring than the Zairian captain.

A few yards away from us, the Kamanyola goes by--a superb yacht more than 50 meters long. On the prow the oriflamme and a red nautical flag marked with a golden leopard flutter in the breeze, indicating that Mobutu Sese Seko Kuku Gbendu Wa Za Benga is on board. The Guide's helicopter rests on the deck of the stern.

This fear is not surprising. Ever since our arrival in Zaire on 9 October, almost everyone we have met--expatriates cooperating with the present regime,

---

1 Ancient royal standard of France. -Tr.

"mwana-mam'boka", (children of the country), white Belgians and French people and many Zairians have been predicting a difficult autumn for the patriarch of Zaire, about whom there are rumors which would delight Gabriel Garcia Marquez, a master in the taunting of foundering dictators.

Sentences filtering in from outside the country have already been handed down, and little by little the people are becoming aware of them. All Kinois knows the rumor that two of the symbols of the citizen-president's omnipotence--his leopard skin cap and his staff--have been taken from him by members of his entourage. His ministers have just been reshuffled. The commander's statue is wobbling on its pedestal. The people laugh secretly, but they also tremble.

Everyone kopes that the MPR's torch will gradually go out without setting the plains on fire, but there is widespread discontent. The purchasing power of the country's currency is 1/10 what it was 10 years ago, before the advent of the present regime. The price of copper has collapsed, and it has become difficult to market it through unstable Angola. Clandestine trade in diamonds, minerals and coffee is on the increase due to the need to avoid the draconian policies of the Bank of Zaire, which punishes exporters by immobilizing foreign exchange that could be used productively. As many businessmen working in Zaire admit, illicit traffic in foreign exchange has become the country's main activity. Grievances pile up; even if formerly tenacious resentments have been forgotten, there is still hostility--and sharp criticism from artists--due to the demonetization of 1979 and the fact that many people were sent back with suitcases full of worthless currency.

The latest source of discontent among the people is the conscription of young students, who are often recruited to cover up the fact that families and governmental institutions are unable to meet their needs in terms of equipment and, especially, food. This is also an expedient way of hiding the juvenile delinquency which is rampant in the towns.

So we expected a great deal of "matatas" (trouble, fuss, loud talk), but it didn't materialize. Our trip across Zaire was facilitated by the authorities as never before. One more paradox? At any rate we had to take note of the fact.

We continued up the river at a speed of about 5 kilometers/hour, traveling on almost a hectare of rusted sheet metal, cement, beer containers (the variety of brands of dark and light beer found in Zaire suggests that this is perhaps the Belgain colonizers best legacy), rice, some tractors. A brand new ferry--a gift from the Guide to the region of upper Zaire--is secured to the convoy. Many of the barges are riding high; they will be loaded with grain, produce, or cattle for the return trip from Kinshasa with the Kingabwa.

The commander is in a rage. The convoy is delayed. The crew, in much less of a hurry, has its reasons for making a lot of stops. These underpaid sailors (whose monthly wage is 200 zaires, or about 7,000 CFA francs) survive as best they can. Their mottos--the same all over Zaire--are: "Article 15!," "Shift for yourself!" Everyone takes to heart the example of the leaders of the Kasai secession, who in the disorders preceeding the advent of the Guide gave diamond prospectors carte blanche to exploit the mines as they saw fit.

Ever since we left, there has been constant trading of hemp, sheets of copper, and foreign exchange in plain sight. From all sides--from the banks, from islands--canoes converge on the merchant convoys or mail boats, which the former colonizers--in their scornful arrogance--referred to as "cattle boats." Palm wine, crocodile feet, chikwang (cassava paste), saka-saka (cassava leaves), smoked monkeys, smoked fish, dried fish, fresh fish, thread-fins, bingas (a kind of pike, called "river tiger"), fresh water sole, eels, antelope thighs, and white cabbages are traded for beer, cigarettes, and the cartridges which circulate between the two Congos. But all that is of little account. The two commanders try to avoid the country's main problem: fraudulent trade in diamonds and ivory. At least they try to limit the damage.

The situation is similar where navigation and mechanics are concerned. The channel is well-marked up to the mouth of the Kasai (due to Gecomines); then it becomes more dangerous, where the river spills over onto the Sandy Beach area; several times a year the 4-5,000 tons of metal of an ONATRA freight convoy go aground on the sand banks. As far as trade is concerned, Kisangani --formerly Stanleyville--is just a secondary stop now.

When a convoy goes aground it takes 2 days of maneuvering to free the stranded barges one by one. It is very hard work. And then, if the helmsman is skillful enough to get through, there is the risk of "matitis" (water hyacinths) getting tangled up in the propellers and making the motor overheat.

The engines have to hold out, too. The boat is fairly old and hasn't been in drydock for 4 years. It was equipped during colonial times. A long trip is quite an adventure under the circumstances. It takes us more than 15 days to reach Kisangani.

A permanent miracle reigns in the engine room. Bathed in sweat at a temperature of over 50° C, the mechanics and their assistants, without tools (the Belgians suspect they sold them), have to struggle in clouds of vaporized oil to plug leaks of oil, diesel oil and water in faulty cooling circuits. There are no safety measures for the workers. Short-circuits constantly threaten the ship with local and generalized fires.

If the motors manage to keep going, there is still plenty of trouble. Ships going up the river from Kin often have to provide fuel for convoys coming down the river to the capital. The Kingabwa is no exception to this rule; on its return trip it therefore has to wait at M'Bandacka--700 kilometers upstream--for diesel oil. Thefts of fuel and exaggerated estimates of consumption--often made to cover up the usual fraud--don't help matters.

We have left the Bandundu region behind and entered the region of the Equator at M'Bandaka, where the Kingabwa leaves five barges in this town of opulent charm. Its lawns are closely mowed, its streets are neatly tarred; the solidly built dwellings with balconies bear witness to their past luxury and to the Guide's determination to keep up appearances in the capital of the region he was born in, setting it apart from the deterioration of the rest of the country.

Our average speed going up the river is 7 kilometers/hour. The convoy is lighter now, The waters of the Oubangui and the Sangha no longer join those of the Zaire. For several days we have noticed a curious phenomenon which the captain finally explains to us. A forest extends along both sides of the river in two levels: the living forest and the dead one. Tall trees--up to 30 meters sometimes--rise, bare, above a forest which is surprisingly short for this latitude. There are no clearings or trails visible in this variegated green expanse.

Twenty years ago, after an unusually heavy rainy season, there was a flood in Zaire which drowned several kilometers of forest on both sides of the river-bed. The water took several months to recede. The forest rotted but remained standing.

Pierre Kempf, head of the expedition, remembers that terrible year: The town of Bangui, where he lived, was completely flooded to the point where Avenue Boganda was accessible only in a conoe!

Like their comrades in other vessels, the Kingabwa's sailors continue applying article 15. They don't have a single valid zaire left, so they agree to tow the canoes of the Lokele fishermen in exchange for a little food. At least the fishermnn haven't suffered like the Basoko--whose little huts on pilings nestle in the bends of the green creeks--during the big flood. They live on their boats--up to 20 meters long--fishing from them and selling the fruits of their labors. They cover their floating homes with roofs made of palm leaves or bamboo.

As we approach Kisangani the shore-dwellers keep trying to accost the ship, which is now traveling at a speed of 9 kilometers/hour. Many boats founder--without serious consequences--in the backwash of the Kingabwa. This is a stop in a wild tract of the river, 5 kilometers before our final destination. The commander can't believe his eyes: 35 stowaways disembark.

Upstream from Kisangani the industriuus shore-dwellers of the Wagenia falls ply their trade. They, too, remember the great flood. Their huge scaffoldings--which cross the river in front of Mwele Island, where Henry Morton Stanley spent a week before descending with his army on the Arab slave traders on his second trip to the Congo after 1875--were completely demolished by the flood.

From these structures which they have built in the river they still sink their huge nets--more than 5 meters long--into the boiling rapids, counting on the force of the current to hold their catches.

This spectacular form of fishing has become famous throughout Zaire thanks to postcards and 50 makuto notes, and still draws crowds of tourists, but it no longer plays an important role in feeding the inhabitants of Kisangani. Demand is so keen, buyers come and take delivery of fish on the very banks of the river. A threat of ecological imbalance is building up there.

From the basin of the Zaire River to the African lake district--which we will reach from Kigali, capital of Rwanda, traveling on the Nyiabarongo and Akagera Rivers--there is a long journey to be made by road through Ituri and Kivu. We have covered the 1,300 kilometers between Kisangani and Kigali in a week, pressing ahead and passing all the other trucks, driving hard from 5 o'clock in the morning until dusk. This gives us an idea how difficult communications are in this country, where--like in Central Africa--certain regions are thrown back upon themselves, almost as though history were flowing backwards. Despite all its obstacles, the river remains the main artery of the country.

9855
CSO: 4719/570

END

JPRS 80389

23 March 1982

Sub-Saharan Africa Report

No. 2592

FBIS FOREIGN BROADCAST INFORMATION SERVICE

NOTE

JPRS publications contain information primarily from foreign newspapers, periodicals and books, but also from news agency transmissions and broadcasts. Materials from foreign-language sources are translated; those from English-language sources are transcribed or reprinted, with the original phrasing and other characteristics retained.

Headlines, editorial reports, and material enclosed in brackets [] are supplied by JPRS. Processing indicators such as [Text] or [Excerpt] in the first line of each item, or following the last line of a brief, indicate how the original information was processed. Where no processing indicator is given, the information was summarized or extracted.

Unfamiliar names rendered phonetically or transliterated are enclosed in parentheses. Words or names preceded by a question mark and enclosed in parentheses were not clear in the original but have been supplied as appropriate in context. Other unattributed parenthetical notes within the body of an item originate with the source. Times within items are as given by source.

The contents of this publication in no way represent the policies, views or attitudes of the U S. Government.

PROCUREMENT OF PUBLICATIONS

JPRS publications may be ordered from the National Technical Information Service, Springfield, Virginia 22161. In ordering, it is recommended that the JPRS number, title, date and author, if applicable, of publication be cited.

Current JPRS publications are announced in Government Reports Announcements issued semi-monthly by the National Technical Information Service, and are listed in the Monthly Catalog of U.S. Government Publications issued by the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402.

Correspondence pertaining to matters other than procurement may be addressed to Joint Publications Research Service, 1000 North Glebe Road, Arlington, Virginia 22201.

JPRS 80389

23 March 1982

SUB-SAHARAN AFRICA REPORT

No. 2592

CONTENTS

INTER-AFRICAN AFFAIRS

'FIGARO MAGAZINE' Views Soviet Thrust in Africa
(Robert Lacontre; LE FIGARO MAGAZINE, 20-26 Feb 82)..... 1

Maputo Conference Pools Ideas Against Imperialists
(ANGOP, 12 Mar 82)..... 4

Communique From Lake Chad Basin Commission Meeting
(Yaounde Domestic Service, 13 Mar 82)..... 6

Briefs
OAU Information Ministers Meeting 7

ANGOLA

Commentary on Return of 'Renegade' Savimba to RSA
(ANGOP, 15 Mar 82)..... 8

'Capitalist' Press Accused of Consistent Distortions
(Editorial; JORNAL DE ANGOLA, 12 Feb 82)..... 10

South African Use of 'Offensive Defense' Argument
(Editorial; JORNAL DE ANGOLA, 11 Feb 82)..... 12

Cuban-Built Cooperant-Occupied Housing Deteriorates
(Ocirema; JORNAL DE ANGOLA, 10 Feb 82)..... 14

Exorbitant Price of Fish, Inflation Affect Consumers
(Joao Serra; JORNAL DE ANGOLA, 18 Feb 82)..... 16

CAMEROON

Ahidjo Clamps Down on Civil Servant Absenteeism
(John Njowo; CAMEROON TRIBUNE, 17 Feb 82)..... 18

CENTRAL AFRICAN REPUBLIC

Patasse May Be Allowed To Go to Third Country
(AFP, 13 Mar 82)..... 20

'LE MONDE' Cites Franco, CAR Tension, 'Bitterness'
(Jean-Claude Pomonti; LE MONDE, 12 Mar 82)..... 22

CHAD

Government Sources Say France To Increase Aid
(AFP, 19 Feb 82)..... 25

Briefs
Goukouni Opposing GUNT Shakeup 27

ETHIOPIA

Briefs
Troops Captured 28
Poison Gas Usage 28

GABON

Bongo Addresses Nation on Party Anniversary
(Omar Bongo; Libreville Domestic Service, 12 Mar 82).... 29

GHANA

Anarchy Reportedly Reigns Among Troops
(AFRICA AFP, 23 Feb 82)..... 32

Former Official's Statement on Limann Rapped
(THE LEGON OBSERVER, 12-25 Feb 82)..... 33

Revolution's Ultimate Destination, Leadership Questioned
(Editorial; THE LEGON OBSERVER, 12-25 Feb 82)..... 34

Briefs
Membership Suspends Union Leadership 37
Peculiar 'Ghanaian Spirit' Rapped 37
Reorganizing Military 38
Wage Hike Application Withdrawal 38

GUINEA-BISSAU

Vieira Stresses Importance of Private Initiative
(Joao Bernardo [Nino] Vieira Interview; PRISMA LATINOAMERICA, Jan 82)..... 39

KENYA

Paper Criticizes Seychelles Allegations
(THE STANDARD, 13 Mar 82)..... 42

Briefs
Foreign Minister Visits Chad 45

MAURITIUS

Air Mauritius Registers Profit for Fiscal Year
(THE CITIZEN, 9 Mar 82)..... 46

NAMIBIA

Windhoek Prepares for UN-Supervised Election
(THE WINDHOEK ADVERTISER, 5 Mar 82)..... 47

SWANU Shocked by PW's 'Bullying' Tactics
(THE WINDHOEK ADVERTISER, 5 Mar 82)..... 49

Garoeb Quits NNF
(THE WINDHOEK ADVERTISER, 8 Mar 82)..... 50

Blacks in Kuisebmond Feel Squeeze
(THE WINDHOEK ADVERTISER, 5 Mar 82)..... 51

South Africa Lures Away Mining Talent
(Franz Kruger; THE WINDHOEK ADVERTISER, 5 Mar 82)..... 52

P. W. Botha Gets Proposals on Employment
(THE WINDHOEK ADVERTISER, 5 Mar 82)..... 53

Swabank Soon To Acquire New Look
(THE WINDHOEK ADVERTISER, 5 Mar 82)..... 54

Protest Group Slams German Radio Service
(Franz Kruger; THE WINDHOEK ADVERTISER, 5 Mar 82)..... 55

South African Government Plans R1b for Economic Aid
(THE WINDHOEK ADVERTISER, 5 Mar 82)..... 56

Namibian View of South African's NP Split
(Leon Kok; THE WINDHOEK ADVERTISER, 5 Mar 82)..... 57

Farmers Warned To Plan Wisely for 1982
(THE WINDHOEK ADVERTISER, 5 Mar 82)..... 60

Walvis Town Council Says 'No' to Holiday Resort
(THE WINDHOEK ADVERTISER, 5 Mar 82)..... 61

Mondesa Residents in Line for New Housing
(THE WINDHOEK ADVERTISER, 5 Mar 82)..... 62

Briefs
Raid Nets 200 63

NIGER

'Society of Development' on Point of Taking Effect
(Jerome Mainguet; AFRICA AFP, 19 Feb 82)..... 64

Briefs
Kountche to Saudi Arabia 67

NIGERIA

Briefs
NPN Scoffs at Opposition 68
'CONCORD' on Ghana's TUC 68
Party Registration Any Time 68

RWANDA

Briefs
Belgian State Secretary Visits 70

SOMALIA

DFSS Official Outlines Front's Program
(AL-BA'TH, 15 Jan 82)..... 71

SOUTH AFRICA

Treurnicht Seeks New Policy Mandate
(Jaap Theron; THE CITIZEN, 10 Mar 82)..... 76

PFP Makes 'Final Bid' To Rule Johannesburg
(THE CITIZEN, 10 Mar 82)..... 78

Reportage on Buthelezi Commission Recommendations
(THE CITIZEN, 8, 9 Mar 82)..... 80

Power Sharing, by Tim Clarke
Cannot Be Implemented, Editorial

Professor Dugard: U.S. 'Quiet Diplomacy' Fails To Promote Reform
(THE CITIZEN, 8 Mar 82)..... 86

F.W. De Klerk Elected To Lead Transvaal NP
(Jaap Theron; THE CITIZEN, 8 Mar 82)..... 87

PFP Leader Opposes Oberholzer Membership in Party
(THE CITIZEN, 8 Mar 82)..... 90

Unions Warn Government To Stop Detentions
(THE CITIZEN, 12 Mar 82)..... 91

Trade Agreement With Zimbabwe 'Inevitable'
(Keith Abendroth; THE CITIZEN, 10 Mar 82)..... 92

Inkatha Official: Buthelezi Report Proposals Watered Down
(THE CITIZEN, 10 Mar 82)..... 93

Lawyers' Reaction to Rabie Report 'Lukewarm'
(THE CITIZEN, 12 Mar 82)..... 94

Commando Chief Denies Knowledge of Seychelles Involvement
(THE CITIZEN, 10 Mar 82)..... 96

South African 'Lack of Direction' Cited
(Andy Thomson; THE CITIZEN, 11 Mar 82)..... 97

Split in Witwatersrand Student Council Reported
(THE CITIZEN, 12 Mar 82)..... 99

Top Afrikaans Educators Reject Asian Minister Concept
(THE CITIZEN, 9 Mar 82)..... 100

Details on Education for Blacks in 1982 Given
(SOUTH AFRICAN DIGEST, 26 Feb 82)..... 101

Standard Bank Forecasts Major Deficit
(THE CITIZEN, 8 Mar 82)..... 103

Police Station Attackers Appeal Treason Sentences
(THE CITIZEN, 9 Mar 82)..... 105

Barclays Consultant: Manufacturing in Relatively Sound Position
(THE CITIZEN, 9 Mar 82)..... 106

First Fully Multi-National Sports Stadium Opens
(THE CITIZEN, 8 Mar 81)..... 107

Special Railway Rates on Export Goods To Be Dropped
(THE CITIZEN, 9 Mar 82)..... 108

Rand, De Beers Drop on Stock Exchange
(Daan de Kock; THE CITIZEN, 10, 12 Mar 82)..... 109

Impact of Gold Price
First Cut Since 1944

Briefs
Servicemen Killed 112
Tourism Earnings 112
Pictures of Prisoners 112
Investment in Transkei 112
Steel Exports 113
New Vessel for Unicorn 113
Application for Phones 113

TOGO

Briefs
Pact With ROK Denied 114

UGANDA

'Strong Contingent' of North Korean Soldiers Unexplained
(MUNNANSI' NEWS BULLETIN, 6 Feb 82)..... 115

UPC Secretariat Warning Reported Against UPC Policy
('MUNNANSI' NEWS BULLETIN, 6 Feb 82)..... 118

Crackdown on Non-UPC Leaves University Without Faculty
('MUNNANSI' NEWS BULLETIN, 6 Feb 82)..... 119

Reasons for 'Crossovers' to UPC Discussed
(V. A. Ovonji; 'MUNNANSI' NEWS BULLETIN, 6 Feb 82)..... 121

UPPER VOLTA

Zerbo, Toure Speak at Banquet in Ouagadougou
(Ouagadougou Domestic Service, 12 Mar 82)..... 124

ZAIRE

Authorities Deny Move To Create Second Party
(AFP, 13 Mar 82)..... 126

Islamic Community Elects New Directors
(ELIMA, 21-22 Feb 82)..... 127

Kinshasa Takes Aim at Oil Black Market
(Editorial; ELIMA, 21-22 Feb 82)..... 130

ZIMBABWE

Ian Smith on Party Split: 'I'm Left Holding the Baby'
(THE CITIZEN, 8 Mar 82)..... 132

Briefs
Striking Bus Drivers 134

'FIGARO MAGAZINE' VIEWS SOVIET THRUST IN AFRICA

PM081305 Paris LE FIGARO MAGAZINE in French 20-26 Feb 82 pp 56-61

[Report by Robert Lacontre: "Soviet Grip on Africa Strengthens"]

[Excerpt] The pope has plunged into the African situation for the second time: poverty, incompetence, corruption and foreign intervention. This is the drama of 400 million people who are scarcely surviving on one of the biggest reserves of natural wealth in the world. The pontiff offered his understanding and love to enthusiastic crowds. He warned them against the main enemy of freedom and human dignity without mentioning its name. But everybody knows what that means for a Pole.

It is clear that Soviet communism now has three objectives in Africa. From Angola and Ethiopia, its two main conquests, the USSR aims to destabilize: the Horn of Africa; the center of the continent, with Chad and the Central African Republic; southern Africa, which is particularly rich in strategic minerals.

General Siad Barre, a historical African chief, who received me in Mogadishu, has no illusions. Africa is strangled, destabilized and recolonized. He is particularly aware of that since it was he who carried out a revolution here and established a democratic people's republic on the Soviet model. Then, realizing that he was going to be devoured by his protector--after the Egyptian As-Sadat and the Sudanese Numayri--Somalia in turn kicked out the invader.

Somalia then experienced a terrible war--the first conventional war in Africa. Hundreds of thousands of people were killed and hundreds of thousands became refugees. A regular offensive was launched by 20,000 Cuban soldiers, 5,000 Russians, and equal number of East Germans, Bulgarians and Czechoslovaks and 3,000 South Yemenis, airlifted in from Aden, amid complete Western indifference (more than 1.5 million Eastern bloc soldiers and "advisers" are implanted throughout Africa). The small Somali army, the Ogaden and Eritrea guerrillas, who had initially pushed Addis Ababa's tattered troops from their positions, were forced to fall back under the staggering blows of the modern Attila's sophisticated weapons. The red army's giant helicopters even transported heavy tanks behind the Somali lines. The massacre was terrible, at a time when Americans and Europeans were calmly taking their vacations.

Siad Barre answered my questions in Italian on a veranda full of wild canaries:

[Answer] The Eastern Bloc is taking the upper hand because it is acting. The Western Bloc makes do with fine words. The USSR is stepping up its acts of aggression with impunity. The whole world is in danger. The imbalance between the blocs will necessarily lead to World War III. I hope that you will eventually understand. I also hope that French troops will remain in Djibouti and will be strong enough to face the common enemy.

[Question] Is the Russian base at Socotra really a threat?

[Answer] Yes, to everybody. It controls the oil route. [answer ends]

Indeed, the Russians are doing considerable work there after deporting the whole population of those islands. But above all they are building a new and powerful military base at (Tchah-bahar) in southern Iran, near the Pakistani border, 400 km from Afghanistan, with Khomeyni's agreement. That is Russian's first thrust toward warm water, completing the encirclement of the Gulf--the czars' great dream.

[Question] Do you think Ethiopia intends to attack you again?

[Answer] Ethiopia alone is incapable of doing so. But if Moscow decides to... [answer ends]

While we were speaking and while the pope was offering his heart to the Africans, four MiG aircraft with Ethiopian insignia but piloted by Russians attacked the border village of Bohotleh with rockets and napalm. The previous day a Cuban commando group had penetrated Somali territory to raze a farm to the ground and slaughter the livestock. This small-scale harrassment is carried out week after week to frighten and demoralize the population.

[Question] Mengistu is said to be hard pressed, and young people are said to be throwing stones at the Russians.

[Answer] The Ethiopian people are not happy, that is certain. But the young are not throwing stones at the occupiers. They would be shot immediately.

[Question] Is it true that the Soviets are plundering all the mines and taking a large share of agricultural production?

[Answer] There is no doubt about that, but you businessmen in Addis Ababa know that better than I.

[Question] Is Mengistu a fanatic? Is he clever?

[Answer] He is the Russians' slave more than anything. Can a clever man agree to be a slave, can he be a bloody oppressor?

[Question] How are you coping with the burden of 1.5 million refugees?

[Answer] There are not 1.5 million but 2.5 million refugees in a country with a population of 3.6 million. They keep arriving every day. It is an enormous task to feed them, provide health care, house, clothe and educate them and provide them with work. [answer ends]

Somalia, with its 3,000 km of coastline passed by 90 percent of the oil tankers which supply the West, is in an important strategic position for the Free World. In addition it has gas, minerals, fish, two harvests per year, 50 million head of cattle, and oil has just been found... All it needs is finance and tools--more than ready-made factories and microprocessors. This is the black continent's whole problem: a fantastic reserve of natural wealth still unexploited. However, since decolonization, poverty and chaos have been on the increase, facilitating Soviet penetration. Out of 50 states, of which 17 are French-speaking, there is not a single democracy in the sense we give to that word. We are probably making the mistake of wanting to import our political concept of the world into a continent in which the tribal situation predominates. In 30 years of independence the killing has become general: millions of people have been killed, there have been vast genocides, there are 10 million refugees, whole populations displaced by war's guerrilla movements, score-settling and natural disasters. Some 3,000 tribes are tearing each other apart. There have been more than 100 coups d'etat, when one tyrant or dictator replaces another. There are few enlightened heads of state.

Mr (Pandalet Hozi Okito), chairman of the Socialist Party of the Central African Republic, is categorical. Another coup d'etat is being plotted in Bangui. Mercenaries are expected to land. The Central African Socialist Party leader revealed to me that infiltration is now taking place from Libya. The people involved are terrorists recruited from the 400 men whom Bokassa sent for spells in al-Qadhdhafi's training camps. Several of them have already been arrested. In Chad too there is total confusion. The OAU has administered a haughty snub to France and its present protege Goukouni Oueddei, president of the "National Unity Transition Government [GUNT]." The OAU standing committee now deems the GUNT leader no longer to represent anybody but himself and a handful of supporters. So Hissein Habre and his 40,000 northern armed forces warriors are swooping toward Ndjamena, the capital, now supported by Nigeria, the "giant of Africa" (80 million inhabitants), after seizing tons of heavy weapons abandoned in Abeche by the Libyans and Russinas in their "strategic withdrawal." Hissein Habre is once again becoming the strong man of Chad.

"There is no doubt that Moscow wants to control southern Africa too," the Namibian prime minister told me. Dirk Mudge added: "Nujoma and his South West Africa People's Organization are certainly tools of communism (financed by the USSR and many Western organizations, even religious ones--LE FIGARO note). That is why the Russians do not want the white sand blacks to unite." Moreover the apartheid problem, which does not exist in Namibia, does not interest the Kremlin. Nobody is more racist than the Russians. Moscow only wants southern Africa's raw materials.

CSO: 4719/662

MAPUTO CONFERENCE POOLS IDEAS AGAINST IMPERIALISTS

AB121935 Luanda ANGOP in French 1750 GMT 12 Mar 82

[ANGOP commentary: "Coordinated Action by the Frontline States"]

[Text] Luanda, 12 Mar (ANGOP)--The extremely dangerous situation prevailing in the southern part of the African continent created by the constant acts of aggression by the racist South Africans against the independent states of the region has once again been the subject of discussion by the heads of state and government of the Frontline countries who met on 6 and 7 March in Maputo.

The deliberations of this summit focused mainly on the Namibian issue, more particularly, on the development of the independence process of that territory which is illegally occupied by South Africa.

The meeting, which was attended by the presidents of Tanzania, Zambia, Angola, Mozambique, Botswana and the prime minister of Zimbabwe, was held at a time when international imperialism is seeking, at all costs, to reverse the situation in its favor by giving various forms of support to the South African racists so that they can continue their bellicose actions against the Frontline countries, more especially, the People's Republic of Angola.

In view of the arrogance of the reactionary Pretoria regime, the heads of state and government of the Frontline countries decided to coordinate their defense action more closely in order to prevent the South African regime from pursuing its military actions and economic sabotage against the free and independent states of the region and to compel it to withdraw its occupation troops from the People's Republic of Angola.

In fact, the South African troops stationed in Namibia stubbornly insist on extending their occupation to some areas of the sovereign territory of the People's Republic of Angola with the assistance of mercenaries and financial aid from the United States in order to put themselves in a position of military strength which could constitute for their patrons (Pretoria and Washington) a certain degree of supremacy at the diplomatic level.

The only road leading to a solution of the Namibian question has already been defined some time ago. It may be summed up as being the application of UN Security Council Resolution 435-78 with all the necessary mechanisms accepted by the international community for its full implementation and with the main objective of granting independence to the Namibian people.

In this vein, it must be stated that the delay so far is entirely the fault of the South African racists in connivance with their Western allies, mainly the United States. The proposal of the so-called contact group on the electoral system (one-man two-votes) (?has delayed) the negotiations since the Western countries knew beforehand that such a proposal would be rejected by the African countries and by SWAPO because it was too complicated for a people who had not yet had any such experience.

However, by accepting this project, the Pretoria government had solely one aim in view: that of prolonging the deadlock. The racist authorities supported the alternative proposals of the contact group, taking into account the vacuum created by the withdrawal of its acolyte, Peter Kalangula, "president" of the so-called "Democratic Party of Namibia" within the Democratic Turnhalle Alliance (DTA). Thus, the little hope they had in an electoral confrontation with SWAPO, if ever free and democratic elections were held under UN supervision, vanished since Kalandula's "party" represented the Ovambos in the "DTA."

South Africa does not agree to UN supervision of the elections, demanding on the other hand that this organization show impartiality. The racists are adopting the same position regarding the ceasefire. They would like the ceasefire to be supervised by troops from the "contact group," in other words, from the aggressive NATO block.

However, with all these maneuvers, only the intensification of the armed struggle by the Namibian patriots, headed by SWAPO, inside Namibia and by the South African nationalists of the vanguard party of the ANC in South Africa will dictate the final verdict.

Consequently, the Maputo summit has afforded an auspicious opportunity for the heads of state and government of the Frontline states to pool their ideas in order to define a stand that will check imperialist aggressiveness and to reaffirm their support for the liberation movements of southern Africa.

CSO: 4719/677

COMMUNIQUE FROM LAKE CHAD BASIN COMMISSION MEETING

AB130804 Yaounde Domestic Service in French 0600 GMT 13 Mar 82

[Communique issued in Garoua, Cameroon, at the end of the 26th session of the Lake Chad Basin Development Commission meeting held in Garoua from 4 to 12 March 1982--read by the commission's deputy executive secretary, Etienne Devi]

[Text] The 26th session of the Lake Chad Basin Development Commission was held in Garoua, in the United Republic of Cameroon, from 4 to 12 March 1982. The meeting took place under the chairmanship of Dr Ari Toubo Ibrahim, rural development minister and leader of the Niger delegation. Those who attended are:

Niger: Dr Ari Toubo Ibrahim, rural development minister; Maj (Bagnou Beido), prefect of Diffa; Tahi Moustapha, Niger's ambassador to Cameroon.

Nigeria: Dr Atanu Emmanuel, federal minister for water resources; chief Mrs Ayagbola Adenike Ebun, federal minister for planning; Mr Maya Bella, charge d'affaires of Nigeria in Cameroon.

Chad: Mr Naimbaye Lossinman, minister of state for rural development; Mr Taher Souleyman, minister for planning and national reconstruction.

Cameroon: Mr Amadou Moustapha, minister for town planning and housing; El Hadj Ousmane (Nay), governor of the northern province; El Hadj Lamine Yerima, Cameroon's ambassador to Nigeria.

Representatives of the following international organizations also attended: (?United Nations), the FAO, the Customs and Economic Union of Central Africa, the French Cooperation Mission [word indistinct].

During the meeting, the commissioners heard the report of the executive secretary and the reports of technical subcommissions on agriculture, animal husbandry, fishery and forest resources, civil engineering, telecommunications and water resources.

CSO: 4719/675

BRIEFS

OAU INFORMATION MINISTERS MEETING--Dakar, Senegal, 15 Mar (AFP)--Algeria pulled out of an OAU information ministers meeting due to open here today. Algeria's minister, Boualem Bessaiah, said he was withdrawing because of the absence of a delegation from the SDAR, which was refused entry to Senegal yesterday. The development was the latest in a row in the OAU over the admission as a member of the organization in Addis Ababa last month of the SDAR. Senegal is one of 19 OAU members which walked out of the Addis Ababa meeting over the Saharan state's admission, and has declared decisions of the Addis Ababa meeting null and void. Before leaving the conference centre with members of his delegation, Mr Bessaiah said: "I am withdrawing on principle because the SDAR has not been admitted to the conference." The meeting had been due to open this morning. A restricted meeting of delegation heads was continuing in the absence of the Algerian minister. According to the agenda, the meeting is to consider the launching of a Pan-African News Agency (PANA) and Afro-Arab cooperation on information. [Text] [AB151251 Paris AFP in English 1236 GMT 15 Mar 82]

CSO: 4700/918

COMMENTARY ON RETURN OF 'RENEGADE' SAVIMBA TO RSA

AB151910 Luanda ANGOP in French 1110 GMT 15 Mar 82

[ANGOP commentary: "Reporting to the Masters"]

[Text] Luanda, 15 Mar (ANGOP)--The renegade has returned to his lair, to the protection of his patrons in racist South Africa, after a few months absence during which he visited the United States to contact old friends he has known since his days as a CIA stooge. No sooner had he betrayed the cause of the African people in the Kingdom of Morocco than he reappeared in the haven of apartheid, a place where he seems to be perfectly at home.

This man, who has so much to account for to our people, because of his crimes, has returned to Pretoria to inform his present masters of the outcome of the mission they entrusted to him and to carry out new betrayals against sovereign and independent Angola.

If we believe the South African daily, THE STAR, he was received shortly after his arrival by Pieter and Roelof both and also by Magnus Mallan, to whom he is directly responsible because he coordinates all the destabilization activities against the People's Republic of Angola.

Besides, according to THE STAR, shortly after his arrival, the puppet expressed his satisfaction. In other words, he faithfully accomplished the dirty work that the racist South Africans had ordered him to do. In fact, the Pretoria leaders would have had difficulty finding a traitor as serviceable and as obedient as he is or as easy to manipulate.

During the meetings, according to South African newspaper reports, the racist leaders also had good news in return for the services of their valiant puppet. Besides all they have been given so far, in other words, money, arms and considerable logistical support, he can now count on other bases in the occupied Namibian territory, in addition to those usually presented to journalists, who approach the puppet, as liberated territory.

There will not only be other bases but definitely more instructors and more yankees and South Africans. In short, he is increasingly compromising himself with the racist South Africans.

Actually, what is now happening in Pretoria in the open, reported by the newspaper, is only one phase of the long trail of betrayal by a man who no longer seeks to conceal his behavior. He has even lost what little dignity he still had, if ever he did have any. After all, this is what he has always been throughout his life: a renegade, ready to sell his services to the highest bidder.

At present he is with Africa's worst enemies, at their service, and ready to obey all their orders.

Yesterday, during the long colonial night, he was with the oppressors in mind and in spirit, with the very ones who oppressed us, with the very ones who reduced us to poverty, who exploited our labor and our wealth. Now although he has not yet ceased to serve yankee interests, he is directly under the orders of the South African racists; he has sided with them against us and against our struggle for the human dignity of the Angolan.

He does not wish to see us free, masters of our own destiny. According to him, we must be like him, stooges of the South African racists. He has wagered everything against us, against all our attempts to achieve freedom, social progress and peace. As far as he is concerned, we should return to the past, to slavery and to the whip.

During the past weekend in Pretoria, our enemies devised, together with the renegade, new plans of action against the Angolan people.

We will not be taken by surprise. We will be vigilant and defend ourselves against the attacks of imperialism and its stooges.

The struggle continues!

Victory is sure!

CSO: 4719/679

'CAPITALIST' PRESS ACCUSED OF CONSISTENT DISTORTIONS

Luanda JORNAL DE ANGOLA in Portuguese 12 Feb 82 p 1

[Editorial by ANGOP]

[Text] At all times in the history of the bourgeois press, competition and sensationalism have been the main characteristics distinguishing it from the rest of the world's press. They are its chief means of survival. Experience has shown, however, that this morbid sensationalism is displayed only in connection with facts or events related to socialist or progressive countries.

For example, when a South African airplane crashes to the ground, the West European press says that a South African scheduled airliner crashed. But when the same disaster occurs with a Libyan plane, for example, capitalism's "big press" says that a "Russian" plane operated by Libya's regular airline has crashed.

When it comes to facts and events in the countries in the southern part of our continent, especially those that have undertaken to build a life of social justice for their respective peoples, the bourgeois press tends to subordinate those facts and events to the main issues of the current era--that is, the conflict between socialism and capitalism. This is especially true when those facts or events threaten imperialist interests.

In 1976, when the brave FAPLA [People's Armed Forces for the Liberation of Angola] fighters captured several mercenaries who had been indiscriminately massacring peaceful inhabitants in northern and southern Angola, the famous but sorry sensationalism of the Western press disappeared. But when an international tribunal, organized for the specific purpose of trying the above-mentioned mercenaries, condemned those criminal agents from the reserve army of international capitalism (in London, Paris, Bonn, Lisbon and so on), we heard voices raised in capitalism's "big press" to say that it was a barbarous act on the part of the RPA [People's Republic of Angola]. On the other hand, personal items captured in southern Angola and belonging to internationalists killed in combat have been placed on public display in carefully prepared exhibits in South Africa, and the sensationalists go along with it.

Never in all history has the Western press devoted as much space to anything as it has to the presence of Cuban fighters in the RPA. It has even reached the height of ridiculousness and confusion by trying to relate their presence to the process of independence in Namibia, which was illegally occupied decades before the invasion of Angola by South Africa's racist army and mercenaries. The magnitude of that invasion forced the sovereign government of the People's Republic of Angola to appeal to its natural allies: Cuba and the Soviet Union. During the last half of the 1970's, and more specifically since 1978, the presence of Cuban internationalists in our country has served as the backdrop to international imperialism's Machiavellian justification of the persistent illegal occupation of Namibia by the South African racists, despite repeated explanations by the governments of the RPA and Cuba that the presence of Cuban fighters in Angola is a legitimate act of sovereignty that has nothing to do with the independence of Namibia and the freeing of the Namibian people from apartheid.

And now more than ever, the capitalist press has cynically revealed itself in the light of the real facts as clearly stated in the joint Angolan-Cuban communique on the Cuban presence in Angola, whose obvious rightness it kept quiet about, thus revealing, by its attitude, imperialism's real intentions in southern Africa.

Even the "famous" BBC, which monitors and records Angola National Radio's news programs every day, made little or almost no comment on the matter, while THE GUARDIAN, published in London, was the only newspaper to make a slight reference to the communique by Angola and Cuba concerning the presence of that friendly country's internationalists in Angola. Its report was based on a sketchy REUTER dispatch datelined Lisbon, and all it did was report the fact and add an international commentary that said: "The presence of Cuban troops in Angola is one of the key issues in negotiations between the European contact group and the African front-line states regarding Namibia's independence."

A few weeks ago, however, the WALL STREET JOURNAL of London [as published] devoted an article to the subject. That newspaper questioned the ability of the RPA's sovereign government to induce the Cuban internationalist troops to withdraw from its territory, calling that possibility a "dream" and an "illusion." But the same newspaper turned a deaf ear to the enlightening communique by Angola and Cuba.

But even though such cynical silence on the part of the bourgeois press constitutes an extremely dangerous weapon against the enlightening of world opinion concerning the true nature of imperialist policy in southern Africa, such an attitude gladdens us because in fact, it constitutes recognition--even though tacit--that the presence of Cuban fighters in Angola actually presents no obstacle whatever to the process of Namibian independence. On the contrary, it is the persistent illegal occupation of Namibia, the consequent subjugation of the Namibian people, and the criminal aggressions and ambitions of apartheid which are the chief factors for instability and tensions in southern Africa.

Sweeping apartheid out of Namibia and South Africa and banishing it means stabilizing southern Africa and defending world peace.

The struggle continues!

Victory is certain!

11798
CSO: 4742/221

SOUTH AFRICAN USE OF 'OFFENSIVE DEFENSE' ARGUMENT

Luanda JORNAL DE ANGOLA in Portuguese 11 Feb 82 p 1

[Editorial by ANGOP]

[Text] The thesis used by the South African racists in attempting to justify their permanent aggressiveness and barbarism is well known. It is the frequently proclaimed thesis of "offensive defense." From that point of view--curiously close to a tactic used in soccer--"the best defense is attack."

Supposing that the thesis is reasonable, to what kind of attack are the racists referring? Certainly not one from Angola, because the Angolan Armed Forces have never violated the territory of any other country, and they do not even have a common frontier with the racists.

Perhaps SWAPO's guerrillas? Although the South Africans say that is it, logic forces one to admit that SWAPO is in its own national territory and is recognized by the community of nations as the legitimate representative of the Namibian people, whereas the illegality of the racist occupation has already been sufficiently demonstrated.

The answer could also be the same one that has been used as a pretext at least since the 1920's to justify all repressive and dictatorial actions just about everywhere in the world--the Soviets! That argument is so weak that the racists themselves sometimes appear ashamed to believe it.

All the other probable perpetrators of an attack on South Africa having thus been eliminated, we are left with the apparently illogical conclusion that the racists are afraid of being attacked by themselves. A few recent events will perhaps help to throw light on that apparent contradiction.

In recent days, several international media have published dispatches from Capetown saying that an "alarming" stiffening of repressive legislation in South Africa is being passed during the current session of Parliament.

The various bills on security include the new legal provisions that further restrict freedom of the press, which in South Africa's case means the repression of criticism by the English-language press, by the parliamentary opposition, and by organizations that the National (Afrikaner) Party of the racists is not able and never will be able to control.

Meanwhile, several racist leaders holding high positions in the apparatus of apartheid are beginning to fall into contradictions that reveal the confusion and desperation prevailing in their ranks. At the same time that Gen Magnus Malan, minister of defense, is saying that South African troops can hold out "indefinitely" in South-West Africa, his colleague Gen Constand Viljoen, chief of the SADF (South African Defense Forces), has admitted in an interview with the FINANCIAL TIMES that the solution to South Africa's problem is political, not military.

For the well-known defender of the "offensive defense" thesis, however, only greater racist aggressiveness will be able to prevent a South African defeat throughout southern Africa, and at the same time that it says it has no intention of attacking the front-line countries and professes a desire for "cooperation, not confrontation," the attacks on Angola and other countries in the region are increasing.

For his part, Prime Minister Botha does not conceal his concerns. In his opinion, Namibia has become "too heavy a burden" for South Africa. This leads some observers to believe that such statements are designed to prepare South African public opinion and the voters for the inevitability of Namibian independence, while also justifying indirectly the realities of the situation in Namibia as they relate to the economic-financial problem resulting from capitalist exploitation.

Recent South African and Western intrigues aimed at complicating the current negotiation process for Namibia's independence--denounced at the time by comrade President Jose Eduardo dos Santos in his speech of 4 February--merely reveal the vacillations and, above all, the serious contradictions of those trying desperately to halt or at least delay the march of history. The cause of apartheid is indefensible. The independence of Namibia is irreversible. Thoroughgoing changes for the benefit of the overwhelming majority of South Africa's people are not postponable.

In Namibia and South Africa, apartheid will be swept away and forever banished from the face of the earth.

The struggle continues.

Victory is certain.

11798
CSO: 4742/221

CUBAN-BUILT COOPERANT-OCCUPIED HOUSING DETERIORATES

Luanda JORNAL DE ANGOLA in Portuguese 10 Feb 82 p 2

[Commentary by Ocirema]

[Text] The situation being experienced by hundreds of tenants in the L15's--the residential housing opposite the Americo Boavida Hospital on Hoji ya Henda Avenue--is simply deplorable. And it is even more deplorable because it is beyond comprehension why it is taking so long to resolve an electrical breakdown. Ninety percent of the units located along the above-mentioned avenue have been without electricity for over 10 days because, according to what we have been able to find out, the power cable that was installed cannot handle the load of so many domestic appliances such as radios, air-conditioning units, washing machines, and other appliances.

The situation is all the more distressing because all the refrigerators have stopped, causing food to spoil. And this at a time when, as is known, certain kinds of food--fresh vegetables--are difficult to find in the market.

Furthermore, we call attention to the fact that many of the tenants in those units are cooperants and, almost all of them, intellectual workers (teachers, doctors, engineers, and so on). They are workers who, because of their specific type of activity, are forced to read and work at night in their homes to correct papers, prepare subjects for their classes and so on. All of this may give an idea of how greatly electricity is needed in those residential units, not to mention the fact that certain individuals take advantage of the darkness to commit antisocial acts by looting the apartments in question.

While it is true that the organization responsible for the distribution of electricity has already sent in a crew to repair the damage, it is also not a lie to say that at the rate that crew is working, the situation is going to drag on for an undesirable length of time.

We also want to note that because of the power failure, some tenants have decided to make a few unauthorized connections that could result in serious accidents. For example, we recall that a pioneer was electrocuted in those units some time ago because a socket was exposed.

It also seems to us that the organization responsible for looking after those units ought to pay more attention to them. The units, which were built with Cuban cooperation, are obviously deteriorating due to the lack of care and vigilance. Trash is beginning to gain ground, with the surrounding lawn beginning to be used as a garbage dump for all kinds of trash, and this gives the housing units a look that is not at all agreeable.

We conclude by saying that if steps are not taken, those units, which were opened about 2 years ago, will soon suffer the same fate as certain other buildings which do not dignify the city.

11798
CSO: 4742/221

EXORBITANT PRICE OF FISH, INFLATION AFFECT CONSUMERS

Luanda JORNAL DE ANGOLA in Portuguese 18 Feb 82 p 2

[Commentary by Joao Serra]

[Text] Saying that there is a shortage of fish in Luanda means, at best, evading the truth and dangerously postponing discussion of a matter which truly needs to be analyzed and resolved very urgently and with great clarity because it involves an indispensable item in daily nutrition.

After all, who does not know that fish are abundantly available every day in all the city's outlying markets, although at speculative prices beyond the means of most of the inhabitants? Who is unaware that on Cape Island, a very profitable business is done every day with the fish which should be available at reasonable prices but for which in fact one must pay an arm and a leg?

Before all else, it is necessary to recognize that speculation has taken root at all levels and to a quite serious extent in the capital's retail markets. Things have gotten to the point that it is practically impossible to buy any basic food product at the official price. Sales practices violate all the price schedules even in the municipal markets, but the inspection teams do not seem to have the courage to interfere and force the retailer to observe the legal profit margins. The only one seriously harmed by this is the consumer, who is helpless in the hands of the speculators and must engage in appalling gymnastics just to survive from day to day.

Several of the country's officials have frequently warned of the need to combat this dangerous phenomenon of speculation, but their directives are not always heeded in the inspection work that ought to be carried out by certain organizations in charge, and the result is plain to see. Prices are continuing to rise steadily, the population's living conditions are growing worse day by day, and the dangerous growth of a lower middle class of speculators is continuing steadily through an accumulation of capital which results from exploitation of the least privileged working classes and which may, in the future, even become a serious and dangerous hindrance to the harmonious development of the socialist society in the People's Republic of Angola.

As long as the state sector does not establish an extensive network of fish markets for supplying the city, the efficient distribution of ocean products will not be possible, and until such conditions are created, the small-scale fishing fleet (which is already quite difficult to control) will continue with impunity to supply the illegal and speculative fish marketing channels.

The general rise in the cost of living is, at bottom, a vicious circle providing (fragile) justification for the speculation that has been increasing at all levels. If we look at things correctly, we will see that there are no great differences between the prices charged by the fisherman on the Luanda coast and those charged by the speculator supplying the illegal markets on the city's outskirts. A bit of fish on Cabo Island never costs less than several thousands kwanzas, but the reasons for the free play of market prices cannot be looked for only in the shortage of fishing equipment.

The reason must be found chiefly in the great disparity between supply and demand. That disparity is caused in part by the lack of a network of fish markets capable of insuring that the quantity of fish the consumer must buy every day will be available.

One thing is certain: if there were effective inspection to control fish prices and a network of fish markets duly supplied by the Ministry of Fisheries, it might be possible to alleviate this problem, which is so harmful to the population and which has long been a matter of concern to the country's officials.

Fish are an excellent source of indispensable protein in the public's diet, but with the high prices currently being charged in Luanda's speculative markets, few people can enjoy the benefits of that national resource in normal conditions.

If the inspection teams do not operate more effectively, two problems will remain: the people's problems will not be solved, and the directives from above, which are very clear on this subject, will not be complied with.

11798
CSO: 4742/221

AHIDJO CLAMPS DOWN ON CIVIL SERVANT ABSENTEEISM

Yaounde CAMEROON TRIBUNE in English 17 Feb 82 pp 1, 3

[Article by John Njowo: "Ahidjo Speaks Out: Crushing the Ugly Head of Absenteeism"]

[Text]

The Cameroon administrative machinery has been gathering grit over the years to the point where its operation has become problematic. The number of man-hours lost through unjustified, and often unpunished, absence from work has progressively piled up and the cost has become too burdensome for the government to continue blinking.

The deadweight of the bureaucratic process has almost brought the administrative machine to a complete standstill. This feeling has so pervaded every section of the body politic that, civil servants and state agents go off and come back to their jobs at their guise, without fear of any disciplinary penalties against them. Others ripe for retirement have been known to prolong their stay on their jobs until swept away by other forces not originating from the General Statute of the Public Service.

It was with the aim of pumping much needed steam into the General Statute of the Public Service that the head of State on Friday, 12 February 1982, revised this eight-year old text. The revision deals a severe blow to absenteeism, a dogged problem that has drained the administration of much efficiency. Absentee civil servants and state agents can henceforth be slapped with any of these nine sanctions, in ascending order of gravity:

– a written warning;

– a censure inscribed in one's file;

– a job suspension for three months;

– a hold-back in pay increase for one year;

– a step-down in one or many salary echelons;

– a step-down in class;

– a step-down in grade;

– an annulment of pension rights without job suspension; and – an annulment of pension rights with a job suspension or a drop in position.

SPEED

The 1974 statute regulating conditions of service in the public service contained many of these disciplinary measures. The trouble was that whatever teeth these sanctions had were taken away by the heavy and labyrinthine bureaucratic process they had to go through before being implemented. The result was that the sanctions got side-tracked at one stage in the process. Immediate bosses also found themselves powerless in the face of indisciplined civil servants, since only a minister could ascertain whether or not a civil servant had transgressed any of the civil service regulations.

The new statute goes round this burdensome process by granting immediate bosses, for the first time, powers to record and immediately report to the Ministries of the Public Service and Finance, all cases of illegal absence from work. Though limited to bosses serving in the external (provincial) services and not the central administration, this measure has been acclaimed by many as a giant and bold step in the effort to stem the threateningly rising tide of absenteeism.

In a letter to all ministers, delegates-general and governors last Friday, President Ahidjo hits hard on this subject. He instructed that any civil servant illegally absent from work must immediately be brought before the Disciplinary Council, his salary and family allowances suspended and, if he qualifies for dismissal, must be fired without any delay. The head of State called on all of them to clamp down these regulations on defaulters with all firmness and without any laxity.

IRREGULAR

Though the bureaucracy may be too bulky and tight, things trickle to the top when they get too bad. Thus, the head of state has noted many irregularities among civil servants wanting to be temporarily released from the public service to pursue some goals. Or the manœuvres of those nearing retirement. Or those asking permission to be off work owing to ill-health and other exigencies.

President Ahidjo thus condemned those civil servants who will get into every ruse to prolong their stay in the public service past their retirement period. Such civil servants not only hold back their old-age pension documents from the Ministry of Finance, but also present spurious documents hurriedly scrambled together to side-step the vigilance of the administration.

Those who request to be temporarily released from their jobs for some personal pursuits, desert the administration the next day without waiting for authorisation from the competent authority. Others still, the head of state indignantly observed, file in their application for a temporary release from a foreign country, while others who so irregularly left the public service come back and pick up service again without the administration's approbation.

Civil servants who stretch out with impunity, a few days permission into weeks and even months are innumerable. This, in particular, is a situation that has made the administration look like a crippled elephant, whose radio and newspaper warnings to those concerned to report back to their jobs, "faut de quoi ils seront placés en position d'absence irrégulière", draws out only a shrug from them.

President Ahidjo laid the blame for the indiscipline among civil servants on the doorsteps of what he described as a "regrettable laxity in the follow-up of personnel" and on the "poor use of the available human resources".

STRICT APPLICATION

The administration's low efficiency and heavy financial loss incured as a result of personnel indiscipline will continue, dragging the government downhill unless the administration resolves to sternly manage its personnel at every level. On the eve of the launching of the Fifth Five Year Social and Economic Development Plan, the head of state has called on the public service to become more productive, to help pull up, not drag down, the country's development.

Consequently, the head of state called on all to "scrupulously respect the regulations in force" concerning the operation of the civil service such as, retirement age, temporary release from service and illegal absence from work.

For all civil servants in categories A and B, therefore, the retirement age is 55, while for those in categories C and D, the retirement age is 50. However, where certain conditions are fulfilled, a civil servant may bust these retirement age limits:

– where a civil servant is still physically fit and intellectually alert enough to continue service in a job that has not yet been taken away;

– where a civil servant's knowledge or professional competence is such that his departure is likely to cause a brake in the service or disturb the smooth running of the service·

CSO: 4700/852

PATASSE MAY BE ALLOWED TO GO TO THIRD COUNTRY

AB131357 Paris AFP in French 1107 GMT 13 Mar 82

[Text] Bangui, 13 Mar (AFP)--Ange Patasse, the CAR opponent who took refuge a week ago at the French Embassy in Bangui, may soon leave the CAR for a third country, it was learned from official sources on Saturday in the CAR capital.

Seven countries--not mentioned--in Africa have already been consulted by France to welcome the suspected instigator of the coup attempt which was carried out in the night of 3 to 4 March [words indistinct] immediately opposed to a "categorical refusal."

The third country suggestion made by the French authorities to the CAR Government has not yet been formally and unanimously accepted by the latter. Negotiations are still going on between the sides involved. In exchange for its "good will," it was learned from informed sources, Gen Andre Kolingba's regime would obtain increased political and economic support from France.

A moderate at the head of the ruling Military Committee for National Redress (CMRN), General Kolingba has been trying to dissipate resistance within the regime to any compromise with France.

On Friday at a weekly cabinet meeting, General Kolingba stressed the "realism" of his position and strongly called on the government members to follow suit. Informed sources pointed out in Bangui that the group of "hard line" officers of the military committee was at first believed to have accepted the bulk of the decision of the military council.

It seems that the "Patasse issue," which has clouded French-CAR relations during the past few days, is now heading toward an "amicable" solution. It seems that the CAR has admitted that France could not turn over a political opponent who has asked for asylum.

Observers believe that the compromise of a third country would enable [words indistinct] and however, there is still a clear feeling of "frustration" among CAR leaders.

General Kolingba stated on Thursday that France would do the CAR "a great favor" by turning over Mr Patasse. Three days earlier, Information Minister Lieutenant-Colonel Grelombe refused to "suppose" that France would not handover to CAR the leader of the dissolved Central African People's Liberation Movement (MLPC), saying that it was "important" for the country that Mr Patasse should face CAR law.

Whatever the case, nothing appears to be disturbing French-CAR traditional cooperation which has continued to be manifested in facts: On Saturday in Bangui, the two countries were to sign four loan agreements, totalling 15.6 billion CFA francs, for rural development and public works. [as received]

CSO: 4719/670

'LE MONDE' CITES FRANCO, CAR TENSION, 'BITTERNESS'

PM121617 Paris LE MONDE in French 12 Mar 82 p 4

[Dispatch by Jean-Claude Pomonti: "Bangui Authorities Want to Avoid Aggravation of Tension with Paris"]

[Text] Bangui--The days come and go but are not the same on the banks of the Ubangui. After the diplomatic to-ing and fro-ing of the previous day, Wednesday 10 March was the day of appeasement, notably in Franco-Central African relations. So much so that some people almost denied the existence of a "crisis" between Paris and Bangui.

The ultimatum broadcast three times by Bangui Radio Tuesday--demanding that [former minister and liberation front leader] Ange Patasse be handed over to Central African justice within 48 hours--was nothing more than a misunderstanding the following day. Indeed, as the QUAI D'ORSAY stated Wednesday, all that was being demanded was a French answer to the extradition request made Sunday evening by the Central African Government. In other words after the short visit made by [Elysee adviser] Guy Penne--which took place Tuesday in a "courteous" atmosphere--both sides agreed to "play down" the situation. A solution would then be devised taking account of France's concern, expressed by [Elysee secretary general] Beregovoy, to "respect the right to asylum."

Some people think that reason has finally prevailed. A few policemen remained on sentry duty outside the French Embassy, carrying out rather friendly checks on the visitors while the French ambassador was being received by head of state General Kolingba. People had even forgotten that 1 week earlier oppositionists had tried to seize power by force and that two general officers, who have since been struck off the list of army officers, were on the run, and that the main leaders of Mr Patasse's movement for the liberation of the Central African people--a movement which has been dissolved--were under lock and key. Other people, however, thought things were a little too good to be true.

In a news flash at noon Wednesday Bangui Radio took a compromising tone by stating that the military committee for national recovery, while "demanding Mr Patasse's extradition," hoped that "the problem could be solved in the interests of France and the CAR and in the interest of our sovereignty without necessarily producing a major crisis."

In short that was a far cry from the curt statement the previous day that the local authorities had "demanded that Mr Patasse be handed over to Central African justice within 48 hours," at the very time when Mr Mitterrand's adviser was in General Kolingba's office.

Many Unknown Factors

However, a whole series of questions remains unanswered. First, since Paris has granted the Central African refugee the right of asylum, it is important not to underestimate, whatever their immediate reaction, the degree of bitterness felt by the Central African military leaders who have thus been "thwarted" of a complete victory over the regime's "bete noire." For months, by a campaign of secret pamphlets, Mr Patasse defied the authorities and tried to dig an ethnic gulf between the north and south of the country. After his return his friends called on the Bangui population to rebel. The Central African Government was bound to feel that its authority had been undermined by the right of asylum granted to an adversary who, had his undertaking succeeded, would perhaps have been ruthless--at least that is what official circles here think.

Moreover it must not be forgotten that the Central African leaders think--there are apparently documents to prove it--that Mr Patasse was in agreement with Idi Lala, leader of the clandestine Central African national liberation movement which claimed responsibility for the 14 July attack on a Bangui cinema and which is generally accepted to have ties with Tripoli. In other words Mr Patasse is allegedly linked to the Central African in Libya's "Islamic legion" who have secretly reentered their country of origin.

Although the Central African authorities talk of "presumed complicity concerning some prominent French people," they are taking care not to cast doubt on the Elysee's attitude. What strikes them as incomprehensible is that during a 5-month stay in France Mr Patasse was able to have some semiofficial contacts in Paris. "We do not care a damn about the socialists. Central Africa is not Mitterrand's France," a top official said rather bluntly on the subject of the echos, which are unintelligible here, of the polemic on Mr Patasse between Le Quotidien De Paris Amd [PS first secretary] Jospin.

That question raises the more serious problem of relations between France and French-speaking Africa. The government in office here does not always understand how the PS can talk a different language from the French Government. Wherever there may be duality it is seen as duplicity on this continent. There is therefore talks of "complicity" with oppositionists and even of a "double game." The African Governments can only accept a single French voice and bilateral relations at the top.

Whatever happens now Mr Patasse's fate promises to poison relations between Paris and Bangui, at least in the next few weeks.

At present Bangui the coquette is slumbering. There seems little likelihood of an anti-French demonstration there and the desire for compromise with the former mother country--the main donating power--will prevail within the ruling military committee. In short, time will do its work and with the aid of Franco-Central African friendship, the scar will automatically vanish. Let's say that Wednesday proved the optimists' right and let us simply hope that subsequent events will not prove them wrong in this country which has a precarious balance and which had already suffered enough trials not to have to suffer any more painful ones.

CSO: 4719/670

GOVERNMENT SOURCES SAY FRANCE TO INCREASE AID

Paris AFRICA AFP in English 19 Feb 82 p 19

[Text] Paris, February 18--The French Government, placed in a difficult position by Chad's rejection of OAU proposals for a ceasefire and elections there, said Wednesday it had "taken note with interest" of the proposals but still planned to offer reconstruction aid to its former colony.

Following a report to Cabinet members by the Ministers of External Relations and Cooperation, a spokesman said the Government "reaffirmed its attachment to the principles of unity, territorial integrity and the independence of Chad," which has been torn by civil war since February 1979.

The spokesman said France wanted to contribute "through active technical cooperation with Chadian authorities, to the reconstruction of the country."

Government sources said France would send aid of 80 million francs (13.3 million dollars) this year, up from 55 million francs last year.

The Government declaration was the first official French reaction to the recommendations of the Organization of African Unity's committee on Chad, which met earlier this month in Nairobi.

The OAU called for a ceasefire between Chadian Government troops and the rebel Armed Forces of the North (FAN) by the end of this month. It also called for a constitution to be drawn up and for general and presidential elections before the end of June, when the OAU peace-keeping force is scheduled to withdraw.

Cool Analysis...

Chadian President Goukouni Weddeye rejected the OAU proposals, placing France in an awkward position since it had based its continued aid to the Central African country on the OAU's recognition of the Chad Government.

President Goukouni called on the OAU to "pull itself together and analyse the Chadian question coolly in order to help to end the war."

"The failure of the OAU in Chad will be the failure of all Africa," he added.

French Government sources note that, while the OAU disagrees with Mr Goukouni on the means to establish peace in Chad, it has not withdrawn its support of his Government. The sources said that France planned no peace initiative of its own in Chad. Despite French economic and military aid to the Government, the rebel forces of former Defense Minister Hissene Habre have taken control of about two-thirds of the country--a fact which observers said had caused some embarrassment in Paris. (A.F.P.)

CSO: 4700/874

BRIEFS

GOUKOUNI OPPOSING GUNT SHAKEUP--Ndjamena, February 17--Embattled President Goukouni Weddeye has indicated his willingness to step down if it would help to restore peace in Chad. But he told a press conference here yesterday he opposed a reshuffle in his Transitional Government of National Unity (GUNT), composed of leaders of most of Chad's numerous factions, "although all the Ministers are suggesting it." (A.F.P.) [Text] [Paris AFRICA AFP in English 19 Feb 82 p 18]

CSO: 4700/874

BRIEFS

TROOPS CAPTURED--Khartoum, 14 Mar (AFP)--Eritrean guerrillas have captured 67 Ethiopian soldiers in continuing fighting in the Sahel and Af-abet areas of the disputed region, according to a communique issued here today by the Eritrean Peoples' Liberation Front. The front communique said that Eritrean guerrillas launched a counter-attack against Ethiopian Government forces last Wednesday, on the "right flank of the north-east Sahel front," killing 370 Ethiopians and capturing a large quantity of equipment. Other Ethiopian casualties were announced in "light fighting" on the same day on the Af-abet front. Fighting was continuing "in favour of the EPLF (although) the enemy is armed to the teeth with Mi-24 helicopter gunships, tanks, missiles and a variety of sophisticated weapons," the front said. [Text] [NC141548 Paris AFP in English 1537 GMT 14 Mar 82]

POISON GAS USAGE--Damascus, 15 Mar (KUNA)--The Eritrean Popular Liberation Front (EPLF) charged Ethiopia Monday with using poison gas against the Eritrean national resistance. A statement circulated here Monday by the EPLF said Ethiopian forces fired mortar shells containing poison gas in their attack on the area of "Trakrak" near the Eritrean-Sudanese borders. The EPLF has recently appealed to the U.N., the Islamic Conference Organisation, the Organisation of African Unity and the non-aligned movement to intervene to stop the use of the internationally prohibited gas and to support Eritrean citizens, the statement added. Meanwhile, a communique by the EPLF said the bloody conflict that broke out early last month between the Ethiopian army and the Eritrean guerrilla fighters along the Eritrean coastal areas is still continuing. The EPLF forces have claimed the destruction of seven jetfighters in an attack on Asmara airport in addition to three helicopters. [Text] [LD151708 Kuwait KUNA in English 1536 GMT 15 Mar 82]

CSO: 4700/914

BONGO ADDRESSES NATION ON PARTY ANNIVERSARY

AB121208 Libreville Domestic Service in French 0600 GMT 12 Mar 82

[Address to the nation by Gabonese President Omar Bongo on 11 March, the eve of the 14th anniversary of the Gabonese Democratic Party--recorded]

[Text] Gabonese citizens, comrades and friends: On this 14th anniversary of the creation of the Gabonese Democratic Party [PDG], I cannot fail to observe the tradition which demands that I should address you a message to celebrate an achievement which is very essential because it is fundamental for the perenniality of our nation and decisive for its material and human progress. This essential achievement is our national unity and it is our great national party--our single, institutionalized and constitutionalized party--which has strengthened this unity of which it is the guarantor. Since 1968, the PDG has been playing the role of principal instrument and factor of the renovation of our silent, peaceful, deep-rooted, positive and genuine revolution.

Which man of good faith can deny that during the past 14 years we have laid the necessary foundations for the elevation and consolidation of our society and nation by changing the human elements who, before then, were separated from one another? We could not have achieved the union and cohesion of these elements without changing radically some habits which were against our interests. The fact that both were finally achieved without brutal constraint and serious trouble within the society clearly proves our party's good sense as well as its correct appreciation of what is useful and necessary for the survival and prosperity of our national community. It is this victory that we are celebrating today. This victory enabled our country to tackle in all serenity and serious-mindedness our task of development of all the sectors of our national life in a persevering and dynamic manner. The accomplishment of this task has enabled us to transform our country's image. It has achieved for us prestige, consideration and the confidence of foreign countries and given us the hope for more progress and a brighter future. The event is therefore an important one and should be celebrated with joy and the awareness of accomplishing a patriotic duty.

Comrades and friends: On this occasion which is of particular significance for Gabon, I wish to talk to you in order to inform you about certain things; I also wish that you should engage in a deep reflection about the development of the task we have undertaken and are accomplishing together. [Passage indistinct] We must distinguish three stages in our country's development over the past few years. As early as 1977, we noted the overheating of our economy resulting from the considerable increase of our budgetary resources following the oil boom. Knowing that we were late, we wanted to rapidly furnish our house and supply our national family with all the good things of life. This haste--coupled with the absence of good planning, galloping and generalized imported inflation and the voracity of the birds of prey of savage capitalism--nearly plunged us into the gulf of bankruptcy. Thus, the oil boom which suddenly illuminated our lives also seriously darkened and compromised our immediate future.

Very happily for us, we understood the situation and quickly reacted by preparing a courageous national recovery plan which won the admiration of all and greatly helped reestablish the financial and economic situation of our dear country. In the financial field, we reduced by half our foreign debts, while in the economic field we began the application of an interim plan based on our economic and social priorities after 2 years of groping in the dark due to the reduction of public investments.

This resumption of economic growth, which marked the second stage of our country's development that I am now trying to explain to you, was aimed at setting up a political and institutional platform. Economic and social action cannot be conducted in the absence of the political field and political institutions. In fact, a country's government is a single entity. No sector should be considered in isolation nor should there be an airtight partition separating the country's various activities.

It was with this vision that during the past few years our country organized free elections at all levels of our country's political life: presidential and legislative elections as well as elections of new provincial and departmental assemblies and municipal councils. Moreover, we reorganized our great party in order to strengthen and regenerate it. A period had thus come to an end and another had begun. We carried out these reforms with respect for the popular will expressed during the PDG's second extraordinary congress and with the firm conviction that our people had become politically mature. [Passage indistinct]

I do not want to take this opportunity to seek greater popularity nor to create fear for me. I want to be understood. I want to take the opportunity to call for national unity, which is the main objective of this speech which is being delivered on the anniversary of the creation of the PDG. The party has (?a lot of work to do) and its essential role is to ensure (?national cohesion) and unity. National unity is not a mere political concept to be considered as a symbol. It is an active and living reality and, just like any living thing, it can become weaker, fall asleep and even die. It is the urgent duty for party officials and all male and female militants to revive national unity through their work, their zeal and dedication and to always breathe into it more [words indistinct] and vigor. In this regard, I will in conclusion urge you all not to relent in your great vigilance in this new stage. You must make further efforts so that our party too will be given a new impetus.

The years 1979 and 1980 were years of great successes for our party because it fully played its role of leading our country to its goals. We must not allow these great successes to be followed by a period of failures. We must fight in the political bureau, in the Central Committee, in the unions and committees against complacence of which I am seeing some signs. We must know that we still have a lot to achieve. Let us return to our living sources of militant action. Count on me as I am counting on you for new struggles and for new victories.

Long live the PDG! Long live the Republic of Gabon!

CSO: 4719/670

ANARCHY REPORTEDLY REIGNS AMONG TROOPS

Paris AFRICA AFP in English 23 Feb 82 p 18

[Text]

LAGOS, February 23 - Rampaging Ghanaian troops killed more than 75 people in a clash with members of a religious sect in Kumasi, Ghana's second-biggest city, earlier this month and burned the body of its leader at a crossroads, Ghanaian refugees reaching here told AFP yesterday.

The refugees said anarchy now reigned in Ghana,with troops ignoring all orders and pillaging and extorting money in rural villages.

An eyewitness said the religious sect killings began on Sunday February 7 in Kumasi, nearly 200 kms (120 miles) north-west of the Ghanaian capital, Accra.

The eyewitness said soldiers went to the Church of "The Lord is my Shepherd" sect, which has nearly 10,000 members in Kumasi, to search for a priest. One of the soldiers was jostled and a clash followed during which a woman police sergeant who belonged to the Church was killed.

Other sect members retaliated by killing a soldier, the eyewitness said. When news of this reached the local barracks, soldiers went on a rampage, hunting for sect members and burning their Church to the ground. They killed the head of the Church, Prophet Odifur Asare, displayed his body at a crossroads in Kumasi and later burned it, the eyewitness said, adding that 78 people in all had been killed in the two-day rampage, which only ended with the imposition of a curfew on the area.

(Reports from Accra yesterday said that Military Government head Jerry Rawlings went to Kumasi at the weekend and told an enthusiastic rally that the curfew was being shortened by two hours).

In another incident involving rampaging troops, refugees reported that 40 people had been killed in Takoradi in the south of the country. (A.F.P.)

CSO: 4700/891

FORMER OFFICIAL'S STATEMENT ON LIMANN RAPPED

Accra THE LEGON OBSERVER in English 12-25 Feb 82 pp 36-37

[Text]

Dr. Ekow Daniels, a Minister in Limann's government until he was dsmissed was Professor of Law in the University of Ghana with Constitutional Law as one of his very special interests and Dean of the Law Faculty before he joined Limann's government. His comments on constitutional matters must, therefore, be taken with some seriousness. It is assumed that such comments are well-informed and characterized by a certain amount of sobriety and objectivity.

It was recently reported that Dr. Ekow Daniels had claimed before a PNDC Investigating Committee that Dr. Limann was a dictator. Justification? That Limann did not consult - one is not quite clear whom.

There are some who are anxious to pounce on a charge of dictatorship to justify the overthrow of Limann. For their benefit, we find it necessary to return to the suspended Constitution to make the the point that the cabinet system of government in which executive power is vested in the cabinet as a whole with the Prime Minister leading it, was consciously rejected in favour of the presidential system in which executive power is vested in the the President. Accordingly, the suspended Constitution did not oblige the President to consult anyone except the Council of State in certain limited matters. The Ministers of State, it should be noted, did not individually have any powers; collectively, as members of the cabinet, they were to "assist the President in the determination of the general policy of the Government." It should be clear, therefore, that failure to consult any particular Minister or Ministers cannot, under that Constistution, form the basis of a charge of dictatorship.

In 1966, after the overthrow of Nkrumah his erstwhile supporters indulged in an orgy of denunciation of a man they had agreed would never die. In 1979, the CPP was resurredted in the form of the PNP, and we were told ad nauseam that the country was making gigantic progress under Nkrumah when hell was let loose by the 1966 coup. Now, we are being told again that they repeated all the crimes they had taken fifteen long years to perfect in the two years they ruled again. For how long can these people abuse our patience?

Dr. Ekow Daniels is at liberty to have his own back on Dr. Limann and to join in the chorus of denunciation. In the process, however, he must have some regard for his professional and professorial reputation.

CSO: 4700/891

REVOLUTION'S ULTIMATE DESTINATION, LEADERSHIP QUESTIONED

Accra THE LEGON OBSERVER in English 12-25 Feb 82 pp 25-27

[Editorial: "Revolution"]

[Text] We did not ask the point of June 4 because it looked so clear: soldiers who had been in government for the previous seven years had brought the soldier's profession into disrepute by corrupt practices, and their own kind had decided that those who had disgraced the profession must be punished along with their civilian collaborators. We were poised for civilian rule, but that could wait for the cleaning-up which was not going to take more than three months, anyway.

The signs are not very easy to read, this second time. Whatever has been said so far amounts to no more than that Limann's was an inept Administration. We are now inclined to believe that Limann's own ineptitude was that kind which shielded his eyes from lapses even inside his own party. Allegations made before 31 December, namely, that monies collected from both local and foreign sources ostensibly for the Party had found their way into the personal accounts of party functionaries, have since been collaborated by the former national chairman of the Party and also by a former regional chairman. There are people who believe that we should still have been given the opportunity to change the government constitutionally, especially, in the light of this very damaging information. Against this, it is possible to argue, and some do, that the information would have made no difference to the outcome of the next elections; the more sordid details and information of other forms of corruption would not even have become public. All this type of speculation is undoubtedly interesting, but need not engage us so seriously now. What concerns us now is what to expect next.

Given the primacy of food, so well articulated in official pronouncements, we imagined that a crash programme to increase the supply of food in the markets would be quickly launched and many people were roused by references to a "Unesco model" in the PDNC Chairman's initial policy broadcast. But now it turns out that the "Unesco model" is not even a recognised brand-name, only an idea of school-farms which one of the country's institutions was hoping to sell to Unesco.

University students have had to break their programme of studies to help with evacuating cocoa from the farms and re-bagging fertilizers at the ports, all of which are undoubtedly urgent tasks, but ones which do not require the special attention of students. Originally we understood that students were to help with food production. If not that, could they not be deployed to ventures to which they could bring their special talents and training to bear?

High prices and inflation undoubtedly constitute a major problem. That being so, we must deal with it with appropriate tools. Initially we seemed to rely too much on pleading with sellers to reduce prices; alternatively, we burnt down tables and market stalls. We have only since the sixth week of the Revolution embarked on a course which may result in the contraction of money in circulation. Earlier measures having made essential commodities less visible, we might also consider defining essential commodities a lot more narrowly; and then flooding the market with so much of every item on the short list that it would not be worth any seller's while to hoard or inflate the price.

More generally, the decline in the economy is of such importance that a team or some committee should have been formed by now to prepare a programme of revitalization and reconstruction outlining the principles of the envisaged "socio-economic restructuring" of the country.

That there has been a change of government, there can be no doubt. But of the Revolution going on, many do not know the tenets; and some of the pronouncements made so far by those who appear to know are not calculated to endear others to the Revolution. According to some of these pronouncements, power is to be transferred to the masses organised in committees of national defence at their work-places. Senior staff are not expected to be represented in these committees, however, since they already have their staff clubs and masonic lodges. This was the first item of the morning news on GBC Radio, Wednesday 20th January. If we are dissatisfied with the past because consultation was limited to only a few people, we should aspire to the widest possible consultation, not to exclude some who are also citizens, who would be taking decisions anyway, whether we like it or not.

Indeed there can be no Revolution without a cadre of revolutionaries, individuals who by personal discipline have succeeded in purging themselves of the iniquities of society and are demonstrably committed to helping their weaker brethren along the chosen path.

Who constitute the revolutionary personnel for the current Revolution?

Students? The PDNC would do well to assess a little more objectively commitment to revolutionary and democratic principles and practices before leaning exclusively or too heavily on students. True, leftist rhetoric has been the fashion for some of their leaders. Students have struggled for participation in the decision-making bodies of their campuses and secured representation on a number of university boards and commitees. However, in their own Junior Common Rooms, the Students' Representative Council and the National Union of Ghana Students, the complaint is commonplace that there is not much of mass participation. A militant leadership frequently takes decisions which are passed off as decisions of the student body; and the majority is often too timid or indifferent to voice dissent. Love of the "common man" is not transparent. Molestation of workers on compus which is not even punished because the authorities fear student-power hardly ever worries student governments. Allegations of corruption made by students against successive leaders are merely parried, not disposed of. And life-styles and values are not much different from those of the "decadent" professionals whom student leaders so vehemently denounce.

And what of our familiar politicians? Being in power or close to it seems to be the only commitment. From pronouncements it would seem that the Kwame Nkrumah Revolutionary Guard (KNRG) which has declared support for the Revolution favours state ownership of property and regimentation of citizens' life. So why were they anxious to be seen on platforms with Limann whose "Ghana" had no room for any of those things. Denial by the KNRG that it was ever part of the PNP is characteristically misleading and does not impress anyone. The regional chairman of the party in Ashanti whom we regarded the "Deputy Father" of the party has now seen it fit to deny his foundation-member status. Meanwhile he also is full of praise for the PNDC! The PNP is as different from the PNDC as day is from night, so how could the General Secretary of the United Ghana Farmers Council support both? Among supporters of the Revolution are to be counted also Unigovists who simply refuse to be embarrassed by the contradictions they represent. Commitment to the idea of a party-less system comes as easily as becoming founding members of political parties. The inclusion of known politicians in the PNDC cabinet was to be expected, perhaps. In terms of background, training and experience, however, some of those individuals are not any different from many who have served in previous governments. If a revolution consists in doing things radically differently, where is the assurance that the performance of these individuals will be significantly different? No doubt, the idea of a cabinet, so formed, is appealing for its approximation to a national government. But if, as we understand, these appointees are only to supervise the implementation of PNDC policy in what sense is there a national government?

And now the "masses"! It is tempting to claim mass support as uniquely one's own. As a matter of fact, there has been no regime in this country which was not hailed by the "masses". It costs nothing to take a day off from work, productive or otherwise, to demonstrate support for a new regime. The "masses" derive satisfaction from seeing previously powerful men humiliated for imaginary or proven offences against the state, but they themselves are not averse to misapplying state resources when the opportunity comes, and we have the example of the Verandah Boys to show. We would have thought that the rank and file of the military and the police woud identify with the "masses" in particular. You begin to wonder when you have heard agonising stories of maltreatment of many a poor worker who for lack of transport or some other reason is forced to break curfew. Is the attitude of the rank and file of the military and the police properly tuned in to a People's Revolution?

In sum, we are saying that for a Revolution that was coming all along, a comprehensive programme of action is taking too long to unfold. We are particularly anxious to point out the known characteristics of the categories of personnel attracted to the Revolution lest by not taking them into account whatever is going should degenerate into something else altogether. We cannot wait to suggest that given the heterogeneity of revolutionary personnel we should have some frame of reference to be able to tell who belongs where, who does what, who is entitled to what. We should have a statement of aims and purposes to which all of us will swear commitment, after a full public debate. Even for a limited operation such as JUNE 4 was, unanimity of purpose eluded the AFRC before long; the more urgent, therefore, that on the threshold of an even bigger operation we should immediately have a source of reference. Some would call it a manifesto, even a constitution. We are not fastidious as to what it is called, as long as we know in clear enough terms everybody's place in the Revolution and even more important the ultimate destination.

CSO: 4700/891

BRIEFS

MEMBERSHIP SUSPENDS UNION LEADERSHIP--Accra, 21 Feb--The entire leadership of Ghana's Trade Union Congress has been suspended in apparent response to pressure from members, nearly two months after the ousting of President Hilla Limann's Government. A report here said the move followed an ultimatum from members that the TUC's leaders, including its executive board, resign or face confrontation with the workers. A proclamation issued by all 17 member-unions of the TUC declared the entire Congress leadership and the TUC's constitution suspended. A five-member committee had been set up to manage the TUC's affairs on an interim basis, said the proclamation, served upon the country's ruling Provisional National Defence Council (PNDC). Meanwhile, a "citizens' vetting committee," set up by the new regime under its "Law One" and empowered to examine the life-style and financial affairs of citizens, has been getting down to work. Last week it ordered two people detained pending investigation and a third was given 48 hours to settle his outstanding income tax debts. [Text] [Paris AFRICA AFP in English 23 Feb 82 p 17]

PECULIAR 'GHANAIAN SPIRIT' RAPPED--While we wait, hoping, for return to constitutional order, the PNDC has appointed a civilian cabinet which includes familiar names. The presence in the cabinet of men of stature and experience should assure us that mature judgement would be brought to bear on the processes of government. But patriotic as it no doubt is, the eagerness to serve brings into focus once more a feature of the Ghanaian character which should worry all of us. Some members of the PNDC cabinet were lately leading members of political parties of which they were foundation members. Some had been in Parliament others had been Ministers of state, others still were, in 1979, candidates for the highest offices available under the suspended Constitution. Therefore, they should be taken to subscribe to the more conventional ideas of government--parliamentary democracy, separation of powers, freedom of association, periodic elections, change of government through the ballot box, Rule of Law, "regular" as against "special" courts--all of which would seem to have been eroded by the exercise of December 31. It may be foolhardy to fight the military, but cooperating in the continuing erosion of what one believes in is something else. The stock Ghanaian response to questions respecting sudden twists and turns as represented above is that offices would go to worse men, otherwise. We can recognise such talk for its peculiarly Ghanaian character if we can imagine any form of cooperation between Lech Walesa and General Jaruzelski while the latter's programme is the emasculation of Solidarity, the Independent Trade Union Movement which the latter helped to found in Poland. In the unlikely event of a successful invasion of the country we should not at all be surprised to see compatriots including possibly even children of the Revolution volunteering service to the invaders, "in the national interest," of course! [Text] [Accra THE LEGON OBSERVER in English 12-25 Feb 82 p 37]

REORGANIZING MILITARY--The National Union of Ghana Students [NUGS] has suggested that the people's armed forces should be organized into working groups under democratic and disciplined leadership to work alongside the civilian population on different projects. This will create an opportunity for the two sides to learn from each other and develop relations of fraternity and solidarity, and it will go a long way to develop the much-needed unity between the forces and civilians in the struggle against imperialism. In a statement on the molestation and intimidation of civilians by some soldiers the NUGS called for an immediate end of such acts. This is because they tend to divide and weaken the strength of the revolutionary forces and thereby subvert the revolutionary process initiated on 31 December. What the revolution needs is the unity of civilians and soldiers in the struggle against imperialism and its local allies. The statement declared: "We need to see ourselves as one, providing a common base for the advancement of the revolution. The soldiers must be helped to know that their interests and those of civilians are the same. They must believe that there is need for reorganization of the structure of the armed forces into a democratic institution as a real people's army. This reorganization must go side by side with an intensive and systematic program of political education." The NUGS appealed to civilians to keep their ranks closed in spite of the unfortunate acts of harrassment intimidation. They should not turn away from the revolution in reaction to these acts for that will weaken and endanger the revolution. The NUGS asked civilians to show their maturity and commitment by restraining themselves in the face of all provocations. [Text] [AB141512 Accra Domestic Service in English 1300 GMT 14 Mar 82]

WAGE HIKE APPLICATION WITHDRAWAL--The Provisional National Defense Council [PNDC] has decided that all applications by trade unions for wage increases should be withdrawn. They can, however, be resubmitted with references to the changing economic situation. An official statement issued in Accra yesterday said the decision was taken in view of measures already adopted to reduce rents, transport fares and prices of goods in the interest of the working people. The statement said trade unions which may resubmit applications should involve people's defense committees in discussions relating to such applications. Attention must also be paid to the prevailing economic situation in such discussions. [Text] [AB150811 Accra Domestic Service in English 0600 GMT 15 Mar 82]

CSO: 4700/921

VIEIRA STRESSES IMPORTANCE OF PRIVATE INITIATIVE

Havana PRISMA LATINOAMERICA in Spanish Jan 82 pp 14-16

[Interview with Joao Bernardo [Nino] Vieira, president of Guinea-Bissau and secretary general of the African Party for the Independence of Guinea-Bissau and Cape Verde [PAIGC], in his office, immediately after the close of the First Extraordinary PAIGC Congress [date not given], by Roberto Correa Wilson, special correspondent]

> [Excerpts] We met Joao Bernardo (Nino) Vieira again after 8 years.
>
> The energetic military leader, a veteran of 242 engagements, the most outstanding of the guerrilla leaders who arose during the 11 years of anticolonial struggle, educated and trained under the wing of the unforgettable son of Africa, Amilcar Cabral, has given way to the calm, reflective head of state.
>
> Speaking with deliberation, as if his words reflected a deep, ongoing meditation, he answered each of our questions, which at times led to a dialogue.

Priority Given to Agriculture

[Question] We've seen the four forms of property described in the documents drafted at the congress, which indicate that agriculture is the cornerstone of the country's economic development. Considering its undeveloped state and that of the livestock industry, is there a plan that will enable you to exploit the land and waters more rationally, including through new, more modern methods of cultivation?

[Answer] Agriculture was given priority at the third party congress; but unfortunately the resolutions were not put into practice. The resources for agricultural programs were diverted to industrial projects. For example, the agro-industrial complex at Cumere for the processing of peanuts, the automobile plant--both now at a standstill--and the highway from Bissau to the airport, which at present provide no economic benefits. Those investments made in industry and the highway should have gone into agriculture. If that had been done, there could have been some progress by now because a considerable amount was invested in those projects. Also, as you know, we give a certain level of priority to private activity because it is something that still is not easy, and, in order to increase production, we also give priority to this type of initiative, so that they can increase production and have an opportunity to create some financing and improve the population's food intake. We're doing that as an incentive to work harder. In this policy that we're carrying out, we're trying to move the people from the cities to the country.

A person who produces more earns more. We have to provide an incentive to get people into the country. There is also private initiative, which we're encouraging.

[Question] Mr President, does this policy also extend to commercial activity?

[Answer] Yes. With the lack of organization that still exists in the governmental sector, the government can't deal with everything right now. There are many things we have to leave in private hands because we tried an experiment that produced poor results. When the government imported everything and then distributed it, it was not very well received, and the private merchants are practically disappearing little by little because they have no chance to support themselves, and pay employees and taxes; and it's necessary for that to happen right now. Possibily, with the expansion of agricultural production the government will be able to manage everything, export and import everything, but right now that's not possible. The policy is that the government should import large items; private parties can handle small things.

[Question] What are the prospects for obtaining external financing that will make it possible to carry out extensive development and solve the country's food-supply problem?

[Answer] That is another of our intentions. We have several plans for obtaining financing abroad, and we have obtained some, including some aid. The People's Republic of Korea is helping with the development of production of rice, corn, and other crops. Other countries are carrying out research concerning agricultural production. In the Bafata region, they are experimenting at a rice plantation that yields two crops a year. And that program that you saw in Canchungo; that is, teaching the farmers modern methods of working the land. It's a new experiment, and it's also being done in Bafata. We also want to try it in the southern areas where there's more farming; but right now we're having problems with financing.

We're making contact with the governments of various countries and with banks to see if we can obtain some financing. I should visit the Arab countries with a plan for agricultural development. If we can increase farm production, it will be the best means of achieving some stability in the economic sphere; for with the lack of rain these last 2 years, production has fallen considerably, and we're importing more than we export. Therefore, it's very important for us, on the basis of our reality and the reality of the world today, to put agriculture first in our development plans. That's why I said at the beginning of the interview that if we'd devoted the resources invested in industrial projects to agriculture, we would now have greater development, and our food-supply problem would be nearing a solution.

You know that Guinea-Bissau's coastal waters are rich in fishery resources; and according to studies we can take some 200,000 tons of fish a year without reducing their capacity to reproduce themselves. But this country still has no infrastructure for an undertaking of that scope, which would help to satisfy domestic needs and provide a surplus for export. At any rate, our development plans take this wealth into account.

Training of Cadre

[Question] A great deal of emphasis has been placed on improving the ideological and political skills of the party's cadre and membership, on the creation of schools, and the training of cadre. Could you give us specific examples of what you're planning to do?

[Answer] That is one of the fundamental issues we're facing right now. Because previously some cadre were sent--and we're still sending them--to be trained abroad, in such countries as Cuba, the Soviet Union, and the GDR; but we're thinking about training instructors, teachers from Guinea-Bissau. The reason is that some comrades come from friendly countries--instructors, etc.--but later they leave. We want to train teachers in order to have continuity in the schools in the capital, in the outlying areas; for we still don't have it, nor have the teachers reached the interior of the country. We want education to reach the countryside, the most isolated regions of the country; and it should be with our own cadre.

We also think we have to raise the cultural, political, and ideological level of the party's members and leaders. This was set forth in one of the resolutions adopted at the extraordinary congress. All leaders should go to school, not only for political/ideological training, but also for cultural training. It is one of the best means, one of the best ways, to raise the party and its leaders to the level of their responsibility so that they can deal with all party tasks anywhere. That is one of the things the PAIGC leadership is resolutely determined to do; that is, to properly train the cadre.

[Question] When you insist that the socialist countries, especially the Soviet Union, are natural allies, what do you mean?

[Answer] We say that because they were allies yesterday, and they're allies today, for we're still fighting, and we have the help of the socialist countries. We believe that because we have the same objective, the same struggle against imperialism and colonialism. We can't count on any other world power than the socialist camp, our allies who always have given us aid and who are continuing to give it to us.

We now also have normal relations with other governments in the world, but we always draw a distinction between those governments and the socialist countries. We insist that the socialist camp is our natural ally, allied at all times, under all circumstances. For this reason we're determined to further increase our cooperation with them, because whether they want to or not, the only way to bring a people to happiness is the socialist way. That's the reason for our reaffirmation that the socialist countries are our natural allies.

9085
CSO: 4748/19

PAPER CRITICIZES SEYCHELLES ALLEGATIONS

EA131622 Nairobi THE STANDARD in English 13 Mar 82 p 2 [tentative]

[Text] Twice in 4 months, Mr France Albert Rene of the Seychelles had made allegations that the government of Kenya was involved in an attempt to overthrow his socialist government.

The government of Kenya pursues a consistent policy of peaceful coexistence with her neighbours and does not interfere with the internal affairs of other countries. It is out of the question, and certainly untrue that Kenya has been involved in any way in any attempt to overthrow the government of the Seychelles.

In view of the allegations--obviously meant to discredit this country--it seems relevant now to examine the motives underlying this campaign of villification. It is a well-known tactic of slander and villigatin that allegations are made and publicised for a purpose, and the purpose is usually to paint one's enemy as black as possible. That sort of campaign is meant to destroy the people at whom it is aimed, and so the mere publication of damaging falsehood is an end in itself.

In intelligence and other circles, it is sufficient to say that a relation of somebody, say a sister, is a woman of easy virtue, and the stigma stays despite later denials.

That appears to be the tactic being used by the Seychellois president and his socialist friends. They hope to tarnish and blemish the good name of Kenya at a time when our head of state is chairman of the Organisation of African Unity.

If they can succeed in casting aspersions and doubts about this country's sensible economic and political policies, then not only would they isolate Kenya, but also those other nations in Africa whose policies are akin to Kenya's.

It is another tactic of the enemies of Kenya to try to create suspicion between the head of state and his ministers and, indeed, this tactic has been tried before.

Many people will remember the Muthemba trial--a trial sanctioned by the former attorney-general, Mr James Karugu. It was a farce, for there was no conspiracy to overthrow the government of Kenya and the purpose of the accusation was to tarnish the name of one individual in the government and to conjure up an image of a government which did not have the total loyalty of some of its ministers.

Who, then, are the masterminds of this vacuous campaign of villification? They are the Soviet Union and their socialist friends in East Africa, and inside Kenya.

In view of their persistent efforts to cause a state of ferment in Kenya, perhaps it would be useful to examine their characteristics a little more closely.

The Soviet Union is known to have been financing the demonstrations at the university here. They are also known to be largely responsible for the recent calls by isolated individuals for fundamental changes in Kenya.

In their futile campaign, the Soviets have been aided and abetted by at least two African socialist governments contiguous to Kenya.

Internally, they have been assisted by some empiricist and machiavellian individuals. They will be named if necessary, but their description will suffice for the time being.

One is a socialist who has been receiving funds for his election campaigns from Russia via Czechoslovakia. He is an avowed enemy of the government and the system. The other is an unscrupulous individual who cares little about ideology or morality or propriety, provided he can further his unbridled lust for political power.

Both individuals are known to have travelled to a neighbouring country recently when the campaign of slander and villification was planned. One of them travelled to the country in question using two motor cars in order to escape surveillance. These, indeed, are the enemies of Kenya who are prepared to enlist outside political support for their own selfish ends.

A third individual who is inextricably involved in this campaign against the government of Kenya is a lawyer of Indian extraction who maintains close links with the Seychellois Government. He feels he has scores to settle with at least two members of the government.

The complex maze of the unholy alliance of people of disparate interests is completed by the disclosure from usually reliable sources that one of the people responsible for spreading the malicious campaign is in fact an agent of former Uganda president, Godfrey Binaisa.

The Binaisa group have scores to settle with some individuals in the government whom they consider responsible for our government's decision not to allow Binaisa to remain in Kenya, from where he hoped to carry out a campaign of subversion against Uganda.

And something ought to be said about the manner in which the matter was raised in Parliament. The member who raised it must have known that it is one thing to accuse some individuals in the government of Kenya for having acted against the interests of Kenya, and another to produce a telexed news item as the sole proof of the accusation.

However, there was a general air of expectation and apparent orchestration among some of the radicals who raised one question after another under the pretext of substantiation. It is important that the floor of our supreme law-making institution should not be used for character assassination. And that is what the Seychellois affair was all about.

The most significant thing about the incident in Parliament, though, was the absence of any comment from the leader of government business, who would not bother to comment on the issue although he was present during the discussion. Can the leader of government business correctly remain aloof and seemingly neutral when the government whose business he leads in the house is under such damaging attacks from its enemies?

It is important that the public should be informed of these things because, although the individuals who are collaborating with foreign interests to besmirch the good name of Kenya think they are furthering their own personal interests, in effect what they are doing is to attack the very foundation of our political system and stability primarily as the agents of Russia and her client states in Africa.

CSO: 4700/913

BRIEFS

FOREIGN MINISTER VISITS CHAD--The minister for foreign affairs, Dr Robert Ouko, left the country today for Chad, where he will hold talks with President Goukouni Oueddei on ways of resolving the civil war in that country. Dr Ouko was accompanied by the director of the OAU bureau, Mr Bernard Adundo, and will be joined in Chad by the newly-elected chairman of the OAU Council of Ministers, Mr Archibald Mogwe, and the OAU secretary general, Mr Edem Kodjo. Speaking at Kenyatta international airport before his departure, Dr Ouko said that the mission to Chad is a follow-up of the decisions of the standing committee on Chad which met in Nairobi recently and drew a timetable of getting the Chad problem resolved. Dr Ouko will also have a stopover in France on his way to Chad, where he will confer with French officials in Paris. [Excerpt] [EA121538 Nairobi Domestic Service in English 1000 GMT 12 Mar 82]

CSO: 4700/913

AIR MAURITIUS REGISTERS PROFIT FOR FISCAL YEAR

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 9 Mar 82 p 20

[Text]

WHILE most world airlines report huge losses recently, one of the world's smallest airlines, Air Mauritius, achieved a profit of R650 000 in the first half of the current financial year.

The airline makes no secret that its return to the South African service is the reason for its sudden profits, a factor which Marxist leader, Mr Paul Berenger, will have to take into account if he wins the general election in the island later this year.

Air Mauritius, which flies a twice-weekly 707 service to South Africa, as well as flights to London, Bombay and Reunion and Rodrigues islands, is in the black after accumulating big losses in the previous two years.

The current profit compares with a loss of nearly R2,2-million last financial year and R1-million in the 1980 fiscal year.

A spokesman for Air Mauritius said: "The accumulated profit for the current financial year could rise to R2-million if everything goes well."

The airline continues to make a profit, despite the drop in passenger traffic, in comformity with the worldwide trend, from a round 27 000 in 1980/1, to an estimated 24 000 in the current year.

Despite the trend, Air Mauritius' profitability was positive, and this was mainly due to the re-introduction of the South African service after a four-year break, said H Tirvengadum, the chairman.

The withdrawal of the second weekly frequency on the London route had helped reduce company losses, but even the once-weekly service to London was not profitable because the majority of passengers travelled at the special group fare.

Another problem was the decline of traffic on the inter-island services to Rodrigues in the Indian Ocean.

Mr Tirvengadum said candidly that the twice-weekly service to South Africa, together with the replacement of the old 707 with a new one, and improved cabin service were the main factors for the new profitability of the company.

It was interesting to note, he said, that 35 percent of the passengers flying in and out of Mauritius travelled by Air Mauritius.

There were no plans for major developments, the company preferring at this stage to concentrate on and consolidate the present operations.

Asked about the possibility of operating a service to Australia, he replied that the potential did not warrant such a service.

CSO: 4700/903

WINDHOEK PREPARES FOR UN-SUPERVISED ELECTION

Windhoek THE WINDHOEK ADVERTISER in English 5 Mar 82 pp 1, 2

[Text]

THE SAFARI Motel to the south of Windhoek is to launch a R6m expansion programme to prepare itself for the presence of the UN officials during the run-up to the UN-supervised election in SWA.

This was announced to The Advetiser this week in an exlusive interview with the proprietor and chief executive, Mr Johnny Hamman.

The present value of the eight hectare complex is R4,5m and has 120 bedrooms and suites.

Mr Hamman has approached the authorities for a R750 000 loan for the first phase which will involve a three-storey structure and the total fitting out of one floor.

The application is being considered by the Department of Economic Affairs on the recommendation of the Tourist Board and Mr Hamman is expected to have an answer within the next few days.

Further applications for funds will be made as each phase of the development progesses.

The new complex will be able to provide personal accommodation for 225 people while there will also be office space for 300 administrative people.

The Hotel Board in turn has told the Department of Economic Affairs that once established, the complex will be a long-term tourist asset.

The office space will be converted into suites once the UN officials leave SWA.

The main reason that Mr Hamman has approached the authorities for help is because of the urgency of providing accommodation for the UN personnel and because the hotel trade in SWA could not afford interest rates of 20 percent plus as is the case in the capital market at present.

Mr Hamman says he has paid R200 000 out of his own pocket during the past two years for expansion of the motel complex.

Items have included new staff quarters R75 000, a new workshop at the service station R20 000, improvement of the roadhouse facilities R20 000, improvement of the caravan park R11 000 and a new electrical substation R10 000.

Besides that, on his loan account Mr Hamman has introduced TV into the rooms R100 000, installed a solar heating system R40 000, installed a new heater-pump R25 000 and installed air-condition in the multi-function room R25 000.

In addition, he has purchased an aircraft for R115 000 for use by motel residents. The complex already has its own hire-a-car and hire-a landrover service.

SELF-SUFFICIENT

Mr Hamman pointed out that personnelwise the complex is totally self-sufficient. It has its own building team, electrician, plumber, motor mechanic and joiner. Furniture is made on the premises.

The total annual turnover of the complex at present is slightly short of R4m.

The Safari Motel also provides the food for all out-going SAA flights.

Asked what motivated the expansion plans, Mr Hamman replied: "I believe that we can provide services that this country desperately needs."

And asked whether he was optimistic about the future of the country, he replied: "Yes, I am. I believe that things must eventually come right. I have listened to other people in the past and found at my own expense that they have been wrong. Now I am doing what my instincts tell me is right."

Mr Hamman is also Chairman of the new (Volkskas) bank as well as Chairman of the Windhoek Afrikaanse Sakekamer.

CSO: 4700/910

SWANU SHOCKED BY PW'S 'BULLYING' TACTICS

Windhoek THE WINDHOEK ADVERTISER in English 5 Mar 82 p 5

[Text]

SWANU was "extremely shocked" by the conduct of the SA Prime Minister Mr P W Botha during his meeting with the Namibia National Front delegation in Windhoek last week.

In a communique issued by Swanu's Central Committee yesterday, the party stated: "We felt that Mr Botha was not only disrespectful of the dignity and views of the representatives of the NNF but also showed strong signs of wanting to bully and intimidate".

The communique noted that the meeting with Mr Botha was cut short 10 minutes ahead of the time and that other parties such as the National Party consulted far longer with the SA delegation than the allotted time.

"WE fervently hope that this was no apartheid, partiality or White paternalism. We are responsible, able and self-respecting Blacks who cannot and will never acquiesce in practices which might only be applicable to subservient bantustan puppet chieftains", the statement continues.

The Swanu communique said that it was incomprehensible why Mr Botha, who said he had come to Windhoek to listen to the local parties, "could not control his anger when the views of the NNF did not coincide with his own perceptions of what the 'democratic parties' were supposed to say."

The statement called for an all-party conference by all the pro-independence Namibian parties as an exploratory forum where issues can be ventilated and a common strategy can be worked out to speed up the process of independence.

"We should not only rely on outside mediation but should also put in our own local effort in a tangible way into the negotiating process. We must try as a people to regain the initiative when it comes to the affairs of our own country and to matters that are crucial to our own existence."

The Western Five should clarify the various constitutional proposals contained in its Phase One document. This would clear the way for moving onto the next phase by allaying the suspicions of some parties that have so far rejected phase one, the statement adds.

The Swanu communique concluded by pledging to hold a public meeting at an 'appropriate time', having decided to postpone it due to problems with the Notification and Prohibition of Public Meetings Act, recently.

CSO: 4700/910

GAROEB QUITS NNF

Windhoek THE WINDHOEK ADVERTISER in English 8 Mar 82 p 2

[Text]

TENSIONS within the Namibia National Front burst into the open this weekend when Mr Justus Garoëb and his Damara Council left the Front.

The decision, taken at the 10th congress of the Damara Council, held in Omaruru yesterday was announced by Mr Simson Tjongarero, the party's Vice-Chairman.

According to Mr Tjongarero, the split was caused by wrangling amongst the leadership. Die Republikein this morning claimed resentment against domination by Swanu was behind the split.

Approached for comment this morning, Mr Moses Katjiuongua, the President of Swanu said he had had no official notification of the Damara Council's decision. He called the decision "very unfortunate" and said: "If the report is accurate, then it is exaggerrated. Mr Garoëb is the President of the organisation. What can prevent the President from asserting this authority?".

Mr Garoëb, he said, "did not indicate he had any problems with the rest of us, when we met with Mr P W Botha." He said that the NNF leadership would be contacting Mr Garoëb soon to find out what was happening.

"We have always had understanding for his position, we have always gone the extra mile. I cannot see how the other parties can be blamed for his breaking away, there must be other reasons," he said.

Mr Katjiuongua also told The Advertiser the leaders in the NNF would be meeting in the next few days to discuss the situation.

It was also decided at the congress that the cooperation with the NDP, under the leadership of Mr Kalangula who recently left the DTA, was not excluded.

It would depend on whether agreement could be reached with respect to the policy of the two parties.

CSO: 4700/910

BLACKS IN KUISEBMOND FEEL SQUEEZE

Windhoek THE WINDHOEK ADVERTISER in English 5 Mar 82 p 8

[Text]

THE DECLINE in the fishing industry has led to a financial squeeze for Kuisebmond, the Black township outside Walvis Bay.

This emerged from the annual survey done by the town's Director of Community Development, Mr SJ Vermaak.

Mr Vermaak says: "Underutilisation of available accommodation for single employees, coupled with a loss in employment opportunities as a result of deteriorated economic conditions in Walvis Bay have continued to exert negative pressure on the sources of income of th Black township of Kuisebmond."

The current population of Kuisebmond was estimated as 8 107 people, 2 275 of whom were accommodated in the Owambo Compound. This contrasts with the 8 106 people who could be accommodated in the compound. The single quarters can accommodate 628 people, but only 602 are presently being housed. Accommodation in flats is also underutilised, with 209 people being accommodated in flats intended for 294 people.

Mr Vermaak said that 40 of the rooms in the old single quarters had been modified for occupation by women with or without dependants. 131 people were accommodated there at present.

CSO: 4700/910

SOUTH AFRICA LURES AWAY MINING TALENT

Windhoek THE WINDHOEK ADVERTISER in English 5 Mar 82 p 8

[Article by Franz Kruger: "Mining Community Angered"]

[Text]

THERE IS widespread anger in the mining community about a recent recruitment drive by the South African parastatal, Sasol.

Mr Deon Hugo, General Manager of Oamites Mining Company, told The Advertiser Sasol was "not playing the game". Other sources in the mining industry have claimed that the drive is in direct contradiction to the sympathy expressed by the Prime Minister of SA, Mr P W Botha, for the skilled manpower shortage in Namibia.

When business leaders met Mr Botha last week, they raised the issue of Whites leaving the Territory. Both Mr Botha and his Foreign Minister, Mr Pik Botha, undertook "to do all in their power to relieve the situation by mobilising individual State departments in South Africa to help," according to Mr Johnny Hamman, a member of the delegation which met Mr Botha.

Sasol, while not being a State department, is very closely tied to the South African Government.

In the third week of February, Sasol embarked on a recruitment drive in Windhoek, Swakopmund and Tsumeb, for trained and trainee artisans. A Sasol team visited each centre to interview and test applicants. The team also visited Upington. The visits were accompanied by an advertising campaign in the local press and some SA Sunday newspapers.

The drive comes at a time when the Namibian mining industry is experiencing serious problems, with base metal prices low on the international market and technical personnel at a premium.

Mr W H Bailie, General Manager of the Chamber of Mines: "If people continue leaving at the rate they are, we won't be able to retain the desirable level of technical personnel."

According to Mr Hugo of Oamites, the company had to "raise artisan salaries higher than their evaluation in order to stay competitive."

Various mining industry sources felt it was unfair of Sasol to exploit the situation by luring away scarce manpower with offers of 100 percent housing loans and other benefits. It was also felt in some quarters that Sasol was benefiting from the political uncertainty, which meant that that skilled personnel were keen to leave.

Mr Bailie said there was nothing much that could be done: "Whatever we do may be counterproductive. We can only draw our main personnel from SA, and if we institute some sort of embargo we might be harmed ourselves."

A spokesman from Sasol in Johannesburg told The Advertiser, however, that the drive was not very successful.

"We won't go to South West again", he said.

"It's not worth the money".

All in all, only six people were recruited on the drive. "Many of the people we interviewed were old applicants, who we had not had the chance to interview before," he said.

Asked to comment on the criticism of the recruitment drive from local mines, the spokesman said it was unfair to discriminate against Sasol.

"We have the same problem of a manpower shortage in SA, it is not limited to SWA."

CSO: 4700/910

P.W. BOTHA GETS PROPOSALS ON EMPLOYMENT

Windhoek THE WINDHOEK ADVERTISER in English 5 Mar 82 p 14

[Text]

DETAILED proposals for the creation of employment in Namibia have been made by the Namibia Institute for Economic Affairs.

The proposals are contained in a memorandum presented to the Prime Minister, Mr P W Botha, last week. The memorandum was originally presented to the Ministers' Council and was prepared in November last year.

The memorandum touches on various sectors of the economy and makes suggestions for employment creation in each. In agriculture, for instance, the Institute talks of the advantages of clearing the ground by hand.

"Manual labour creates work, throughout the country, it makes cultivation possible in suitable areas of the country. The cleared bushes can be used to produce paper and celluloid and power lines and district roads can be kept clear".

As far as industry is concerned, the Institute argued that industry should be decentralised away from Windhoek, to where there is a supply of labour and services.

"Where possible, imported goods should be substituted with local products", the Institute said and cited various types of uniforms, building materials and food processing as examples.

Other areas where industry can be stimulated include the processing of local raw materials and home industries. Suggestions were also made for improvements in training. The Instutute argued that "training facilities in basic skills should be established at the source of labour like in Grootfontein, Ondangwa etc."

Training facilities at all levels should be improved, and in-service training should be encouraged in all areas, the Institute said.

CSO: 4700/910

SWABANK SOON TO ACQUIRE NEW LOOK

Windhoek THE WINDHOEK ADVERTISER in English 5 Mar 82 p 14

[Text]

DRESDNER BANK — the majority shareholder in Swabank — has underwritten the issue of another 6 000 707 shares Swabank's Chairman Mr EG Blohm announced in Windhoek this week.

He did so at a special general meeting immediately after the result of a poll on a resolution to increase the issued share capital had been made known by the scrutinisers counting the votes.

The meeting which was chaired by Mr Blohm, was called for the purpose of obtaining shareholders' majority vote on the resolution which now paves the way for Swabank's transformation into the fully-fledged commercial bank with foreign exchange services.

Mr Blohm said that the existing balance of 51 percent owned by Dresdner and 49 percent owned by SA and Namibian shareholders, would be maintained as far as possible.

Answering a question from the floor, Mr Blohm said the nominal value of each existing issued share in the bank was 33 cents, but that this value excluded the undeclared and undistributed reserves of Swabank as well as the value of the head office building in Bülow Street which was purchased for R750 000 a number of years ago.

Renovations on the Swabank building would be completed in August, and if everything went according to plan, the official opening of the new facilities would take place in that month.

Meanwhile, Swabank's operation as a commercial banking institution commences on April 1.

RESIGNATIONS

Mr Blohm also announced that four Swabank Directors had resigned, three of them to join the new Volkskas bank in Windhoek which is now owned in the majority by a local consortium of 23 entrepreneurs.

Mr Piet Botha, Managing Director of Swabank will assume the same production at Volkskas, which is to have another name next month.

Mr Coen Brand resigned from the Board "for personal reasons", said Mr Blohm.

Messrs Andries Pretorius and York Von Schutz have both been appointed to the Board of Volkskas.

These changes have reduced the number of Directors of Swabank to four — Mr EG Blohm, Mr J von Wittgenstein, Managing Director, Mr Ulrich Schmid, and Dr Gunther Schmitz-Linnartz.

Swabank's articles of association provide for at least seven and a maximum of 12 directors.

Mr Blohm said it was intended to fill the existing vacancies as soon as possible from within the ranks of existing shareholders in SWA or new shareholders.

Three of the existing Directors are Dresdner bank officials, and Mr Blohm is the institution's nominated Chairman on the Board.

Three of those who have resigned have gone across to Volkskas.

Concluding his brief statement to the shareholders Mr Blohm said: "I wish to appeal to shareholders, clients and the personnel of the bank not to be swept away by shortlived emotional considerations, but to be patient for a while and then to judge their investment and their bank once the new management has been fully installed and the widened scope of the bank becomes operative.

"It is still my belief that in the long run the partnership between the Namibian business community, shareholders and a powerful European banking and financial group will be of immense benefit to our country and its peoples."

CSO: 4700/910

PROTEST GROUP SLAMS GERMAN RADIO SERVICE

Windhoek THE WINDHOEK ADVERTISER in English 5 Mar 82 p 2

[Article by Franz Kruger]

[Text]

THERE HAS been a call to German-speaking citizens to protest against the German radio service.

The call, in a recent advertisement in the Allgemeine Zeitung, was published by a group calling itself the "Citizens Initiative for Keeping the German Radio Service in SWA Clean" (Bürgerinitiative zur Reinerhaltung des Deutschsprachigen Rundfunks in Südwestafrika). The advertisement was signed by a Mr Hans Günther Seifer.

The group takes particular exception to programmes that come from the Federal Republic of Germany and are broadcast during prime time without commentary. It claims that "pornography, youth criminality, child prostitution, drugs, Boney M, racial integration, etc are cultural political ideals in West Germany at the moment".

Two examples of objectionable programmes are mentioned in the advertisement: In a programme about the development of German radio drama, the "Plagiarist Brecht is praised excessively, while the radio serials of the period 1933 to 1945 are represented as 'valueless idiocies'."

In another programme, which dealt with the controversial "Wannsee-conference", a non-German is the commentator, and this the group finds objectionable.

The group also objects to the use of foreign music:

"If I want to listen to English music, the respective channel in SWA for instance, I can switch to the respective channel in SWA", the advertisements says.

When The Advertiser contacted Mr Jürgen Hecker, Superintendent of the German Service of SWABC, he told us he had not heard from either Mr Seifert or his group. He declined to comment on the allegations made by the group, since it was SWABC policy not to respond to criticism not made directly to the service.

At the time of going to press, The Advertiser had not been able to trace Mr Seifert for comment.

CSO: 4700/910

SOUTH AFRICAN GOVERNMENT PLANS R1B FOR ECONOMIC AID

Windhoek THE WINDHOEK ADVERTISER in English 5 Mar 82 p 15

[Excerpt]

THE SA Government has earmarked R1b for economic aid to Namibia for the coming financial year.

This was disclosed at the weekend when a delegation of local business leaders emerged from their hour-long talks with the SA Prime Minister Mr PW Botha and his team at SWA House.

Mr Des Matthews, a principal in Trust and Mining, in the Territory said that the R1b would be included in the coming budget to be tabled in the National Assembly.

The SA delegation also raised the question of sharing the economic burden with the international community as far as Namibia was concerned.

This includes the UN and the Western nations, said Mr Matthews.

The question of international aid to Namibia during the present period leading up to independence was also raised by the visiting SA delegation during its talks with the NNF last week.

CSO: 4700/910

NAMIBIAN VIEW OF SOUTH AFRICAN'S NP SPLIT

Windhoek THE WINDHOEK ADVERTISER in English 5 Mar 82 p 16

[Article by Leon Kok in column "From the Editor's Desk": "SA Heading for a Totally New Ball Game"]

[Text]

THE EVENTS in the SA National Party during the past week were nothing new but were certainly healthy.

The history is a fairly long one and is now leading us to dimensions that were almost beyond imagination a mere decade ago.

Indeed, SA is heading politically for a totally new ball game.

The first cracks in the NP started ironically two decades ago during Prime Minister Hendrik Verwoerd's term of office, but were relatively minor. The uneasiness was rather more about Verwoerd's quest to draw English-speakers into the then exclusivist Afrikaans-speaking NP than about White Black relations.

True, there were some who as early as 1959 objected vehemently to Verwoerd's aim of setting up independent homelands in SA, but they kept a relatively low profile.

Trouble really started in late 1966 and early 1967 when PM John Vorster picked up the same nettle as Verwoerd on the White unity question, but pushed it much harder. In an important speech in Heilbron Mr Vorster made it clear that he would refuse to deceive any English-speakers who subscribed to his policies "and nobody must expect it of me."

This led to and culminated in 1969 to the reactionary speech in Parliament by former Cabinet colleague Dr Albert Hertzog. Dr Hertzog contrasted the Afrikaner with his Calvinistic background to the English-speaker with his liberal way of life. The message was clear: "The paths of the two groups are different and there can be no place in the party for aliens."

Mr Vorster repudiated Dr Hertzog, accusing him of insulting the English-speakers. This subsequently led to the expulsion from the NP caucus of Dr Hertzog along with three others. And in turn it lead to the establishment of the HNP. It also led to the rightists taking a radical line on race relations.

CRUNCH

Dr Andries Treurnicht, as Editor of the Pretoria afternoon newspaper, Hoofstad, backed the rightest elements throughout this period but when the crunch came decided to remain in the NP. His greatest concern was that a significant split in the NP might be extremely damaging to Afrikaner unity and that those read out the party might become politically impotent.

Dr Treurnicht caused ruptions within NP ranks for the next three years until he became MP for Waterberg. It is claimed that he was deliberately drawn into Parliament by John Vorster to neutralise him as an influential newspaperman and to bring him under the discipline of the Party Whips.

Vorster's strategy, if it was genuinely deliberate, worked extremely well. Treurnicht remained in the relative background for a full decade. Also during a period of important unfolding of Black Homeland policy which was not always in line with conservative Nationalist thinking and which otherwise Treurnicht might have fought tooth and nail.

Vorster indeed went even further; he appointed Treurnicht to a junior ministerial post involved with Black affairs, thus preventing Treurnicht from setting overall direction but also preventing him from becoming a party rebel. Treurnicht furthermore had to carry the bulk of the blame for the 1976 Soweto and other riots.

PM Piet Botha applied the same strategy equally astutely. Treurnicht has been given the most minor Cabinet posts since Botha took office four years ago, in fact almost to the point of insult. Particularly so since Treurnicht was leader of the NP in the Transvaal, the most important province politically to the NP.

DRIVEN OUT

The indications are that Dr Treurnicht and his 15 dissidents (previously 21) were driven out of the NP during the past few days through relatively careful planning on the PM's part. In fact Botha with his history as a party organiser has shown himself to be brilliant in handling this kind of operation.

I spoke to the Prime Minister last Wednesday night about the matter (the 22 had walked out the caucus that morning) and he seemed anything but dishevelled about the matter. On the contrary, he told me that he felt that the MPs concerned should do what they felt was right.

"I cannot make up their minds for them," he told me.

His unexpected arrival at the Transvaal NP Head Committee meeting last Saturday in which he formidably turned the table against the Treurnicht group on their own ground was also extremely impressive.

There is every reason indeed to believe that Mr Botha wanted to rid himself of what until now has been an albatross around his neck; now he can move ahead with the reformist or progressive policies at a greater pace — creating greater stability in the sub-continent and increased prosperity.

Many Whites fear that Botha is leading them to a sellout, but that is not the case. Much ado is being made about the interpretation of the words "power sharing", but by the use of this Botha means "joint responsibility" with other races without the Whites sacrificing their own self-determination. Besides, there is hardly space left for SA to move: the choice is rapidly becoming one of cooperation or confrontation.

SLOW DEATH

The road ahead for Botha however will not be easy going. The problems of State are considerable. Moreover, the NP can expect to face its first real opposition in Parliament and beyond in more than 20 years. The old United Party died a slow death while neither the PFP nor the NRP have been real factors in SA White politics.

The opposition to the right of the NP is now formidable and former NP Cabinet Minister Connie Mulder is probably correct in saying that "the White conservative backlash that started as a trickle has now become a flood and is threatening to break the dam wall."

Nor should Botha underestimate the role that the ghosts of the past can potentially play in undermining him. Foremost is former State President John Vorster who has come out clearly in the Treurnicht side, perhaps not so much because Vorster agrees with Treurnicht, but probably because he wants to get his revenge against Botha. Botha engineered Vorster's ousting as State President and through the Erasmus Commission had much of the blame for the Information scandal attributed to Vorster.

Another figure whom Botha flattened was Mr SL Muller.

Mr Botha furthermore removed the likes of Mr Jimmy Kruger, Dr Schalk van der Merwe and Mr Braam Raubenheimer from the politics of real power to the politics of the backroom.

One short-term consolation for Botha is that Treurnicht's options are limited. Treurnicht has restricted leverage within the Head Committee of the Transvaal NP to turn the tables against Botha; last Saturday Treurnicht managed to get the support of a mere 36 members of a possible 230. Treurnicht sympathisers in the other provinces will probably want to wait and see for the time being, fearing the political wilderness. By the same token, it is unlikely that Treurnicht would want to try and turn the tables at the Transvaal NP congress, fearing a reoccurrence of Saturday's disaster.

So the best that he can do is to start a new party and hope that in the foreseeable future he will be able to raise substantial grass roots support.

FIRST TEST

The first test of that support may however come fairly quickly, especially if there is a referendum later this year or early next year on whether the country should accept the President's Council's constitutional recommendations or not. The chances are though that Botha will get a resounding "yes" in the referendum and that he will not hesitate to implement the new constitution with all its ramifications without going to the electorate.

Thereafter Dr Treurnicht and indeed even PFP leader Fredrick van Zyl Slabbert may become quite irrelevant in the political debate of SA. Mr Botha will probably become the new executive State President with awesome powers and the debate in the constitutional debating chambers will be between the majority party among Whites, the majority party among Coloureds and the majority party among Asians.

All in all, it appears that SA is politically on the crest of a new era.

But equally, it won't be without militant White nationalism, perhaps on a scale in SA that we have never known before.

Goodness forbid.

CSO: 4700/910

FARMERS WARNED TO PLAN WISELY FOR 1982

Windhoek THE WINDHOEK ADVERTISER in English 5 Mar 82 p 4

[Text]

THE prevailing drought in SWA and the depressed marketing conditions for Karakul are the main aspects which will influence the meat market in the Territory during 1982.

This was indicated in the latest report from the SWA Meat Board, released in Windhoek this week.

In the report Mr HW Kreft, Manager of the SWA Meat Board, estimated that a total of 250,000 head of cattle will be sold during 1982, as opposed to 479,648 in 1981. The depressed Karakul pelt market, on the other hand, was expected to stimulate the market for mutton and an expected 550,000 sheep would be marketed in 1982. This figure, although lower than the record of 750,605l in 1981, was still higher than the average of 300,000 over the last couple of years.

Producers were recommended to distribute marketing as evenly as possible over the year and to be prepared to market sheep at the more remote markets to meet the planned marketing figures.

According to the report, SWA, would be dependent entirely on South African markets for the next few years for the marketing of cattle. The stable market which has been built up in England for the sale of corned beef was seriously threatened by the unsatisfactory relation between internal prices and those abroad.

SWA had to export an average of 90 percent of its annual cattle production, Mr Kreft said, and producers would have to analyse their production strategy to ensure a viable market.

Beef prices were expected to stabilise and remain on more or less the same level after the increase in the second half of 1980 and the report stressed the importance of effective production planning.

CSO: 4700/910

WALVIS TOWN COUNCIL SAYS 'NO' TO HOLIDAY RESORT

Windhoek THE WINDHOEK ADVERTISER in English 5 Mar 82 p 4

[Text]

A REQUEST by the SA Minister of the Interior, Mr Chis Heunis, that the area on the Walvis Bay side of the Swakop River mouth be developed as a holiday resort by a private land developer has been rejected by the Walvis Bay Town Council.

The Town Council unanimously rejected the request and the Town Clerk of Walvis Bay, Mr J Wilken, motivated the decision as follows:

● As a result of the policy of the SWA Administration in the past, Walvis Bay, as opposed to Swakopmund, had no holiday facilities and the proposed development ·ould do nothing to change the situation.

● The developer seemed to be acting on the supposition that Walvis Bay was an integral part of SWA, that this would remain so in future and that residential areas therefore could be developed on an integrated basis.

● Should SWA in future have a marxist government, Walvis Bay would be in exactly the same position regarding holiday facilities as it was at present.

● Commerce in Walvis Bay would not benefit from the development of the proposed terrain, although the town would initially have to subsidise the development.

● The public would be deprived of one of the most important natural assets in the area.

● The supply of services in a place situated in the furthest corner of the enclave would be inconvenient and expensive for the Town Council.

The Town Council debated the question for more than an hour and a verbatim report of the meeting was sent to the SA Minister of the Interior, Mr Chris Heunis, by whom the request was put to the Walvis Bay Town Council on behalf of the unknown developer.

The Council also decided that the beach area between the southern point of Long Beach and the northern Municipal border should be reserved for future development by the Municipality.

CSO: 4700/910

MONDESA RESIDENTS IN LINE FOR NEW HOUSING

Windhoek THE WINDHOEK ADVERTISER in English 5 Mar 82 p 5

[Text]

SWAKOPMUND is to move away from rented housing for Blacks, in line with a recent Ministers' Council policy decision.

At a recent meeting of the City Council, it was decided that no more rented housing would be built in Mondesa, the Black township outside Swakopmund. The Council also decided that it would make an urgent application to the Ministers' Council for funds to finance a home-ownership housing scheme. The scheme will be open to people in any income bracket, but there will be special emphasis on the lower income group. The cutoff point will be an income of R3 000 a year.

The City Council has made it clear that it will have nothing to do with substandard housing, however. The City Engineer has been mandated to prepare three standard plans for submission to the Ministers' Council. It was also decided that if the Ministers' Council refused to ratify the project, Swakopmund would withdraw completely from the provision of housing for Blacks and leave it to the State.

In the initial phase, 15 houses are planned for Mondesa. It was also decided that the houses would be sold to inhabitants of Mondesa of more than 10 years standing, bearing in mind, however, the waiting list for family housing.

The cost of the housing will be calculated to include the full building cost, as well as 0,5 percent administrative charge. The new homeowners will be treated exactly the same as other homeowners in Swakopmund with respect to Municiapl charges, as well as rates.

CSO: 4700/910

BRIEFS

RAID NETS 200--Two hundred people were arrested at the Single Quarters in Katutura on Monday for trespassing and 150 are awaiting trial at the moment. Raids are carried out regularly on the premises but in the part it was difficult to bring people to trial because the fences around the Single Quarters were inadequate and the gates weren't controlled effectively. Mr Leon Venter, the Director of Katutura said the Municipality had now made the necessary improvements as well as put up noticeboards warning people not to enter the quarters without the necessary permission. [Text] [Windhoek THE WINDHOEK ADVERTISER in English 5 Mar 82 p 1]

CSO: 4700/910

'SOCIETY OF DEVELOPMENT' ON POINT OF TAKING EFFECT

Paris AFRICA AFP in English 19 Feb 82 pp 1-2, 3

[Article by Jerome Mainguet: "Original Type of Society"]

[Text] Niamey--The social reorganisation dubbed "Society of Development" by Niger's President Seni Kountche when he took power almost eight years ago is on the point of taking effect.

Its institutions, evolved in two years of thought and debate by a special National Commission, were explained last month to the officials of each of the Saharan country's seven administrative districts and to the press by Commission Chairman and Minister of Public Health and Social Affairs Moumouni Djermakoye Adamou.

For Colonel Kountche's ruling Supreme Military Council the Society of Development cannot be compared with theoretical models or existing economic systems: it is an original type of society, peculiar to Niger in its values, bases and approach.

The general aim of the new institutions on a basis of "effective and voluntary participation of all social strata" is to assure a "policy of accelerated, coherent and harmonious development" of the nation.

This month nationwide "Development Councils," linking all components of society through their respectige associations, start operating. At the base of the administrative pyramid, they will appoint members of a National Council.

National Interest

The National Council will have the task of suggesting to the Government "the fundamental options of the development policy" and can also be consulted by the Government on "any other question of national interest."

The basic "development cell" is the village, whose inhabitants, 90 per cent of whom raise crops or livestock, are urged to take part in the national economy by outlining their needs, suggesting ways of fulfilling them and carrying out collective decisions.

Communal Help

The two "motors" of the society of development, from village right through to national level, are the Samariya youth movements and the cooperatives. According to Government officials the Samariya are now present in all of the country's 9,000 villages, with the key function of providing organisation, communal help and solidarity.

For the past few months Samariya members--60 per cent of the population of about 5 million is aged under 30--have been seen mobilising and training villagers and residents of various urban districts in public works projects, including sewerage, the building of dispensaries and water storage facilities, and three-planting, or cultural and sporting activities.

The Samariya have also been instructed to be "vigilant" and cooperate in maintaining security in its widest sense with the administrative and police authorities.

The cooperatives, which have so far been set up in 60 per cent of villages and should be in every one within three months, organise the productive side of the rural communities. Their key status with the Samariya is shown by the fact that they hold half the seats in the local Development Councils, ensuring that they can never be outvoted by other bodies.

These other bodies include Islamic associations--Niger is 95 per cent Moslem--along with the Federation of Trade Unions (the country's only labour federation) and societies representing different social groups, like traders.

By consensus the base councils nominate their delegates to the village or tribal councils, and so on up through the district and regional councils to the national body.

Call to Women

The National Council includes a member of the national bureau of every representative body. Women, for instance, through the Association of Women of Niger, are called upon to "participate fully" in national development, despite obstacles arising from traditional or religious customs.

The various development councils are chaired either by traditional leaders, such as village or tribal chiefs, or state-appointed officials, such as mayors or department prefects. They have authority to undertake all activities of economic, social or cultural development.

As Major Moumouni Djermakoye Adamou sees it, the "voluntary and effective participation" of the population in development constitutes a proper "apprenticeship for democracy" for a population which is "not yet mature enough to be involved in politics."

Waking Them Up

The military leadership questions how Niger's inhabitants, almost all of them rural, coming from different tribes scattered over a vast country of 1,227,000 square kilometres (490,000 square miles), barely literate and with a low standard of living, can "think politically."

Thus the regime intends to give them responsibility and "wake them up" by allowing them to take charge, progresively and at their own level, of their development, thanks to a decentralised structure for "concertation, consultation and participation."

There is no question, at the moment, of establishing a political system similar to that in developed countries. The Government which is still officially "provisional" and appointed by the Supreme Military Council, will continue to rule without a constitution or general elections.

Political parties, labelled "clans of interests or ideologies," remain strictly banned as being factors in national division.

But Colonel Kountche has recently hinted that there may be one more step towards democracy. In several speeches he has uttered the same phrase: "The National Armed Forces intend in the near future to suggest bases for a new development which will meet the ideals of an adult and mature people." (A.F.P.)

CSO: 4700/874

BRIEFS

KOUNTCHE TO SAUDI ARABIA--Col Seyni Kountche, the chairman of the Supreme Military Council and head of state, left Niamey this morning for Riyadh for a working visit. The head of state is being accompanied by his wife, Mrs (Ntu) Kountche; Brah Mamane, minister for planning; Daouda Diallo, minister for foreign affairs and cooperation; Abdou Mallam Moussa, minister for posts and telecommunications; Pascal Abba Kyari, an officer of the Niger armed forces and El Hadj Umorou Soumaila, chairman of the Niger Islamic Association. [Text] [AB131219 Niamey Domestic Service in French 1200 GMT 13 Mar 82]

CSO: 4719/670

BRIEFS

NPN SCOFFS AT OPPOSITION--Lagos, 15 Mar (NAN)--The chairman of the NPN [National Party of Nigeria], chief Adisa Akinloye, said today that the alliance move the UPN [Unity Party of Nigeria], NPP [Nigerian People's Party], GNPP [Great Nigerian People's Party and PRP [People's Redemption Party] was an admission that no one of the parties could stand up to the NPN. In a good-will message released in Lagos on the occasion of Dr Kingsley Ozumba Mbadiwe's 65th birthday anniversary, chief Akinloye described the NPN as the only party with a national outlook. He said that the "gang-up" was only a crude attempt by an individual "to achieve his aim of becoming the president of this country." He said: "We of the NPN will continue in our sacred task of nation-building, of promoting the unity of Nigeria and of bringing about the maximum welfare of the masses." The NPN chairman stated that the party was satisfied with the performance of President Shehu Shagari and the NPN governors, adding "our successes from Allah and he, who in his mercy gave us the 1979 victory, will as well ensure for us better electoral success, come 1983." [Excerpt] [AB151930 Lagos NAN in English 1830 GMT 15 Mar 82]

'CONCORD' ON GHANA'S TUC--The NATIONAL CONCORD writes on the suspension of the entire leadership of Ghana's Trade Union Congress [TUC] by flight Lt Jerry Rawlings following accusations of impotency. With complete dismantling of the TUC, the paper is of the view that Rawlings wants to rule without any appreciable workers' opposition to civil public opinion and therefore begin his era of dictatorship. However, the CONCORD says Rawlings should note that the revolution which he now preaches can succeed only with the active support of trade unions because, according to it, the country's way of economic recovery lies in the workers. It concludes by saying that the cause of Ghana's problems is not just corruption but how to mobilize the demoralized citizenry towards higher productivity. [Excerpt] [AB151345 Lagos Domestic Service in English 1200 GMT 15 Mar 82]

PARTY REGISTRATION ANY TIME--The chairman of the Federal Electoral Commission [FEDECO], Mr Justice Edgar Ovie-Whiskey, says the political associations can still apply for registration of parties after the March 21 deadline. He told newsmen in Benin, Bendel State, that the deadline was to enable the commission to consider the registration of political associations that have so far applied [word indistinct] its meeting next month. Mr Justice Ovie-Whiskey stated that there is no provision in the constitution preventing political associations from applying for registration at any given time before or during elections. He said that it was necessary for the associations to apply to enable FEDECO to process registration papers. [Text] [AB141611 Lagos Domestic Service in English 0830 GMT 14 Mar 82]

CSO: 4700/915

BRIEFS

BELGIAN STATE SECRETARY VISITS--Kigali, 11 Mar (AFP)--Mrs Jacqueline Mayence, Belgian secretary of state for cooperation, arrived in Kigali on Wednesday on a 4-day visit to Rwanda. Mrs Mayence stated that her visit will strengthen the "age-old, friendly and very efficient ties of cooperation" which Belgium and Rwanda have maintained for a very long time. She added that in 2 weeks, a Belgium-Rwanda joint commission will examine all the ongoing projects in which Belgium participates as well as all the requests which have been sent to it. During her visit, the Belgian secretary of state will hold discussions with Maj Gen Juvenal Habyarimana, president of the republic and with foreign minister Francois Ngarukiyintwali. She will also visit development projects in which Belgium participates. [Text] [AB111626 Paris AFP in French 0926 GMT 11 Mar 82]

CSO: 4719/673

DFSS OFFICIAL OUTLINES FRONT'S PROGRAM

Damascus AL-BA'TH in Arabic 15 Jan 82 p 3

/Article: The National Front in Somalia Declares Its Unity under a Single Front--The Democratic Front for the Salvation of Somalia"/

/Text/ What is going on in Somalia?

This question is perhaps most pressing at the current time, in the midst of the attempts that Siad Barre's regime is making to impose a blackout on the course and development of events.

The dictatorial regime which has ignored the national sovereignty of the people of Somalia and has thrown itself headlong into the arms of American imperialism in the hopes of being protected from collapse no longer knows any way to eliminate mass opposition or means to consolidate the regime and protect it from the wrath of the people but repression, terror, murder and the denial of democratic rights.

The series of unnationalistic actions which Siad Barre's puppet regime has pursued is faced with an effective opposition on which we will attempt to shed light through a dialogue we have held with Dr Muhammad 'Abdallah Gulayd, who occupied the position of director of rural health in the Ministry of Health until October 1981, then leaving Somalia as part of an official delegation to a health conference in Peking and announcing that he had joined the Democratic Front for the Salvation of Somalia.

Dr Gulayd began his discussion by stating,

"For many long years the regime in Somalia has been depending on techniques of repression and terror, as well as pursuing a policy of division based on the principle of divide and rule, through the agencies of repression that have infiltrated into the heart of public departments and organizations. These are terrorist organizations that are trying constantly to emasculate the voice of the opposition.

"The Somali regime has not sought to serve Somalia and the public interest--it has sought to mobilize power to serve the selfish interests of the regime itself.

"Thus the masses have begun to feel a rancorous spirit against this platform, especially after the regime had thrown itself into the embrace of American imperialism, opened the country's doors to military bases and trumped up a war with Ethiopia in an attempt to absorb popular rancor and turn the people's attention away from deteriorating domestic conditions.

"In addition, its turn toward imperialism has been an attempt to protect its system and implant its foundations. Perhaps the contents of the political declaration the Democratic Front for the Salvation of Somalia has issued will cast much light on what is going on in our country now. The declaration states that at the present time Somalia is passing through one of the worst periods in its history since political independence, as a consequence of the policies of Siad Barre's regime, which are antagonistic to the vital basic interests of the people.

"The dictatorial regime, its dominance of the people, with their various social classes, its usurpation of the rights and democratic various social classes, its usurpation of the rights and democratic freedoms of the citizens, its granting of military bases and facilities to American imperialism, and its overall economic orientation have led to a decline in agricultural and livestock production and the destruction of the domestic economy. All this is threatening the Somali people's independence and national sovereignty.

"The regime is liquidating thousands of workers, young people, students, officers, soldiers and religious scholars. Dozens of citizens face liquidation and threats every day and hundreds of them, including women and children, are undergoing torture in the regime's prisons. Hundreds of thousands of people have fled from the country in flight from oppression, tyranny and the spread of abuses in the form of bribery, embezzlement of the people's money, tribalism and nepotism."

/Question/ What is the role of the nationalist forces?

/Answer/ Repression and terror have not subjugated the people, with their various social classes and groups; to the contrary, the nationalist opposition has broadened. The nationalist forces have made repeated attempts to create political change and through the political and armed struggle they have been waging for a long time against the treasonous regime, they have been achieving noteworthy victories and have yielded up a large number of heroic martyrs in the arena of the struggle.

In these delicate circumstances, the unity of the opposition forces constitutes an essential, serious matter if one is to guarantee the reinforcement of the struggle for the salvation of Somalia and the attainment of final victory.

Proceeding from the historic responsibility which the nationalist democratic Somali forces bear in performing their role of saving Somalia from dominance by the criminal regime, in view of the need to move the political and armed struggle to a new stage that will guarantee them the ingredients of victory in order to bring the existing regime in Somalia down, the representatives of the political organizations and nationalist forces opposed to the regime have met on a number of occasions in various places carefully to study and exchange views on deteriorating conditions in Somalia. Conditions for opposition and means for heightening the struggle to bring down Siad Barre's reactionary regime and establish a democratic nationalist regime have advanced.

These meetings culminated in a session that was held in the period 19 September--6October 1981, in which the leaders of the three following political organizations took part:

The Somali Salvation Front.

The Democratic Front for the Liberation of Somalia.

The Somali Workers' Party.

The meeting discussed the following points:

1. Political, economic and social conditions in Somalia.

2. The dictatorial regime's practices and its platform of total subservience to American imperialism.

3. Means for unifying the opposition.

4. Setting forth a minimum political program.

A Somali national movement was also established in London by a group of old politicians toward the end of last year, and we hope that this movement will meet with the unified front.

/Question/ What is the political program of the Democratic Front for the Salvation of Somalia?

Mr 'Abdallah Hashi Hirsi, assistant director of the front's office in Damascus, answered this question for us, stating, "The front is fighting in the domestic context to bring down the dictatorial regime and establish a democratic nationalist regime which will achieve the following goals:

"A. Liquidating the phenomenon and the institutions of dictatorial rule and abrogating the exceptional laws and legislation.

"B. Setting forth a nationalist constitution and establishing a democratic parliament.

"C. Reorganizing the armed forces in order to get them to take part in building the nation and defending its sovereignty and independence.

"D. Granting the masses democratic freedoms in a manner guaranteeing that they exercise their rights to political, trade union and social activity.

"On the economic issues, it is necessary to realize:

"Liberation of the domestic economy from subordination to foreign capital.

"Establishment of a productive national economy in the context of a comprehensive development program.

"Reconstruction, development and protection of national industries.

"Attainment of an agrarian reform which will make it possible to increase agricultural production.

"Concern for the development of fish and livestock resources.

"Encouragement and development of the public sector.

"Raising the citizens' standard of living by raising the level of production and developing productive powers.

"On social issues, we are striving to:

"Combat and liquidate the roots of social evils in the form of tribalism, regionalism, separatism and the like.

"Combating the phenomena of bribery, embezzlement, favoritism and corruption in government agencies.

"Bringing about a cultural revolution.

"Spreading about education, attaining democracy in education and developing educational programs on nationalistic and scientific bases.

"Raising the level of health care, developing health organizations and expanding their scope in order to serve the people.

"Developing the media and giving them a nationalist, democratic orientation which is hostile to colonialism, Zionism and racism.

"Preserving the good religious, cultural and social traditions of the Somali people.

"In the realm of foreign policy, we are working for:

"Advancement of the policy of positive neutrality and nonalignment.

"The struggle to have a permanent peace reign among the people of the region of the Horn of Africa, on foundations of the principles of good neighborliness and respect for national sovereignty.

"Standing on the side of the causes of the peace, liberation and social progress of the peoples of the region of the Horn of Africa.

"Supporting the Arab nation's struggle against the Camp David agreements and various imperialist, Zionist and reactionary schemes, for the sake of completing their liberation and achieving their social progress and democratic unity.

"Supporting the Palestinian Arab people's struggle for the sake of regaining their national rights, foremost among those their right to return, determine their destiny and establish their independent state on their national soil under the leadership of the Palestine Liberation Organization, their sole legitimate representative.

"Struggling with the peoples of the areas of the Gulf, the Red Sea and the Indian Ocean to liquidate American imperialism's military bases, reject aggressive military pacts and empty these areas of the imperialist military presence and nuclear arms.

"Solidarity with the African peoples against imperialist interference in their internal affairs, for the sake of their attainment of social progress and the liquidation of racist regimes in South Africa and Namibia.

"Solidarity with the struggles of the world's peoples for the sake of liberation, democracy, the preservation of world peace and the consolidation of worldwide detents.

"The effort to stimulate Somalia's role in the nonaligned movement and such international and regional organizations as the United Nations, the League of Arab States and the Organization of African Unity in a manner serving the implantation of world peace and security, national liberation, and social progress.

"Finally, the Democratic Front for the Salvation of Somalia reaffirms the continued struggle to bring down the dictatorial regime which is inimical to the Somali people."

11887
CSO: 4704/7

TREURNICHT SEEKS NEW POLICY MANDATE

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 10 Mar 82 pp 1, 2

[Article by Jaap Theron]

[Text] CAPE TOWN. — The Independent Nationalist group of Dr Andries Treurnicht is preparing for a mass meeting in Pretoria on March 20 to get a mandate to form a new political party.

This has been disclosed by people involved with the meeting's arrangements.

Dr Treurnicht and MPs of his group were not prepared to comment on the matter yesterday, but other sources told The Citizen that the Independent Nationalists have invited about 300 supporters to "an organisers' meeting at Pretoria Afrikaanse Hoer Seunskool this coming Saturday".

Conspiracy

I understand that these organisers will, with others, have to arrange the following Saturday's mass meeting in Pretoria.

Commenting on his expulsion from the National Party Dr Treurnicht said yesterday: "I am ready to serve politics from a different platform."

He said it was clear to him that events of the past two weeks, were a "conspiracy to oust him and others from the party.

"The direction and viewpoint of the National Party has changed so drastically I can no longer support it.

"This direction has to be fought," said Dr Treurnicht. "There has to be a political action."

Dr Treurnicht will address his NP divisional council of Waterberg tomorrow evening, while other "rebels", like Dr Ferdie Hartzenberg, Mr Daan van der Merwe and Mr. Tom Langley, will also address their divisional councils within the next week.

Watching

Members of the Transvaal NP executive will attend every divisional council meeting held by a rebel MP or MPC, including tomorrow evening's meeting of Dr Treurnicht, The Citizen was told.

The Independent Nationalists held a caucus meeting yesterday following the expulsion of Dr Treurnicht by the Transvaal executive and issued a statement afterwards.

Mr Tom Langley, spokesman for the group, said their caucus members were suprised at the arbitrary ending of . . Dr Treurnicht's membership.

This action did not comply with the decision of the Transvaal Nationalist head committee that questions of membership would be referred to the various MPs' divisional councils.

"We reaffirm our standpoint that, like Dr Treurnicht, we do not conform to a decision which accepts power-sharing in the South African governmental system," Mr Langley said.

A spokesman for the Transvaal NP executive told The Citizen that whole NP divisional councils, which supported or voted for motions of confidence in any of the rebel MPs would be disbanded and replaced by new loyal divisional councils.

He said if the rebels founded a new party on March 20 they would all be immediately expelled from the NP if such steps had not been already taken.

I understand that the Independent Nationalists will attempt to draw people from all over the country and not only from the Transvaal to the March 20 mass meeting in Pretoria.

Apparently, they have not decided upon a name for their evisaged new party yet and the name-giving will probably stand over to the mass meeting.

One name being mooted is "Purified Nats", (Gesuiwerde Nationaliste).

CSO: 4700/919

PFP MAKES 'FINAL BID' TO RULE JOHANNESBURG

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 10 Mar 82 pp 2, 6

[Text] THE Progressive Federal Party is likely to woo two of the three independants in Johannesburg's City Council for the next two days in a final bid to rule the city.

It was learned yesterday that the PFP had now set its sights on Mr Koos Sadie and Lionel Keenen and would not make any further attempts to get the support of Mr Ron Selley.

Mr Selley, although elected as an independent, started his election campaign as a member of the New Republic Party and only stood as an independent because of his profession as teacher.

Continued attempts by the PFP to get Mr Selley's backing have however, been rejected by the NRP.

Therefore the PFP will now do everything in its power to sway the vote of either Mr Sadie or Mr Keenen — and the key man seems to be Mr Sadie.

Although no confirmation could be obtained, it is understood that the PFP is standing firm on its rejection of a joint management committee.

The NRP will meet tonight to decide its move, but it is unlikely to deviate from its proposal of a joint management committee of three members of the PFP, two of the National Party and one of the Independent Ratepayer's Action group.

The NP and IRA have also declared their willingness to accept this proposal to assure that the deadlock in the council is broken.

Joint Control

We can't imagine why the Progressive Federal Party should be opposed to a joint management committee consisting of the PFP (three members), the National Party (two members) and the Independent Ratepayers' Action group (one).

Unless, of course, the power-hungry PFP is trying to get outright control by winning over one of the non-aligned councillors who holds the balance of power.

But even if Mr Koos Sadie, of the Southern Johannesburg Ratepayers' Association, were to give the PFP his support, the PFP would not be able to rule with a majority of one.

For one thing, illness or absence could result in a complete deadlock at a council meeting.

For another, what reliance could the PFP place on Mr Sadie's vote on key issues when he is a former Nationalist?

Furthermore, there is no way, in such a split council, for the PFP to implement any of its civic election promises to integrate public amenities like swimming pools.

One independent Mr Keenan, won his ward on the platform that Alexandra Township should not be allowed to encroach on Lombardy East/Kew, another, Mr Selley, is actually a New Republic Party member, and that party is against forced integration, and the third is Mr Sadie, who represents a Southern Suburbs ward which placed the PFP at the bottom of a three-cornered contest.

So if it cannot introduce its integrationist policies, what can the PFP do?

The answer is place the city's interests first and forget about ideological preferences.

And if the PFP places the city first, it will agree to joint rule, for that is the only way in which the council can avoid a series of deadlocks which will make it lame and ineffectual.

Mr Sadie should also think twice before he does anything that might give the PFP control.

First, he is poles apart from the Progfeds in political and social outlook — and so are the voters of his ward who returned him to the council.

Secondly, if he believes that politics should be pushed into the background, he should ensure that all-party control is introduced otherwise, if it is allowed to gain power, the PFP, which is radically oriented, will determine the city's future.

We don't think Mr Sadie would want that.

Come to think of it, what better way to ensure the city is non-political than to have a management committee in which politics cannot play a role because control is shared?

CSO: 4700/919

REPORTAGE ON BUTHELEZI COMMISSION RECOMMENDATIONS

Power Sharing

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 8 Mar 82 pp 3, 14

[Article by Tim Clarke]

[Text]

THE Chief Minister of KwaZulu, Chief Gatsha Buthelezi, said yesterday he earnestly hoped that the Government would sit up and take notice of the recommendations of the Buthelezi Commission which has recommended shared power for Blacks and Whites both in Natal and KwaZulu.

Chief Buthelezi, who is due to address a Press conference today on the wide-ranging commission, said it must be obvious to the Government that many influential South Africans had signed the final report. It was not a frivolous report. It had taken more than a year to compile and he believed it gave hope for a better South Africa, for better relationships between Blacks and Whites and for lasting peace.

It was significant that in some of the evidence given by Blacks before the commissiion there was a note of despair. Already some of them, who could hardly be described as agitators, felt that strike action would become a way of life.

Chief Buthelezi said at this stage he did not want to say anything more.

It was a pity that the ruling National Party had not given evidence before the commission and had refused to cooperate with the body.

However, he believed that good sense would prevail and he hoped the Government would take note of the findings in the 200-page commission report. Equally, it was to be regretted that the ANC had refused to be involved in the commission.

Refused

One of the members of the commission who refused to sign the final report was the New Republic Party MP for Durban North, Mr Ron Miller, who is also leader of the party in Natal.

Mr Miller said yesterday the NRP could not accept a single legislature for Natal/KwaZulu elected by universal adult franchise on a proportional basis. In the reality of modern science this would mean that such a proportionally elected joint government of Natal/KwaZulu of say, 100 members, would comprise about 80 Black, ten Indian, eight White and two Coloured members.

It was obvious that the minority groups would have very little political say.

Discussed

Mr Miller said before deciding not to sign the final report the matter had been discussed with the NRP leadership and caucus and this was the feeling of the party.

Another member of the commission who did not sign the final report is Mr Japie Basson, the former Progressive Federal Party MP and now a member of the President's Council. Mr Basson said yesterday he had not signed the final report because many of the issues raised by the commission were now before the President's Council for deliberation and debate.

Mr Chris Saunders, head of the giant Tongaat Group in Natal, who signed the final report said he was more than satisfied with the recommendations contained therein. He felt the commission had done an incredible amount of good research, that the evidence of witnesses had been fully tested and the research done by individual marketing companies was also of a high order.

Service

Mr Oscar Dhlomo, secretary general, of the Zulu politico-cultural organisation Inkatha, said yesterday the commission had done a wonderful service for South Africa. He hopes sincerely it would lead the Government to realise that it had to share power.

It was significant that even among conservative Zulus who gave evidence before the commission, there was a hardening of opinion. The evidence showed clearly the frustration of being "law-abiding citizens" and yet being denied any say in the Government.

Mr A Rajbansini, chairman of the South African Indian Council, who also signed the final report, said it served as a valuable blueprint and guideline for future relations in South Africa.

He said there was no doubt the report could not be rejected out of hand. Too many influential people had signed it and also care had been taken not to over exaggerate or to overemphasize findings. All the findings were set out logically and he hoped that the powers in Pretoria would heed some of the warnings.

'Open KwaZulu Schools to All Races'

DURBAN — The Buthelezi Commission of Inquiry into the constitutional, political, economic and social development of Natal-kwaZulu has recommended that schools in the area should be optionally open to all races and that there should be a single controlling administration.

In its report, released on Friday the commission said a single controlling administration would produce considerable administrative savings and the highest efficiency in the use and development of facilities.

The commission had heard evidence that both development plans and efficient use of existing facilities had been limited and in some cases delayed because of uncertainties in planned development and the consequent departmental reluctance to spend capital on necessary schools.

The purpose of the single control was twofold: it could avoid a significant (and expensive) level of administrative duplication, and provide a pool of expertise in administration, teacher-training, teachers and facilities.

It would also mean an easier approach to an equalisation of available resources and a readier recognition that the future adequate growth of the area depended upon the fullest use of all its human resources.

It stressed the urgency in the matter which, it said, became more obvious when the economics of the area and its relative productivities were considered.

"The present position in Natal alone is that the annual addition of people who, if they have reached it all, will not be able to sustain literacy in nearly 60 percent of those entering school, which is approximately 6 percent per annum of the total Black South African population."

This meant that the major problem which existed at present of a high proportion of adults who could not acquire competitive skills needed for productivity in the first-world economy, would be a continuing feature in future.

It was recognised that the existing inequalities in available education were a major source of discontent, and therefore of potential destabilisation in the area.

The comparative peace in schools during recent times had been due to policies followed by Inkatha, but the commission did not accept that if the inequalities remained, successful persuasion against revolt could be repeated.

Neither did it accept that, although the major schooling of Blacks would be the responsibility of the kwaZulu department, the possibly serious and violent consequences from gross inequalities would or could be confined to kwaZulu. The inter-dependence and inter-penetrations of the two areas was far too great for that to be possible. — Sapa.

Separation 'Not in Best Interests'

DURBAN — The Buthelezi Commission is convinced that the separation of the two areas is not in the interests of the people who live there.

In its report the commission recommended that within the two areas there should be a regional structure of government and the division into the regional areas should be arrived at by mutual agreement.

In order to achieve and develop the necessary mutual interaction of these regional zones the powers at present possessed by kwaZulu should also be accorded to the Natal Provincial authority.

"If this situation can be realised, the opportunities for the development of suitable administration and growth in the area will be considerably improved," said the report.

The commission believed that the area should, for the time being, be governed under an agreement in which the executive level would consist of representatives of the groups in the region.

Sapa.

Eight Out of Ten Blacks Are Discontent

DURBAN - There was significant evidence of an increase in expressed political discontent and anger, which was now present among between seven and eight out of 10 Blacks, the Buthelezi Commission found.

Actual militancy and an attitude of confrontation appeared in between three and four out of 10 Blacks and the majority view expressed was that African National Congress insurgents would receive sympathy and co-operation from most or many Blacks in South Africa.

In addition, said the report, the overwhelming majority of Blacks who appeared before the commission spontaneously predicted violence or adult social unrest on a large scale if meaningful policy reform did not occur in the near future.

The commission found that the high level of political discontent and the significant extent of expressed militancy among Blacks indicated the urgency of the situation.

Popular sentiments, it said, appeared to be such as to create a climate which would encourage, justify and protect groups aiming at creating instability in the country.

While a revolutionary situation has not yet emerged in general terms, developments appear to point in that direction. The importance of legitimate internal Black political organisations, like Inkatha, in directing Black South African political sentiments along peaceful and constructive lines cannot be over-emphasised.

The expectations which the surveys revealed had indicated that such organisations had to be seen to be achieving progress in political and constitutional affairs if they hoped to continue exercising a peaceful and constructive influence.

This would not be possible unless a political accomodation could be achieved. The minimum expectations of White South Africans, other minorities, and Black South Africans in the kwaZulu-Natal region, as well as basic political and economic values in all groups, indicated clearly that a mutually acceptable accommodation was possible. - Sapa.

Cannot Be Implemented

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 9 Mar 82 pp 6, 12

[Editorial]

[Text] THE Buthelezi Commission's report is a valuable document, in that it spells out problems and dangers that deserve careful consideration.

However, although leading academics and businessmen served on the commission, including Mr Harry Oppenheimer, there is no way in which the report can be implemented.

For one thing, the Government did not participate in the commission's work, nor did it give evidence, nor will it accept its constitutional findings.

For another, although the commission was appointed at the request of the KwaZulu Assembly, KwaZulu has no power to act on its findings and Natal's controlling party, the New Republic Party, rejects the recommendations.

There appears to be strong support for the proposals among Natal business leaders, especially sugar barons, who would be able to exist quite comfortably under Black rule, but there is no reason to suppose that the White electorate in that province would go along with the proposals.

The NRP, in fact, did not sign the report.

The leader of the party in Natal, Mr Ron Miller, who was a member of the commission, said the NRP could not accept a single legislature for Natal/KwaZulu elected by universal adult franchise on a proportional basis.

Such a proportionally elected joint government of Natal/KwaZulu of, say, 100 members would comprise about 80 Black, ten Indian, eight White and two Coloured representatives.

Transfer of power

Minority groups would obviously have little say.

Mr Vause Raw, the national leader of the party, also came out strongly against the report's recommendations, saying they amounted to a transfer of power to an overwhelming numerical majority.

The numbers issue is, of course, one that dominates all efforts to find a solution.

The PFP's federal plan fails because it would inevitably lead to majority rule.

The Buthelezi Commission's plan fails on the same score.

The Government, while it is willing to accommodate Coloureds and Indians within the "White" constitutional set-up, is not prepared to bring Blacks into the system.

But Blacks are more and more opposed to exercising their political rights via homelands and independent Black States.

And although they will receive self-rule at local level, this is not going to satisfy them in the long run.

A feature of the Buthelezi Commission's report is that it stresses the dangers of growing Black frustrations.

It finds the need for political reform is urgent and warns that there is a growing potential for direct violent confrontation between extreme White and Black groups.

In a way, Chief Buthelezi is in as much of a fix as the Government.

He has ranged himself on the side of non-violence and his Inkatha movement is the only other movement, besides the ANC, that has significant or potential support.

He must show that moderation can bring about a solution not just for KwaZulu but for the rest of the country.

But if the Government rejects the commission's report out of hand, it will undercut a lot of Chief Buthelezi's credibility.

The Government, however, has a responsibility to its own electorate — and it cannot be deterred from doing what it considers in the country's best interests simply because there are dangers.

Besides, its commitment is to the President's Council, and it will be that council's recommendations, rather than the Buthelezi Commission's report, that it will have to consider in revising the constitutional set-up.

Nevertheless, the commission's report deserves careful consideration by all bodies and experts who are concerned with the country's future.

We have not yet devised a solution which will be acceptable to all, but we shall have to find one before time eventually runs out and the warnings by the commission — and other bodies — become reality.

Buthelezi Report Rejected, But a Talks Basis--NRP

PRETORIA'S township leaders have welcomed the Buthelezi Commission as a genuine attempt to offer solutions to the country's political problems.

The government has also been urged to accept the Commission's recommendations because South Africans had been offered a reasonable option to "an alternative too ghastly to contemplate."

Mr Joe Tshabalala, chairman of the Atteridgeville Community Council, said Chief Gatsha Buthelezi wanted to offer the country an everlasting peace. If its recommendations were accepted that would only be good for the country and its future relations, he said.

Mr M W Aphane, chairman of the Mamelodi Community council, praised the commission for having done a good job for all South Africans.

Mr Z Z Mashao, president of Atteridgeville Chamber of Commerce and Industries, said it was a move towards the right direction.

CAPE TOWN. — The New Republic Party member of the Buthelezi Commission, Mr Ron Miller, MP for Durban North, yesterday called on the Prime Minister and his cabinet to hold discussions with Chief Gatsha Buthelezi and the NRP's provincial leaders on the future of Natal and kwaZulu.

"The Buthelezi Commission could represent the beginning of positive negotiations to which the NRP is committed."

The NRP found the one-man-one-vote transfer of power to a black minority as recommended by the commission totally unacceptable as the party believed any new dispensation should accommodate ethnic groups without domination by any single group. The party also rejected any solution which was regional and did not provide overall answer for all the population groups.

"The political recommendations have serious implications for all the supplementary reports of the commission," Mr Miller said. The educational, economical, health and other reports could not be seen in isolation.

"The minority veto and Bill of Rights, proposed as safeguards for minorities, will fail to provide adequate protection for goups," Mr Miller said.

"The Bill of Rights is designed specifically for the protection of individuals, while the minority veto makes no provision for ethnic group rights."

The NRP would continue to honour its mandate from the vast majority of Natal's White voters to protect them from group domination.

"The time has now come for Chief Buthelezi and his cabinet and NRP Natal provincial leaders, together with members of the central government cabinet to meet around the conference table to seek areas of agreement on the future of the Natal/kwaZulu region."

The people of kwaZulu were specifically excluded from the consultations of the President's Council and he called on the Prime Minister to accept the proposal, "as we believe Chief Minister Buthelezi has left the door open for constructive dialogue among political leaders in South Africa," he said.

The NRP leader, Mr Vause Raw also said that the Buthelezi Commission proposals amounted to a transfer of power to an overwhelming numerical majority and were not acceptable.

Mr Raw said he supported the position taken by his parliamentary colleague, Mr Miller, who, as a member of the commission, could not support its main findings.

"We do not believe that a minority veto can operate effectively in a single legislature in which one group will have 80 per cent of the representation, or that such a majority would allow itself to be frustrated by small minorities," Mr Raw said.

The party's principles and philosophy, based on accommodation of group rights in a system allowing no group domination, was overwhelmingly endorsed by Natal's voters at provincial level. The NRP could, therefore, not support the political proposal of a "one man, one vote" common voters' role with proportional representation.

"It is with considerable regret that the political recommendation made it impossible for the NRP to accept a report which has made a valuable contribution to the identification of many of the problem areas in the kwaZulu region," Mr Raw said.

NGK Still Remains Divided Into Ethnic Units

THE division of the Ned Geref Kerk into autonomous ethnically-based units will remain for at least the next two years, the Federal Council of the NG churches decided at a meeting to discuss unification in Pretoria at the weekend.

Because of the differences of opinions which emerged at the meeting, the federal council appointed an ad-hoc committee to investigate the question of church unity, which has to report back in two years' time.

The committee will clarify the concept of mother and daughter churches, with special attention to be given to achieving church unity and the ways of doing so.

Meanwhile the NG Sendingkerk and the Reform Church in Africa (at present for Coloureds and Indians respectively) are to amalgamate. The NG Sendingkerk has, in fact, deproclaimed itself an ethnic church.

The moderator of the White NG Kerk, the Rev Kobus Potgieter, said the mother church had a different standpoint to the other three sister churches which were advocating a unified church.

But the NG Kerk took note of the fact that all the churches now rejected the idea of an over-arch federal type synod and the sister churches now, instead wanted another form of unity, he said.

"We take note of this and will take the memorandums of the other churches very seriously," he said.

He promised the NG Kerk would discuss the matter of church unity at its next synod in October and would, in the meantime, welcome all criticism of its standpoint.

The Rev E M Mataboge of the NG Kerk in Afrika, likened the attitude of the NG Kerk to a "a mother who has a daughter and then denies that daughter the right to be in the house."

"Let us not get ourselves into the same position the NG Kerk in Zimbabwe is in at present," he said.

It was "high time we look to the unity of our church."

The Rev D S Snyman, who presented the case for the NG Kerk, proposed maintaining the status quo with the separate churches being linked through the existing Federal Council of NG Churches. An authoritative joint synod for all four churches was not necessary, he said.

The NG Kerk feared that decisions taken by such a joint synod might force its decisions on minority groups which could then lead to strife.

There was no need to structure the unity of the church organisationally, Mr Snyman said. It was only necessary to be "one in faith and one when approaching the government," but the differences between people had to be accepted as an imperfect reality and trying to integrate them in one church would not work.

Different cultural groups had the right to worship in their own language with their own people.

The Rev D P Botha of the NG Sendingkerk, called for church unity at all levels.

"We are products of the mission work of the NG Kerk and so are of one church."

He asked the NG Kerk to take the attitude of his church seriously, namely that "differences in language, culture, standard of living and housing should not play a decisive role in determining the structure of the church."

The Rev J Kritzinger of the Reform Church in Africa, said "Language and culture can no longer be allowed to be a barrier to our religion. We must restore the unity of our church we lost because of the wickedness of some." — Sapa.

CSO: 4700/902

PROFESSOR DUGARD: U.S. 'QUIET DIPLOMACY' FAILS TO PROMOTE REFORM

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 8 Mar 82 p 13

[Text]

A POLICY of "quiet diplomacy" by the Reagan Administration has failed to promote reform in South Africa and may have allowed a return to more extreme forms of racial domination, a professor in law says.

"Clear signs of backsliding by the South African Government and a return to old style racial politics have appeared," writes Professor John Dugard, director of the Centre for Applied Legal Studies at the University of the Witwatersrand in the Foreign Policy Magazine, published by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

Prof Dugard says the Reagan Administration's quiet diplomacy is widely construed as support for the status quo .

This is probably an unfair assessment, but the Reagan Administration must learn from the failures of previous administrations that Pretoria does not always, when it should, hear quiet diplomacy.

At such times, Washington can usefully raise its voice," he said.

Any momentum towards reform in the Republic has stalled and in recent Parliamentary sessions, South Africa has produced no legislative reforms. On the contrary, writes Prof Dugard, legislation conferring so-called independence on the Ciskei firmly extended apartheid by arbitratily depriving several million Ciskeians of their South African citizenship.

Racist statutes have been enforced with new vigour and detentions without trial and police aggression are on the increase.

Asked to comment on the article, Prof Dugard said the views he expressed then had been confirmed by the Reagan Administration's lack of significant response to the death in detention of Dr Neil Aggett. This was in sharp contrast to the Carter Administration's reaction to the death of Steve Biko.

The South West Africa settlement issue was the focal point of US African foreign policy and they were ignoring South Africa's internal policies to the detriment of social justice in South Africa."

He also said he felt no optimism that the recent split in the national party would provide impetus towards reform. The split had strengthened the centre of the party and with the division on major issues, the Prime Minister would find it diffucult to institute reform.

CSO: 4700/902

F.W. DE KLERK ELECTED TO LEAD TRANSVAAL NP

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 8 Mar 82 pp 6, 15

[Article by Jaap Theron: "Effect of NP Split Will Be Minimised"]

[Text]

MR F W DE KLERK (45), Minister of Mineral and Energy Affairs, was elected unanimously as new leader of the Transvaal National Party on Saturday in the place of Dr Andries Treurnicht who was expelled from all party positions with a number of other who rebelled against the party leadership.

Dr Gerrit Viljoen, Minister of National Education, was elected deputy chairman of the party in the place of Mr De Klerk. The other deputy chairmen remain Mr Fanie Botha, Minister of Manpower, and Mr Hendrik Schoeman, Minister of Transport Affairs.

Mr Pik Botha, Minister of Foreign Affairs, was for the first time elected to the Transvaal NP executive. The other new executive members are Dr Piet Koornhof, Minister of Co-operation and Development, Mr Hein Kruger, MEC, and Mrs Joan Hunter MPC.

Loyal

Mr De Klerk, who comes from a political family — his father, Mr Jan de Klerk, was Cabinet Minister for many years and retired from politics after a term as President of the Senate.

Like his father Mr De Klerk is also known as a man who is extremely loyal to the cause of the party leadership. He has proved over and again since he became Cabinet Minister that he is against group forming, infighting and behind the scenes organising to overthrow the leadership.

Since Mr P W Botha became Prime Minister nearly four years ago Mr De Klerk has being tipped to succeed Dr Treurnicht as Transvaal leader and thus the heir apparent to the premiership.

The most significant outcome of the split in the Nasional Party and Mr De Klerk's unanimous election as Transvaal leader is perhaps that Transvaal Nats have now for the first time since Dr Verwoerd's days closed their ranks behind a single leader, in this Mr De Klerk.

After his election on Saturday Mr De Klerk also said he would give immediate attention to step up unity in the Transvaal and to bring his Transvaal NP organisation into top gear.

He said he would ensure that NP policies were put unequivocally with a view to avoiding a further and unneccessary split in NP ranks.

Direction

In the meantime everything possible would be done to minimise the effects of the Rightwinger breakaway.

The Transvaal NP executive is planning to hold information meetings all over the province to tell their supporters exactly what the true direction was the party was following under the leadership of Mr P W Botha.

The Head Committee did not use its powers on Saturday to expel the dissidents from the NP. But their cases have been referred to their respective divisional councils for the necessary action. This would ensure the maximum democratic action on the whole issue, I was told.

Disbanded

NP divisional councils which expel their MPs or MPCs who supported Dr Treurnicht, would be disbanded by the NP Head Committee and replaced by loyal Head Committees.

The general impression is that the split in the NP has been formally sealed off and there was no further immediate significant break on hand.

It is being conceded that Dr Treurnicht could form a new party with former rebels like Dr Connie Mulder and Mr Lourens Mulder and with even an outside chance of getting the support of former Prime Minister, Mr John Vorster. But his chances of obtaining a significant political platform is not considered very strong at the moment.

Speaking at a Press conference shortly after his election Mr De Klerk said the true policy of the party would henceforth be expounded in the Transvaal, reports SAPA.

Mr De Klerk said: "My attitude will be to follow a policy to ensure that the true policy of the National Party will be clearly and explicity expounded in the Transvaal and not distortions which seem to be in vogue these days."

SABC-TV quoted Mr De Klerk as saying there was solidarity between the Transvaal NP and the party as a whole on a federal basis.

This had become apparent at last week's meeting and was again reflected in the spirit of Saturday's deliberations.

Dr Treurnicht was officially dismissed as party leader in the province on Saturday after being suspended for a week last weekend.

Three members of the executive who had refused to abide by the motion of confidence proposed in the Prime Minister last week, had staged a walk-out on Saturday the SABC report said.

New Leader

[Editorial]

THE MODERATE Mr F W de Klerk, Minister of Mineral and Energy Affairs, is now the Transvaal leader of the National Party.

In all the manoeuvrings for power which followed the ousting of Dr Connie Mulder as Transvaal leader, Mr De Klerk kept a low profile.

Indeed, his role has been that of a peacemaker, for example in the Craven Week dispute. And even after the Treurnicht group had refused to support a motion of confidence in the Prime Minister in the Parliamentary caucus, he tried to prevent the break.

However, when it became clear that Dr Treurnicht and his followers would not compromise, Mr De Klerk came out strongly against the Transvaal leader and was mainly responsible for his defeat.

Mr De Klerk, as a party man through and through, would not have countenanced any rebellion against the national leader and Prime Minister, nor did he.

It is in the nature of the man that his loyalties are clear and his Nationalism, acquired from his late father, Cabinet Minister Jan de Klerk, is beyond question.

He will make a good leader, a quiet man, steadfast in his convictions, but with an ability to project an image of strength and toughness when these two attributes are most needed.

He is also a Minister who has impressed the Opposition with his debating skill and with his sound grasp of public affairs.

Nevertheless, although he is the right man for the job of Transvaal leader, his task will be a daunting one.

First of all, there is the split, the scars of which must be healed if the party is to close ranks and move forward in unity.

Until now, he has been able to walk the tightrope of conflicting interests within the Transvaal party.

Conservatives in Dr Treurnicht's day regarded him as a potential leader, yet he was able to satisfy verligtes that he was a man of reform as well.

He was, in other words, a consummate middle-of-the-roader acceptable to both camps.

Now he has had to make his commitment.

By taking a leading role in the battle against Dr Treurnicht, he has affronted not only the Treurnicht group which quit the parliamentary caucus, but some of Dr Treurnicht's erstwhile supporters who remain.

Furthermore, although the Prime Minister has won the unanimous confidence of the Transvaal Head Committee, and Mr De Klerk has emphasised there is solidarity between the Transvaal party and the party as a whole on a federal basis, the battle, in and outside the party, is far from over.

The proposals which the President's Council will put forward late in April will cause further dissension and may lead to more defections.

Mr De Klerk has promised to ensure "that the true policy of the National Party will be clearly and explicity expounded in the Transvaal."

We assume it is the policy which the Prime Minister has put forward, since Mr De Klerk has virtually bound himself to that policy by his unequivocal support of the PM's interpretation.

That leaves him with little room for manouevre in what must be a bitter battle at grassroots level and party congresses.

Mr De Klerk must also know that the closing of ranks within the party can only be temporary unless there is a clear and acceptable vision of the future under any reformist programme.

Also, that rivalries within the party have not been ended by the show of solidarity that followed Dr Treurnicht's ousting.

Meanwhile, outside the party, the Right-wing groups sense an even greater swing to them than they achieved in last year's general election.

Thus Mr De Klerk will not only have to restore and maintain unity within the Transvaal party, but fight off the growing challenge from the Right.

Taking everything into consideration, it is a daunting task.

Since we take up a centrist stand ourselves, we can understand his aims and motivations all the more.

We wish him well.

CSO: 4700/902

PFP LEADER OPPOSES OBERHOLZER MEMBERSHIP IN PARTY

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 8 Mar 82 pp 1, 2

[Text]

JOHANNESBURG's veteran leader, Mr Francois Oberholzer, is ready to join the Progressive Federal and National parties in a coalition.

But PFP leader, Mr Sam Moss, has said this is "unacceptable".

Mr Oberholzer said yesterday: "Neither the National Party nor the PFP are willing to sit together on a management committee where the PFP has three seats, the NP two and a member of the IRA the remaining seat.

"Yet a situation where the ruling party has a majority of only one in the city council would be impossible. Councillors go abroad to attend conferences, they become ill and can't attend meetings and then the opposition will have the majority and they will be able to counter the recommendations made by the management committee or break the quorum. That would make it impossible for the council to function.

"If sitting on the same Management Committee as the PFP is the only solution to the deadlock — and I believe it is in the best interests of Johannesburg — I'll do it, providing there is no politics at management committee level.

Mr Oberholzer said the management committee of the previous five years, where the NP and the IRA had sat together in a coalition, functioned well because there were no politics involved and every member of the committee worked towards that which was in the best interests of Johannesburg.

Mr Oberholzer mentioned in passing that feelers from the PFP to see whether the IRA would join them in a coalition pact had been put out but that "nothing concrete has emanated from that."

In the meantime Mr Oberholzer is clearing out his office and making way for the new chairman of the management committee who will officially take power today.

Practical

"This is not a negative act, just a practical one. It would be foolish to stay in the office and later have to ask permission from the new chairman to go into the office and collect my documents," Mr Oberholzer said.

Mr Oberholzer was confident the special meeting to elect the mayor of the city and the new management committee would indeed take place today and not be postponed.

He said today's meeting could be a drawn out one, especially if there should at any stage be equal voting on some issues. If one of the independent abstain on any issue this could easily happen.

Mr Sam Moss, leader of the PFP in the council said he did not accept that there would be a non-political management committee in the biggest city in South Africa. National issues are so intertwined with local issues that it is impossible to make non-political decisions on municipal level.

'Scurrilous'

"I find Obie's offer to sit on the management committee with him and the Nats unacceptable. The reason for this is the scurrilous 'swart gevaar' tactics they used during the municipal election campaign.

"They cost South Africa very dearly in terms of the deterioration of race relationships. To sit on the same management committee with them would be a negation of everything the PFP stood for during the election."

"I believe that even if given a mandate of only one the PFP will be able to run the city," Mr Moss said.

In the final analysis the three independent city councillors should be aware of the responsibility and he was sure they would in no way willingly undermine the working of the council," he said.

CSO: 4700/902

UNIONS WARN GOVERNMENT TO STOP DETENTIONS

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 12 Mar 82 p 2

[Text]

CAPE TOWN. — The independent trade union movement in South Africa has warned the Government that the workers will not "sit idly by while detentions continue".

In a statement issued in Cape Town on Wednesday, 13 independent unions endorsed demands for the unconditional release of all detainees and the scrapping of security laws that "permit the continued harassment and detention of trade unionists".

The statement follows a series of solidarity meetings of the unions throughout the country recently.

The unions noted that the latest wave of detentions was the most widespread and serious attack so far. It had removed the leadership of several unions and had resulted in one death.

Several others were sent to hospitals or placed under psychiatric care.

"We note increased use of security laws by South African and Ciskeian authorities and Security Police harassment of trade unions that includes detentions, raids of union offices and so on."

The unions noted widespread allegations of torture and maltreatment of detainees.

The explanation given by the authorities for the detentions was "utterly rejected" by the unions.

"We were told there would be a trial early this year in response to the initial outcry at the detentions, yet no such trial has taken place."

Attempts by the Department of Manpower Utilisation to distance themselves from the State action were also "utterly rejected".

The independent unions condemned the Trade Union Council of South Africa for a statement issued on the day of the funeral of Dr Neil Aggett, dissociating themselves from the protests against his death in detention.

"Such a statement is a disgrace to any organisation purporting to represent workers and an insult to the workers they claim to represent.

"Their statement represents an attack on unions showing solidarity on the death of a trade unionist."

CSO: 4700/919

TRADE AGREEMENT WITH ZIMBABWE 'INEVITABLE'

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 10 Mar 82 p 9

[Article by Keith Abendroth]

[Text]

SOUTH AFRICA and Zimbabwe, with relationships already brittle because of Zimbabwe's backing of Swapo and the ANC, appear to be heading for inevitably, inter-linked economic problems.

Sources said in Pretoria that there could be serious repercussions if the two countries do not come to some sort of acceptable renewal of their trade links.

It is expected that the Western bloc will bring increasing pressure to bear on the countries to renew their trade agreement.

South Africa last March gave notice to the new Salisbury government that the old 1964 trade agreement would be terminated in March 1984.

The grounds given were that the "special circumstances" which had justified the agreement, formulated before UDI and designed to help Rhodesia after UDI, had fallen away.

Mr Gerald Cubitt, a researcher at the Africa Institute, said in Pretoria that on the one hand Zimbabwe relied heavily on imports from South Africa but on the other to lose such a market at a time when the South African economy was declining was "not an attractive prospect".

Zimbabwe was politically hostile to South Africa, with Prime Minister Mr Robert Mugabe never allowing an opportunity to pass to castigate South Africa — either in her rôle in South West Africa or her internal policies.

But Zimbabwe relied heavily on transport links through South Africa for imports and exports. After 15 years of sanctions, important sectors of Zimbabwe's manufacturing industry were geared to, and largely dependent on, the South African market.

In addition South Africa was also the closest and cheapest source of about a third of Zimbabwe's imports.

The 1964 trade agreement, with amendments, had given Rhodesian exporters an advantage over other overseas suppliers on the South African market.

Goods allowed into South Africa duty free under the agreement included clothing made from woven material, hollow ware, leather and rubber shoes, cotton piece goods, yarn, twine, cordage, travel goods and certain processed foods.

While Zimbabwe had been trying to lessen her dependence on South Africa through membership of the Southern African Development Co-ordination Conference, and also through a search for alternative markets abroad, South Africa was still her primary market.

Mr Cubitt said that most of the items covered by the agreement were likely to be subjected to tariffs in neighbouring Black states. At the same time the markets in these countries were also unlikely to absorb and pay for goods currently being exported to South Africa.

Markets further afield were highly competitive because of goods from Hong Kong, Taiwan and Japan. The costs of transporting Zimbabwean goods to these markets were far higher than sending them to South Africa.

If the two countries failed to reach a new agreement Zimbabwe stood to lose more than R65-million in the first year. In addition it was estimated that at least 6 500 Zimbabweans would lose their jobs.

But last year South Africa bought 41 percent of all Zimbabwe's manufactured goods, while 31 percent of Zimbabwe's imports came from South Africa.

The value of Zimbabwean exports to South Africa in 1980 was R115,9-million — and about 60 percent of this was covered by the preferential agreement.

CSO: 4700/919

INKATHA OFFICIAL: BUTHELEZI REPORT PROPOSALS WATERED DOWN

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 10 Mar 82 p 9

[Text]

DURBAN. — The secretary-general of Inkatha, Dr Oscar Dhlomo, says the constitutional recommendations of the Buthelezi Commission are in conflict with Inkatha's policy in favour of a one-man-one-vote system in a unitary state.

Speaking in Durban, he said yesterday that the signing of the report by Inkatha members of the commission was an indication, however, that they were prepared to water down the policy of the organisation to find a way out of the present political impasse which would be an alternative to violence.

In Bloemfontein, the chairman of the Progressive Federal Party, Mr Colin Eglin, has urged the Government to give consideration to the recommendations of the Buthelezi Commission.

He said these represented a genuine attempt by a Black leader to find a peaceful solution for South Africa. If the Government did not take the report into account, this would amount to an undermining of the country's moderate leaders.

In a statement, NRP leader, Mr Vause Raw, also expressed regret at Chief Buthelezi's insistence that the NRP and the people of Natal should accept a one-man-one-vote common votors' roll with proportinal representation in a single government for KwaZulu/Natal.

"Our stance is in no way a rejection of co-operation and joint responsibility for matters of common concern. We remain committed to negotiation and consultation with the KwaZulu administration and firmly believe that the Buthelezi report lends itself to further constructive negotiation for finding alternatives which would avoid group conflict.

"We trust Chief Buthelezi will see it in the same light," Mr Raw said.

CSO: 4700/919

LAWYERS' REACTION TO RABIE REPORT 'LUKEWARM'

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 12 Mar 82 p 3

[Text] PRETORIA. — The Association of Law Societies yesterday welcomed some of the recommendations of the Rabie Commission on security legislation, but said in certain respects the recommendations "fell far short" of what it believed was necessary.

In a statement in Pretoria the association's president, Mr J E Knoll, said the association's full council had debated the Rabie report and its recommendations in Cape Town last week and had conveyed its views to the Minister of Justice.

It was clear from its report that the commission had given "full and careful" consideration to the association's representations and had gone "some way" towards meeting the association's submissions.

"Thus, for example, the provision for a review board in the Draft Internal Security Act recommended by the commission is a distinct step forward," Mr Knoll said.

"The association believes, however, that the board be independent and that its members should not be subject to instant dismissal by the DRRD/AWR.

The commission had also recommended:

- Reduction of the multiplicity of offences at present on the statute book of respect of terrorist activities and sabotage, to three, namely the offences of terrorism, subversion and sabotage as defined in the draft bill.
- Removal of the existing statutorily imposed minimum sentences.

This is welcomed, though the association suggests that the definition of the proposed new offences be further narrowed," Mr Knoll said.

"The association does not deny that there is a need, under the conditions prevailing, for security legislation to enable the state to discharge its duty to protect the public. It reiterates, however, that the greater the powers granted to the state the greater should be the measure of the supervision and control by effective independent bodies or persons, of those who exercise extraordinary powers on behalf of the state.

"The commission rejected the view that the common law and the normal judicial process could ensure the safety and security of the public. The association, nevertheless, urges that where it is possible to charge the accused under the common law and also under a statutory provision, a prosecution of the common law offence should be preferred.

There seems, for example, to be no good reason why, if the overthrow of the state is proved as the main intent, the common law crimes of high treason and sedition should not be wide enough to cover the majority of types of terrorist activity and sabotage.

"Add the common law crime of public violence, and it is possible indeed to cover 'a multitude of sins' ", he said.

The association felt that in certain respects the commission's recommendations fell far short of what it believed to be necessary. Three examples were:

- Failure to introduce sufficient safeguards to ensure that people were not detained or kept under detention unless their detention was and continued to be justified.
- Lack of provision for detainees to be visited by their lawyers subject to suitable safeguards.
- Lack of provision for payment by the state of compensation to people who had been detained.

Mr Knoll said the association had put forward positive submissions as to how it believed these and other shortcomings in the existing and recommended position should be dealt with. However, the commission had rejected the following:

● That the emergency legislation should be brought into effect only for limited periods when a serious threat to the maintenance of law and order existed, and

● That all detentions should be by warrant issued by a high ranking police officer at the time of or within a very short time after the detention without trial on suspicion and for questioning, should be subject to regular re-enactment by parliament after debate in the light of circumstances prevailing from time to time." Mr Knoll said.

To prevent injustices occurring at the outset, the initial detention should be of limited duration only. The periods recommended by the commission at which the review board was to review detentions and bannings were too long and should be reduced as safeguards against injustice.

The overriding power of the Chief Justice, where the Minister refused to accept a decision of the review board, was a further improvement. However, the review powers conferred on the Chief Justice were limited in their ambit and fell far short of a general review of the merits of the decision.

"The most disturbing omission from the report is the absence of recommendations of effective safeguards to prevent death or injury (physical and mental) during detention or during interrogation while in detention.

"Apart from the more than 40 deaths which have occurred in detention, a cause for grave concern lies in the reports of detainees being referred to hospitals for psychiatric treatment.

"The public no longer believes that detainees are not maltreated and no evidence, so far as the association is aware, has been produced to enable offenders to be brought to book, nor has any adequate explanation been given of the number of suicides who have preferred to die rather than to continue in detention and under interrogation.

"The commission has, in the association's view, failed effectively to recommend safeguards against such occurrences. The association has recommended a considerable number of safeguards to the Minister which, in its view, would go a long way towards remedying the situation.

The commission had recommended the appointment of inspectors to visit detainees in order to acquaint themselves with their well-being or otherwise.

"The association's criticism here is that these inspectors will be nominees of the Minister of Justice. In no sense can they be described as independent 'ombudsmen' responsible to parliament.

"They are required to report only to the Minister of Law and Order. It is suggested that they should report also to the Minister of Justice, who appoints them.

"The recommended new offence of failing to report terrorists is considered a dangerous innovation as it could have the effect for example, of requiring members of a family to inform on one another.

"Such a provision could result in the law being brought into contempt by cutting across family ties of loyalty. The association believes that the offence should be limited to the harbouring, concealing and assisting of persons known to be terrorists."

Mr Knoll said that among instances of specific matters that required to be remedied but which the commission did not appear to have taken into account, were:

● The detainee had no right to know for what he was being detained, the grounds of his detention and what conditions governed his detention.

● There were no rules governing interrogation or the methods employed, nor were there any apparent limit to the duration of solitary confinement.

● Access to detainees might be unnecessarily curtailed by the police and unnecessary mental stress could be caused to wives, children and parents.

● Detainees were brought to trial without notice, or adequate notice, to the attorneys acting for them.

CSO: 4700/919

COMMANDO CHIEF DENIES KNOWLEDGE OF SEYCHELLES INVOLVEMENT

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 10 Mar 82 p 2

[Text Pietermaritzburg.--In a sworn statement read to the Pietermaritzburg Supreme Court yesterday by the hijack trial prosecutor, Mr Cecil Rees, the Commanding Officer of Two Reconnaisance Commando denied any knowledge of 11 of the 43 accused having been in the Seychelles during November last year.

Commandand Danie van der Spuy said in the statement read to Mr Justice N James and two assessors: "If these people were called for service in the Seychelles in the normal course of their duty, I would have had knowledge and records thereof would have been kept.

"Neither during November 1981 nor at any other time did it come to my notice that these accused were officially ordered by the Department of Defence to be called for service in the Seychelles."

Bernard de Vos (27), of Germiston; Johannes de Beer (25), of Pretoria; Patrick Henrick (25), of Table View, Cape; Keith MacLeod, (26),of Bloemfontein; Desmond Walker (27), of Willem Pretorius Game Reserve, OFS; Pieter Doorewaard (28), of Pretoria; Kurt Priefert (38), a German citizen of Johannesburg; Steynn de Wet (30), of Klerksdorp; Alex Deacon (25), of Pretoria; William Dunlop-Paul (46), of Johannesburg; and Alan Mann (30), of Germiston were the 11 men involved.

CSO: 4700/919

SOUTH AFRICAN 'LACK OF DIRECTION' CITED

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 11 Mar 82 p 12

[Article by Andy Thomson]

[Text]

THE greatest problem facing South Africa's foreign relations is concern in the UK, USA, West Germany and France about an apparent lack of direction in South African policy-making over the past year, Mr Gavin Relly, president of the South Africa Foundation, told the foundation's 22nd annual general meeting in Johannesburg yesterday.

Addressing about a thousand delegates and foreign representatives at the Carlton Hotel, Mr Relly warned that South Africa would attract international scrutiny in the year ahead, especially with respect to the Government's relations to the President's Council's recommendations and The South West African independence issue.

Foreign representatives at the meeting included the ambassadors of Bophuthatswana, Spain and the Republic of China, as well as the consuls general for Switzerland, the UK, Belgium' France, Italy, Bolivia and Paraguay. Switzerland's first secretary and a representative from the Australian consulate were also present.

"Great expectations unfulfilled are always followed by excessive disillusionment," said Mr Relly. "Political realities such as mollifying conservative fears, circumventing bureaucratic obstinacy, conceding some points to gain others, proceeding almost by stealth as the target of a reform gradually becomes a fait accompli, while at all costs maintaining the authority of the state and the stability of the country are seldom fully appreciated."

Mr Relly outlined the major reforms in the past year as the emergence of an organised Black labour force which negotiated its price to industry and the progress made in the education of Blacks, urban housing facilities and business opportunities, but warned that, nonetheless, the country's future might be characterised by a degree of social turbulence while these and other adjustments to the society took effect.

He said the main incidents which had provoked criticism of South Africa overseas and which had done the country's reputation harm were the treatment of the Nyanga squatters, the closing down of the Post and the Sunday Post, the death in detention of Dr Neil Aggett, the South African incursion into Angola, the Maputo raid and the Seychelles affair.

mate concerns. He said the USA and South Africa were realising that their mutual interests were at least as real and as substantial as their differences.

As far as France was concerned, despite some initial strongly anti-South African speeches by Socialist President Francois

Mitterand, there was a certain continuity in French foreign policy towards South Africa, in that the French had always been reluctant to make an "either-or" choice between Black Africa and South Africa.

The French Government was well aware that South Africa had become a major supplier of coal and other products to France, and that the Koeberg nuclear plant was an important show-piece for French technology. In the first nine months of 1981 French exports to South Africa increased by an astounding 73,5 percent while imports increased by 10 percent.

Nevertheless, he noted that the ANC and Swapo had been authorised to open offices in Paris and an inter-parliamentary friendship group had been shelved.

Trade with West Germany continued to flourish and South Africa received very little adverse attention because of the country's own internal problems, namely inflation, unemployment, excessive public expenditure and the resistance to the stationing on German soil of medium-

CSO: 4700/906

SPLIT IN WITWATERSRAND STUDENT COUNCIL REPORTED

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 12 Mar 82 p 5

[Text]

THERE has been a split in the Students' Representative Council of the University of Witwatersrand.

The disunity in the SRC reached a climax on Wednesday night when three of the members of the executive committee were "asked" to resign, during a meeting.

Since Wednesday night, the SRC had tried to keep the break and disagreement between its "leftist" members and its "liberal" members quiet.

It is understood that the president of the SRC, Mr Jeremy Clark, considered resigning from his position on Wednesday night.

Mr Clark confirmed rumours of a split in the SRC to The Citizen, yesterday.

"We had to reshuffle our executive committee. But I wouldn't call the event a split in the council," he said.

He said he was not going to resign. He also confirmed the resignation of the three women members of the executive committee.

"They had acted inappropriately but they will retain their portfolios even though they are not members of the executive committee anymore," he said.

The three members who had to resign formed the left wing of the SRC — only leftists and liberals. The break was not between a right-wing group and a left-wing group, "but between leftists and liberals", Mr Clark said.

The three members who were "asked" to resign are Ruth Bekker, Judy Mellor and Meana Soelho.

CSO: 4700/919

TOP AFRIKAANS EDUCATORS REJECT ASIAN MINISTER CONCEPT

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 9 Mar 82 p 2

[Text]

TWO prominent Afrikaans education leaders, Professor Hennie Maree, Rector of the Pretoria Onderwyserskollege and chairman of the Federation of Teachers' Associations, and Mr Koos Steyn, general secretary of the Transvaal Onderwysersvereniging, last night hit at Mr Barend du Plessis, MP for Florida, for having implied in Parliament that a Coloured or an Asian could become a Cabinet Minister according to the 1977 constitutional proposals of the National Party.

Mr Steyn, who addressed the Wonderboomfort Rapportryerskorps in Pretoria last night, said that in his personal capacity "he totally distanced himself from Mr Du Plessis' standpoint in Parliament which implied that a non-White could also become Minister of the Department of National Education."

He said Mr Du Plessis' standpoint was even the more serious against the background of the De Lange Commission's recommendation that there should be only one Ministry of Education for all races.

He told the Rapportryers: "If my interpretation is correct that Mr Du Plessis' statement in Parliament could also mean a mixed Department of National Education, the Afrikaner teachers of the Transvaal and I say this with the full authority of our Transvaal chairman of the Transvaalse Onderwysersvereniging, Professor Maree, we reject one Ministry and one Department of Education for all races."

When approached on the matter last night, Prof Maree stated: "I believe in a just system for all, a system in which each population group would control their own affairs.

"I also believe that it is necessary that consultation and co-ordination should take place.

"But I seriously differed from Mr Du Plessis on his interpretation of the matter and I told the head committee that what I have said inside the committee, I would repeat outside.

"If a Coloured or Asian could become a Minister of Defence or of Finance it was to my opinion an infringement of White control of the cabinet.

"I cannot accept it, irrespective of Mr Du Plessis' explanation to me during the head committee meeting." prof Maree said.

CSO: 4700/902

DETAILS ON EDUCATION FOR BLACKS IN 1982 GIVEN

Pretoria SOUTH AFRICAN DIGEST in English 26 Feb 82 p 9

[Text]

Developments in Black education over the past eight years have been considerable and it is clear they will continue this year.

The Department of Education and Training will have about 80 000 more pupils at school than in 1981. Apart from extensions to existing schools, 181 new schools opened in January.

The numbers of schools, teachers and pupils this year (last year's figures in brackets) are:

Schools: Primary, 6 750 (6 580); Secondary, 289 (278); Total, 7 039 (6 858).

Teachers: Primary, 32 000 (30 823); Secondary, 7 600 (6 827); Total, 39 600 (37 650).

Pupils: Primary, 1 415 500 (1 364 000); Secondary, 255 100 (226 000); Total, 1 670 600 (1 590 000).

Compulsory Education

Compulsory education, first introduced in 1981, is being extended and now includes 250 schools and 70 000 pupils.

It is clear that compulsory education has a direct influence on the quality of education in Sub-standards.

Pre-primary Education

Pre-primary institutions which meet certain requirements will be subsidised by the department this year. The subsidy will be R25 per pupil per quarter and will only apply to five-year-olds — those who turn six in 1982. In due course the subsidy will be increased to include three and four-year-olds.

Primary Education

Primary education will be upgraded in more schools in 1982. About 500 000 pupils are already benefiting directly from this. The school readiness programme has been implemented in almost all urban primary schools and the department is planning to introduce the programme at farm schools as soon as possible.

The remedial education programme for handicapped pupils has been introduced at a further 20 schools, making a total of 104 schools with 3 500 pupils in remedial classes. Because of the specialised nature of this type of education, one teacher is required for every 25 pupils.

Teacher Training

The new East Rand College of Education, which opened in January, 1982, brings to eight the total number of colleges under the jurisdiction of the department.

All pre-standard 10 teacher training courses are being phased out and the following three-year post standard 10 courses were introduced this year:

Pre-primary teacher's diploma; primary teacher's diploma (junior primary or senior primary); secondary teacher's diploma (without degree subjects); secondary teacher's diploma (with degree subjects); and technical teacher's diploma.

Further training courses to enable teachers to improve their professional qualifications so that they can teach effectively in secondary schools were introduced in 1981. More than 360 teachers attended these courses at Mabopane East, Soweto, Langa and Sebokeng. This year the courses will also be held at Potchefstroom, Pietermaritzburg, Port Elizabeth and on the East Rand. About 1 000 additional teachers will be involved.

Adult Education

About 65 000 students will be enrolled at more than 350 centres this year. The department is considering practical courses as part of the adult education programme. This year particular attention will be given to improving the quality of tuition and specific guidance to students on correct study methods.

Technical Education

Several technical high schools using existing technical centres at Guguletu, Bloemfontein, Welkom and Port Elizabeth, are being used to promote secondary technical education leading to a technical matriculation certificate.

Secondary technical education will also be offered at Vanderbijlpark and Germiston where the workshops of technical centres will be used for the practical training.

In Soweto, 12 secondary schools became comprehensive schools, offering both academic and technical courses.

Three new technical colleges will open this year in Pietermaritzburg, Uitenhage and Katlehong (Germiston). The Department of Education and Training now has 16 technical colleges.

Building Programmes

A total of 22 new primary schools (390 classrooms) and 31 secondary schools (714 classrooms) were built between January 1981 and March, 1982. In the same time 885 classrooms were added to existing primary schools and 226 to secondary schools.

A further 600 classrooms were built to meet the expansion of compulsory education.

The total number of classrooms built between January, 1981, and March, 1982, was 2 815.

Age Limits

Regulations about age limits for pupils in certain classes were published in 1981 and became effective in January this year.

They are 16 years for primary schools, 18 years for standards six, seven and eight, and 20 years for standards nine and ten.

According to newspaper reports and from inquiries received, it is unfortunately very clear that these regulations and their application are being exploited by bodies and individuals who do not have the educational interests of pupils at heart. There are clear indications that unfounded suspicion is being sown and unnecessary confusion is being created about the implementations of the regulations.

The aims of these regulations are twofold:

- Educationally, the aim is to have pupils of the same age in the same class. The syllabuses, textbooks, and teaching methods used in a class take into account the age of pupils. Great age differences in the same class have a retarding effect on the normal development of pupils and could create serious disciplinary problems; and
- Administratively, the aim is to bring this department in line with other departments of education.

The aim is not to conduct a witchhunt against pupils, to inconvenience parents and children, or to limit education opportunities. Pupils who benefit from education offered in schools and who progress satisfactorily without being obstacles to other pupils, will not be debarred from schools unnecessarily.

The department realises there are many different factors which have to be borne in mind in implementing these regulations, and has dealt with the matter responsibly and with great understanding. The following prove this:

- The Council of Education and Training, on which teachers and other educationists are represented, was consulted in the drafting of the Act and the regulations;
- The regulations were published in 1981 for general information, but were not implemented, so as to provide parents with an opportunity to acquaint themselves with the contents;
- In 1982 a start was made with the implementation, but due to the variety of circumstances and factors which may differ from place to place, the method of implementation was delegated to regional directors. Parents retain the right of appeal to the director-general;
- Guidelines for the careful implementation of the regulations in the interest of the education of pupils were issued to regional directors. Every effort was made to enlighten all interested people and bodies through the Press, the radio and through meetings at circuit and regional levels.

It was made clear that pupils who exceeded the age limits but who progressed normally without interrupting their studies for invalid reasons, would not be affected.

In all cases regional directors have been urged to use the greatest discretion and understanding in applying the regulations and carefully to consider the merits of each application received for the admission of pupils who exceed the age limits.

CSO: 4700/905

STANDARD BANK FORECASTS MAJOR DEFICIT

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 8 Mar 82 p 21

[Text]

THERE is no doubt that throughout 1982 and well into 1983 the South African balance of payments problem will force policy in the direction of fiscal stabilisation and restrictive monetary policy, Standard Bank says in its latest Economic Review.

Analysing the international growth environment and the implications of this for the South African economy, Standard says the major impact of an only moderate recovery in major export markets will be on the balance of payments, in particular on the current account.

The bank says it is estimated that the current account this year will again show a huge deficit (the deficit for 1981 is estimated at R4 300-million.

The extent of the shortfall will depend materially on the gold price.

On the basis of assumed gold price averages of $350 and $400 this year, and assuming the existing policy mix, the deficits are likely to reach, respectively R4 500-million and R3 700-million.

The most direct effect of the account problem faced by South Africa is on monetary policy and here the authorities are confronted with a dilemma.

Rapid increases in the money supply over the past two years and excesssively high inflation make the continuation of a policy of high interest rates and tight credit imperative. However, the need to fund the current account deficit and to avoid too rapid a depletion of the country's gold and foreign exchange reserves may at the same time necessitate large scale borrowing in the overseas money and capital markets.

This would tend to counteract tightening domestic monetary measures. There is also another effect: South Africa's demands for medium-term loan (3-7 years) have already increased to such an extent that there has been a perceptible increase in the cost of such medium-term facilities.

The bulk of these funds have been raised by public sector borrowers and public utilities but in recent weeks private sector borrowers have also entered the market for short-term loans.

The interest rate policy now being implemented is closely affected by the Reserve Bank's manipulation of the margins on forward purchases and sales of US dollars.

From the third quarter last year the policy has been broadly neutral. This means that the cost (or benefit) of covering dollar commitments forward has tended to equate the cost of trade credit in the local money market with that in offshore markets.

At this stage, the country has ample short-term credit (up to 12 months) available to it and large inflows of capital could be introduced by pitching forward margins at levels which would result in dollar import finance being available at costs substantially lower than the prime overdraft rate (19 percent) or other instruments of finance.

At present, the control of inflation still appears to be a major policy priority, and the authorities are aiming to achieve their objectives by curbing credit.

A worsening of the current account deficit may, however, necessitate increased borrowing in overseas markets and a reduction in the forward margins to lower the effective cost of covered dollar credits to well below the ruling discount rate.

This implies that monetary policy measures will have to be complemented by a very tight fiscal policy to maintain an overall restrictive stance.

Since August last year, the Reserve Bank's exchange rate policy has moved away from a pattern in which the dollar/rand exchange rate reflected changes in key international exchange rates and underlying trends in the South African balance of payments.

The policy now appears to be one of allowing the spot rate to reflect some short-term market fluctuations, but nevertheless to support the rand above $1,00-R1 in spite of a deterioration in the balance of payments position.

This change is understandable to the extent that a sharp depreciation (devaluation) of the rand from current levels would in the short-term increase the pressure on domestic prices.

Instead, the policy thrust is to curb the current account deficit by restricting overall demand through tight money policies and, probably, by means of an austerity Budget.

If a broadly based recovery materialises overseas and export demand revives, the practice of supporting the rand will continue to be viable, but a further fall in the gold price or continued depressed overseas markets would clearly necessitate a review of the present exchange rate policy as well.

Similarly, the shape of developments abroad will determine the duration for which restrictive monetary and fiscal policies will have to be applied.

CSO: 4700/902

POLICE STATION ATTACKERS APPEAL TREASON SENTENCES

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 9 Mar 82 p 12

[Text]

BLOEMFONTEIN. — The appeal against the death sentence of three men convicted of high treason was heard by the appeal court yesterday.

The convictions of Ncimbithi Johnson Lubisi, Petrus Tsepo Mashigo and Naphtali Manana arose from deeds that culminated in an attack on the Soekmekaar Police Station on January 4, 1980.

The three men were convicted by Mr Justice, J P O de Villiers in the Transvaal Supreme Court on November 17, 1980. Sentence was held over, to be imposed if necessary, on a charge of robbery and two counts of attempted murder.

The appeal was heard by the Chief Justice, Mr Justice Rumpff, with Mr Justice Jansen, Mr Justice Rabie, Mr Justice Viljoen and Mr Justice van Heerden (acting Judge of Appeal).

Argument was placed before the court by Mr J Browde, SC, with Mr M Basslian for Lubisi and Mashigo, and by Mr I Mohomed, SC, with Mr Basslian for Manana. The State's argument was submitted by Mr J C H Jansen, SC, with Mr A F du Toit.

It was submitted that the death sentence should not have been imposed. Reliance for this submission was placed on the imaturity of the appellants and the absence of "inherent evil" in them.

There was their vulnerability to instigation and propaganda at the time they were recruited by the African national Congress and thereafter, the systematic process of conditioning and brainwashing they underwent for a substantial period of time while under the effective control of the ANC, the acts perpetrated were only at an embryonic stage in the ultimate mischief that constituted the crime of high treason.

The death sentence for high treason was appropriate only in extreme cases which, it was contended, was not in the case of Lubisi, Mashigo and Manana.

On evidence, it was clear that they refrained from deliberately killing the witnesses Mashapa and Mothiba, who were at the police station.

In the circumstances, they could easily have done so. It was submitted that the trial court erred in holding that a handgrenade was deliberately tossed at Mashapa and that two shots were fired into the charge office.

No apparent reason appeared for the disparity in the sentence imposed on their co-accused.

The overt acts they committed were said to be no closer to the ultimate goal than those committed by Moses Molebatsi and Benjamin Tau, who were also convicted of high treason, which included planning of a rocket attack on the petrol storage tanks at Waltloo, Pretoria, Molebatsi and Tau were sentenced to 20 years imprisonment.

For the State, it was submitted that the trial judge had not misdirected himself in the exercise of his discretion to impose the death sentence.

The sentence was not disturbingly inappropriate in the light of the acts of treason committed by the three men.

All three admitted that they had robbed a Mr Montle of his vehicle, and then attacked the Soekmekaar Police Station. It was common cause that they were in possession of a large quantity of arms and ammunition that were concealed after the attack. It was also common cause that they were all members of the ANC.

In a case such as this one, where community interests were assailed, the court was entitled to set the accuseds' personal circumstances subordinate to the interests of the community, and to attach greater weight to the deterrent factor. — Sapa.

CSO: 4700/902

BARCLAYS CONSULTANT: MANUFACTURING IN RELATIVELY SOUND POSITION

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 9 Mar 82 p 19

[Text]

MANUFACTURING and retail companies are entering the second year of the current business cycle contraction in a much sounder financial position than in the previous downswing, but the cash position of the mining industry has considerably deteriorated over the past year, Dr Johan Cloete, group economic consultant of Barclays Bank, says in the latest Business Brief.

Dr Cloete says one of the main reasons for the strong cash and general financial position of manufacturing and retail trade is probably that the economy has experienced a prolonged expansion since 1978.

During this period the two sectors were able to push up their profits substantially.

Dr Cloete points out that mining and wholesale firms are not so fortunate.

"Owing to depressed mineral prices, in particular that sharp fall in the price of gold, the cash position of the mining industry has deteriorated considerably over the past year.

"Wholesale firms too, do not appear to be in a happy cash position owing to considerable commitments in stocks," he says.

A sample drawn by the Department of Statistics indicates that manufacturing companies upped their after-tax profits substantially in 1979 and 1980.

After-tax profits of these companies increased by no less than 48,5 percent in 1979 and 54,4 percent in 1980.

At the same time, capital expenditure on fixed assets by these companies also increased strongly during 1979 and 1980 by 42,6 percent and 30,4 percent respectively.

CSO: 4700/902

FIRST FULLY MULTI-NATIONAL SPORTS STADIUM OPENS

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 8 Mar 81 p 9

[Text]

IT was a stimulating and spectacular event when the first fully multi-national sport stadium in the country, was opened near Orkney, Transvaal, at the weekend.

About 15 000 people attended the opening of the near R7-million Harry Oppenheimer Stadium which can comfortably seat 25 000 people.

Dr Gerrit Viljoen, Minister of State Administration, said in his opening address that he trusted the sport complex would not only become the rendervous of the local community where new ties of friendship and good relations could be established, but that it would attract sportsmen and women of international calibre.

He said the sports field had proved a very successful contribution towards the development of the human character.

"It is the school of life where one can learn to improve on one's own shortcomings, where one can realise that nothing is impossible for the one who has will, the enthusiasm and the zest to persist, the place where one can discover that all things precious are as difficult as they are rare," he said.

Mr Harry Oppenheimer, chairman of Anglo-American Corporation said he hoped the stadium would bring together the people of the many different backgrounds who worked on the Vaal Reef Mine.

A gymnastic display and a march-past of sportsmen and women representing all the 38 sports clubs on Vaal Reefs led by the band of the South African Prisons' Department and drum-majorettes, added to the evening.

A massed rhythmical, free, standing and tribal dancing by miners on the Reef wound up the evening.

CSO: 4700/902

SPECIAL RAILWAY RATES ON EXPORT GOODS TO BE DROPPED

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 9 Mar 82 p 9

[Text]

CAPE TOWN. -- Specially reduced railway rates on export goods and the Finance Charges Aid Scheme are to be discontinued from April 1, the Minister of Industries, Commerce and Tourism, Dr Dawie de Villiers announced yesterday.

The Minister said the decision had been taken after a study of present financial conditions.

"In the light of present financial conditions, the necessity for the continuation of certain forms of export assistance had been re-examined against the background of the sharp depreciation of the rand against the US dollar by 22 percent and against a weighted basket of foreign currencies by about 14 percent during 1981, which benefit South Africa's exports to a considerable extent," he said.

"Consequently, it had been decided to discontinue, with effect from April 1, 1982, the provision on the budget of the Department of Industries, Commerce and Tourism, for the granting to exporters of specially-reduced railway rates and aid in respect of finance charges, known as the Finance Charges Aid Scheme."

The decision had been taken after intensive discussions with the Minister of Finance, the Minister said.

"It should not be construed as an underestimation by the government of the importance for the country of a continued export effort."

"In fact, exports continued to be of cardinal importance for the Republic's continued economic development."
— Sapa.

CSO: 4700/902

RAND, DE BEERS DROP ON STOCK EXCHANGE

Impact of Gold Price

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 10 Mar 82 pp 1, 2

[Article by Daan de Kock]

[Text] THE drop in the gold price has now begun to take its toll on virtually all sectors of the South African economy when it yesterday forced the rand to drop for the first time below the dollar.

Dealers expect the rand to weaken further in the months to come unless there is a sharp turn around in the gold price.

The influence of the weak gold price — and the deterioration in South Africa's other exports — is clearly reflected in the movement in the value of the rand since the beginning of last year when it was still trading at $1,35.

Some dealers in Johannesburg were saying yesterday that the South African Reserve Bank had been supporting the rand since the sharp drop in the price of gold since last Thursday.

They said the bank was doing this deliberately in an effort to try and protect the rand income of gold mines in the hope that the downward trend in the gold price is only temporary.

The downward movement in the value of the rand also make imports in American dollars more expensive, something the Government will welcome at this stage.

There were fears yesterday that the low gold price, huge trade deficit and the like will make it harder for the Minister of Finance, Mr Owen Horwood, to present his Budget on March 24. The general feeling is that South Africans will have to tighten their belts more than was originally feared.

De Beers' Dividend Cut by Half

IN a frantic hour or so before the Johannesburg Stock Exchange closed yesterday, about R420-million was wiped off the value of De Beers, the world's largest diamond mining and selling group.

Investors rushed to sell their shares on the news that the group was slashing its final dividend from last year's 50c to only 25c, the first time De Beers has cut its payment to shareholders since 1944, when the Second World War was raging. The shares fell 117c to 650c.

Investment analysts in many parts of the world — De Beers shares are listed on the main world stock exchanges of London and Europe — have long seen De Beers as a rock solid investment with safe and rising dividends, though in recent months some of that faith has withered.

The world recession has bitten deeply into the willingness of people to acquire diamonds, notably in the United States, with the result that the Central Selling Organisation, set up by De Beers to market the vast bulk of the world's diamond output, has had to stockpile the stones on a very large scale. At the same time, in an effort to limit the growth of the stockpile, De Beers has been cutting back outputs from its mines.

The efforts have cost the group dearly: diamond profits have slumped by well over 50 percent, to some R360-million from R803-million, and the size of the stockpile has doubled to R1,4-billion, from just under R700-million.

One result of this massive increase has been a sharp fall in the group's holding of cash--it has long had a reputation for the strength of its liquid balances--to some R224-million from three times that sum (R776-million) at the end of 1980.

For those who bought De Beers' shares last year at the top of the market--at 1 090c--yesterday's slide has proved exceedingly expensive. Their overall loss is 470c a share which, when applied to the group's issued equity capital, means a loss in the JSE market value of about R1,7-million rand, or over 40 percent.

First Cut Since 1944

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 12 Mar 82 p 18

[Article by Daan de Kock, Financial Editor]

[Text] A SLUMP in the sales of diamonds, which led to a decrease in earnings of 45,6 percent in the year ended December 31, 1981, forced the mighty De Beers Consolidated group to cut its dividend for the first time since 1944.

The company yesterday declared earnings of 101,1c (185,7c) a share and also halved its final dividend to 25c a share.

The total dividend for the year amounted to 50c a share, compared with 75c a share the previous year.

As soon as the results of the company became known the share price on the JSE dropped by more than 100c because most investors could not believe that the company had cut its dividend.

A similar drop is expected on most of the other stock exchanges on which the shares are quoted.

De Beers' taxed profit in the first six months of the year showed a drop of 39 percent, but the company decided to keep the interim dividend unchanged at 25c a share.

Most analysts were then of the opinion that the results in the second half of the year could be about the same as those of the first quarter.

It was also accepted at the half-way stage by most investors and analysts that the final dividend would at least be kept the same as in the previous year.

The extent to which the company has tried to maintain stability in the supply of rough diamonds by stocking those for which there is no immediate demand has resulted in an increase in stocks of R705 4-million to R1 403,1-million and a decrease in cash of R552 4-million to R224,0-million.

One of the reasons why the company decided to cut its final dividend could be the sharp decrease in cash resources.

It could also be an indication that the company expects a further drop in sales and increases in stocks so that it wants to retain this cash.

De Beers' earnings for the year, including its share of retained profits from associated companies were R628,3-million, compared with R818,2-million the previous year.

The diamond account for the year decreased from R802,7-million to R360,3-million, but investment income was slightly higher at R179,6-million, compared with R147,1-million the previous year.

Interest for the year dropped from R89,1-million and expenses, including interest paid of R38,3-million (R13,8-million), totalled R116,5-million (R71,4-million).

Taxation and the state's share of the profits amounted to R101,1-million (R292,5-million), preference dividends R1,8-million and outside interests in profits of subsidiaries R22,6-million (R15,2-million), leaving a net profit of R363,8-million (R668,3-million).

According to the balance sheet, fixed assets rose to R469,7-million (R336,1-million) and investments and loans, which include the carrying costs of associated companies, to R1 693,9-million (R1 325,7-million).

Net current liabilities were R86,1-million, compared with net current assets of R402,6-million.

COMMENT: The cut in the final dividend must have come as a surprise to many investors on the JSE and elsewhere.

Certain brokers are of the opinion that it can depress the market more in the days to come because De Beers is regarded as one of the blue chips on the market.

Commenting on the diamond market, De Beers says while the demand for lower categories of rough diamonds continues to be satisfactory, the market for the more expensive categories remains depressed.

The immediate outlook for an improvement in the sale of diamonds therefore seems remote.

'No Ground Yet for Pessimism'

THERE were no grounds for pessimism as to the medium- and long-term growth prospects for the South African economy, the Governor of the Reserve Bank, Dr Gerhard de Kock, said last night.

Addressing a banquet in Johannesburg to mark the inauguration of Barclays Centre for Management Studies, he said that on the contrary, the very purpose of present stabilising policies was to set the stage for the next economic upswing.

The authorities now had a cohesive package of economic stabilisation policies in place which clearly demonstrated their resolve to do whatever was necessary to ensure that the economy made the adjustments required by the adverse external developments of recent months, and made them in good time.

"We are determined to carry the policy of 'consolidation and adjustment' to its logical conclusion. This means exercising tight control over Government spending, banking liquidity and the money supply.

"It also means permitting financial markets to tighten further if necessary and accepting realistic interest rates. The lower average gold price and the other adverse external developments (I have outlined) are facts of life which cannot be ignored or neutralised by money creation or fiscal manipulation.

"We can argue about the appropriate methods of adjustment, weighing up their different costs and benefits. But the inevitability of adjustment must be accepted."

Dr De Kock said that given the inevitability of adjustment in present circumstances, the point needed to be made that in considering the appropriate "mix" of fiscal and monetary policies in South Africa today, there existed a certain "trade-off" between high interest rates, high tax rates (or lower Government spending) and exchange rate depreciation.

As the experience of the past months had shown once again, effective adjustment policies usually included some combination of all three of these "remedies".

"But different 'mixes' are possible. Thus, for example, the more use is made of higher taxes or cuts in Government spending, the less need there will be fore interest rates to remain high or to rise further.

"The optimal combination of tax rates, interest rates and spot and forward exchange rates in South Africa, and how to achieve this ideal 'mix', are matters receiving more attention from the monetary authorities in South Africa today than ever before."

CSO: 4700/919

BRIEFS

SERVICEMEN KILLED--A total of 29 South African national servicemen died as a result of enemy action last year, the Minister of Defence, General Magnus Malan said yesterday. Replying in writing to a question by Mr Harry Schwarz (PFP, Yeoville), Gen Malan said a further 116 servicemen died in motor accidents and 34 in other accidents. [Text] [Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 9 Mar 82 p 4]

TOURISM EARNINGS--South Africa earned an estimated R520-million from tourism between October 1980 and September last year. Replying in writing to a question by Mr Theo Aronson (NP, nominated), the Minister of Tourism, Dr Dawie de Villiers said 697 228 foreign tourists visited South Africa during the period, of whom 343 125 were from Europe, 223 944 from Africa and 80 238 from the Americas. [Text] [Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 9 Mar 82 p 4]

PICTURES OF PRISONERS--A Bill making provision for the taking of photographs of people arrested and facing any court procedures on any charge, was published yesterday. The Criminal Procedure Amendment Bill provides for such photographs to be taken of persons arrested on any charge, released on bail or warning or convicted of any offence or against whom a preparatory examination has been concluded. The Bill also provides for the destruction of such photographs once the person concerned has been acquitted by a court. The Bill also extends the category of accused who may be called upon to plead in a magistrate's court in a trial intended for a superior court and contains a provision allowing accessors to take part in decisions on the admissibality of certain evidence. The Bill has been read a first time. [Text] [Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 9 Mar 82 p 4]

INVESTMENT IN TRANSKEI--The Transkei Development Corporation has announced that investors are to be allowed to own property in Transkeian industrial areas. The managing director of the corporation, Mr Sonny Tarr, announced in Johannesburg the leasehold system was being abolished and an agreement was to be signed with the South African Government offering new and more favourable concessions to industrialists. The system had elicited considerable interest overseas, he said. President Lucas Mangope of Bophuthatswana has announced that shares in his country's industries are to be made available soon.--Sapa [Text] [Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 8 Mar 82 p 7]

STEEL EXPORTS--Dunswart Iron and Steel Works say it is difficult to export profitably due to the severely depressed international market. This situation is not expected to change significantly in 1982. The directors say in the annual report that the prevailing business conditions locally for the company's range of products are still good, but they are being tempered by high domestic stocks and the associated high holding costs. In the short term, and until the new section mill is fully operative, the company will experience disruptions in its ability to supply light sections. The effects of the present downturn in the business cycle are expected to continue to be felt in the domestic market this year.--Reuter [Text] [Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 9 Mar 82 p 19]

NEW VESSEL FOR UNICORN--Unicorn lines of Durban has announced the purchase of another vessel, and has launched a new shipping service linking three continents. The vessel, which will go into service next week, is the 8 676 "Kowie," a general cargo carrier-ship with container capacity. The new service will link Sri Lanka to Southern Africa and South America.--Sapa [Text] [Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 8 Mar 82 p 20]

APPLICATION FOR PHONES--A total of 175 956 applications for telephones were outstanding on December 31 last year, the Minister of Posts and Telecommunications, Mr Hennie Smit, said. Replying to a question by Mr Alf Widman (PFP, Hillbrow), he said the waiting list on the Witwatersrand totalled 56 858 while 24 715 applications were outstanding in Cape Town and 19 871 in Durban. More than 270 000 new telephone instruments were connected to the telecommunications system in the 1980/1981 financial year, he said. [Text] [Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 9 Mar 82 p 4]

CSO: 4700/902

BRIEFS

PACT WITH ROK DENIED--Lome, Togo, 12 Mar (AFP)--Authorities here today denied that any commercial agreement had been signed today between Togo and South Korea, as they said had been announced in Seoul. The president of Togo's Chamber of Commerce and Industry, Gervais Koffi Djondo, said that Togo had broken off diplomatic relations with South Korea in 1974 and was not going to change its position. While some Togolese businessmen had been in Seoul from December 6 to 9 on a private basis, none were there now, Mr Djondo said. He accused the South Korean authorities of using this visit as a pretext "to spread confusion." [Text] [AB122055 Paris AFP in English 1840 GMT 12 Mar 82]

CSO: 4700/915

'STRONG CONTINGENT' OF NORTH KOREAN SOLDIERS UNEXPLAINED

Kampala 'MUNNANSI' NEWS BULLETIN in English 6 Feb 82 pp 7-10

[Article: "'Dr. Obote's Remarkable Success'"]

[Text] A strong contingent of North Korean soldiers has, since President Obote's visit to that country, taken up jobs in Uganda.

Information to that effect was contained in a "Radio Uganda News Commentary broadcast" of the 27th January 1982 at 1.00 p.m. and at 5.00 p.m. respectively.

The commentary hinted at a number of issues and revealed, in a bid to expose President Obote's successes in the year 1981, a few rather sensitive points. It started:

"To hear the President of Uganda, Dr. Milton Obote, extol the virtues of multi-party parliamentary democracy, a market for economy, and the merits of foreign investment, is to witness one of Africa's neatest political somersault.

"When toppled from power by former President Idi Amin in 1971, Dr. Obote had led a de facto one-party state. In which there had been no elections since independence in 1962, and which had an increasingly centralised--and struggling--socialist economy."

The commentary which was said to have been extracted from a newspaper called KHALEEJ TIMES of Dubai, United Arab Emirates of 14th January 1982, referred to Dr. Obote as "Africa's born-again pragmatist" with such diplomatic skills that, in a short time, will have enabled him to "muster a wide-ranging combination of allies"! As an example of such skills, the commentary referred to the United States' "increase in its small military aid programme" this year 1982 (of which nature, the commentary did not reveal) while at the same time there is a 40 more strong contingent of North Korean instructors living in the country.

Trying to show how the international community is increasing its confidence in Uganda's financial management, the broadcast revealed that the Uganda government was still committed to bearing the burden of "reparations to Tanzania whose forces overthrew Amin, and some 1500 soldiers and policemen who remained in the country." The reparations will amount to 125 million (US dollars) over the next 30 months, and further 29 million (US dollars) to Zambia. It is now known why Uganda is paying such a phenomenal amount to Zambia.

About the prospects for foreign investors, the news broadcast had this to say: "Although the British Company, Mitchell Cotts, once again is operating its tea estates (nationalized in the mid 1970s), the most encouraging source of private investment is probably India", recently visited by President Obote. The despatch thus foretold: "A Bill paving the way to the restoration of Asians' assets confiscated under Amin, comes before Parliament next session!" It also spoke of several Indian businessmen who have visited Uganda in the wake of Dr. Obote's visit.

Again on economic front, the broadcast which, for reasons unknown, was as mysteriously withdrawn from the air as it had been brought on, stated how "the economic management in Uganda was being strengthened by the presence of International Monetary Fund (IMF) assistants at the Central Bank and the appointment earlier last year of Morgan Grenfell as financial consultant." Also revealed that a World Bank-chaired Consultative group is expected to meet in April 1982 to review the government's two-year investment plan.

In total, the external debt at the end of June last year had been put at 737 million (US dollars) excluding unverified short-term debts of 200 million (US dollars). Of the $737 million, 56 percent was due for repayment before 1984. But the creditors' meeting in Paris last November is supposed to have rescheduled the payments' dates.

All in all, the news commentary gave a very optimistic view of the economy in Uganda to the extent that if the ordinary Ugandan was to be contented with only what is certain, he would start to think of an utopian domain here. The budget measures, according to the writers of the commentary, were efficaciously working!

However, a not too much optimistic report was given in respect of security. The news commentary said, "random killings in and around Kampala continue. Accurate figures are difficult to come by, but Western diplomats believe that some 300 people were killed in the last three months in a triangle of territory around Kampala" alone!! "Some of the deaths," the commentary continued, "may be the work of bandits, but there seems little doubt the others are the work of the ill-disciplined army and militia."

Also, the news despatch continued, "over the past year several thousand people have been detained without trial"--a reference to the flagrant violation of human rights in the country which democracy has to nurse in its infancy.

A follow-up to the presence of North Korean soldiers in Uganda showed that the first group of the said strong contingent came on the very day President Obote returned to Uganda from his recent visit to India and North Korea, but they came in a separate air-craft. Newsmen at Entebbe airport on the day President Obote arrived, noticed some confusion regarding the place where the President was going to convene a press conference, as the V.I.P. lounge was occupied by a large number of North Koreans. At first the newsmen were chased away from the lounge by one of the Ministers; but later on it was decided that the North Koreans be seated with the pressmen and the conference was held in the lounge.

These Koreans were first housed at the Uganda Club and later were transferred elsewhere. According to unofficial reports, these North Korean "instructors" have taken up strategic positions and their number has increased since.

The government has been shy about its relations with North Korea and the presence of that country's nationals here. It will be recalled that in a press conference before Obote went to North Korea, President Obote got out of mood when one of the international journalists asked him if Uganda was getting any military assistance from North Korea. In fact, subsequently a team of foreign pressmen were given deportation orders to quit the country.

President Obote visited North Korea, of all countries, to pay tribute to them for "the role they played" during the "liberation war." That "role," however, has not been explained to Ugandans vis-a-vis the role played by other countries to "liberate" Uganda.

The public had been promised a full report on President Obote's trip to India and North Korea, but up to now the report has not come out!!

CSO: 4700/852

UPC SECRETARIAT WARNING REPORTED AGAINST UPC POLICY

Kampala 'MUNNANSI' NEWS BULLETIN in English 6 Feb 82 pp 10-11

[Article: "Robidra and the Defectors"]

[Text] On Wednesday this week, Robidra, an official in the UPC Secretariat, opened up a UPC Branch for the Uganda Railways Corporation member workers.

In his emotional speech Robidra said they would not allow saboteurs who go around in UPC colours in search of their selfish ends. He specifically referred to defectors to UPC and said they should not go to UPC to revive in the party the "politics of eating" or with other ulterior motives.

To many people, Robidra's warning to party defectors did not appear to reflect the official party policy line. For the whole world now knows what role both the party President and the party Secretary-General have of late played in coercing or/and enticing leaders and members of other parties into UPC. The country remembers the jubilation and the politicking which ensued the crossing in which President Obote himself actively participated and appeared to have taken a lot of satisfaction.

Other opposition members of Parliament have, prior to and after Busoga MPs' defection, been approached; some were just threatened while others promised wealth. In all, almost 25 members of the Opposition have since been enticed to cross to UPC. Among them is now the deceased George Bamutulaki. And defectors of the so-called Democratic Party leaders in various parts of the country (although often names are not given) have made headlines on Radio Uganda and government-controlled newspapers.

Robidra's warning, however, is one encouraging sign that in UPC there are some sane people who do not feast at principles crossings which follow either harassments, threats or promises of material goods to the morally weak: to the detriment of the nation.

CSO: 4700/852

CRACKDOWN ON NON-UPC LEAVES UNIVERSITY WITHOUT FACULTY

Kampala 'MUNNANSI' NEWS BULLETIN in English 6 Feb 82 pp 11-12

[Article: "Crack Down on Non-UPC Leave Makerere University Without Lecturers"]

[Text] Makerere University is experiencing serious shortage of lecturers in all faculties and, as a result, for several days students have been seen loitering on the campus without any lecture.

This follows a crack down on non-UPC lecturers at the university since after the last general elections. Consequently, many professors and lecturers have fled to other countries in the course of the year and continue to do so to date.

As the academic situation at the university grew from bad to worse, Dr. Luwuliza-Kirunda in his capacity as UPC Secretary-General (only heaven knows under whose authority) surprisingly turned to Democratic Party members of Parliament requesting them to take up part-time jobs as lecturers at Makerere.

In separate letters to so far six DP members of Parliament Luwuliza-Kirunda acknowledged the shortage of lecturers at Makerere University and coaxed the DP MPs to accept and offer some of their time to help bridge the gap until such time as the University will get enough teaching manpower of its own.

However, what disturbed those who knew of that development particularly the leaders of the Democratic Party in general is the fact that the invitation letters were written on UPC Party official letter-heads of the UPC Secretariat and were signed by Dr. Luwuliza-Kirunda as the UPC Secretary-General.

The MPs written to were: Hon. Sam Kuteesa and Hon. J.B. Kawanga (for Law); Hon. Prof. P. Mulema, Hon. A. Kafumbe-Mukasa; Hon. G.M. Ssendawula (for Commerce and Economics); Hon. Prof. P. Sebuufu (for Medicine) and Hon. C. Kiwanuka-Musisi (for Education).

The UPC Secretary General, Dr. Luwuliza-Kirunda, asked these DP MPs to reply to the Ministry (which ministry, he did not specify) within two weeks indicating the number of hours they would put in every week or every month and their convenient days and time on those days. Kirunda further stated in the letters that these MPs would be paid at a rate of Shs 300/- per hour.

According to unconfirmed sources from the DP Headquarters, the Hon. MPs approached were not happy with the way the request had been made--by the UPC Secretary General, of all people!! One of them, when approached by MUNNANSI, said that he would probably have taken the offer seriously had it come from such offices as that of the Vice-Chancellor of Makerere University or the Secretary of the Appointment Council or from the Minister responsible for Education. But to have come from a Secretary General of the UPC, the Hon. MP continued, is a sign of "lack of seriousness of purpose, to say the most least."

What exact steps, if any, would be taken by the MPs concerned regarding the issue were not immediately known especially as the letters were written to them in their individual capacities.

CSO: 4700/852

REASONS FOR 'CROSSOVERS' TO UPC DISCUSSED

Kampala 'MUNNANSI' NEWS BULLETIN in English 6 Feb 82 pp 12-14

[Response by V. A. Ovonji, Democratic Party national publicity secretary, to an article in THE EQUATOR of 12 January 1982]

[Text] We take the opportunity in response to an interesting story in the weekly: THE EQUATOR of 12th January, 1982, styled: "Inside Story Unveiled Why MPs Crossed From DP." The article also posed a question whether Waibale's case was the last straw.

According to the majority of the people in Busoga who voted these men on the DP manifesto and who are still unflinchingly staunch supporters of the DP, the story and the self-centred reasons advanced, could ironically be the last straw in the future political career of the gentlemen whom the Basoga have been tempted to liken to seven blind mice!

First of all, if THE EQUATOR Investigation Bureau interviewed the Busoga MPs in the search for the reasons produced in the article, one is shocked by the reasons why the MPs did join the DP in the first place, and indeed why now they have joined UPC!

Rather than recount here the reasons which they advanced in THE EQUATOR, we would prefer to go straight into examining analytically the allegations one by one.

Thus they claimed, they joined the party in block. But joining a party in block suggests that the entire population of Busoga by some magic decided to join the DP. On the other hand it may simply mean that a clique of people after seeing the trend of affairs in the country decided to go with the wave. And the latter appears to have been the case. Any case, a collective decision of the kind may very often reflect lack of personal principles. But our 7 friends in Busoga confessed how conveniently they can abandon their individual principles.

Moreover, supposing leaders in Ankole, West Nile, Kigezi etc. were to join in block and each group would demand a certain portfolio e.g. Ministry of Finance, what would happen? It should be made clear that the DP leadership never at no occasion whatsoever, ever entered into a deal with any individual, block of individual or leaders or with a certain tribe for any particular favours over other people, groups or tribes. If some Busoga prospective candidates ever entertained the hope for some ministries, that can either be viewed as the normal innocent expectations, or more negatively it smacks of opportunism on the part of some of them. This opportunism appears to have been a drive into crossing. Perhaps Dr. Obote entered into some deal with the group or with certain members in the group. Since Dr. Obote occupies the portfolio of finance one would hope that this is the time for him to relinquish it to, maybe Magezi, Waibale, or Nabeeta, in order to appease the "block."

About arrests, there has been mass arrests and untold suffering of DP followers not only in Busoga but in almost all other parts of Uganda to the extent that one, sometimes, even found it extremely hard to keep abreast with the trend. Many of those who have suffered appreciate the difficulties the party faces in the circumstances and appreciate the limited efforts the party has exerted for their freedom morally and wherever it has been possible, materially.

It would be absolutely naive and unreasonable for one to think that the DP Headquarters can, given the conditions in the country, start something like a widows' or detainees' funds which would satisfactorily cope up with the adverse political problems as this country has witnessed since independence.

About religion biasness in DP who would believe them? DP is always accused of being catholic, but it never accuses UPC protestant, because the DP membership feels religion in Uganda is no longer an issue. One day when a religious break-down of UPC MPs, Ministers, and UPC's appointments in government, parastatal bodies etc. will be given, facts will reveal that UPC is more biased religiouswise than any other party in the country. Sensible people have no quarrel with the 7 MPs from Busoga if they feel comfortable with the thought that they have gone to a party where they belong. To them domination by a religion they believe in, is much preferable to the quality of leadership the country yearns for delivery. Thank God, the majority of the masses in the country have transcended these "traditional" trivial matters.

On our side it must, however, be made abundantly clear that it is our belief that the millions of protestants or catholics who have either joined DP or UPC did so out of their own personal conviction. In our view their judgement should be respected. Therefore the leadership of both UPC and DP and the country at large would be well-advised to watch out for such leaders of darkness as the few crossers who may wish to drag this country down a gaping abyss of the type that has been swallowing up Northern Ireland. This we must avoid at all costs!

Thus the warning: for the sake of Uganda and religious freedom, let no one use religion for his personal interests. None of the MPs has his church mandate to act on its behalf. The UPC does not benefit either because it can be said that protestants are joining other protestants!! Neither will Uganda politics get any better. As politicians they should have dissented publicly on principle. It is obvious, that principles don't exist. It is eating, that matter.

There is also complaint about the selection of Directors of the Foundation for African Development. Why not challenge it. It seems that defectors are happy with the way the UPC chief selects the party executives by nomination—democracy through one man choice! At least for us in the DP people know that in the true sense of the word, we democratically elect our leaders from bottom to top. But to be over-worried about a foundation that has not yet even functioned! Instead of looking at how the UPC has run over the years is to expose the cover of personal weakness. Doesn't this come out clearly when a possibility of government of unity 'suggestion' by Obote is adduced by the MPs as yet another grievance? The Basoga who are staunch DP supporters will not be deceived by self-political weaklings. It will be recalled that at the time of their crossing these honourable men had either been arrested and detained or were living under fear of being arrested and detained. It is strange for a UPC diehard to suggest that they had seen light. Seeing light is a free-willed realisation of one's inner evil or mistakes which could not be possible in the then existing tense conditions of these crossers.

In many ways THE EQUATOR must be thanked for exposing the contradictions. For the MPs who crossed, it is clear that they joined the DP so that on winning they will eat. As THE EQUATOR recalls, one UPC hardliner commented that he was not surprised because those crossers were congressmen who had defected to DP and were now returning home.

But, please, let them not confuse anyone. History has already judged them. Next time UPC loses they will join the winning party.

CSO: 4700/852

ZERBO, TOURE SPEAK AT BANQUET IN OUAGADOUGOU

AB121805 Ouagadougou Domestic Service in French 0630 GMT 12 Mar 82

[Text] Guinean President Sekou Toure begins the second and last day of his visit to our country today. This second day will be marked by the issuing of a final communique this morning at the Presidential Palace. It will be followed by a press conference. The Guinean delegation leaves our capital around 1500.

Before then, we wish to inform you that head of state Col Saye Zerbo and his wife last night gave a gala dinner for the Guinean presidential couple and their delegation at the Presidential Palace. The ceremony took place in the presence of high-ranking state dignitaries and members of the diplomatic corps. During the ceremony, head of state Col Saye Zerbo welcomed our illustrious guests and expressed his satisfaction with the quality of relations between our country and our sister Guinean republic. He added that it is, in fact, a courageous son of Africa, an intransigent defender of African dignity and liberty and a heroic fighter against colonialism who helped in dismantling the colonial order that the people of Upper Volta are receiving today with great joy. Colonel Saye Zerbo emphasized the similarity of the positions of Upper Volta and Guinea on several issues constituting all sorts of challenges which have to be met by our countries in a world full of selfishness.

On the situation in southern Africa, Col Saye Zergo stated that if even the rearguard battles--like those being undertaken by southern Africa--perpetuate the humiliations and sufferings on part of us, they are condemned by the irreversible evolution of our time. Above everything else, we have to regret the movements which want hegemony over our continent. This retards and disturbs greatly the fundamental priority [words indistinct] our economic equipment and our social development.

Colonel Saye Zergo reiterated Upper Volta's willingness to work in harmony with other African countries in the search for regional solutions to problems of horizontal solidarity.

Addressing Mrs Andree Toure, wife of the Guinean president, he assured her of the entire admiration of her Upper Voltan sisters for the courage, dignity and selflessness she has always shown in her noble duties as the first lady of Guinea by the side of her illustrious husband.

In his speech which lasted about 30 minutes--an extract of which we are going to present to you--President Sekou Toure said he was highly impressed by the warm and fraternal welcome accorded him and his delegation.

[Begin recording] On behalf of the Guinean delegation we sincerely thank you. We say "thank you" for the unforgettable welcome that you have accorded us. Thank you for the expression of fraternity and of solidarity as witnessed by the massive popular demonstration that greeted the arrival on Upper Voltan soil of the messenger of the People's Revolutionary Republic of Guinea. I also thank you for the total readiness you have shown as far as Guinea is concerned for a fertile and durable cooperation with our country as well as with the whole of Africa. Some 80 months ago, we were here with you in Ouagadougou. It was on 10 July 1975; and today, 11 March 1982, Almighty God, by his clear-sightedness, benevolence and solicitude, has sent us rain which is necessary for the economic progress of our countries. And as we are all wet, we will continue saying, "Thank you God" because, in this country situated in the equatorial region, almost 80 percent of the inhabitants are farmers and are very grateful for this divine gift of rain [words indistinct].

Dear brothers, we say that we are ready for a sincere, loyal and lasting cooperation--a cooperation that benefits our peoples--a cooperation of our work sites for the construction of our fatherland which was beautiful, bright with vitality and which must be compared with the other continents on the basis of equality. We are ready, in all spheres of African life, to join hands with you in order to ensure the acceleration of the evolution process.

We have experienced the same past glory, because, long before this colonial conquest in Africa, our people had built vast empires, had a distinctive way of life and constructed with the help of the materials they had on their land all that was needed to satisfy their needs--both for security and for harmonious development. Our people were therefore able to construct an African civilization--a more human civilization, a man-to-man civilization which was the unique instrument for their development. Evidently, this vertical development broke down. It was interrupted. And, of course, Upper Volta, like Guinea; Guinea, like Senegal; Senegal, like Mali; [word indistinct] like Tanzania, like [name indistinct] knew power and foreign sovereignty; it was colonialism. But our great parents never accepted the loss of their responsibility, and that is why they transmitted to us their faith in the destiny of the continent. They asked us to continue to reclaim our independence and that is why today, with the exception of a few areas, the whole of Africa is henceforth free under the banner of liberty and national sovereignty. [end recording]

Cultural demonstrations held by the folklore groups--Gomache, Monchi, Gwanchi and the Nabakale choral group--ended gala dinner around 0100.

CSO: 4719/672

AUTHORITIES DENY MOVE TO CREATE SECOND PARTY

AB140945 Paris AFP in French 1516 GMT 13 Mar 82

[Text] Kinshasa, 13 Mar (AFP)--The Zairian authorities reaffirmed on several occasions over the weekend their commitment to maintaining the MPR as the sole ruling party and denied any move to create another party.

On Friday, the Zairian commissioner (minister) for information, Kande Dzambulate, denied that the government had begun negotiations with the 13 parliamentarians who were stripped of their civil and political rights in December 1980, with a view to setting up a second party.

Following a meeting of the Executive Council (government), he admitted that the 13 former parliamentarians met on two occasions with the vice-first state commissioner (vice-prime minister) and state commissioner for territorial administration (minister for interior), Yunduawe te Pemako. He stated that during the meetings the 13 former parliamentarians were sermonized "for persisting in their mistake."

Mr Kande also pointed out that on Thursday the government asked the ministries of territorial administration and justice as well as the security services to take immediately "necessary measures to preserve peace and security for the citizens and to safeguard the established constitutional order."

On Thursday the executive committee of the party criticized the "subversive and anticonstitutional" acts of certain "misled sons" and accused them of spreading whimsical rumors on the imminent setting up of an eventual second party."

Reaffirming the existence of the MPR as the sole national party, the executive committee asked for the dismissal of cadres "known for their lukewarmness and their equivocal attitude."

Finally, during a meeting held on Friday evening the secretary general of the youth wing of the MPR (JMPR) called for vigilance in order to "detect and reduce to impotence all the adventurers who want to disturb peace, national unity and political stability."

Nzanda Buama also called for a purge within the ranks of the party in order to eliminate the "lukewarm cadres who team up with internationally financed enemies of the revolution."

CSO: 4719/672

ISLAMIC COMMUNITY ELECTS NEW DIRECTORS

Kinshasa ELIMA in French 21-22 Feb 82 p 9

[Text] From 16 to 18 February 1982, the Islamic Community of Zaire met in regular general assembly in the Party's historic city of N'Sele. Out of this assembly came the new governing committee introduced below. Since a number of inherent problems had arisen within the community, this meeting was necessary to restore order to the house. And in fact all the doubts and misunderstandings have been cleared away. Furthermore, the assembly put an end to all the slanderous accusations lodged against the community's president, Al'Hadji Tambwe Kauzeni Abedi.

In this way, the community is off to a fresh start. Here is the declaration issued at the close of the assembly sessions, as well as the makeup of the new governing committee.

Declaration

We, the undersigned, constituting a majority of active members of the non-profit association known as the Islamic Committee of Zaire, commonly known as COMIZA, do hereby declare that we have appointed, as of 16 February 1982, to the offices appearing next to their names, the following more fully qualified persons, modifying our declaration of 31 July 1978 and confirmed by order n° 037/79 issued on 4 March 1978 by the Department of Justice.

Makeup of Governing Committee

Tambwe Abedi Kauzeni - Kisangani - president of the Islamic Council, legal representative of COMIZA.

Al'Hadji Lusufu Lusangi - Kalemie - Dean of the Islamic Council.

Al'Hadji Manoka Nkunga - Kinshasa - vice president of the Islamic Council.

Sheikh Ali Kabonga - Lubumbashi - vice president, Islamic Council.

Cit. Hussein Ali Kumba K. - Kisangani - vice president, Islamic Council.

Al'Hadji Rashidi Heradi - Kisangani - secretary-general, COMIZA.

Al'Hadji Ebalo Manzonso - Kisangani - secretary-general for social works.

Al'Hadji Sabiti Zhera - Kindu - national secretary for worship.

Cit. Shabani Kembe Kayemba - Kinshasa - national secretary for education.

Cit. Ali Mbumba Ibrahim - Kisangani - national secretary for finances.

Al'Hadji Ngandu Kasonga I - Kinshasa - national inspector of finances.

Al'Hadji Mabelu Ikofo - Kinshasa - deputy national inspector of finances.

Al'Hadji Tshibinda Aboub - Kinshasa - national treasury.

Sheikh Awamu Shabani Kafi - Kinshasa - national advisor on religious matters.

Sheikh Yunusa Hussein - Kasongo - national adviser on worship.

B. Ex-Officio Members of the Governing Committee
Members of Islamic Bodies

Al'Hadji Mohamed Shaba - Kinshasa - deputy chief legal representative of the Kinshasa Islamic body.

Al'Hadji Sabiti Ramaza - Kisangani - deputy chief legal representative of the Islamic body of Upper Zaire.

Al'Hadji Sadala Awazi - Kindu - deputy chief legal representative of the Islamic body of Kivu.

Al'Hadji Hemed Mapopoli - Mbandaka - deputy chief legal representative of the Islamic body of Ecuador.

Al'Hadji Mwinyi Hussein Bin Awazi - Lubumbashi - deputy chief legal representative of the Islamic body of Shaba.

Cit. Batubenga Mulomba Aboubakar - Mbuji-Mayi - deputy chief legal representative of the Islamic body of Eastern Kasai.

Al'Hadji Kalala Mukombela - Kananga - deputy chief legal representative of Western Kasai.

Cit. Mukwa Dauda - Bandundu - deputy chief legal representative of the Islamic body of Bandundu.

Cit. Sumbu Luemba Moussa - Matadi - deputy chief legal representative of the Islamic body of Lower Zaire.

Al'Hadji Nasibu Awazi - Kasongo - deputy chief legal representative of the Islamic body of Kasongo.

Al'Hadji Malumalu Mohamed - Tshikapa - deputy chief legal representative of the Islamic body of Tshikapa.

Cit. Bumba Mustafa-Mongo Lingalo - Bumba - deputy chief legal representative of the Islamic body of Bumba.

Ex-Officio Members of the Governing Committee
National Bureau Chiefs.

1. Sheikh Haruna Bashir: President, National Preaching Office

2. Cit. Useni Bim Useni: President, National Pilgrimage Office

3. Sheikh Akida Musazi Ismael: President, National Alms Office - Kivu.

4. Al'Hadji Salumu Mukadam: President, National Construction Office - Kisangani.

5. Cit. Fumapanda Souleimane: President, National Publishing and Press Office - Bandundu.

6. Cine Binti Mwinyi Selemani Dada: President, National Office for the Advancement of Muslim Women. - Kindu - Kivu.

Lastly, the general assembly decided to expel some members of the governing committee, whose names are these:

1. Al'Hadji Djumaine Amin

2. Al'Hadji Amani Ramazani

3. Kanda-Kanda Abdallah

4. Kapongo Bamani

5. Yahya Hilali Lubenga

6. Mamadou Cisse Lundombi Niemba.

Done at Kinshasa, this 16th day of February 1982.

6182
CSO: 4719/632

KINSHASA TAKES AIM AT OIL BLACK MARKET

Kinshasa ELIMA in French 21-22 Feb 82 pp 1, 10

[Editorial : "City Hall and the Petroleum Products Traffickers"]

[Text] The battle joined by the present Kinshasa city governor to deal with the evils besetting Zaire's capital is moving right along. As we all know, those evils are banditry, speculation, vandalism, and other outrageous kinds of behavior...

As part of the fight the top political authority in the Kinshasa metropolitan area has joined, he launched a dragnet operation last Friday, aimed at dishonest dealers who hoard petroleum products in order to seel them on the black market.

To make sure the operation would work, City Hall has set up a permanent team composed of two inspectors and three detective inspectors. The team will cruise the streets of Kinshasa to pinpoint the spots where the dishonest dealers sell their wares, mainly gasoline, fuel oil, and lubricating oil. An exception is made for kerosene, however, which is a household staple and is widely sold at retail in places other than service stations.

The same team will also buckle down to the job of checking all shipping documents for petroleum products delivered in bulk to businesses in the regions and forwarded to the interior.

In taking this decision, the Kinshasa City Governor has made a move deserving of encouragement; nobody is unaware of the painful effects of this illicit trade. Despite the exorbitant prices charged by these "pirate markets," their so-called dealers sometimes yield to their natural greed to the point of selling crude oil or water mixed with a little gasoline in place of fuel. As a result, many Kinshasans are still in mourning as a result of fatal accidents caused by storing gasoline in unsafe places.

In connection with the dragnet, citizens will recall that a similar operation was mounted last year, and that led to the arrest and trial of several individuals. Yet here we are just a year later, and we see the illicit dealers in petroleum products back in full force! Have they got accomplices in high places? Not that we know of. Yet it is a fact that, despite this step taken by the governor and publicized all along his tour of all the areas in the capital, the black-market dealers showed very little concern. They go right on plying their trade in full view of the police officers and others responsible for local order, although these local authorities are the very ones who must implement City Halls' decision. We think that a 5-man team, which is what City Hall has fielded, is no kind of force to cope with an evil which has already taken on alarming dimensions.

Furthermore, it must be said that if it wants to stamp out this evil, the city must try to stop the spigot where these swindling dealers get their supplies. That, in the end, is where it will have to seek our the people ultimately responsible for this state of affairs.

To do that, it would be desirable to beef up the dragnet team and let it get to the bottom of things, and to get the precinct authorities involved in the operation. Without that, the measure will fail, as did last year's version of the same effort.

6182

CSO: 4719/632

IAN SMITH ON PARTY SPLIT: 'I'M LEFT HOLDING THE BABY'

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English 8 Mar 82 p 9

[Text]

SALISBURY. — Democratic Party president, Mr Andre Holland, welcomed the resignations of eight MPs from the RF and said he would try to "establish common ground" with them in a bid for more unity.

But he criticised their resolution to remain in parliament.

"I feel uneasy at their decision just to cross the floor and not go back to their constituents for a vote of confidence, or otherwise, in the form of a by-election" he said.

SALISBURY —Having lost more than half its members of Zimbabwe's Parliament in the past three months through resignation, detention and flight, the once all-powerful Rhodesian Front is in disarray.

Ian Smith, the "good old Smithy" of Rhodesia's heady days of rebellion against the British crown, is still party leader but looks and sounds tired and careworn.

"I'm left holding the baby," the former Prime Minister complained as seven MP's deserted him last Thursday. The seven are trying to force closer links with the Black majority government of Prime Minister Robert Mugabe, the ex-guerrilla leader Mr Smith used to call a bloodthirsty Marxist terrorist.

The RF, formerly the Rhodesian Front and now the Republican Front, has suffered the biggest split since it was formed in 1963 to defend White minority interests against a rising tide of Black nationalism.

Eight of its 19 MP's quit during the week to become independents, saying the party had failed to adapt itself to change since White-dominated Rhodesia became Black-ruled Zimbabwe 23 months ago.

Former party whip Dennis Divaris, 67, the latest to resign, told reporters on Sunday: "I will not taunt or ridicule or denigrate the Black man as has been done in Parliament by certain members."

Until recently the RF held all 20 seats in the 100-seat parliament guaranteed to Whites until 1990 under the peace agreement which ended seven years of war between White and Black forces in 1979.

RF legislator Wally Stuttaford, 61, was arrested last December on charges of plotting a coup against Mr Mugabe's government. He has been held without trial ever since under emergency regulations once used by the RF to crush political dissent.

Another RF MP, former minister Denis Walker, is abroad, wanted on similar charges. Yet another MP, ex-minister Rowan Cronje, has emigrated.

The last major RF split occurred in 1977 when 12 right-wingers broke away because they believed the party had gone soft in the war against the guerilla forces. But then the rebels represented only a fourth of the party's strength.

Many political analysts wonder if the RF can again recover.

Some Whites believe the RF's only power lies in its ability under the Constitution to obstruct the government. The rebels believe that is too negative a role which strains the government's policy of post-war reconciliation between the races.

Mr Mugabe charges that the RF is rooted in a past of a racially-divided Rhodesia, a world of masters and servants. He has accused the party and its followers of being unable to adapt to his socialist-based multi-racial society.

He recently hinted to a gathering of White businessmen that, if the white MP's could shake off the RF, cabinet positions would become available for Whites. Agriculture Minister Denis Norman, who does not belong to a party, is now the only White in the 18-member cabinet.

The pro-government Sunday Mail newspaper yesterday urged White Zimbabweans to abandon the RF as a political and moral liability.

In the past the White community unfailingly rallied around Mr Smith when he appealed for unity in the face of adversity.

RF chairman Geoff Kluckow believes it will do so again. He said the party switchboard had been jammed with calls of protest against the behaviour of the rebels.

"I believe this will give us a boost," he said. "Their action will awaken the electorate out of its complacency."

The fate of the RF will, to some extent, govern the fate of Zimbabwe's 180 000 Whites, surrounded by almost seven million Blacks.

Mr Mugabe and his ministers have often said they will ultimately judge the White's response to their official policy of reconciliation action is now required," he said.

— Sapa.

CSO: 4700/903

BRIEFS

STRIKING BUS DRIVERS--Nearly 1,000 bus workers in Zimbabwe have been arrested throughout the country as the government acts against the illegal strike of bus drivers. All bus company employees in the four main cities--some 1,800 of them--were dismissed with immediate effect yesterday according to a statement by the Salisbury United and Zimbabwe Omnibus Companies. A police spokesman said the arrests had been made in terms of the emergency power regulations. A spokesman for the bus company said that almost all of the striking drivers had been arrested but that the company would consider applications for reemployment from drivers who had been dismissed. The Zimbabwe minister of labor and social services, Mr Kumbirai Kangai, said that the striking drivers had acted against the interests of the nation and that the government had no alternative but to arrest them. Mr Kangai met with workers' committees representing drivers in Bulawayo and Salisbury and agreed to a salary increase 1 month ago but not by the 16 percent which they are now demanding. [Text] [LD121400 Johannesburg International Service in English 1100 GMT 12 Mar 82]

CSO: 4700/918

END

JPRS 80403

25 March 1982

Sub-Saharan Africa Report

No. 2593

FBIS FOREIGN BROADCAST INFORMATION SERVICE

NOTE

JPRS publications contain information primarily from foreign newspapers, periodicals and books, but also from news agency transmissions and broadcasts. Materials from foreign-language sources are translated; those from English-language sources are transcribed or reprinted, with the original phrasing and other characteristics retained.

Headlines, editorial reports, and material enclosed in brackets [] are supplied by JPRS. Processing indicators such as [Text] or [Excerpt] in the first line of each item, or following the last line of a brief, indicate how the original information was processed. Where no processing indicator is given, the information was summarized or extracted.

Unfamiliar names rendered phonetically or transliterated are enclosed in parentheses. Words or names preceded by a question mark and enclosed in parentheses were not clear in the original but have been supplied as appropriate in context. Other unattributed parenthetical notes within the body of an item originate with the source. Times within items are as given by source.

The contents of this publication in no way represent the policies, views or attitudes of the U.S. Government.

PROCUREMENT OF PUBLICATIONS

JPRS publications may be ordered from the National Technical Information Service, Springfield, Virginia 22161. In ordering, it is recommended that the JPRS number, title, date and author, if applicable, of publication be cited.

Current JPRS publications are announced in Government Reports Announcements issued semi-monthly by the National Technical Information Service, and are listed in the Monthly Catalog of U.S. Government Publications issued by the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402.

Correspondence pertaining to matters other than procurement may be addressed to Joint Publications Research Service, 1000 North Glebe Road, Arlington, Virginia 22201.

JPRS 80403

25 March 1982

SUB-SAHARAN AFRICA REPORT

No. 2593

CONTENTS

INTER-AFRICAN AFFAIRS

European Financing to Portugal for African Cooperation
(NOTICIAS, 19 Feb 82) 1

ANGOLA

Commission To Restructure State Machinery Meets
(ANGOP, 4, 5 Mar 82) 2

Meeting Opens
Meeting Ends

PETRANGOL Workers Praised as Refinery Reopens
(Editorial; ANGOP, 5 Mar 82) 4

Briefs
Kuwait Fund Fishery Loan 6
Portuguese Foreign Minister's Visit 6

BOTSWANA

Nation's Economic Difficulties Detailed
(DAILY NEWS, various dates) 7

Reserves Down, by Kwapeng Modikwe
Prospects Bleak
Chiepe Clarification
Diamond Potential

Reinstatement of Besele Montshioa Reported
(Seatiholo Tumedi, Jerry Masete; DAILY NEWS,
16 Feb 82) 16

Work on Power Station Feeder-Wells Starts
(DAILY NEWS, 15 Feb 82) 18

Briefs
Cattle Industry Upswing 19

CAPE VERDE

Briefs
Reactivation of People's Militia 20

CENTRAL AFRICAN REPUBLIC

'LE MONDE' on Latest Development in Country's Crisis, Patasse
(Jean-Claude Pomonti; LE MONDE, 9 Mar 82)..... 21

Government Expects France To Hand Over Patasse
(AFP, 8 Mar 82)..... 23

Ange Patasse, Two Generals Being Sought
(AZAP, 7 Mar 82)..... 24

Paris Paper on Alleged Coup Attempt by Patasse Supporters
(LE MONDE, 5 Mar 82)..... 25

Ban on Party Politics Expected To Continue
(AFRICA AFP, 16 Feb 82)..... 27

ETHIOPIA

Use of Nerve Gas Against Separatist Denied
(AFP, 1 Mar 82)..... 29

'AFP' Reporters Visit Three Eritrean Towns
(AFP, 10 Mar 82)..... 31

GABON

Briefs
Foreign Minister Returns 33

GHANA

PNDC Issues Guidelines for Forming PDC's
(Accra Domestic Service, 8 Mar 82)..... 34

PNDC Praised for Refusing Devaluation
(Effua Sam; Accra Domestic Service, 10 Mar 82)..... 35

PNDC Passes Retroactive Rent Control Law
(Accra Domestic Service, 6 Mar 82)..... 37

Briefs
Twenty-Cedi Note Withdrawal Denied 38
Comments on Complaints Against PDC's 38

GUINEA

Briefs
Sekou Toure Returns 39

GUINEA-BISSAU

Briefs
PAIGC-PCF Relations 40

IVORY COAST

Cot Visit Stresses French-Ivorian Cooperation
(FRATERNITE MATIN, 11 Mar 82)..... 41

LESOTHO

Briefs
Attack Claim 42
Tourism Promoted 42

LIBERIA

Withdrawal of General's Appointment
(AFRICA AFP, 23 Feb 82)..... 43

MALI

France's Cot Meets With Traore in Bamako
(Bamako Domestic Service, 5 Mar 82)..... 44

'AFP'Reports Cot Remarks Upon Bamako Arrival
(AFP, 5 Mar 82)..... 45

Beye, Cot Speak at Opening of Cooperation Talks
(Bamako Domestic Service, 5 Mar 82)..... 46

Briefs
Jean-Pierre Cot Ends Visit 48

MAURITIUS

Report on Foreign Currency Funds Earned by Emigre Workers
(L'EXPRESS, 20 Jan 82)..... 49

Privileged Relations With India To Be Maintained
(THE NATION, 29 Jan 82)..... 51

MSIRI Bases Future Hopes on New Cane Varieties
(L'EXPRESS, 21 Jan 82)..... 53

MOZAMBIQUE

Maputo Divided Into Administrative Zones
(NOTICIAS, 9 Feb 82) 55

ADB Finances Maputo Water Supply Improvement
(NOTICIAS, 17 Feb 82) 56

S. Africa, Morocco: 'North, South Poles of Imperialism'
(Mario Ferro; NOTICIAS, 15 Feb 82) 57

Portuguese Firm Provides Know-How, Technical Assistance
(Justino Rubben Cossa; DIARIO DE MOCAMBIQUE,
25 Jan 82) 59

Bulgarian Firm Completes Study of Cahora Bassa Facilities
(NOTICIAS, 22 Feb 82) 60

Coconut Harvest Sold To Highest Bidder, Not State
(Santos Artur; DIARIO DE MOCAMBIQUE, 28 Jan 82) 62

Reader's Complaint: Food, Drinks Only for Cooperants
(DOMINGO, 7 Feb 82) 64

Briefs
DPRK Agricultural Assistance 66
London Friendship Conference 66
NRM Attack Described 66
Delegations Abroad 67
Students in GDR 67
Beira Fish Cannery 67
NRM Guerrillas Killed 67
NRM Activity Reported 68
Constant Food Shortages 68
Poor OJM Activity 68
Swedish Pungoe Bridge Financing 68
DPRK Rural Socialization Movie 69
Vast Salt Reserve Discovery 69
KOMSOMOL Railroad Assistance 69
British Drought Donation 70
Cuban Movie Producer 70

NIGER

Nigeria Foreign Minister on Chad, Sahara
(Niamey Domestic Service, 8 Mar 82) 71

NIGERIA

Foreign Minister on Chad, POLISARIO
(Nairobi Domestic Service, 6 Mar 82) 73

Lesson To Be Learned From Chadian Crisis
(Lagos International Service, 9 Mar 82)..... 74

Kaduna State Indicted for Developing Only 'Privileged' Areas
(Emman Udoka; SUNDAY NEW NIGERIAN, 28 Feb 82)..... 76

Niger State Demands Compensation for Minna Airport
(Ibrahim A. Biu; NEW NIGERIAN, 26 Feb 82)..... 77

Food Crop Losses in Borno State Cost 211 Million Naira
(Sani Haruna; NEW NIGERIAN, 27 Feb 82)..... 78

Papers Analyze Handling of NEPA Strike
(Lagos International Service, 5 Mar 82)..... 79

Strikes Cause Loss of Two Million Man Days
(Suleiman Dangana; NEW NIGERIAN, 27 Feb 82)..... 80

Polytechnic Students in Sixth Week of Strike
(Editorial; NEW NIGERIAN, 27 Feb 82)..... 81

Hydroelectric Power Project Soon in Gembu
(NEW NIGERIAN, 25 Feb 82)..... 82

Discrepancy Seen in Automobile Import License Regulations
(Editorial; NEW NIGERIAN, 25 Feb 82)..... 83

Brick Industry To Be Built in Abuja
(Mich Rei's; NEW NIGERIAN, 24 Feb 82)..... 84

Briefs
Unauthorized Land Allocation 85
Delay in Commissioning Airport 85
Proposed Air Force Base 85
Senate: No Independent Candidates 86
Papers on Ghanaian Relations 86
'NATIONAL CONCORD' on OPEC 86

SAO TOME AND PRINCIPE

Talks With Cape Verde Aim at Easing Immigrants' Situation
(VOZ DI POVO, 30 Jan 82)..... 87

SENEGAMBIA

Briefs
Sahara Opposition Leader Arrives 89
President Visits Saudi Arabia 89

SEYCHELLES

Briefs
UK Military Delegation 90

SOMALIA

Jaalle Siad Receives North Korean Deputy Premier
(HEEGAN, 26 Feb 82)..... 91

Radio Kulmis Reports on Delegation Visiting U.S.
(Radio Kulmis, 13 Mar 82)..... 93

Saudis Provide Somalis With Oil Grant
(HEEGAN, 26 Feb 82)..... 94

SOUTH AFRICA

Significance of P. W. Botha's Victory Over Verkramptes Examined
(Editorial; RAND DAILY MAIL, 1 Mar 82)..... 95

Professor Kleynhans: 'Botha's Sincerity in Doubt'
(Monk Nkomo; SOWETAN, 26 Feb 82)..... 97

Communications Gap in Parliament Widens
(Peter Sullivan; THE STAR, no date given)..... 98

History of Cracks in Afrikaner Unity Traced
(Joe Latakgomo; SOWETAN, 26 Feb 82)..... 100

Nation's 'Realities' Forced NP Changes
(Michael Acott; RAND DAILY MAIL, 26 Feb 82)..... 103

Open Vote Beat Us, Claim NP Rebels
(RAND DAILY MAIL, 1 Mar 82)..... 105

Grobler: Leader Needs Support of All Races
(THE STAR, 25 Feb 82)..... 106

NP Spokesman: Buthelezi Report Unacceptable
(THE CITIZEN, 11 Mar 82)..... 108

Cross-Border Operations in Southern Africa Defended
(M. Hough; PARATUS, Jan 82)..... 109

Details on Largest Infantry Base Given
(PARATUS, Feb 82)..... 113

Opening of New Infantry Base at Phalaborwa Marked
(PARATUS, Jan 82)..... 116

Details on G5 Artillery System Given
(PARATUS, Feb 82)..... 118

Sudden Closure of Mahe Airport Trial Reported
(Tim Clarke; THE CITIZEN, 11 Mar 82)..... 120

Economic Dependence on Gold Deplored
(Editorial; THE CITIZEN, 11 Mar 82)..... 123

Country's Sea Freight Activities Pick Up
(RAND DAILY MAIL, 1 Mar 82)..... 125

Witwatersrand Students Plead Guilty, Get Ten Days
(THE CITIZEN, 11 Mar 82)..... 126

Parents of Detainees Rally Support
(THE CITIZEN, 11 Mar 82)..... 127

Large Pretoria Student Crowd Applauds Treurnicht
(THE CITIZEN, 11 Mar 82)..... 128

Constitutional Power Sharing Opposed, by Keith Abendroth
Pretoria Campus 'Politically Divided'

Various Views on NP Split Reported
(Patrick Lawrence, Eugene Hugo; RAND DAILY MAIL, 26 Feb 82)..... 131

Atteridgeville Cosas Leader Shot
(Monk Nkomo; SOWETAN, 3 Mar 82)..... 133

Briefs
Squatters 'Sit-in' 134
Petrol Thieves 134
Detainee Discharged 134
Little Cash for Mortgages 135
Afrox Strikers 135
New Captain for Frigate 135
GEC Cutback 136
NP Split Appears 'Unbridgeable' 136
Scientific Adviser 136
Gold Reserves Down 136
Students Nominate Mandela 137
Vaal Cosas Members Detained 137
ANC Trio's Hunger Strike 137

TANZANIA

Party Officials Rap Use of Public Office for Personal Gain
(AFRICA AFP, 16 Feb 82)..... 138

Delegation Encouraged by Improved Transport Prospects
(AFRICA AFP, 23 Feb 82) 140

ZAMBIA

Committee on Foreign Relations Presents Report on Funding of Missions
(TIMES OF ZAMBIA, 2 Mar 82) 142

Mudenda Admits IMF Terms Had 'Some Adverse Effects' on Agriculture
(TIMES OF ZAMBIA, 3 Mar 82) 143

Zambia, Malawi Expanding Bilateral Relations
(TIMES OF ZAMBIA, 2 Mar 82) 144

Finland Aiding Funding of Practical Studies in Primary Schools
(TIMES OF ZAMBIA, 4 Mar 82) 145

Scottish Group of Companies To Make 'Massive' Investments
(TIMES OF ZAMBIA, 3 Mar 82) 146

ZR Manager Reviewing Fraud Case Decisions Made in His Absence
(TIMES OF ZAMBIA, 2 Mar 82) 147

Restrictions on Movements of Police Officer Lifted
(TIMES OF ZAMIBA, 2 Mar 82) 148

NHA Workers End Wildcat Strike After Address by Union Leaders
(TIMES OF ZAMBIA, 4 Mar 82) 149

Pineapple Canning Plant Overcomes Operating Problems
(DAILY MAIL, 4 Mar 82) 150

Sugar Company Acts To Avert Further Shortages
(DAILY MAIL, 4 Mar 82) 151

Program Provides Places in Secondary Schools for Dropouts
(TIMES OF ZAMBIA, 2 Mar 82) 152

Emerald Smugglers Causing Losses to Treasury
(AFRICA AFP, 23 Feb 82) 153

Briefs
Revenues From Tourism 156
Detainees in 1980, 1981 156
Effective Fertilizer Distribution 156
Missing Emerge From Bush 157
Police Ground Romanian Vehicles 157

ZIMBABWE

Maputo Meeting Puzzles Nkomo
(THE CITIZEN, 10 Mar 82)..... 158

Four White Tried for Attempt to Overthrow Mugabe
(THE CITIZEN, 11 Mar 82)..... 159

Government To Crack Down on Foreign Journalists
(THE HERALD, 4 Mar 82)..... 160

Mining Official: Industry in 'Worst' State
(THE HERALD, 6 Mar 82)..... 161

Details on Green Revolution Plan Given
(THE HERALD, 4 Mar 82)..... 162

Maize Exports Could Double
(Stan Higgins; THE HERALD, 6 Mar 82)..... 164

Tekere's Return to Forefront Seen Possible
(Aida Parker; THE CITIZEN, 10 Mar 82)..... 165

'Battle Plan', Arms Evidence of Group's Plot
(THE CITIZEN, 12 Mar 82)..... 167

Briefs
Nkomo, Mugabe Supporters Clash 168
Defections Strengthen Mugabe's Party 168
General Fined 168

EUROPEAN FINANCING TO PORTUGAL FOR AFRICAN COOPERATION

Maputo NOTICIAS in Portuguese 19 Feb 82 p 10

[Text] A number of Western countries will be financing cooperative programs involving Portuguese technologies and directed toward African countries where Portuguese is the official language, according to a statement made in Lisbon by Goncalves Pereira, Portuguese minister of foreign affairs.

The head of Portuguese diplomacy was speaking at a meeting which President Ramalho Eanes had arranged with business people, journalists, government officials and other organizational representatives who had accompanied him on his recent trip to southern Africa.

The countries participating in the financing of cooperative action technologically assisted by Portugal are: the FRG, Great Britain, France and Sweden, but negotiations are also going on with the African Development Bank.

The Portuguese minister, quoted by ANOP [Portuguese News Agency], pointed out these cooperative plans, called triangular, as a way to alleviate Portugal's shortage of funds in its cooperation with its former colonies.

Portuguese business people consider Portugal's weak financial position as well as problems of a bureaucratic nature as limiting factors in the development of its economic relations with African countries.

The meeting was also attended by the secretaries of state for culture, planning, export, foreign transportation and tourism who gave talks on the development of its economic relations with African countries.

The meeting was also attended by the secretaries of state for culture, planning, export, foreign transportation and tourism who gave talks on the development of sectorial cooperation with the People's Republic of Mozambique and answered questions posed by the business people.

In his speech, Alberto Regueira, secretary of state for planning, described Portugal's support in the recovery of the export capability of Portuguese-speaking African countries as a key factor in the development of the proposed cooperation and in accordance with Portuguese policy.

Ramalho Eanes justified the initiative of holding the meeting as an appropriate means of making a critical analysis of the trip he made to southern Africa and receiving suggestions which will make it possible to improve the effectiveness of future trips, particularly to Angola in April.

8568
CSO: 4742/225

COMMISSION TO RESTRUCTURE STATE MACHINERY MEETS

Meeting Opens

AB042231 Luanda ANGOP in French 2100 GMT 4 Mar 82

[Text] Luanda, 4 Mar (ANGOP)--The first meeting of the National Commission for restructuring the state machinery opened today in Luanda under the chairmanship of Evaristo Domingos Kimba, a member of the Political Bureau of the MPLA-Labor Party, representing Head of State Jose Eduardo dos Santos.

Addressing the opening session, Evaristo Kimba explained that the law governing local authorities has clearly fixed the scope of competence and of action of the popular assemblies and the executive and has taken account of the democratization of state machinery which, according to him, always depends first and foremost on the affirmation of the leadership role of the party at all levels and which cannot be separated from the mode of economic organization nor from the methods of organizing the working masses.

The leader explained that one of these objectives consists of the progressive destruction of the old, decaying and inefficient state machinery, as well as the creation of a new state where the workers and the citizens would take an active part in the resolution of the political, economic and social problems of the country.

On the other hand, Mr Kimba stated that as there is only one state, all the parts forming it should undertake complementary tasks, and be completely relentless in their functions to the benefit of the country, adding that the principal bodies will always have the responsibility of formulating general principles for the organization and the functioning of units and services in their sectors of activity.

Concluding, Evaristo Kimba described work as the principal means for the achievement of an economy full of human and material resources, and which should be used more rationally in order to generate a stronger initiative in the masses, and at the same time to avoid bureaucracy and its vices.

Meeting Ends

AB051313 Luanda ANGOP in Portuguese 1110 GMT 5 Mar 82

[Text] Luanda, 4 Mar (ANGOP)--The National Commission for restructuring the state machinery, which began on Thursday under the chairmanship of Evaristo Domingos Kimba, member of the Political Bureau of the MPLA-Labor Party Central Committee, has ended its deliberations with the approval of the final conclusions. The commission, which was set up under directives of the Party Political Bureau, decided to adopt as its basic document the speech made by Evaristo Domingos at the opening session.

The proposal to include the sectors of fishing, transport and justice within the National Commission for restructuring the state machinery was also approved and henceforth there will be two subcommittees, on fishing and transport.

The Subcommittee on Housing and Self-Help Construction is to be known as the Subcommittee on Construction and Housing, coordinated by the minister of construction and integrating elements from the National Office for Physical Planning and the Ministry of Provincial Coordination. This subcommittee is charged with studying problems in the distribution of houses, collection of rents, construction of new houses, implementation of the organization of self-help construction, and the consequent supply of materials.

The Subcommittee on Energy and Water was charged with the task of examining the problems of water resources pertaining to impouding, treatment, distribution and collection of services.

It was also approved that the heads of the sections of the executive committees of the provincial party committees in Benguela, Mocamedes and Malanje be integrated into the Committee of Cadres.

The commission for restructuring the state machinery decided to recommend to the Party Political Bureau, as a directive, that it begin orienting the social sector.

The commission appointed the coordinators of the subcommittees and approved their work programs.

Present at the closing session were Ludy Kissassunda of the Party Political Bureau, Henrique Santos Onambwe, alternative member of the Political Bureau, and Bernardo de Sousa, member of the Party Central Committee and first secretary of the People's Assembly.

CSO: 4719/658

PETRANGOL WORKERS PRAISED AS REFINERY REOPENS

AB052120 Luanda ANGOP in Portuguese 1030 GMT 5 Mar 82

[ANGOP editorial: "The Workers' Victory"]

[Text] The attempt to slowly attack the minds and the revolutionary morale through the clever manipulation of what is essential and what is secondary, through intrigue and rumors, through confusion and shameless lies is characteristic of a particular reactionary trend which has not yet succeeded in destroying Angolan society.

This tendency is, as can be understood, attributable to the fact that there exists among us a particular social stratum which hopes to regain the lost privileges or is now trying, at this late date, to acquire them for the first time. The echo of this tendency, which is nearly always underhanded and petty, is given exaggerated publicity and even stimulated abroad by the capitalist press.

The smallest occurrence serves as a pretext for reactionary speculation aimed at the foundations of our revolutionary process as was recently evidenced by the enemy's sabotage of the PETRANGOL refinery.

But, within a very short time, the truth undid their selfish and fanciful designs. The primise made by the Angolan party and government to make the refinery operational once again, with the commitment of the workers, was fulfilled.

In the short period of a few weeks, the effects of the criminal destruction were removed and the refinery installations were reactivated. The government even hoped to increase this productive unit so that it could also be used for the Southern African countries which are daily facing the aggressiveness of racist South Africa because they hope to destroy, once and for all, the odious system of apartheid.

The destabilizing objectives that the saboteurs in the service of imperialism and the racist South Africans hope to attain--bring economic activity to a standstill, generate a fuel shortage for the armed forces on the fighting front, create panic among the people--were rapidly defeated by the prompt response of the workers committed to the national reconstruction process.

In this "year of economic organization and popular vigilance," this victory of the PETRANGOL workers emerges as a symbol of the will of all the people of Angola and represents an incentive for the neutralization in all fields of the enemies of the revolution at both the domestic and international levels.

All those who panicked on seeing the light of the flames and the thick smoke which at times darkened the capital's beautiful bay now have the opportunity to reflect on the origin of their permanent uneasiness. They will definitely conclude that it only comes from the credit they give to the prophets of doom and from the lack of courage and lack of trust in the unwavering determination and ever greater maturity of a people who, led by the MPLA--yesterday a movement and today a labor party--for a quarter of a century, are waging a victorious struggle for a world of freedom, national independence, peace and social progress.

The struggle continues!

The victory is sure!

CSO: 4742/237

BRIEFS

KUWAIT FUND FISHERY LOAN--Luanda, 9 Mar (ANGOP)--A loan of $50,950,000 was granted to the People's Republic of Angola Monday for a fishery project. The agreement was signed between the Kuwait Arab Development Fund and the Angolan minister of finance. The loan, which is for a 24-year period at an interest rate of 2 1/2 percent, is intended to increase Angola's fishery production. It will provide for the purchase of 10 fishing boats and the repairs of 44 other similar vessels, the installation of mechanical dryers and the construction of 10 fishing ports with piers. The agreement was signed on the Kuwait side by Abdlatif Youssef al-Hamad, president of the Kuwaiti Arab Development Fund and also Kuwaiti minister of finance and planning, and on the Angolan side, by Ismael Gaspar Martins, Angolan minister of finance. [Text] [AB092007 Luanda ANGOP in French 1830 GMT 9 Mar 82]

PORTUGUESE FOREIGN MINISTER'S VISIT--Official talks between Angolan Foreign Minister Paulo Jorge and Portuguese Foreign Minister Andre Goncalaves Pereira began yesterday afternoon in Luanda. They centered on an exchange of views on ways to strengthen relations between the two countries as well as on drawing up a plan for bilateral cooperation. It will be recalled that the Portuguese foreign minister arrived in Luanda yesterday morning for a 3-day visit to Angola at the invitation of his Angolan counterpart, Paulo Jorge. In a brief statement to the press soon after his arrival, Andre Goncalves Pereira said his visit is within the framework of the climate of entente between Angola and Portugal. The Portuguese foreign minister added that his visit will enable the strengthening of bilateral cooperation. Andre Goncalves Pereira, who announced the forthcoming visit of the Portuguese head of state to Angola, will have several talks with Angolan officials during his stay in Angola. Among with whom he will have talks are: The minister for planning and external trade, Lopo do Nascimento; the minister for finance, Ismael Martins and the secretary of state for cooperation, Paulino Pinto Joao. The Portuguese delegation will probably be received in audience by President of the MPLA-Labor Party and of the republic, Comrade Jose Eduardo dos Santos. [Text] [AB101324 Luanda Domestic Service in French 1100 GMT 10 Mar 82]

CSO: 4719/658

NATION'S ECONOMIC DIFFICULTIES DETAILED

Reserves Down

Gaborone DAILY NEWS in English 16 Feb 82 p 1

[Article by Kwapeng Modikwe]

[Text]

THE COUNTRY's financial reserves are down by P100 million due to the depressed world diamond market, the Assistant Minister of Agriculture, Mr G.U.S. Matlhabaphiri, has said.

He was officially opening projects of the Botswana Workcamp Association in Mochudi last Saturday. The projects are a fenced piece of land and storeroom.

Mr Matlhabaphiri said the situation on diamond sales was not expeced to improve for sometime to come. He emphasised that it was not a trivial matter for a developing country like Botswana to experience such a disturbing financial depression.

He noted that for as long as the situation remained unchanged, the country would experience a delay in the implementation of some of the projects.

Whilst this was the case, said Mr Matlhabaphiri, the people would have to rely on their own efforts to achieve the necessary progress.

On the establishment of the association, the Assistant Minister said it was a giant step forward in reviving the dying cultural background uponwhich the young generation must be moulded.

Due to the limited financial resources he said, "we cannot hope to achieve our economic development objectives unless we make use of our abundant resources, labour force."

Self-help, he explained, married very well with the traditional system such as "Letsema." For that reason he said, it should be actively promoted and encouraged.

He noted that, that effort would contribute more since the country was committed to the acceleration of its development pace through self-help.

Earlier welcoming the Minister, Kgosi Linchwe II of Bakgatla, who is the Presicent of the association, regretted that while responsible citizens did come together to discuss ways of developing the country, others spent their time making plans for less noble pursuits and even for committing crimes such as robbery, murder and assault.

He called on such people to refraim from such activities and join the association. By doing so he said, they would have rescued themselves from possible embarrassment.

Kgosi Linchwe noted that workcamps were not new in Kgatleng.He cited as example, the construction of the "Kagiso" kgotla shelter in Mochudi. The project was built by regiments on self-help basis. He said the establishment of the headquarters of the association in his village was a coincidence since the village had always been known for active participation in self-help activities.

Another speaker was the Director of the German Volunteer Service, Dr J. Schroeder, who said his organisation favoured the idea of work camps.

The National Coordinator Mr G.M. Kennekee and the Chairman Mr D. Moremong also spoke during the occassion. The occassion itself was marked by traditional dancing and poems. BOPA

Prospects Bleak

Gaborone DAILY NEWS in English 23 Feb 82 pp 1, 2

[Text]

AN INCREASE in personal taxation is one of the possible policy measures the Government might consider in Botswana's hazy economic outlook.

A package of policy measures including a cut in Government spending, a review of interest rates, and a change if the value of the Pula would be considered if the situation warranted, according to the Minister of Finance and Development Planning, Mr Peter Mmusi. He was speaking in Parliament yesterday.

In a budget speech that spelt out a bleak economic background and tough times ahead, Mr Mmusi said the over P100 million balance of payment deficit which might remain during the current year "has wide implications for the economy as a whole and there is no single policy measure which can effectively deal with it."

Short of a strong resurgence in demand for two of Botswana's major exports, nickel-copper matte and diamonds, the balance of payments will remain in deficit during 1982.

Botswana became P100 million in the red primarily because of a shortfall in export earnings.

The favourable balance of payments trend seen over the past fie years was broken in the second half of 1981.

"Our estimates show that the balance of payments moved from an overall surplus of P72 million in calendar year 1980 to a deficit of P60 million in 1981. This adverse turn-around was brought about mainly by the depressed demand for diamonds on the world market and diamond sales were about P100 million less in 1981 than in 1980. For Botswana these developments affected not only diamonds but nickel and copper prices also severely depressed in 1981."

Mr Mmusi added that a combination of high interest rates and sluggish economic activity in western countries resulted in a slump in the demand for primary commodities which Botswana exported.

At the beginning of 1981, before the impact of the export shortfall began to be felt, Botswana's foreign exchange reserves were rising. They reached a peak of P280 million at the end of April 1981.

Said Mr Mmusi: "Various people looked at these reserves of P280 million and asked: 'Why is Botswana saving such large sums of money?' Why don't we spend more of it?' Since April 1981, however, we have seen these reserves being drawn down, because of the reduction in export receipts. In fact foreign exchange reserves are being used in one of the ways that was originally intended, namely as a reserve against bad times."

"We should all learn from this experience," he said.

However, pointed out Mr Mmusi, in spite of the change-over from a large balance of payments surplus to a small deficit, the Government and the Bank of Botswana have so far considered it prudent not to resort to any major policy changes.

While economic perfomance during the first two years of the National Development Plan Five (NDP V) was better than projected, the economy is now experiencing a down turn.

Real Gross Domestic Product (GDP) growth rate in 1980/81 was only 0.5 per cent higher than NDP V forecast, and indications are that Boswana will experience negative real growth in 1981/82.

"This is enough cause for considerable concern and we are compelled to adopt some belt tightening measures which may continue for some time," said Mr Mmusi.

Whilst the aggregate figures were satisfactory, said the Minister, major sectors not directly influenced by mining fared less well. Agricultural GDP experienced a substantial fall in real terms in 1979. Exports of beef to the European Market were stopped in July 1979 and only 141 000 head were slaughtered in 1980 compared to 229 000 in the previous year.

This had an adverse effect on GDP achieved by both the agricultural and manufacturing sectors which went down by 30 per cent. 202 000 cattle slaughtered in 1981 were below the 1979 throughput, although this was a significant improvement over 1980.

Arable agriculture showed remarkable recovery in 1980, said Mr Mmusi, from the 1979 drought. Production of sorghum grew six times to 29 100 metric tonnes, and maize was up to 11 600 metric tonnes from only 2 250 metric tonnes.

Output of all other crops increased from 3 020 metric tonnes in 1979 to 6 900 metric tonnes in 1980.

In 1981, total arable production increased by 21 per cent to 57 415 metric tonnes. Production of sorghum went down by three per cent while that of maize recorded an increase of 84 per cent to 21 400 metric tonnes. All other crops recorded an increase of 12 per cent.

Mr Mmusi pointed out that prospects in the livestock subsector appeared good following the successful eradication of the recent outbreak of foot and mouth disease "which enabled us to regain access to the EEC market."

"Furthermore, the EEC authorities have agreed to the extension of areas from which they will take cattle to include areas south of the Makoba-Palapye-Sherwood cordon fence," said Mr Mmusi.

Developments in the subsector include the construction of two new abattoirs at Maun and Francistown. A feasibility study with respect to these projects which was commissioned early last year has finalised and submitted to Government.

To Page 2

Maun will have a complete abattoir instead of just a canning facility.

The abattoirs are expected to increase total export slaughter capacity by about 47 per cent -from about 225 000 to 3 330 000 per year. Total capital expenditure is estimated at P25,2 million over six years. Cattle producers in the North will benefit from these projects through savings in transport costs of live animals.

Looking to the future, Mr Mmusi said that short term economic prospects appeared very bleak. The market for diamonds had been very weak since the middle of 1980. This was partly due to special factors in the diamond trade, said, the Minister. "In general, although demand for diamond jewelry had held up well in the United States, Europe and Japan, high interest rates have resulted in considerably reduced willingness to hold stocks and there has been resistance to the increased price of diamonds."

Within the diamond trade difficulties had arisen as a result of the speculations that took place in 1978, which drove up prices beyond realistic levels and left many people with overpriced stocks financed by expensive bank loans.

BOPA

Minister Calls for "Belt-Tightening"

BOTSWANA'S growing business sector is digesting the implications of the 1982/3 budget proposals which were presented to the National Assembly by the Minister of Finance and Development Planning, Mr P.S. Mmusi yesterday.

The Minister's message was clear: some "belt-tightening" measures have to be adopted and possibly continue for some time, because of the present economic position the country is in.

In the belt-tightening exercise, the Minister would be looking at "a whole range of possibilities" to be implemented in the course of the coming fiscal year. Reduction in expenditures and increases in fees and taxes are among the measures which he said he has under active study.

Initial reaction to the Ministers' speech from the business community, showed little if any surprise. A few people though, the private sector would need a lot of guidance by Government in the belt-tightening exercise, since the private sector was still short of manpower and particularly qualified personnel.

The question of manpower was touched on by the Minister, although on a much wider scale. He was especially concerned that there were "a great many Batswana who are living at or below the poverty line."

Mr Mmusi had pointed out that when national income falls, decisions had to be made about how such a loss of income should be shared among members of society.

"Those people have nothing they can give up," he said, "and our Government will do all in its power to protect this group."

He explained that thus, the ones who make sacrifices in times like these must be the wealthier members of society, those who already possess wealth, such as cattle or urban land, or those who are already enjoying the better urban and rural services that have been created since independence.

In the days preceeding the presentation of the Budget proposals, there was much speculation in the capital's business sector, ranging from the possible restriction of repatriation of profits and that Banks' credit squeeze would get tighter as the Banks hesitated money to the small and riskier enterpreneur.

A few local businessmen said they were still studying the Budget speech. To most however, the Minister's message went home: "I have to reiterate," he said, "that we are facing an exceptionally bleak outlook."

Mr Mmusi explained: "None of the options open to us is a pleasant one, and it is clear that we must take concrete measures to live within our means." BOPA

Parastatals Geared To Survive Economic Slump

DURING the past year government parastatals or public corporations maintained remarkable growth rates with however economic snags here and there. Though operating within an economic slump now engulfing the country's general economic performance the corporations continued to grow, and major expansion plans are in black and white for some of them.

In his budget speech yesterday afternoon the Minister of Finance and Development Planning, Mr Peter Mmusi gave detailed information on the performances of 10 public corporations.

BDC

The BDC is the corporation which does business on behalf of the government. During the past year the BDC went through an eventful eleventh year. As part of a restructuring exercise a Department of Project Development was added to give greater attention to new projects.

In total, the BDC committed P7,66 million in new investments which increased its total portfolio by 80 per cent. The investment target foreseen in the current National Development Plan has already been achieved. Investment of three to four times the original target seems achievable, and group after-tax profits at P2.4 million were P900 000 more than in the previous year. For the first time, BDC also declared a dividend of P335 000 or 8.5 per cent of paid-up ordinary share capital.

Mr Mmusi said that a major thrust was seen in the agricultural sector. At Sherwood, a 20 000 hectare farm, with substantial irrigation potential was acquired. It is intended to develop part of the farm as a settlement and the other for producing seeds and for setting up subsequent processing industries.

According to the Minister, the agricultural sector represents about a quarter of BDC's total portfolio, and it was expected that more farms would be offered for sale to the BDC.

While the BDC showed this growth, the problems of Air Botswana, a wholly-owned subsidiary, took up a substantial part of management time.

Mr Mmusi said that as a result of the termination of the flying operation by the contracting operators, Air Botswana started leasing aircraft from a newly created BDC susbsidiary in August last year.

The BMC:

The BMC had a remarkable recovery from its low throughput in 1980 as a result of the outbreak of foot and mouth disease in 1979.

In 1981, 202 000 cattle were slaughtered, an increase of 43 per cent over the 1980 throughput.

The commission increased producer prices by approximately 15 per cent since the beginning of 1981 and announced a 1981 bonus of 7.6 per cent. Total amount paid to producers during the same year was nearly P50 million.

As for 1982, Mr Mmusi said the BMC forecasts a throughput of 200 000 cattle of which 10 000 tonnes of boneless beef would be sold to the European Economic Community (EEC) market. In certain months of the year cattle will be drawn exclusively from the EEC approved areas.

A system of differential pricing will be introduced this year so that farmers barred from supplying cattle in the best months will adequately compensated. A further producer price increase of 12.5 per cent was announced in December last year.

The BLDC:

A notable activity of the BLDC in 1981 was the sale of heifers to Angola. Consequently, the corporation made a profit and paid a 10 per cent bonus. After the lifting of the veterinary quarantine restrictions from North West Central District, the BLDC resumed its sale of cattle to the BMC and 6 644 head were sold between June and September last year.

The BAMB:

The Board offered prices which were among the highest in southern Africa for major food grains during 1981/82. Total domestic purchases by the board at its 28 marketing outlets amounted to over 19 000 tonnes, with sorghum and maize constituting about 78 per cent of the total.

According to the Finance Minister, in the coming year the Board would reorganize and improve its operating systems in line with the programme agreed with government as part of the restructuring.

"It will also establish a 2 000 tonne capacity Seed Processing Plant at Pitsane and nine-look-up stores at various lacations as part of the Arable Land Development Programme -- ALDEP.

The BHC:

The outlook for 1982/83 depends on availability of finance and primary infrastructure in the areas allocated to the corporation. Mr Mmusi however said that plans for 1982 include construction of about 1 000 units over 80 per cent of which would be medium and low cost houses. They are mostly destined for Gaborone, including Gaborone West, and developments in Jwaneng, Lobatse and Francistown.

The Minister however told the House that the role of the BHC was expected to change in the future. A draft White Paper on the Presidential Commission of Housing and Rental policy would be tabled during this meeting of Parliament.

This paper, Mr Mmusi said recommends that government develops ways and means to assist individuals to finance and build their own houses, to their own needs, based in what each individual could afford, rather than depending so heavily on BHC.

At the moment, the BHC is responsible for the management and maintenance of some 4 900 units with current market value of P76,5 million. Projects in the course of preparation will provide a further 527 low cost, 49 medium cost, and 108 high cost dwellings plus 52 flats.

Waiting lists continued to grow, especially in the low cost sector. Rentals of all types of houses generated an income of P4.24 million during 1981/82, whilst expenditure on capital projects was P7,7 million. An operating surplus of P161 000 was achieved, and the accumulated surplus now stands at P745 364.

The WUC

In 1982/83 the corporation plans to spend P2.2 million from its own resources on building and equipping a pumping staton for the Gaborone West Development and the developing of a wellfield near Ramotswa. The Ramotswa wellfield will benefit both Gaborone and Lobatse.

According to Mr Mmusi, efforts were being made to finalise the negotiations with the World Bank regarding the third Water Supply Project, which would provide urgently need additional water for Gaborone West Development.

The Water Utilities Corporation maintained its record of sound financial management and in 1980/81 produced rates of return in each of its undertakings in excess of the minimum required under agreements with the World Bank.

Mr Mmusi said that the new works, which would supply Francistown with fully-treated water from the Shashe Dam and funded under the World Bank Second Water Supply Project were nearing completion.

Francistown would then enjoy, for the first time an uninterrupted and secure water supply.

The BPC

Major plans or projects of the BPC include the Morupule Power Project, village electrification programme, power supply to Jwaneng and the supply of Orapa from Selebi-Phikwe power station.

A great deal work according to Mr Mmusi, has already gone into the engineering and financing of the Morupule Power Project and associated high voltage transmission system.

This major project is crucial for the future development of Botswana. At an estimated cost of P235 million it is the largest project to be undertaken in Botswana's public sector. Construction of the works will commence in 1982 and continue into 1986.

The BTC

The achievements of the Botswana Telecommunications Corporation so far, include the increase in exchange capacities in a number of areas; conversion from manual to automatic exchange in Ramotswa; the opening of the trunk route with direct subscriber dialing between Francistown and Maun.

They also include the installation of new radio equipment in Gantsi and the increase in the trunk capacity to both Zimbabwe and South Africa which helped to reduce congestion in these routes.

In addition, Mr Mmusi said that the new telex exchange had been commissioned and the waiting list of applicants for service would be cleared within the next few months.

The Minister however, pointed out that further work aimed at increasing capacity and reducing waiting lists would continue in the coming financial year.

"However the corporation will reach a difficult period in 1982/83 when most exchanges will be filled," he said, adding that the situation would only ease when the main development programme was completed.

The BBS

The Botswana Building Society experienced a year of rapid growth in 1981 with an increase in its total assets of 30 per cent over 1980. The Society's mortgage balances were P12 million at the end of 1981, an increase of P4 million or 50 per cent over the 1980 balances.

A total of 149 new loans were approved during the year including 48 which benefited from the Government Guarantee Scheme. Under this scheme, government guarantees 25 per cent of any loan not exceeding P15 000.

The society made 81 loans to existing borrowers to enable them to build houses in their home villages or improve their present properties.

The NDB

The number of loans approved by the National Development Bank increased from 2,301 in 1980 to 4,373 in 1981 - an increase of 90 per cent. Total amount of loans was P12.2 million which is P2.8 million more than the 1980 figure - an increase of 30 per cent.

Mr Mmusi said that the government had agreed in the current financial year to make available to the Bank P2 million, of which P1.8 million was equity and P200,000 was a grant to cover the administrative cost of small loans.

In addition, he said the government made available to the Bank P10 million for its lending programme from the Public Debt Service Fund during the same year.

There Will Be No Salaries Increase

THERE WILL BE NO increase in salaries in the public sector this year, the Minister of Finance and Development Planning Mr Peter Mmusi told Parliament yesterday.

Dealing with the sector on economic management during the presentation of the Budget Proposals, Mr Mmusi said Government has asked the National Employment Manpower and Income Council (NEMIC) to make recommendations regarding the desirable increase in public salaries and in the light of the problems and in view of the likely effects on the entire economy. NEMIC has concluded that there should be no increase in the salaries at present and that the situation should be reviewed when conditions in the economy have improved.

"I am pleased to say that Government has accepted NEMIC's recommendation" he said.

Their action is indeed one which is most responsible under the circumstances and "we intend to keep the situation under review and to stay in contact with NEMIC", he said.

The Minister said he himself knows no country that has ever been able to fulfil the demand of representative groups of employees, employers to keep wages constant in the face of inflation but however assured parliament that as conditions in the economy changes Government will take action as may be warranted.

Minister Mmusi told the House that when representative bodies assist government in that manner, the problem of management of the economy for the benefit to all citizens become much easier, 'even in our present difficult circumstances'.

Mr Mmusi reminded the House it has always been the policy of Government to keep the growth of expenditure at a steady rate to avoid the stops and starts that have characterised many economies.

In the last six years, he said, Government has been able to record cash balances but the overall deficit in this year is such that at the end of 1981/2 Government cash balances are less than P20 million which is equal to just two weeks expenditure.

He said the deficit for 1982/3 is projected to be 50 per cent worse than in the current year because our revenue has remained stagnant for two financial years of 1980/1 and 1982/3 while expenditure and lending of Government has risen by P137 million which represents 44 per cent.

He said however that because Government has built balances in the past and because of the hope that the diamond market may improve in the next year Government is determined to pursue an overall expenditure strategy as outlined in the current National Development Plan.

Minister Mmusi made it clear that at present there are no signs of early recovery in either world economy or diamond market and reiterated that Botswana's real income fell by over P100 million in the current year and that amount may double in the next financial year. BOPA

Selebi-Phikwe Mine in the Worst Financial Position

BCL is in an exceptionally weak financial position, and there is a real danger that the copper-nickel mine could become insolvent and have to close down.

This was disclosed in the National Assembly yesterday by the Minister of Finance and Development Planning, Mr Peter Mmusi in his budget speech.

"I must stress to Honourable Members that the situation at Selebi-Phikwe is extremely serious. Most nickel mines in the world have cut back on production and employment. BCL has not yet done so, but a reduction might become necesary in the future," said Mr Mmusi.

He said the most critical problem was that BCL "is in an exceptionally weak financial position, and there is a real danger that the project could become insolvent and have to close down."

This according to the Finance Minister "would have most severe consequences for our economy, as BCL is the largest employer in the private sector, as well as major earner of foreign exchange."

Eaiier the Minister had told the House: "I regret that BCL, the company operating the copper-nickel mine at Selebi-Phikwe, remains in serious financial difficulty. This is largely due to its very heavy debt obligations, but it has been worsened substantially by the present level of nickel and copper prices."

He said at the end of 1981, BCL obtained agreement from all its major lenders to postpone all payments of interest and principal on its long-term debt, and all royalty payments to government.

"The other shareholders and lenders to BCL are meeting with Government to discuss the re-structuring of BCL's finances for a third time."

"Prices are so bad at present that BCL requires additional injections of funds to meet its operation costs, but we do not expect this situation to continue for very long," said Mr Mmusi.

The Minister mentioned that the Shashe Project as a whole also accounted for a substantial portion of Botswana's foreign debt, "and we could face the need to repay sizeable sums if the project were to default on its loan payments. The disruptive effects of such a situation on our efforts at development would set us back many years."

Mr Mmusi stressed: "I wish to express my hope that our friends in the international community who have assisted with the Shashe project, will be supportive of our efforts to bring about an equitable restructuring of BCL's finances for all parties concerned." BOPA

Chiepe Clarification

Gaborone DAILY NEWS in English 24 Feb 82 p 1

[Text]

FOLLOWING several inquiries regarding the BCL position as outlined in the Budget Speech yesterday, I have decided to explain as follows:-

It is understandable that persons reading or hearing the broadcast about BCL's present position made in the Budget Speech might conclude that an early close down of the mine is envisaged. My colleague the Minister of Finance and I wish to stress however, that this is certainly not the case. The Minister of Finance has quite rightly warned us all of the danger of BCL's position but I must tell you also that all parties to the project are, at this very moment, working on a solution to the financial problems which they hope will be agreed to before very long.

We should remember meanwhile that BCL's actual operations go from strength to strength. Employment and production have increased in 1981 to record levels and costs have been contained most satisfactorily.

Government recognises, more than any one else, the importance of BCL's contribution to the national economy and also the importance of the project for the workers and their families at mine site.

You may rest assured therefore that BCL's future is very close to Government's heart and that Government is examining every possible avenue to ensure the un-interrupted successful operation of BCL's mine at Selebi-Phikwe.

Diamond Potential

Gaborone DAILY NEWS in English 1 Mar 82 pp 1, 2

[Excerpt]

BOTSWANA has deposit of rough gemstones in various parts of the country and these could be used for small gemstone and jewellery industry.

The Minister of Commerce and Industry Mr M.P.K. Nwako, told about hundred people, who included the President Dr Q.K.J. Masire, Cabinet Ministers and Members of the Diplomatic Corps in Gaborone Town Hall on Thursday last week. He said the survey conducted by the Department of Geological Survey found about 2 900 tonnes of agates of jewellery quality in the Bobonong area.

Botswana has been exporting rough gemstones until now. He said the Ministry of Commerce and Industry became aware of the possibility of using the rough gemstones as a base for a small gemstone and jewellery industry. It was realised that this could be done with relatively modest investments.

The United Nations Development Programme was approached to provide technical assistance in this respect and the UNDP accepted the request.

The UNDP arranged with UNIDO for the services of an expert who came in 1978 on an exploratory mission and prepared a report on the prospect of such an industry. The UNDP was requested to appoint him on longer basis to start a training programme. The expert arrived in April 1980 to organise such a programme with 12 trainees.

The Minister recalled that the training in silversmithing and gemstone started on February 2 last year with only simple tools.

The Government of Botswana imported heavy machinery for casting and milling from Italy in July 1981 and on its installation full-scale training was started. Between June 1981 and January 1982 the expert was able to teach wax modelling, casting, milling etc.

Politicians To Prepare Nation for Worst

POLITICIANS have been told to prepare the population for the worst, because of the slump in Botswana's economy following a large deficit resulting from the fall of the diamond prices - the main source of revenue for Botswana.

"We should be aware that this is not a situation we can capitalise on," the MP for Ngwaketse/Kgalagadi, Mr Michael Tshipinare said in Parliament.

He advised: "We should speak with one voice and nobody should seek favours."

Mr Tshipinare, who was contributing on the debate on the appropriation bill which is linked to the budget speech which was delivered by the Minister of Finance and Development Planning, Mr Peter Mmusi last Monday, called for the rearranging of government priorities.

"We should be prepared before we meet the devil," he said, adding that politicians should go back to the people and tell them that what they were promised would not be achieved in the plan period because of what the economy of the country was experiencing.

He added that one of the factors ruining the government economy was government transport. Mr Tshipinare suggested people should work together in trying to reduce fuel spending by government transport.

He said that there were other small things which needed to be looked into. He gave examples of things that could be stopped, such as the 11 0' clock teas; MPs walking from their guest houses to Parliament instead of using Government transport and that it would be advisable for Ministers, when they were going for Cabinet meetings to be transported by one mini-bus instead of using a car each.

Mr Tshipinare said that people were not aware that these little things were utilising a lot of Government revenue. He also said that salary reviews should bring reductions instead of increments.

As for the Ministry of Local Government and Lands, which he said links the Government and the public, this Ministry, he said, should be strengthened and restructured.

Another MP who touched on Government transport, was the leader of the opposition, Mr B. Gaseitsiwe (BNF Kanye South) who said that a lot of money was being spent in repairing vehicles damaged by reckless Government drivers.

He said that the Central Transport Organisation (CTO) spent a lot of money in repairs, the money which could be diverted to other development projects. He suggested that it should not be the responsibility of government alone but reckless drivers should be surcharged.

Mr Gaseitsiwe also called for the revamping of the CTO workshops so that they could be able to handle the work load. He said that when the workshops were working at full capacity it would save government by not sending engines for repairs in South Africa.

As for the Tribal Grazing Land Policy (TGLP), Mr Gaseitsiwe said that some people were complaining that their grazing areas were being engulfed by commercial ranches. He asked what the Government was going to do about this situation.

He also criticised the Botswana Housing Corporation (BHC) for the rising house costs, giving houses at Extension 14 as an example.

"There is a hue and cry about these rising prices," Mr Gaseitsiwe said, adding that all stages of houses at Extension 14 had depriciated but their prices were going up. "What does the BHC think of these rising prices?" he asked.

The MP for Ghanzi, Mr Jankie said that people appreciate the development done by the Government so far but "we are unhappy that now we are facing problems."

Mr Jankie said that when he suggested in one Parliament sitting that each constituency should be given a share of the then "excess liquidity" he had forseen that the "liquidity was going to evaporate."

He called for the Government to introduce drought relief measures to serve the livestock. Mr Jankie said in his area, of the Kgalagadi, the land was vast but there was a shortage of boreholes. He pointed out that for this bad year, if the government did not provide more boreholes people were going to concentrate at the few boreholes and this would result in overgrazing.

When Parliament adjourned, the MP for Kgatleng, Mr Greek Ruele was still on the floor. Although he was till trying to develop his points, Mr Ruele suggested that this was the year which we should "try by all means to keep our heads above water."

He called for the curbing of drinking hours which he said were delaying workers. Mr Ruele said that young people were spending most of their time drinking instead of working.

He told the House that the unemployed were in the majority "and these are the people who are bringing the economy of the country down." He added that laziness was now common.

CSO: 4700/910

REINSTATEMENT OF BESELE MONTSHIOA REPORTED

Gaborone DAILY NEWS in English 16 Feb 82 p 1

[Article by Seatiholo Tumedi and Jerry Masete]

[Text]

OVER 2 000 Barolong in Good Hope at the weekend eagerly welcomed the announcement that Besele Montshioa would be re-instated as their chief.

The long-awaited announcement was made by the Vice President and Minister of Local Government and Lands, Mr Lenyeletse Seretse.

The Vice President appealed to Mr Montshioa to serve his people with dedication and sternly warned him against arrongantly displaying his chieftainship and using his status to serve his own interests.

He cautioned that Government would not allow any chief to continue holdings his post if he neglected his duties and represented his own selfish interests as against the interests of the people.

He said he was aware that there were some people who did not accept tribal authorities appointed by Government after consultation with the people. Others, he said, always tried to make a distinction between tribal authorities and "blue-blooded" chiefs and reminded the meeting that tribal authorities had the same rights as "blue-blooded" chiefs and deserved the same respect that went to the chiefs.

Mr Seretse remarked that Mr Montshioa must have learned a hard lesson and that he should be all out for reconstruction.

"Government won't be scrutinising your activities but the people will be closely observing you," said the Vice President.

He continued to say that there were some people who wanted to use Mr Montshioa as a stepping stone for achieving their political aspirations and explained that chieftainship was a non-political institution.

Describing Montshioa as an extremely fortunate man for his people to request his leadership after he had abused it, the Vice President noted that some people would still try to mislead him into temptation and that he must guard himself against such people. He said such people were self-centred characters who did not have the interest of the community at heart. He said Barolong was rightly considered Botswana's granary and therefore it deserved strong leaders!

The Vice-President said it was suggested that Mr Montshioa should undergo some re-orientation before he could take over his office and that it was for the people to decide on the matter.

Mr Seretse also commended Mr Tshipikgano Motlhatlhedi for his good work and his co-operation with government. Mr Motlhathedi has been the Barolong Tribal Authority since Mr Montshioa was deposed in 1976. He suggested that Mr Motlhatlhedi should be given some time before he could hand over to Mr Montshioa to ensure a smooth running of the office.

Speaking solemnly, Mr Montshioa voluntarily swore before the meeting that he had turned over a new leaf and done away with those habits that had caused concern to the people. He pledged dedication to his work and appealed to his people for co-operation. Mr Montshioa asked the Vice President if he could start work right away, and said he needed no orientation because he knew his job.

Mr Montshioa explained that he had been avoiding attending Kgotla meetings because he had been deposed and therefore avoiding being seen to be interfering with the work of the man who had replaced him.

After the Vice President, speaker after speaker attacked Mr Montshioa for his previous misconduct. He came under fire for his previous drinking habits.

One of the speakers, Mr Dingaan Mokaila, commended Government for abiding by its democratic practices and warned Mr Montshioa that he was chief of all sorts and characters of people of different ethnic origins making up the Barolong community. He warned Mr Montshioa against accepting bribery.

The MP for Kanye South, Mr Bathoen Gaseitsiwe who is also former Chief of the Bangwaketse encouraged Mr Montshioa to regard his job seriously and reminded him that chieftainship was a sacred institution which should not be misused and abused. He suggested that Government should closely watch activities of headmen.

CSO: 4700/909

WORK ON POWER STATION FEEDER-WELLS STARTS

Gaborone DAILY NEWS in English 15 Feb 82 p 1

[Text]

WORK ON THE well-field which will supply the proposed Central Power Station with water is expected to start next month. This is contained in a press release from the Ministry of Mineral Resources and Water Affairs. The release follows the recent visit to the area by the Minister of Mineral Resources and Water Affairs Dr Gaositwe Chiepe. The site for the Central Power Station is adjacent to Morupule Colliery near Palapye in the Central District.

The full text of the release reads:

The Minister of Mineral Resources and Water Affairs, Dr. G.K.T. Chiepe recently visited the proposed site for the Central Power Station as well as the areas between Palapye and Serowe over which Shell Coal Botswana (Pty) Ltd have applied for a mining base for the mining of coal for export.

Accompanying the Minister were Mr M.C. Tibone Permanent Secretary, Mineral Resources and Water Affairs, Government Mining Commissioner, Chief Executive of Botswana Power Corporation and Managing Director of Shell Coal Botswana.

Preliminary works on the site will start in the near future. Work on the well-field which will supply the power station with water will commence in March 1982.

The Shell Coal project area overlies the Kgaswe, Mmantshadidi, and Bolelantokwe lands area.

Before going on a field trip to the two project areas, the Minister attended a briefing session in Serowe which included the Bangwato Tribal Authority, Central Distric Council (CDC) Chairman, District Commissioner and other senior officials on the CDC Administration.

The meeting was briefed by the Chief Executive of BPC and Shell Managing Director. Shell Managing Director mentioned that only after an agreement has been signed between Government and Shell will money be spent on detailed feasibility studies. The viability of the mining project will be determined by the outcome of all these studies.

Members of the CDC Administration appreciated the briefing and the meeting stressed the need for regular consultations and briefs during the planning of the projects. One important issue discussed during the meeting was the location of the proposed mining township.

The meeting agreed that the decision on the location will be taken by all interested parties, including the Mining Company, the CDC Administration, Ministry of Local Government and Lands (in particular the Department of Town and Regional Planning) and Ministry of Mineral Resources and Water Affairs as well as other Government Ministries. BOPA

CSO: 4700/909

BRIEFS

CATTLE INDUSTRY UPSWING--Botswana's cattle industry, in terms of numbers and sales, has registered an upswing as from July 1980, according to the 1981 Crop and Livestock Survey conducted by the Division of Planning and Statistics of the Ministry of Agriculture. A release from the Division of Planning and Statistics says in 1981 it was estimated that a total of 2,97 million cattle were held in the country. It explains that this figure reflects a gross increase in cattle numbers of 1.9 percent from July 1980 through June 1981. During the same period, cattle sales increased by 6,6 percent from 287 000 to just over 306 000 head. Cattle death rate for 1981 remained the same as in the previous year--12 percent of the national herd. Higher death rates averaging 13.6 percent were observed in the traditional sector when compared to the freehold farm sector--four percent (4%). According to the release, cattle raising still remains an important part of agricultural activity in Botswana. Of the 84 500 farmers in the country in 1981, 70 percent were cattle holders. Herd size averaged 43 cattle in the traditional sector and over 1 000 cattle in the commercial sector. The national average herd size remained constant at slightly over 50 cattle per farm when compared to 1980. According to the release, this average reflects an increase of 8,5 percent in the average cattle herd size when compared to 1979. Additional cattle production figures are contained in the publications: "1981 Botswana Agricultural Statistics," available on request from Agricultural Statistics Unit, P.O. Box 104, Gaborone.--BOPA [Text] [Gaborone DAILY NEWS in English 17 Feb 82 p 1]

CSO: 4700/909

BRIEFS

REACTIVATION OF PEOPLE'S MILITIA--Praia City, 21 Feb--The people's militias created after independence will be reactivated throughout the country. According to government sources, this measure falls within the framework of reinforcing the policy of defense and security. Groups of militia are being formed in the different islands. They are made up of civilians who volunteer, after receiving training, to help in tasks connected with public order and national defense. The institutionalization of the militias is included in the agenda of the National People's Assembly, the third session of the current legislature of which was convened for early March. [Text] [Maputo NOTICIAS in Portuguese 23 Feb 82 p 5] 8711

CSO: 4742/232

'LE MONDE' ON LATEST DEVELOPMENT IN COUNTRY'S CRISIS, PATASSE

PM091321 Paris LE MONDE in French 9 Mar 82 p 4

[Dispatch by Jean-Claude Pomonti: "Mr Ange Patasse Has Taken Refuge in French Embassy in Bangui"]

[Text] Bangui--There was a new development in the Central African crisis this weekend with the granting of asylum (at least temporarily) by the French Embassy in Bangui to Mr Patasse, chairman of the Movement for the Liberation of the Central African People [MLPC], which has been dissolved and most of whose other leaders have been arrested since the abortive coup d'etat on 3 March. Mr Patasse, who was suspected of trying to seize power by force, had also been officially sought since the previous day for "attacking the state's internal security." This new development could seriously affect relations between Bangui and Paris, especially in view of the nervous atmosphere reigning here.

It is still not known when and how Mr Patasse was able to enter the French Embassy. Did he go there on Thursday morning with his wife, in which case negotiations between Bangui and Paris concerning him have already been going on for 4 days? Or was he forced to go there on Saturday after the army's occupation of the land granted to him at kilometer 10, thus presenting the French with a fait accompli? The French diplomats are still not saying much on this subject, apparently for fear of stirring up strong feelings. As for the Central Africans, they were to present a properly drafted extradition application this Monday, 8 March.

The slowness of that procedure--at least a few days or even 2 to 3 weeks for the competent body to give an opinion--could help to arouse Bangui's suspicions toward Paris. The Military Committee of National Recovery in power since 1 September has already long been doubtful about the French Government's desire to cooperate with it, despite General Kolingba's reception at the Elysee in November during the Franco-African summit. Did Minister-delegate for Cooperation and Development Jean-Pierre Cot not describe the military's accession to power as an "indiction of failure"? Even if it was a judgment on the negative record of Mr Dacko's previous multiparty regime, the expression was nonetheless highlighted by the Central African military.

Mr Guy Penne's visit exactly 1 month ago seemed to make a major contribution to improving the atmosphere, the Elysee adviser notably bearing an invitation from Mr Mitterrand to his Central African counterpart to visit France next fall. Finally, last Thursday, following the abortive coup d'etat, the fact that a Quai d'Orsay communique had stressed "the praiseworthy work of national rebuilding and improving the state finances" was bound to be received favorably here.

The Situation Is Calm

Nonetheless the Central Africans have always been worried, as regards French aid, to see Paris align more or less with the line fixed by the IMF, which is regarded as fairly severe here. Finally and above all, while the military wanted to take drastic measures to overcome the crisis once and for all, the fact that France is, even against its will, involved in its quarrel with Mr Patasse is bound to poison the atmosphere between Paris and Bangui.

Of course, a deterioration in Franco-Central African relations, would have unpredictable consequences. Less than 3 years after Bokassa's overthrow, Bangui cannot do without French aid. In any case the recovery efforts over the past 6 months, deemed "praiseworthy" by Paris, have been too much affected by the coup d'etat attempt by the "Patassists" for Central Africa to be able to afford the luxury of a crisis with France.

Moreover, since the occupation by the army on Saturday morning of the land granted to Mr Patasse, which apparently was not too difficult, the situation has been calm. The MLPC leadership has been dismantled and the interior minister has ordered the closure of five bars and dance halls regarded as meeting places for members of the disbanded movement. On the other hand nothing is known about the fate of Mr Mbaikoua and Mr Bozize, the two general officers, discharged from the army, who have been on the run since the night of Wednesday/Thursday. It has been rumored that the latter has also taken refuge in the French Embassy, although it has not been possible to check that.

CSO: 4719/656

GOVERNMENT EXPECTS FRANCE TO HAND OVER PATASSE

AB081347 Paris AFP in French 1310 GMT 8 Mar 82

[Text] Bangui, 8 Mar (AFP)--Lt Col Christopher Grelombe, the CAR minister of information and culture, stated on Monday that the CAR authorities refuse to "suppose" that Paris will not hand over to them the leader of the Central African People's Liberation Movement (MLPC), Ange Patasse, who has been taking refuge at the French Embassy in Bangui for more than 2 days now.

In an interview with AFP, Lieutenant Colonel Grelombe, who is also the government's spokesman, also indicated that he could not see the "need to negotiate" with France the possibility or otherwise of the extradition of Mr Patasse who is officially required by the CAR Government.

"For its reputation and for reasons of political wisdom, it is normal that France should hand Mr Patasse over to us," the minister added. "We refuse to suppose the contrary," he again said.

Lieutenant Colonel Grelombe also stressed that he did not want to make "tendentious accusations" against France. "But there is proof that some French personalities have sympathy for Mr Patasse," he specified. "One must distinguish between France and these personalities," the minister continued. "Similarly, one must not confuse friendly ties and state to state relations," he emphasized.

Lieutenant Colonel Grelombe was of the opinion that it was "important" for the CAR people that Mr Patasse should be handed over to his country's justice. The MLPC leader, he affirmed, is "the enemy of the CAR people." His movement is not based on a "reality in the CAR."

Lieutenant Colonel Grelombe accused Mr Patasse of having encouraged the "rising" of Jean-Bedel Bokassa's empire and affirmed that "he is partly responsible for the massacre of children in Bangui and the country's catastrophic situation." Finally, Lieutenant Colonel Grelombe refused to accept the results obtained by Mr Patasse during the 1981 presidential election (38 percent of the votes), assuring that this election was completely "rigged."

CSO: 4719/656

ANGE PATASSE, TWO GENERALS BEING SOUGHT

AB071029 Kinshasa AZAP in French 0750 GMT 7 Mar 82

[Text] Bangui, 7 Mar (AZAP)--Ange Patasse, leader of the Central African People's Liberation Movement (MLPC) as well as Gen Alphonse Mbaikoua and Gen Francois Bozize--instigators of the 3 March attempted coup--are to be hunted down, it was learned from informed sources on Saturday in Bangui. The same sources added that Ange Patasse is believed to be in the company of the two generals who are still in the country.

The CAR security services, in liaison with gendarmery troops and the National Army, carried out searches last Friday to fish out the two generals whom the authorities called upon to surrender in order to avoid unnecessary bloodshed, observers pointed out in Bangui. Searches were also carried out on Friday at Ange Patasse's residence as well as in those of General Bozize and General Mbaikoua.

Also, the CAR head of state signed a decree on Saturday on the dissolution of Ange Patasse's party. Finally, the Ministry of Interior issued an order on Saturday to close down, until further notice, a certain number of cafes and nightclubs located in the popular areas and owned by Patasse's supporters, it was learned in Bangui. In fact, it is in these areas that MLPC clandestine meetings were held while political party activities were banned after the soldiers came to power on 1 September 1981.

Also, Generals Mbaikoua and Bozize have been demoted and stripped of all decorations conferred on them following the terms of a decree, it was pointed out in Bangui.

In the CAR capital life has returned to normal in the streets. However, in the evening the armed forces are seen patrolling areas of Bangui that support Ange Patasse, particularly the Miskine, Gobongo, Fou and Boy-Rabbe areas.

So far there has been no official reaction from the Military Committee for National Redress which, under the chairmanship of head of state Gen Andre Kolingba, holds all executive and legislative powers. The first reaction by the opposition came on Saturday from Tandalet Hozi Hokito, president of the CAR Socialist Movement who, in a communique handed to AFP in Bangui, gives his support to General Kolingba. Mr Hokito also encouraged the CAR head of state to pursue the dialogue and the exchange of views which he embarked upon last 23 February. General Kolingba recently received in audience a certain number of political personalities in order to find a solution to the political situation, observers recall in Bangui.

CSO: 4719/656

PARIS PAPER ON ALLEGED COUP ATTEMPT BY PATASSE SUPPORTERS

PM051607 Paris LE MONDE in French 5 Mar 82 p 7

[Dispatch from Jean-Claude Pomoti: "General Kolingba Thwarts Attempted Coup by Patasse Supporters"]

[Text] Bangui--On the night of Wednesday 3 to Thursday 4 March the outskirts of the Central African capital were the scene of violent riots following an abortive coup attempt by Mr Patasse's supporters in which apparently nobody was killed. Nothing was known about possible arrests. The forces of order only took up position very late at night against the "Patasse boys," who indulged in looting in several places. Shortly before dawn, when calm seemed to have been restored without a shot being heard, the army began to clear the roads blocked by branches of trees and rocks.

At around 2300 hours on Wednesday the radio broadcast a message from General Bozize, the information minister who is now on the run, accusing head of state General Kolingba of "treason" and announcing that he was seizing power. That message sparked off sympathy demonstrations in the African districts of Fou, Bongondo, and Boy-Rabe, General Bozize being known for his ties with opposition leader Patasse, who returned to Bangui last Saturday after 5 months in France.

After 30 minutes that broadcast was followed by a speech by Colonel Diallo, assistant chief of the general staff, denying the information minister's statements. Around midnight the radio broadcast a message from General Kolingba himself. The chairman of the ruling Military Committee for National Recovery recalled the reasons why the army had seized power and appealed for calm.

At the same time, downtown, near the central market, the presidency and the general staff headquarters--Roux Camp, which overlooks the Chari River and where the head of state lives--there was complete calm, but on kilometer 5 a crowd of demonstrators erected barricades, cutting off the road to the airport for several hours, and began to loot the stores. Several automobiles belonging to Europeans were then forced to turn back under hails of rocks.

At noon on Wednesday, receiving us on his land on kilometer 10, Mr Patasse told us that, since the welcome with which the people greeted him on Saturday--between 7,000 and 10,000 people gathered on the route along which he drove, according to several witnesses--he considered himself "president of the republic." "The people are no longer afraid of guns, and General Kolingba has betrayed them; I represent constitutional legitimacy, there is a power vacuum, and I am head of state; I am only waiting for General Kolingba to hand over power," he told us in particular.

Nobody foresaw that the trial of strength would come so quickly between the "Patassists," who have friends in the army, and the presidency. Members of General Kolingba's entourage did not think that things would move so quickly. Indeed, by temperament the head of state preferred to allow Patasse freedom of movement, probably waiting until he committed a faux-pas rather than risk making a "martyr" of him.

Efforts to Improve Administration

Out of the 1,200 French soldiers stationed in Central Africa around 300 are at the "billet of 200 villas," near the place where the riots took place. They have a unit on constant alert, capable of reaching the downtown area in a few minutes. French nationals, of whom there are 2,800 in Bangui, have received instructions to go to assembly points should the need arise. In any case that plan was not put into operation, and the Central African military even organized a convoy between the airport and the hotels on their own.

Mr Patasse, who won 38 percent of the votes in the 1980 presidential election--as against a little more than 50 percent for former President Dacko--has always disputed the validity of that election. He feels that the army, which seized power on 1 September last year, has not fulfilled its mission. He told us on Wednesday that he had abandoned the idea of holding new elections--"because the people think that solution is pointless"--and that he was waiting for "an administrative handover" in his favor. He had questioned "a man" and not the regime.

In the 6 months in which they have exercised power the military have given the impression of succeeding in calming feelings somewhat. In addition, the general opinion is that they have made efforts to improve an administration which has far from recovered from the Bokassa regime. Finally they seem to have succeeded in making Paris accept the need for close Franco-Central African cooperation, including the military sphere.

Early on Thursday morning the situation in the sector granted to Patasse was still not known. An additional source of anxiety for the authorities comes from the 200-300 former "Islamic Legion" fighters trained in Libya who could spread disorder, particularly by carrying out attacks.

CSO: 4719/656

BAN ON PARTY POLITICS EXPECTED TO CONTINUE

Paris AFRICA AFP in French 16 Feb 82 pp 1, 2

[Text]

BANGUI, February 13 - President André Kolingba, the general who came to power in the Central African Republic last September 1, believes it should concentrate on economic development and has no intention of lifting a ban on party politics in the near future, according to official sources here.

Most people here - and the political parties - welcomed the ban when it was first introduced in September, when civilian President David Dacko stood down in Gen. Kolingba's favour, claiming ill health.

The ban ended a period of noisy political confusion which had almost paralysed the administration.

The half-dozen Centrafrican political opposition movements, back in public view after years in the wilderness during the dictatorship of "Emperor" Jean Bedel Bokassa, were united in their criticism of President Dacko but incapable of agreeing on much else.

There was little hope for dialogue, and the badly-led public service began to fall apart.

A crisis was reached last year with the July 14 bomb attack on a Bangui cinema, claimed by the clandestine Centrafrican Movement for National Liberation (MCLN), which killed three people.

Truce pledge

After Gen. Kolingba set up the Military Committee for National Recovery (CMRN), most political leaders pledged to respect a truce so as to "weld together the nation's vital forces under a single leadership".

For his part, the new President promised to reintroduce multi-party politics once things had cooled and the economy was reorganised after 20 years of dictatorship. However,he was careful not to set any date for lifting the ban.

Enough of dictatorship

Within three months former Prime Minister Ange Patassé's Movement for the Liberation of the Centrafrican People (MLPC) had unilaterally broken the truce, organising meetings and distributing anti-Government pamphlets. The authorities responded by detaining about 15 Patassist militants.

The MLPC said it feared that the General might get a taste for power and overstay his welcome. A few weeks later it accused the military authorities of wanting to liquidate it "physically" because it was an "obstacle to dictatorship".

Several members of the MLPC said they had received threats or had been assaulted.

The authorities countered by accusing the organisation of trying to create a climate of fear and prepare the ground for violence.

Mr. Patassé, the MLPC leader, got 38 per cent of the popular vote during the presidential elections one year ago.

The other opposition groupings have respected the new rules, and Socialist leader Abel Goumba, a doctor who spent more than 20 years in exile, has taken up a Government appointment as Rector of Bangui University. He has said that the Civil Service must be depoliticised : "My new job should not be seen as an act of allegiance, and I intend to reserve my rights to denounce any future abuse of power. For the time being it is too early to make any judgement".

The old politicians all agree that dictatorship has caused too much suffering in the country ever to be accepted again by the Centrafrican people. This is why they believe they have to be more vigilant now than ever before. (A.F.P.)

CSO: 4700/388

USE OF NERVE GAS AGAINST SEPARATIST DENIED

NC012104 Paris AFP in English 2044 GMT 1 Mar 82

[Text] Addis Ababa, 1 Mar (AFP)--Ethiopia today lashed out at the Arab League for the second time in 2 days, warning that it would be forced to review the whole range of its policies towards the league and the Middle East if the body's "meddling" in its internal affairs continued.

The warning came from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs in reaction to a call by the league secretariat in Tunis on Friday that Addis Ababa end its "repeated attacks against the Eritrean people" and recognise "legitimate Eritrean claims to self-determination."

The Foreign Ministry also denied for the first time accusations that the Ethiopian Army was using nerve gas against the separatist guerrillas in the 20-year bush war in Eritrea.

"It is preposterous to accuse Ethiopia of using weapons prohibited by international convention of which it was the first victime," a spokesman for the ministry said in a statement, recalling that the fascist forces of Benito Mussolini used poison gas against defenceless Ethiopian populations during the 1936-41 Italo-Ethiopian war. This caused worldwide outrage and widespread sympathy for Ethiopia, when known as Abyssinia.

It was not clear whether the response to the use of nerve gas was a reaction to allegations from the Arab League or to repeated such charges by the Eritrean secessionists themselves.

The statement said Ethiopia had always been in the vanguard of those who support genuine liberation movements. It branded the Arab League an organisation "which is notorious for its ineptitude, treachery and divisiveness" in Arab ranks.

The spokesman also refuted claims by certain Arab states, particularly Suria, that Eritrea was part of Arab nation. "No part of Ethiopia or its people has ever been or will ever be Arab," he stressed.

The Arab League position was a breach of the principle of non-interference in the internal affairs of sovereign states and amounted to a propagation of "outrageous falsehoods."

The spokesman reiterated that Eritrea was Ethiopian by geography, history and culture and that a call for self-determination there was either part of neo-colonialist design or "a romantic dream of grandeur."

Yesterday, officials in Ethiopia's red star economic campaign and military offensive in Eritrea hit back from Asmara at critics of their new offensive in the province. They accused the Arab League and France's ruling Socialist Party of "meddling" in their internal affairs.

The Foreign Ministry statement, however, singled out the Arab League for its attack and made no reference to the French Socialist Party.

CSO: 4700/896

'AFP' REPORTERS VISIT THREE ERITREAN TOWNS

NC101228 Paris AFP in English 1118 GMT 10 Mar 82

[Text] Asmara, Ethiopia, 10 Mar (AFP)—The secessionary war in the Ethiopian province of Eritrea is still dragging on after 20 years, but its effect is being felt by a smaller and smaller number of the area's 2.5 million inhabitants.

Two AFP journalists authorised to visit in succession the provincial capital of Asmara, the town of Keren in the foothills of the northern mountains and the Red Sea port of Massawa, found Addis Ababa's Marxist government in full control in all three places, and security restrictions limited.

